[i] Where a city ordinance calls for a special election, setting forth the propositions to be voted upon, stating that "each voter shall indicate his wish by writing 'Yes' or 'No' on the right-hand margin on his ticket, opposite the proposition on which he may desire to vote," and the ballots used at the election had the word "Yes" printed in the right-hand margin opposite each proposition, such change is a material departure from the provisions of the ordinance, and renders the election void.—City of San Luis Obispo v. Fitzgerald, 126 Cal. 279, 58 Pac. 699.

[j] Where a ballot bears a cross opposite the name of a candidate for supervisor, but also contains the name of another in the blank column under the heading "For Supervisor," it cannot be counted for either, under Political Code, section 1211, providing that if a voter marks more names than there are persons to be elected to an office, or for any reason the voter's choice as to any office cannot be determined, the ballot shall not be counted for such office.—Salcido v. Roberts, 136 Cal. 670, 69 Pac. 431.

[k] Political Code, section 1205, provides that an elector shall prepare his ballot by marking a cross after the name of the person or persons for whom he intends to vote, or by writing a name or names in the blank column. Held, that in an election contest it was error to receive a ballot which bore a name written in the blank column and a cross also stamped against it, since the statute only permits a voter to make a cross after a printed name.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[m] Under the law which required the voter to stamp a cross "against" the answer "Yes" or "No" in voting on constitutional amendments, the stamping of the cross upon the word "No" instead of in the square to its right did not invalidate the ballot.—Tout v. Hawkins, 143 Cal. 104, 76 Pac. 897.

[n] Under Political Code, section 1205, which provides that at elections a cross should be stamped after the name of a candidate on the ballot, and against the answer that the voter desired to give as to a constitutional amendment, the fact that voters had stamped a cross on the parallelogram containing the candidate's name, after the name, but not in the square, and had stamped a cross under or on the word "Yes" or "No," in voting on constitutional amendments, and not in the square, did not render the ballots illegal. Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

ordinance directing each voter to indicate his wish by "writing or causing to be written or printed 'Yes' or 'No' on the right-hand margin on his ticket, opposite the proposition on which he may desire to vote," is mandatory, and is not satisfied by stamping a cross opposite the word "Yes" or "No" printed after the proposition, as provided by the general election law, which the ordinance declares shall only be followed when not in conflict with said ordinance.—Murphy v. City of San Luis Obispo (Cal.), 48 Pac. 974.

[p] A mark made opposite a name by an instrument so full of ink as to practically make a round spot or blot instead of a cross, but in which the cross can be seen, is a sufficient mark.—Salcido v. Roberts, 67 Pac. 1077.

[q] Under Political Code, section 1211, providing that, if a voter marks more names than there are persons to be elected to an office, his ballot shall not be counted for such office, a ballot so marked can only be rejected as to such office.—Salcido v. Roberts, 67 Pac. 1077.

[r] A ballot marked with a cross opposite the "Yes" and "No" to proposed constitutional amendments is valid in other respects, and must be counted for the candidates properly voted for.—Salcido v. Roberts, 67 Pac. 1077.

§ 62. —— Erasure and Insertion of Names.

[a] Evident mistake in a ballot in voting for different offices for both of two rival candidates, through erasure of a wrong name, cannot be corrected.—Donnelly v. Potter, 55 Cal. 474.

[b] In a contested election of a judge, one of the ballots had the words, "For President, Hancock and English," written in lead pencil upon its face under the words, at the top of the names, "Eleventh Senatorial District." Held, that the ballot should be counted.—Coffey v. Edmonds, 58 Cal. 521.

[c] Voters erased with lead-pencil marks the name of the contestant, and also the name of the office to be voted for, leaving simply the number indicating its order on the ballot, and opposite this number and erasure wrote the name of the defendant. Held, that these ballots were properly counted for the defendant.—Reynolds v. Snow, 67 Cal. 497, 8 Pac. 27.

[d] A ballot read: "18. Judge of the Superior Court, R. 19. Judge of the Superior Court, O. 20. State Senator, 10th District, H." The name H. was erased, and opposite, or in line with it, was written the name of respondent, who was a candidate for judge of the superior court. Held, that it was error to count the ballot for respondent, as candidate for judge.—Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 25 Am. St. Rep. 212, 27 Pac. 779, 13 L. R. A. 761.

[e] Where the printed name of one candidate on a ballot is erased with an indelible pencil or with red ink and the name of another written opposite with the same kind of pencil or ink, the ballot should be counted for the latter, under Political Code, section 1204, providing that when one name has been erased on a ballot, and another substituted therefor, in any other manner than by the use of "a lead pencil or common writing ink," the name erased must be counted; it being the intention of the legislature merely to prohibit erasures and substitutions in any other style or form, or with any different effect, than would be produced by the use of a lead pencil or common writing ink.—Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 25 Am. St. Rep. 212, 27 Pac. 779, 13 L. R. A. 761.

[f] If no name is substituted for a name erased on a ballot, the erased name must be counted, under the provisions of Civil Code, section 1204; such requirement of the statute not being unconstitutional as requiring an educational qualification for the voter, nor as requiring him to disclose the secrecy of his ballot, nor for any other reason.—Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 25 Am. St. Rep. 212, 27 Pac. 779, 13 L. R. A. 761.

[h] Political Code, section 1197 (Stats. 1899, p. 135), provides that official ballots shall contain a column in which the names of candidates may be written. Section 1211 provides that names written in such column shall be counted for the office under which the name is written. Section 1215 prohibits electors from placing identifying marks on ballots. Held, that writing in and voting for William McKinley as a presidential elector in the election of 1900 would not invalidate the ballot, as the court could not take judicial notice that there was no person by that name in California who was eligible to such office. Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821, 975.

[i] In an election contest it was proper to receive a ballot bearing a name written in the blank column, notwithstanding that the name was written beneath the line in which the office was designated.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[j] Political Code, section 1205, provides that a voter shall prepare his ballot by marking a cross after the name of the person or persons for whom he intends to vote, "or" by writing a name or names in the blank column. Held, that in an election contest it was improper to receive ballots bearing a name of a candidate printed in the Democratic column and also written in the blank column.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[k] Political Code, section 1207, provides that, if a voter spoil a ballot, he must return it to the ballot clerk, and receive another in its place. Held, that in an election contest it was proper to reject ballots bearing erasures or attempted erasures, or marks once placed on the ballot by the voter, which he afterward sought to remove.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[l] Where there is an erasure clearly apparent on the face of an election ballot, it should not be counted.—Langley v. Head, 142 Cal. 368, 75 Pac. 1088.

[m] On an election contest, ballots on which the voter had written a name in the blank column of the ballot and had stamped a cross after such written name were void.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[n] Political Code, section 1196, declares that a voter may write upon his ballot the name of any person for whom he desires to vote. Section 1197 provides for a blank column where voters may write under the title of the office the name of a person whose name is not printed. Section 1205 provides that the voter shall prepare his ballot by making across after the name of the person for whom he intends to vote, and authorizes the writing of a name or names in the blank column. Section 1211 provides that a ballot not made as provided in the act shall be void, and that any name written on a ballot shall be counted for the office under which it is written, if in the blank column. Held, that writing a name in the wrong column does not invalidate the ballot as a whole, though the written name cannot be counted. Salcido v. Roberts, 67 Pac. 1077.

[p] A ballot containing the written words "Blac Colu" in the blank column under the title "Justice of the Peace," together with a cross opposite the printed name of a candidate for that office, is valid in other respects, and must be counted for the candidates for other offices properly voted for, the court presuming that the voter intended to vote for a person named "Blac Colu."—Salcido v. Roberts, 67 Pac. 1077.

Right of elector to vote for name not on official ballot: 91 Am. St. Rep. 682, note; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 257-261, § 156.

[a] A ballot of the National Greenback Labor party differed from the regular ticket in the following particulars, viz.: In the vignette of the ticket were the words, "Ninth District," instead of "Ninth Senatorial District," and below the words "For Assemblyman," instead of "For Member of the Assembly," and the words "For Superior Judge," instead of "For Judge of the Superior Court." Held good.—Coffey v. Edmonds, 58 Cal. 521.

[b] On all the ballots cast at a certain election there appeared, written on the blank space under the office of justice of the peace, "G. G. Brown—Republican." The evidence showed that the writing was all done by the same person, but did not show who did the writing, nor whether it was upon the tickets when they were put in the voters' hands, and showed that there was but one person in the precinct lawfully assisted in marking his ballot. Held, that under Political Code, section 1211, providing that any ballot which is not made as provided in this act shall be void, and shall not be counted, all the ballots, except the one of the voter lawfully assisted, should be rejected.—Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454, 29 L. R. A. 673.

[c] Under Political Code, section 1215, providing that no voter shall place any mark upon his ballot by which it may afterward be identified as the one voted by him, a ballot with the letter "J" written in pencil in the blank space left for the insertion of the name for justice of the peace is void.—Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454, 29 L. R. A. 673.

[a] Under Political Code, section 1197, enacting that a ballot which bears any exterior mark designed to distinguish it, or to show by whom it was cast, shall be rejected, if an elector use ink to scratch names from his ballot, and by that means the ballot becomes discolored, such discoloration is not a mark upon the ballot which will authorize the judges of election to refuse to count the vote, for it is not designed to distinguish it from other ballots, or to import knowledge of the person who voted it.—Wyman v. Lemon, 51 Cal. 273.

[b] Designating an office differently on a ballot from the designation on the regular ballots will not vitiate it where there is no mark or sign to show by whom or by what class of persons it was voted.—Coffey v. Edmonds, 58 Cal. 521, 527.

[c] The fact that on the back of a ballot, otherwise regular, is a faint type impression of the face of a similar ticket, caused by there having been too much ink on the type, or that there is a small piece of red sealing wax, or a stain, as from a drop of oil, does not, in the absence of evidence of unlawful intent in causing the impression, make the ballot illegal, within the meaning of Political Code, sections 1206, 1207, which provide that a ballot must be rejected if it bears on the outside any impression, device, color, or thing

"designed" to distinguish it from other legal ballots, or "intended" to designate or impart knowledge of the person who voted it.—Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 25 Am. St. Rep. 212, 27 Pac. 779, 13 L. R. A. 761.

[d] The fact that the cross strokes on a ballot are blurred, or that the lesser part of the cross is on the line below, does not render the ballot invalid.—People v. Town of Sausalito, 106 Cal. 500, 39 Pac. 937.

[e] Where a letter is written in pencil in a blank space left for the initial of a name, though it may have been the intention of the voter to write a name, and he may have abandoned his intent after setting down an initial letter; yet the mark being one having no lawful right on the ballot, and one which could serve as a distinguishing mark, it renders the ballot void, his only remedy, having improperly marked the ballot, being to call for the issuance to him of a fresh ticket. Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454.

[g] Under Political Code, section 1215, providing that no voter shall place any mark upon his ballot by which it may afterward be identified as the one voted by him, a mark upon a ballot, having no lawful right there, and that might serve as an identifying mark, vitiates the ballot.—Lauer v. Estes, 120 Cal. 652, 53 Pac. 262.

[h] Upon the trial of an election contest a ballot so marked by the voter when it is voted that it can be identified, should be rejected.—Smith v. Thomas, 121 Cal. 533, 54 Pac. 71.

[i] The fact that the vote for an excessive number of names for one office might be used as an identifying mark does not affect the validity of the ballot in respect of other offices, such identifying marks being relieved from the operation of section 1215 of the Political Code by virtue of the more specific provision of section 1211 of that code, which is a limitation upon section 1215.—Day v. Dunning, 127 Cal. 55, 59 Pac. 196.

[j] Ballots cast for an excessive number of names for one office have only the effect, under section 1211 of the Political Code, to prevent the ballots from being counted for that office; and such excessive number of votes for one office does not constitute an identifying mark within the meaning of section 1215 of the same code, and does not destroy the validity of the ballot, or affect it in so far as properly cast for candidates for other offices.—Day v. Dunning, 127 Cal. 55, 59 Pac. 196.

[k] On an election contest it was proper for the court not to reject ballots to which was attached a stub that should have remained in the books from which the ballots were taken. Farnham v. Boland, 134 Cal. 151, 66 Pac. 200, 366.

[m] If, in the use of the authorized stamp, the voter keeps within the law, the ballot will not be rejected, even though the stamp has been so used that the cross may be an identifying mark, and the ballot should not be rejected for trivial reasons; but the court will do the best it can to hold the voter to a strict compliance with the statute forbidding identifying marks with the use of the stamp.—Farnham v. Boland, 134 Cal. 151, 66 Pac. 200, 366.

[n] The purpose of the provision of section 1215 of the Political Code, that "no voter shall place any mark upon his ballot by which it may be afterward identified as the one voted by him," is to destroy the identity of the ballot, and thereby maintain its secrecy, which is one of the cardinal principles on which the present ballot law is founded. It is intended to cover any mark made by the voter which may serve as a distinguishing mark, whether made with the legally authorized stamp, or with an ordinary pen or pencil.—Farnham v. Boland, 134 Cal. 151, 66 Pac. 200, 366.

[o] Ballots upon which a cross is placed after both "Yes" and "No" in voting upon a constitutional amendment do not have a distinguishing mark which renders them totally void. It only has the effect to nullify the vote upon such amendment; and the rule is similar to that applied where crosses are stamped opposite the names of two or more rival candidates for the same office which are not to be counted as to that office, but may be valid in other particulars, and are to be counted as to other offices to which no objection applies.—Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821.

[p] Upon a contest of election, ballots upon which the legal mark of the cross is placed opposite the words "No nomination," which mark can by no possibility serve a legitimate purpose, must be regarded as having a distinguishing mark identifying the ballots, and must be rejected.—Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821.

[q] Ballots upon which the cross was stamped twice in one or more voting squares, or in which a round hole is burned, or which have a special number written on their face, contain identifying marks which render them invalid, and must be rejected.—Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821.

[r] Where ballots have the name of "H." written, not in the blank column, where the law directs, but under the words "Justice of the Peace," in the Republican, Democratic, or Prohibition column, they are invalid, as bearing distinguishing marks.—Salcido v. Roberts, 136 Cal. 670, 69 Pac. 431.

[s] A ballot is invalid when a cross has been tamped twice after the name of a candidate. alcido v. Roberts, 136 Cal. 670, 69 Pac. 431.

[t] Where a voter has written a name under he words "For District Attorney," in the lank column, and stamped another name for istrict attorney in another column, and then ttempted to rub out the writing, leaving a onspicuous mark on the ballot, the ballot is nvalid.—Salcido v. Roberts, 136 Cal. 670, 9 Pac. 431.

[u] Where a voter has stamped both "Yes" nd "No" after a proposed constitutional mendment, and then partially rubbed out the ross after "Yes," the ballot is invalid, as earing a distinguishing mark.—Salcido v. oberts, 136 Cal. 670, 69 Pac. 431.

[v] It was proper to reject, as bearing a disnguishing mark, a ballot which had a cross pposite "For Electors," in the Republican olumn.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11,) Pac. 918.

[w] It was proper to reject, as bearing a disnguishing mark, a ballot which had a cross arked against the names of the nine electors rinted in the Democratic column, and also id the name "William McKinley" written r elector in the blank column.—People v. ampbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[x] It was proper to reject, as bearing a disnguishing mark, a ballot which had a cross arked against the printed names for electors the Republican column, and had also nine mes written for electors in the blank colnn.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 c. 918.

y] It was proper to reject, as bearing an ntifying mark, a ballot on which a cross d been marked against the printed names the electors in the Republican column, d having the name "McKinley" written in blank column for elector.—People v. mpbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

z] It was proper to reject, as bearing a disguishing mark, a ballot marked with a ss after the words "No Nomination."— ople v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

aa] It was error to reject, as bearing a disguishing mark, a ballot bearing the name 'illiam McKinley" written in the blank mn for electors, but which did not have ross marked against any of the printed nes for that office.—People v. Campbell, 138 . 11, 70 Pac. 918.

bb] In an election contest it was proper to ive a ballot where a mark resembling the er "S," which was claimed to be an ntifying mark, clearly appeared to be an et, by folding, from the writing placed the ballot by the board after the ballot left the hands of the voter.—People v. pbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

cc] Under Political Code, section 1215, fording a voter from placing any mark on ballot by which it may afterward be tified, the intent of the voter must be determined by an inspection of the ballot, irrespective of any conjecture as to the purpose or circumstances under which the mark was made.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[dd] In an election contest it was proper to reject a ballot bearing a double cross mark thereon.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[ee] In an election contest it is proper to reject, as bearing a distinguishing mark, a ballot which has a large ink blot on one of the margins.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[ff] It was proper to reject, as bearing a distinguishing mark, a ballot which had a hole through it where an attempt was made to erase a mark made with the stamp.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[jj] Mark does not cease to be distinguishing mark from fact that it appears on large number of ballots.—Maddux v. Walthall, 141 Cal. 415, 74 Pac. 1026.

[kk] A ballot marked with a cross instead of with the stamp, as required by statute, is invalid, as bearing a distinguishing mark.—Maddux v. Walthall, 141 Cal. 412, 74 Pac. 1026.

[mm] In an election of a member of a board of supervisors, ballots with a cross stamped opposite the words "No Nomination" are illegal, and should be rejected; the cross being a distinguishing mark, though one hundred and one ballots so stamped were cast in thirteen precincts.—Kincaid v. Reid, 142 Cal. 88, 75 Pac. 657.

[nn] The invalidity of a ballot, stamped by the voter with a cross at a place not authorized by the statute, as bearing a distinguishing mark, is without regard to the number of other ballots so stamped.—Merkley v. Trainor, 142 Cal. 265, 75 Pac. 656.

[oo] Under Political Code, section 1197, providing, to vote for a person, "Stamp a cross in the square at the right of the name," and section 1215, providing that no voter shall place any mark on his ballot by which it may be afterward identified as the one voted by him, a cross stamped on a ballot in the square opposite the words, "No Nomination," appearing under the designation of certain offices on the ticket, makes it invalid, as bearing a distinguishing mark.—Merkley v. Trainor, 142 Cal. 265, 75 Pac. 656.

[rr] An alleged seal on the back of election ballots, which was apparently only a drop of candle grease that had fallen thereon after they were voted, does not justify their exclusion.—Langley v. Head, 142 Cal. 368, 75 Pac. 1088.

[ss] Pencil marks on the face of election ballots, so minute and light as not to be readily observable, cannot serve as distinguishing marks, justifying their exclusion from the count.—Langley v. Head, 142 Cal. 368, 75 Pac. 1088.

[tt] The failure of election officers, through ignorance or carelessness, to remove the number of the ballot, does not make it illegal, as in violation of Political Code, section 1215, prohibiting voters from placing any mark on ballots for identification.—Freshour v. Howard, 142 Cal. 501, 77 Pac. 1101.

[uu] Under the statute which provided that the stamp should be "against" the "Yes" or "No" in ballots on constitutional questions, a stamp under the word "Yes" was not a distinguishing mark invalidating the ballot. Hannah v. Green, 143 Cal. 19, 76 Pac. 708.

[xx] Ballots having crosses after "No nomination" are properly rejected in an election contest, although there are a large number of such ballots.—Treanor v. Williams, 145 Cal. 315, 78 Pac. 884.

[zz] On an election contest, a ballot having pencil writing in an improper place on the face of the ballot was void.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[aaa] On an election contest, a ballot having two or more distinct crosses after the name of a single candidate was void.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[bbb] On an election contest, ballots containing the printed words "no nomination," in the absence of a nominee for a particular office, upon which the voter had stamped a cross after the words "no nomination," were void.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[ccc] Testimony by the inspector of elections and the ballot clerk that they did not see a mark of identification on a ballot when they were counting them is sufficient to support a finding that such mark was placed thereon after it came out of the ballot box.—Smith v. Thomas, 52 Pac. 1079.

[ddd] A mark on a ballot made by folding it before the ink on it had dried does not render the ballot void.—Salcido v. Roberts, 67 Pac. 1077.

§ 65. —— Voting More than One Ballot.

[a] A single piece of paper, cast as a ballot, and containing the name of a candidate more than once, should be counted as one vote, and not rejected as illegally thrown.—People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 281, 282, § 165.

§ 66. —— Two or More Ballots Folded Together.

[a] A ballot having written or printed on it the name of a person voted for and his office two or more times does not constitute two or more tickets folded together.—People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123.

[a] On an election contest, torn ballots are properly counted, on the assumption that they were torn after delivery to the election officers, there being no evidence when or how they were torn.—Pratt v. O'Neill, 140 Cal. 539, 74 Pac. 27.

[b] The tearing of a ballot by an election officer does not justify its exclusion from the count.—Langley v. Head, 142 Cal. 368, 75 Pac. 1088.

—— ILLEGAL VOTES, § 79.
—— ABSENCE OF OFFICERS, § 80.

§ 68. In General.

[a] Validity of election does not depend upon eligibility of candidates voted for, but upon its being held and conducted at the proper time and place, in the manner and by the proper persons and officers as required by law.—Satterlee v. San Francisco, 23 Cal. 315.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 362-374; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 282-335, §§ 169-205.

§ 69. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions.

[a] Disregard of directory provisions of election laws, in absence of actual fraud, is no ground for rejecting entire vote of precinct.—Russell v. McDowell, 83 Cal. 77, 23 Pac. 183.

[b] It is only provisions relating to time and place of holding elections, qualification of voters, and such others as are expressly made essential to validity of election that are mandatory.—Russell v. McDowell, 83 Cal. 77, 23 Pac. 183.

[c] There must be a reasonable observance of all the prescribed conditions for the holding of an election, including not only mandatory provisions, but also the essential terms of directory provisions, and it is not sufficient to show that, from the failure substantially to comply with the statute, no fraud or injury was involved or resulted in the individual case.—Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 70. Polling Places.

[a] If persons appointed inspectors and judges of elections hold the election at a place several miles distant from that appointed by the board of supervisors, it is misconduct enough to invalidate the election. Knowles v. Yeates, 31 Cal. 82.

[b] The polls for a certain precinct were opened a short distance from and in plain view of the place appointed by the supervisors, but it did not appear that any voter was misled or deprived of his vote by the change. Held, that the court did not err in refusing to reject the vote of the precinct.—Preston v. Culbertson, 58 Cal. 198.

[c] The existence of outside windows in the portion of an election place where the booths are situated does not invalidate the election if the windows are securely fastened, and are the cause of no improper conduct.—Hayes v. Kirkwood, 136 Cal. 396, 69 Pac. 30.

[d] The fact that two electors occupy the same election booth for a short time, but are discovered, and informed that they must occupy separate booths, which they do, is not sufficient to invalidate the election in the precinct.—Hayes v. Kirkwood, 136 Cal. 396, 69 Pac. 30.

[e] An election was held in a building having a partition, and the election booths were behind the partition, but in front of a door through which the booths could be seen from a portion, though not all, of the room where the election officers and bystanders were. The door was closed several times, but was immediately opened. Held a sufficient compliance with Political Code, section 1203, providing that election booths shall not be hidden from the view of the bystanders.—Hayes v. Kirkwood, 136 Cal. 396, 69 Pac. 30.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 71. Time for Voting—Opening Polls.

[a] A notice of an election to be held in a school district for the imposition of a tax, stating that the polls would be open "between the hours of 1 o'clock and 6 o'clock P. M.," held not to comply with Political Code, section 1160, requiring the polls to be open "at one hour after sunrise on the morning of the election."—People v. Seale, 52 Cal. 71.

[b] An election held for the purpose of imposing a tax in a school district must be held in strict conformity with the law, and the polls must be kept open from one hour after sunrise until sunset.—People v. Seale, 52 Cal. 620.

[c] Where the polls at an election precinct were not opened until nearly 10 o'clock and an adjournment was made at noon, and the ballot-box was taken by one of the election officers and left on the table while eating dinner, and the ballots and other election materials were left in the poll-room in the presence of bystanders during the adjournment, the provisions of the law are substantially violated and the vote of the precinct is void, and the votes cast thereat should be rejected.—Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454.

[d] Some latitude must be allowed for judgment as to the time of sunrise in the opening of polls; and where delay in opening them precisely at sunrise is not alleged to be inconsistent with honest intent, and the violation of the letter of the law is not alleged to have operated to obstruct the full and fair expression of the suffrage of the precinct, the bald fact of such delay is not sufficient to disfranchise the precinct.—Packwood v. Brownell, 121 Cal. 478, 53 Pac. 1079.

[e] It is a sufficient compliance with Political Code, section 1597, providing that "the polls must not be opened before 9 o'clock A. M. nor kept open less than four hours," if the polls are open from 2 o'clock P. M. until sunset on May 23d.—People v. Lodi High School Dist. of San Joaquin County, 124 Cal. 694, 57 Pac. 660.

[f] Under Political Code, section 1597, permitting trustees in a school election notice to designate any four consecutive hours for the polls to be kept open, a failure to open the polls for thirty minutes after the time set does not invalidate the election; no one being prevented by the delay from voting.—People v. Prewett, 124 Cal. 7, 56 Pac. 619.

[g] Under Salinas City charter, section 5, providing that the general law shall apply to city elections as far as practicable, but that the polls shall not be opened later than 2 P. M., nor closed before sundown, the vote of wards closing before sundown should be disregarded, notwithstanding the general law had subsequently fixed an earlier hour, this law being made applicable to state and county elections only; and this though a majority of the voters are thus disfranchised.—People v. Hill, 125 Cal. 16, 57 Pac. 669.

[h] The true test to be applied to departures from the laws relating to the conducting of elections on the proper day and at the proper time, under requirements either mandatory or directory, is as to whether the particular departure is of such a nature as to make it impossible or extremely difficult to determine, under the circumstances of the case, if fraud had been committed or anything done which would affect the result. Kenworthy v. Mast, 141 Cal. 268, 74 Pac. 841.

[i] Failure to open polls on time will not, in absence of fraud, invalidate vote of precinct, when no injury resulted therefrom.—Kenworthy v. Mast, 141 Cal. 270-273, 74 Pac. 841.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 364; 18 Cent. Dig., col. 303, § 182.

§ 72. Mode of Voting and Exercise of Right in General—Challenges to Voters.

[a] The administering of the oath to a person who is challenged for not being a qualified voter, is a matter in the discretion of the judges of the election.—People v. Gordon, 5 Cal. 235.

[b] If the person challenged for not being a qualified voter should admit that he had not been naturalized, or that his certificate of naturalization had been issued by a court known to have no jurisdiction of the subject matter, or in case of a citizen whose right to vote was well known, the judges could very properly decline administering the oath.—People v. Gordon, 5 Cal. 235.

[c] Judges of election have no right to require the production of the certificate of naturalization by the party challenged as not being a qualified voter.—People v. Gordon, 5 Cal. 235.

[d] The burden of proof is upon the party who contests the right of another to vote.—People v. Riley, 15 Cal. 48.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 367; 18 Cent. Dig. cols. 312-314, § 192; cols. 316, 317, § 194.

§ 73. —— Assistance to Voters.

[a] A disregard of Political Code, section 1208, authorizing election officers to assist electors to mark their ballots in case of inability of the latter so to do, declared under oath at the time of registration, and requiring the officers to return a sworn statement thereof, and to keep a list of electors so assisted, renders illegal the ballots of persons receiving assistance from the officers in marking their ballots.—Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821.

[b] Where the blank form of affidavit used by a voter was so filled in as to show that he declared under oath at the time of registration, as required by Political Code, section 1208, that he could not read the Constitution in English, he was entitled to assistance, irrespective of whether he also stated he could not mark his ballot.—Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

[c] Where election officers assisted the voter in preparing his ballot, the fact that they did not take the oath prescribed, to the effect that they would not give any information regarding the manner in which it was marked until after they had assisted him, did not invalidate his vote.—Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

[d] Under Political Code, section 1096, subdivision 11, and section 1208, and section 1097, providing that the affidavit for registration of the voter must show all the facts required to be stated in the entry on the register, except the date of entry, the fact that the register showed that an elector had declared on oath that he could not write his name did not entitle him to assistance.—Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

§ 74. —— Rejection of Vote by Election Officers.

[a] Where the court below, when trying a contested election case, allowed one of the contestant's votes not in fact received, although offered to and rejected by the election board, it was held that such act of the court was manifest error, whether the proffered votes were properly or improperly rejected.—Webster v. Brynes, 34 Cal. 273.

[b] The following questions arise for decision by the election board, under the registry act, when a vote is proffered: 1. Is the person offering to vote a qualified elector of the precinct where the vote is offered? 2. Is his name at the time on the great register and on the poll list? And unless both questions are answered in the affirmative by the board, the vote should be rejected.—Webster v. Byrnes, 34 Cal. 273.

§ 75. —— Conclusiveness of Oath of Voters.

[a] When the judges have administered the oath, the right to vote is concluded, and it is error to deny it.—People v. Gordon, 5 Cal. 235.

[b] Irregularities on the part of the election board and clerks in conducting the election which were so explained by members of the board and other witnesses as to show that no injurious result followed, and that none of them had any fraudulent design or affected in any way the result of the election, cannot have the effect to invalidate it or warrant the court in defeating the will of innocent voters.—Hayes v. Kirkwood, 136 Cal. 396, 69 Pac. 30.

[c] Where, in an election contest, the finding of the trial court, supported by the evidence, was that there was no malconduct on the part of the boards of judges whereby contestee was injured in his candidacy in any way, no misconduct which in any way prevented a full and fair expression of the will of the qualified electors of the precinct, or that diminished the number of legal votes that the contestee would have otherwise received, the court properly counted the ballots from the contested precincts.—Abbott v. Hartley, 143 Cal. 484, 77 Pac. 410.

[d] Rights of voters should not be prejudiced by errors or wrongful acts of election officers unless it appear that a fair election and honest count were thereby prevented.—Davis v. Grunig, 143 Cal. 336, 76 Pac. 1102.

For Authorities From Other States:

Irregularities which will avoid elections: 90 Am. St. Rep. 46, note. See, also, 15 Cyc. 372, 373; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 219-335, §§ 197-205.

§ 77. —— Receiving Votes Improperly Cast.

[a] Rule is well settled that mere receiving and counting votes, improperly given, will not invalidate an election.—Whipley v. McKune, 12 Cal. 352.

§ 78. —— Failure to Open Polls in Certain Precincts.

[a] That polls were not opened in every precinct of the county will not invalidate an election to authorize a subscription to railroad stock.—Hobart v. Butte County Supervisors, 17 Cal. 23.

[b] The election having been regularly called, and all the persons interested having been duly notified of the time and places at which they would have the privilege of voting, the neglect to hold an election in one of the school districts does not vitiate the election.—People v. Union High School District of Solano County, 101 Cal. 655, 36 Pac. 119.

[a] The contestant proved that the number of male persons over twenty-one years of age who resided on particular lots in certain precincts on the election day, and for thirty days prior thereto, was less than half the number of votes cast. Held that, though the proof was consistent with the supposition that a voter may have resided in different places in the precinct during that period, it was negative proof, and, there being none in rebuttal, it would be held to establish material malconduct on the part of the election boards. Russell v. McDowell, 83 Cal. 70, 23 Pac. 183.

[b] The reception of illegal votes cannot be contested on account of the malconduct of the election boards as provided for by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1111, subdivision 1, where it does not appear in what particular precinct they were cast.—Russell v. McDowell, 83 Cal. 70, 23 Pac. 183.

For Authorities From Other States:

§ 80. —— Absence of Officers.

[a] Receipt of votes during the absence of some of the members of the board of judges does not vitiate the election, the law not requiring all the members to be present during all the time voting is in progress.—Packwood v. Brownell, 121 Cal. 478, 53 Pac. 1079.

§ 81. —— Intimidation and Violence.

[a] The fact that a threat was made that no one would be allowed to vote, unless he was registered, does not invalidate the election; no one in fact being challenged for that reason.—People v. Prewett, 124 Cal. 7, 56 Pac. 619.

PRESERVATION OR DISPOSITION OF BALLOTS, § 88.
CANVASS OF RETURNS, § 89.
CERTIFICATE OF ELECTION, § 90.
COMPELLING CANVASSING BOARD TO RECONVENE TO ENABLE ELECTION OFFICERS TO COMPLETE DUTY, § 91.

§ 82. Determination of Result in General.

[a] That the candidate who stood highest on the list is ineligible does not give the election to the next highest.—(Cal. 1859) Saunders v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 145; (1877) Crawford v. Dunbar, 52 Cal. 36.

[b] Whether votes cast for "M. A. Edwards" could be counted for "M. A. Edmonds," query?—Coffey v. Edmonds, 58 Cal. 521, 526.

[c] It is only where some other person than the one returned has received the highest number of legal votes that he can be declared elected.—Snibley v. Palmtag, 128 Cal. 283, 60 Pac. 860.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Election of ineligible candidate does not entitle person receiving the next highest number of votes to the office: 12 Am. Rep. 341, note. See, also, 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 335-343, §§ 206-209.

§ 83. —— Scope of Inquiry.

[a] The supervisors, in canvassing the returns of an election, act ministerially, and not judicially, and can only examine the face of the regular returns made, and must declare the result therefrom. They have no power, where returns are missing, to send for and use a duplicate tally-list kept by an inspector; but, in such case, they must wait six days for the missing returns before making the canvass, and can then only canvass the returns made to them, and must declare the result therefrom.—People v. Stewart, 132 Cal. 283, 64 Pac. 285.

[a] The determination of the board of supervisors that a place voted for for county seat had received a majority of the votes cast at the election is prima facie evidence of the fact so determined, but is not conclusive, and evidence may be adduced to show fraud or mistake and to ascertain the true result.—Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325.

§ 85. Number of Votes Necessary to Choice—Elections on Specific Questions—In General.

[a] The provision of the constitution requiring that a "majority of the electors voting at a general election" must determine the question of reorganization imports that a majority of all the electors voting at the election is necessary to carry the proposition to reorganize, notwithstanding a majority of all the electors who vote upon the proposition to reorganize were in favor of it.—People v. Town of Berkeley, 102 Cal. 298, 36 Pac. 591.

[b] Under Constitution, article 11, section 18, providing that no county shall incur liability exceeding a certain amount without the assent of two-thirds of the electors thereof voting at an election to be held for that purpose, it is necessary only that two-thirds of those voting on the question vote to incur the liability, and not that two-thirds of all those voting at the general election, held at the same time, vote for it.—Howland v. San Joaquin County Supervisors, 109 Cal. 152, 41 Pac. 864.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 388-391. See 18 Cent. Dig. cols. 343-355, §§ 210-215.

§ 86. Count of Votes—Irregularities and Errors.

[a] If the judges and inspector of an election cannot read, and for that reason a person who is not a member of the election board takes the ballots from the box and reads them to the tellers, at the request of the judges, it is not an irregularity which will vitiate the election.—Sprague v. Norway, 31 Cal. 173.

[b] Political Code, section 1252, provides that the canvass of votes cast at an election must be public, in the presence of bystanders. The action of the election board in removing from the polling place all but two bystanders, and keeping the doors locked for one-half hour, did not invalidate the votes cast, no fraud being shown.—Atkinson v. Lorbeer, 111 Cal. 419, 44 Pac. 162.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 87. Returns.

[a] When a board of supervisors has canvassed the returns of an election, as required by Political Code, section 1281, and the record thereof is entered in the minutes, as by section 4030, and has been authenticated by the signature of the chairman and clerk, as

by section 4029, a copy of such record is the "abstract" which the clerk is, by sections 1344, 1345, required to make and transmit to the secretary of state, and on which the secretary must act in estimating the number of votes cast in the county for each person voted for as a representative in Congress.—Pacheco v. Beck, 52 Cal. 3.

[b] If the clerk of a county transmits to the secretary of state a statement of what transpires in relation to the canvass made by the board of supervisors of the votes cast therein, such statement, if not in the record, but merely something in addition thereto or in explanation thereof, is to be rejected by the secretary.—Pacheco v. Beck, 52 Cal. 3.

[c] Where an election was conducted properly, and the records and canvass of the votes cast duly made, certified, and authenticated, and transmitted and delivered, in all respects in conformity with the law, except that the board of election officers failed to forward to the board of supervisors, as required by law, the tally list, and list attached thereto, such failure did not preclude the consideration of the ballots cast at the election, on a contest thereof.—Davis v. Grunig, 143 Cal. 336, 76 Pac. 1102.

[d] On an election contest, an objection to the ballots from a certain precinct on the ground that the election officers had not written their names across the seal of the envelope, as required by Political Code, section 1259, held of no avail.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[e] Extrinsic evidence considered, and held to overcome the prima facie effect of the record of supervisors, under Political Code, section 1282, and Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1920, 1926, showing that a certain candidate was elected.—People v. Davidson (Cal. App.), 83 Pac. 161.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] The fact that ballot-box was temporarily out of possession of officers of the election will not invalidate the election, especially when no fraud, collusion, or suspicious circumstances are shown.—Whipley v. McKune, 12 Cal. 352.

[b] Where the ballots cast at an election are not returned sealed, and there is evidence tending to show that the packages of ballots have been opened and changed after they were received by the clerk, the board of canvassers may determine who is elected by the returns made by the officers of election, and the court may adopt the result arrived at by the board of canvassers.—People v. Burden, 45 Cal. 241.

[c] Sections 1265 and 1266 of the Political Code, providing for the preservation and custody of the ballots cast at an election, impose upon the clerk or registrar the duty of keeping the packages of ballots unopened and unaltered for twelve months, after which time he is to burn them, unless a contest has been commenced in some tribunal of competent jurisdiction.—Brown, Ex parte, 97 Cal. 83, 31 Pac. 840.

[d] The requirements of the statute as to the mode of preservation of ballots are construed as directory merely, the object looked to being the preservation inviolate of the ballots, and, if this is established, they cannot be rejected merely because the precise mode of reaching it has not been followed.—Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454.

[e] The ballots, election returns, and spoiled ballots were placed in separate envelopes after an election, closed by placing the flap or tongue in a slit, and sealed with sealing wax, and the three were tied together, and given to a member of the election board to be mailed the following morning, at which latter time it was discovered that the sealing wax on the envelope containing the ballots had been broken, probably because the envelopes were too tightly tied, and the postmaster sealed the envelopes, and they were sent to the county clerk. There was no claim of actual fraud. Held not sufficient to invalidate the election in the precinct.—Hayes v. Kirkwood, 136 Cal. 396, 69 Pac. 30.

[f] Question whether ballots have been sufficiently taken care of so as to preclude suspicion that they are not in their original condition is within discretion of trial court.—Davis v. Grunig, 143 Cal. 336, 76 Pac. 1102.

[g] Political Code, sections 1264, 1265, provide that election returns shall be delivered to the county clerk, who shall be their custodian. Section 1075 makes the common council of a city the election commissioners for city elections. Section 1077 makes the clerk of the city clerk of the board of election commissioners, and section 1078 provides that the county clerk of each county, and the clerk or secretary of the common council of a city, shall, within their respective counties or cities, exercise all the powers conferred, and shall discharge all the duties imposed by law on such officers in respect to the conduct, management, and supervision of elections held within the respective counties or cities. Held, that ballots on a city election are to be returned to the city clerk and kept in his custody.—Trafton v. Quinn, 143 Cal. 469, 77 Pac. 164.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 89. Canvass of Returns.

[a] Under the statute of 1883, page 93, a board of supervisors, in canvassing the votes given at an election called to determine whether or not a town should be incorporated need not actually count the ballots; it is sufficient if it canvass the return.—People ex rel. Beasley v. Town of Sausalito, 106 Cal. 500, 39 Pac. 937.

[b] Under Political Code, section 1280, providing that if, at the time of the meeting of the supervisors to canvass election "returns," all the returns have not been received, the canvass must be postponed from day to day until all the returns are received, or until six postponements have been made, the supervisors have no authority at the first meeting to send for the duplicate list of voters, tally list, and list attached thereto, and retained by the inspector of a precinct, and use them in the canvass in place of a missing return.—People v. Stewart, 132 Cal. 283, 64 Pac. 285.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 90. Certificate of Election.

[a] Certificate of election is prima facie evidence of title to the office. Nor is it the only evidence by which the title may be established. Fact of election gives title to office, and this fact may be established not only without, but against, the evidence of the certificate.—Magee v. Supervisors, 10 Cal. 376.

[b] Certificate of election is only prima facie evidence of right to office. The real right or title comes from the will of the voters as expressed at the election, and one not having the real title, but only the color of title given by the certificate, "holds unlawfully," within the meaning of that term as used in the statute.—People ex rel. Wicks v. Jones, 20 Cal. 50.

[c] When a board of supervisors, authorized by Political Code, sections 1278-1284, to act as a canvassing board, has issued a certificate of election, it is prima facie evidence of the right of the holder to the office, and the only remedy for setting aside or canceling the certificate is that provided by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1111 et seq., relating to election contests.—Gibson v. Twaddle, 1 Cal. App. 126, 81 Pac. 727.

[d] The rule that a certificate of the election issued by the proper authority is prima facie evidence of right to the office cannot apply where two certificates were issued to two persons for the same office.—People v. Davidson (Cal. App.), 83 Pac. 161.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 386-388. See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 403-411, §§ 240-244.

§ 91. Compelling Canvassing Board to Reconvene to Enable Election Officers to Complete Duty.

[a] When a board of supervisors, authorized by Political Code, sections 1278-1284, to act as a canvassing board, has completed its labors and adjourned sine die, it cannot be compelled by mandamus to reconvene and permit election officers to sign and attest a tally sheet which they had omitted to sign and attest, as required by section 1260, on account of which the board refused to canvass the returns or count the votes of the precinct.—Gibson v. Twaddle, 1 Cal. App. 126, 81 Pac. 727.

[a] Courts should so far adhere to the substantial requirements of the law in relation to elections as to preserve them from abuses subversive of the inherent and constitutional rights of the people.—Knowles v. Yates, 31 Cal. 82.

[b] Law authorizing elector to bring private suit to contest validity of officer's election is valid, though contesting elector has personal interest in result.—Maddux v. Walthall, 141 Cal. 414, 74 Pac. 1026.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 93. Nature and Rights of Action in General—Nature and Existence of Remedy.

[a] Proceedings instituted to contest election of county officers are special and summary in their character.—Keller v. Chapman, 34 Cal. 635.

[b] An election contest, being an investigation in which the public at large are deeply concerned, is not an ordinary adversary proceeding; for, as against the high public interest involved, there can be no recognized adversary.—Minor v. Kidder, 43 Cal. 229.

[c] The right to contest an election is purely statutory, and must be determined by the terms of the statute; nor is it given merely to enable a candidate to vindicate his rights, but is given to any elector; and public policy requires that it should be inaugurated speedily, and before the commencement of the terms of the person declared elected.—Carlson v. Burt, 111 Cal. 129, 43 Pac. 583.

[d] Contest attacks election itself and is not concerned with certificate of election or proceedings subsequent thereto.—Sweeney v. Adams, 141 Cal. 560, 75 Pac. 182.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 94. —— Form of Remedy.

[a] The statutory proceeding contesting an election is a special case provided for by section 9 of article 6 of the constitution, wholly distinct in form and substantially different from the common-law remedy.—Dorsey v. Barry, 24 Cal. 449; Casgrave v. Howland, 24 Cal. 457.

[b] Proceedings in the nature of quo warranto are not necessary instead of proceedings in the nature of a contest where one has been merely shown by election returns to be elected.—Sweeney v. Adams, 141 Cal. 558, 75 Pac. 182.

§ 95. —— Grounds of Contest in General.

[a] That the successful candidate aided and abetted the registering officer in the illegal registry of a voter is no ground for contesting the election, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1111, and Penal Code, title 4, part 1, providing on what grounds an election may be contested.—Meredith v. Christy, 64 Cal. 95, 27 Pac. 863.

[b] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1111, providing that any elector of a county, or political subdivision thereof, may contest the right of any person "declared elected" to an office to be exercised therein, for causes enumerated, only authorizes an examination of the right of a person "declared elected" at an election, the canvass of which is questioned, and does not authorize a recanvass of votes where the election has been declared to have resulted in the election of no one, in which case a new election must be held.—Austin v. Dick, 100 Cal. 199, 34 Pac. 655.

[c] A contest may be made on account of illegal votes; but it is not a ground of contest merely that some other person received a higher number of votes than the one declared, or an equal number of votes with him.—Snibley v. Palmtag, 128 Cal. 283, 60 Pac. 860.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 96. Consolidation of Several Contests.

[a] The trial court has discretion to consolidate for the convenience of trial fifteen separate contests of the election of eighteen supervisors under the charter of the city and county of San Francisco, instituted by candidates who were not declared elected.—Coghlan v. Alpers, 140 Cal. 648, 74 Pac. 145.

§ 97. Right of Incumbent to Salary Pending Contest.

[a] The provision of section 936 of the Political Code that the person holding the certificate of election, who discharges the duties of the office, shall receive the salary of the office, notwithstanding a pending contest of the office, the same as if no such contest or proceeding were pending, is too clear for construction; and the right to receive such salary will be enforced by mandamus.—Wilson v. Fisher, 140 Cal. 188, 73 Pac. 850.

[b] Section 936 of the Political Code is not unconstitutional. The drawing of a warrant by the auditor in favor of the incumbent under the certificate of election, pending a contest, will relieve those officers and their bondsmen from any further liability in the premises.—Wilson v. Fisher, 140 Cal. 188, 73 Pac. 850.

[c] The holder of a certificate of election who had become a qualified incumbent of the office, and who continued to exercise its functions pending an appeal from a judgment in favor of his opponent upon a contest of the election, is entitled, pending such appeal, to receive the salary, the same as if no contest was pending. The appeal stays the operation of the judgment, and leaves the certificate unimpaired until the appeal is decided. (The case of Wilson v. Fisher, 140 Cal. 188, 73 Pac. 850, is affirmed.)—Anderson v. Browing, 140 Cal. 222, 73 Pac. 986.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1111, provides that an elector may contest the right of a person declared elected to an office on certain enumerated grounds, and by section 1123 it is the duty of the court to declare "any other person" elected if the result of the recount disclose such person's election. The punishments imposed for violation of the purity of election law are highly penal. Held, that on an election contest it was proper to refuse to allow the contestee to show a violation of the purity of election law on the part of the contestant, such question not being in issue under the statutes, and the commission of such offense being a matter for determination in another proceeding.—Maddux v. Walthall, 141 Cal. 412, 74 Pac. 1020.

[a] The contest came on for trial on July 8th; and on the following day the court, on its own motion, continued the case until July 14th, without objection, after consultation with the attorneys of both parties. The trial was concluded on the 14th, without objection by either party. Held, that the court did not lose jurisdiction by the adjournment. Falltrick v. Sullivan, 119 Cal. 613, 51 Pac. 947.

[b] Jurisdiction of court to entertain a right of elector to commence contest does not depend upon whether person declared elected qualifies by filing official oath and bond or not.—Sweeney v. Adams, 141 Cal. 560, 75 Pac. 182.

For Authorities From Other States:

§ 100. —— Jurisdiction of Legislative Bodies.

[a] Consolidation act, page 16, section 67, providing that the board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco shall be the judge of elections, returns and qualifications of its own members, does not deprive the superior court of jurisdiction of proceedings in the nature of a quo warranto to oust a member of such board of supervisors from office; such jurisdiction being conferred on it by Constitution, article 6, section 5, giving the superior court power to issue writs of quo warranto.—People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 238, 22 Pac. 1039.

[b] The provision of the city charter of Oakland, granted in 1854, giving the common council exclusive jurisdiction to determine an election contest for the office of councilman, was impliedly repealed by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1111 et seq., providing that any elector of a county or city, or of any political subdivision of either, may contest for causes therein stated, and that such contest must be determined by a special session of the superior court.—McGivney v. Pierce, 87 Cal. 124, 25 Pac. 269.

[c] Under the existing municipal charter of the city of Santa Rosa, as amended in 1876, the determination by the common council of all contests of election for city offices is made final and conclusive, and its jurisdiction to determine such contest is exclusive.—Carter v. Superior Court of Sonoma County, 138 Cal. 150, 70 Pac. 1067.

[a] The election of the district judge may be contested before the county judge.—Saunders v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 145.

[b] The county court of the county of Sacramento has jurisdiction to hear and determine a contest concerning the right to hold a municipal office in the city of Sacramento. Kirk v. Rhoads, 46 Cal. 398.

[c] Constitution, article 11, section 18, specially providing for an election to determine the policy of creating a bonded indebtedness, prohibiting the issuance of bonds without consent of a certain number of voters, and providing no method of enforcing such provision, by implication confers upon the court of chancery jurisdiction to determine the validity of such election.—Gibson v. Trinity County Supervisors, 80 Cal. 359, 22 Pac. 225.

[a] A party is not deprived of a remedy to contest an election because the board of canvassers assumed to meet more than forty days after the return of the legal votes, and, acting on returns then made, declared a person elected to an office who was not elected by the legal votes first returned.—Day v. Jones, 31 Cal. 261.

[b] The forty days within which proceedings may be commenced to contest an election commence running from the day on which the returns are made on which the board of canvassers made the canvass which was the subject of controversy.—Day v. Jones, 31 Cal. 261.

[c] The "return day," within Code of Civil Procedure, section 1115, providing that when an elector contests the right of a person declared elected, he must, within forty days after the return day of such election, file a statement, is not the day on which the result of the election is declared, but the day on which the canvass begins, under Political

Code, sections 1278, 1280, 1281, declaring that the board of supervisors shall meet on the first Monday after the election to canvass the returns.—Carlson v. Burt, 111 Cal. 129, 43 Pac. 583.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 102½. Limitations Affecting Amendments to Petition.

[a] In an election contest, the "statement" provided for in Code of Civil Procedure, section 1115, omitted to allege the "return day" of the election. An amended complaint was filed, alleging the return day as of a date more than forty days prior to the filing of the amended complaint, but less than forty days prior to the filing of the original complaint. Held, that the amended complaint, not alleging a cause of action against any new party, related to the commencement of the contest.—Preston v. Culbertson, 58 Cal. 198.

[a] No particular form of citation is necessary in a contested election case.—Norwood v. Kenfield, 30 Cal. 393.

[b] In a contest concerning an election to an office each party, if he relies on illegal votes cast for the other, must furnish the opposite party, three days before the trial, with a list of the names of the voters alleged by him to have voted illegally.—Norwood v. Kenfield, 30 Cal. 393.

[c] In a contest concerning an election to an office, the three days' notice, which a party who relies on illegal votes given for his adversary must give of the illegal votes he expects to prove, is to be computed by including the first day and excluding the last.—Misch v. Mayhew, 51 Cal. 514.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1116, requiring that the contestant shall serve a notice containing "the number of illegal votes and by whom given," does not require that the names should be written out in full on the list.—Preston v. Culbertson, 58 Cal. 198.

[e] An election contest is a special proceeding, and the requirements of the code in reference thereto must be strictly followed. The object of the law is plainly to require notice in advance of the trial to the defendant, who is declared elected, and whose right to the office is questioned, of the grounds on which his right to the office is contested.—Freshour v. Howard, 142 Cal. 501.

[f] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1709, providing that citation in an election contest must be served in the same manner as a summons in a civil action, and sections 410, 411, providing that a copy of the complaint must be served with the summons, and the summons must be served by delivering a copy, a citation was sufficiently served by delivering to contestee personally a copy of the citation attached to a copy of the statement of the contest and of order.—Hannah v. Green, 143 Cal. 19, 76 Pac. 708.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 398-402; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 444-447, § 264.

§ 104. Persons Entitled to Bring Proceedings.

[a] No special right of contest is given to candidate as such. The right is conferred upon any elector and can only be invoked as an elector.—Sweeney v. Adams, 141 Cal. 561, 75 Pac. 182.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 475, 1111, 1117, a statement filed in an election contest held not fatally defective for failure to allege that plaintiff was an elector when the statement was filed.—Chatham v. Mansfield (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 343.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 419-421, § 249.

§ 105. Persons Against Whom Proceedings may be Brought.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1111, providing that any elector of a county may contest the right of any person declared elected to any office therein, authorizes a contest where one is merely shown by the election returns to be elected, and it is not necessary that he shall have filed his official oath and bond.—Sweeney v. Adams, 141 Cal. 558, 75 Pac. 182.

[a] In an election contest a voter is not a party unless such of record.—Lauer v Estes, 120 Cal. 652, 53 Pac. 262.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 107. Abatement on Death of Party.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1125, providing that, if an election contest proceeding be dismissed for want of prosecution, or if the election be affirmed, judgment must be rendered against the party contesting for costs, an election contest is not abated by the death of the contestant occurring after appeal by contestee from a judgment vacating the decisions of the board of supervisors declaring contestee elected, but may be continued by contestants' personal representative.—Snibley v. Palmtag, 127 Cal. 31, 59 Pac. 200.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 415.

§ 108. Pleading—Complaint, Petition or Statement.

[a] The statement in a contested election case need not contain a prayer for relief.—Norwood v. Kenfield, 30 Cal. 393.

[b] Under the statute of March 23, 1850, providing for the contesting of elections of county officers (Stats. 1850, p. 101, sec. 56), it is sufficient for the contestant to allege that he is, at the time he files the written statement of contest, a qualified elector of the county, without alleging that he was so at the time of the election.—Minor v. Kidder, 43 Cal. 229.

[c] The degree of certainty required in a statement of the cause of contest in an election case is not the highest degree of certainty known in pleading, but only such as will suffice to inform the defendant of the particular proceeding or cause upon which the contest is founded. Such statement need not detail the particular means or measures resorted to for the purpose of accomplishing a misconduct, but only the ultimate facts.—Minor v. Kidder, 43 Cal. 229.

[d] The affidavit in the written statement of the grounds of the contest of an election may be in the form of an ordinary verification to a pleading.—Kirk v. Rhoads, 46 Cal. 398.

[e] Allegations of fraud in general terms and that a defendant is not entitled to vote are conclusions of law, and present no issuable fact.—People v. Neil, 91 Cal. 465, 27 Pac. 760.

[f] A complaint in an election contest which alleges that the plaintiff, who was one of the candidates, is an elector of the county in which the election took place, shows sufficient authority in him to commence the proceedings, and although the complaint does not allege that he possesses the qualifications required by the constitution to make him eligible to the office, and does not, therefore, entitle him to a judgment that he was elected instead of the defendant, yet the failure to make such allegations does not deprive him of the right as an elector to a judgment annulling the election of the defendant.—Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 25 Am. St. Rep. 212, 27 Pac. 779.

[g] A statement of contest of election should show how the poll may be purged of illegal votes, the mere fact of receipt thereof being no ground for rejection of the whole vote.—Packwood v. Brownell, 121 Cal. 478, 53 Pac. 1079.

[h] The complaint showing that defendant wrongfully procured his nomination, or had his name illegally placed upon the tickets, does not show a statutory ground for contesting the election.—Powers v. Hitchcock, 129 Cal. 325, 61 Pac. 1076.

[i] Where an election contest for the office of justice of the peace is defended and decided on the theory that but one justice was to be elected, a statement of the grounds of contest, from which it does not appear that the township was not entitled to two justices, under Statutes of 1901, page 686, chapter 234, providing that, except as otherwise provided, the officers of a township are two justices of the peace, and in townships having a population of less than six thousand "there shall be but one justice of the peace," is not defective, in the absence of proof that the township had a population of six thousand or more; the statement in all other respects complying with Code of Civil Procedure, section 1115, relating to election contests and section 1117, requiring that no statement shall be rejected if the grounds are alleged with sufficient certainty to advise the defendant of the cause of the contest.—Kenworthy v. Mast, 141 Cal. 268, 74 Pac. 841.

[j] An averment in the complaint that one hundred and twenty-four ballots were cast by voters who were registered after the commencement of forty days next preceding the general election is not sufficient, where there is no showing in the complaint that such ballots, if improperly received, could have changed the result of the election.—People v. Woswick, 142 Cal. 71, 75 Pac. 663.

[k] A complaint in quo warranto, to determine the validity of an election for mayor of the city of San Jose, which merely alleges that copies of an old great register were used at the polls instead of copies of a new one required by law, but which does not aver that the names of all the voters were not on the new register, does not state a cause of action.—People v. Woswick, 142 Cal. 71, 75 Pac. 663.

[l] Allegations of a statement of contest consisting of separate allegations of malconduct in counting votes as to each of the seventy-six precincts, being relevant and material, it is not error to refuse to strike them out, though the subject matter might be more concisely stated.—Merkley v. Trainor, 142 Cal. 265, 75 Pac. 656.

[m] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1115, requiring the particular ground of an election contest to be stated, and section 1117, declaring that no statement of the grounds of contest will be rejected, nor the proceedings dismissed for want of form, if the grounds of contest are alleged with such certainty as will advise the defendant of the particular proceeding or cause for which the election was contested, a complaint alleging that the contestant had received a higher and greater number of votes for the office than had the contestee, "but that, ... through . . . . the carelessness, negligence and malconduct of the boards of judges of each and every of the said four election precincts comprising said . . . . township, and of the clerks thereof, in canvassing and counting the votes given at said election, ... it was erroneously and wrongfully made to appear from said returns that said contestee had received the highest number of votes," was sufficient.—Abbott v. Hartley, 143 Cal. 484, 77 Pac. 410.

misconduct by the election boards by which votes were counted for contestee which should not have been counted for him, and votes which should have been counted for contestant were not so counted, and averring that contestant actually received the more and that contestee actually received the less legal votes, was sufficient to present the question as to which of the parties actually received the greater number of legal votes, and a further averment that a tabulated list attached thereto showed the votes actually cast for the contestee, did not preclude the contestant from claiming or the court from finding that the contestee received less than the number of legal votes stated in such list.—Treanor v. Williams, 145 Cal. 315, 78 Pac. 884.

[o] An election contest may be instituted by the filing of the petition verified like an ordinary pleading, which is a sufficient verification "by affidavit" within the requirement of Code of Civil Procedure, section 1115. McCardle v. Barstow, 145 Cal. 135, 78 Pac. 371.

[p] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1111, subdivision 2, and section 1115, held that, where on an election contest ineligibility it relied on by contestant, it must be alleged in the statement.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 109. —— Answer.

[a] A failure to deny an averment in an election contest statement that contestant was an elector at the time and period mentioned therein is an admission of that fact rendering proof unnecessary.—Doty v. Jenkins, 142 Cal. 497, 77 Pac. 1104.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 109½. —— Demurrer.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1115, does not require that the "statement" shall show by averment that it has been filed within forty days, and therefore the objection that the complaint was not filed in time cannot be taken by demurrer.—Preston v. Culbertson, 58 Cal. 198.

[a] In a contested election case, if the statement of the cause of contest lack the clearness and distinctness of allegation desirable in judicial proceedings, it should not for that reason be peremptorily dismissed, but an opportunity afforded to amend.—Minor v. Kidder, 43 Cal. 229.

[b] It is not necessary that the court grant leave to amend an election contest statement in some particular form.—Doty v. Jenkins, 142 Cal. 497, 77 Pac. 1104.

[d] Where, within the forty days allowed by law for the institution of election contests, plaintiff filed an amendment to the contest statement previously filed, it could, if necessary, be considered a new contest, and being filed within the jurisdictional time, and the contestee, making no motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, would be deemed to have appeared and waived all objection to irregularities in the manner in which he was brought before the court.—Doty v. Jenkins, 142 Cal. 497, 77 Pac. 1104.

[e] An amendment to a statement of election contest is to be construed by the same rules as an amendment to a complaint.—Doty v. Jenkins, 142 Cal. 497, 77 Pac. 1104.

[f] Where the original statement of the grounds of contest did not allege any fraudulent or corrupt misconduct of the election officers in failing to remove the numbers from ballots at a certain precinct, but assailed the ballots as having an identifying mark, it was not error to refuse to allow the statement to be amended at the close of the trial, by charging that such failure was for the intended purpose of enabling a record to be made of how each voter voted, and to prevent a fair election at that precinct. Freshour v. Howard, 142 Cal. 501.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 111. —— Issues, Proof and Variance.

[a] Where, on an election contest over the office of mayor of a city, contestee admitted the election and prayed judgment confirming his title to the office, a contention on his part that there was no law for holding the election was outside the issues.—Trafton v. Quinn, 143 Cal. 469, 77 Pac. 164.

§ 112. Evidence—Presumptions and Burden of Proof.

[a] Where irregularities have occurred, it rests with the contestant to show them. The returns are prima facie evidence of the fact they import; and the returned candidate, after being commissioned, is prima facie entitled to the office.—Whipley v. McKune, 12 Cal. 352.

[b] The presumption of law is that the ballots are all returned to the county clerk, and that they have not been mutilated, and if such is not the case it should be shown by evidence.—People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123.

[c] In an election contest, the ballots are the primary and best evidence of the number of votes received by any candidate, if they have not been tampered with, and the burden of showing tampering is on the contestant. Coglan v. Beard, 67 Cal. 303, 7 Pac. 738.

[d] Burden is on contestant to show that illegal votes were cast for contestee.—Russell v. McDowell, 83 Cal. 73, 23 Pac. 183.

[e] If the requisite number of inspectors, judges, and clerks of election was not appointed, the presumption is, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that the deficiency was supplied by the electors present at the time of opening the polls.—People v. Union High School District of Solano County, 101 Cal. 655, 36 Pac. 119.

[f] When a substantial compliance with the provisions of the statute has been shown, the burden of proof shifts to the person contesting the use of the ballots to establish that they have in fact been tampered with, or that they have been exposed under such circumstances that a violation of them might have taken place, but the law cannot guard against a mere possibility, and the ballots cannot be rejected as evidence upon a mere naked showing that it was possible for one to have molested them.—Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454.

[g] Under Political Code, section 1188, providing that a candidate for a public office may be nominated by a petition signed by voters equal in number to three per cent of the vote cast at the last election, where a complaint alleged that no convention of the township had assembled nominating defendant as justice of the peace, and that his nomination had never been certified to the county clerk, in the absence of an averment to the contrary, it will be presumed that he was nominated by a petition of voters equal to three per cent of the votes cast at the last election.—Powers v. Hitchcock, 129 Cal. 325, 61 Pac. 1076.

[a] Ballots are not functus officio at time of canvass, but may be shown in a proceeding to try the right to an office.—Budd v. Holden, 28 Cal. 132.

[b] A party who has offered evidence of the statements of a voter at one election precinct as to his right to vote cannot object to evidence offered by the adverse party as to statements on the same subject by the same voter at another precinct.—Norwood v. Kenfield, 30 Cal. 393.

[c] When a package of votes comes into court properly sealed, the object of the law requiring it to be sealed is accomplished, and if, while in the custody of the officers of the court, the seal is broken, in the absence of any proof, the law would not presume an act of bad faith on their part and the ballots are admissible.—Coffey v. Edmonds, 58 Cal. 521.

[d] The fact that for a certain time the ballots were in the possession of the contestant as de facto county clerk will not of itself render them inadmissible as evidence. Coglan v. Beard, 67 Cal. 303, 7 Pac. 738.

[e] On a second trial of a contested election proceeding, the result of the court, as shown by the tabulated statement taken on the first trial, is admissible as tending to show whether the ballots have been tampered with pending the second trial.—Coglan v. Beard, 67 Cal. 303, 7 Pac. 738.

[f] Evidence of a change of ballots after the officers had counted them is admissible in favor of the defendant in an election contest to disprove an allegation by plaintiff, which the answer denies, that the officers had been guilty of malconduct in counting them.—Lord v. Dunster, 79 Cal. 477, 21 Pac. 865.

[g] Evidence that more men voted for respondent than the recount showed is competent on the issue as to whether the officers conducting the election were guilty of fraud; as the fact that the ballots were changed after they were cast tended to disprove the inference of fraud, arising from the result of the recount.—Lord v. Dunster, 79 Cal. 477, 21 Pac. 865.

[h] A ballot is to be construed as any other writing, and while a resort to parol evidence of extrinsic circumstances may be had for the purpose of interpreting what would otherwise be doubtful, it cannot be shown by such or any evidence that the intention of the voter was anything different from what plainly appears upon the face of the ballot.—Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 25 Am. St. Rep. 212, 27 Pac. 779.

[i] Where a statute prescribes a mode of preservation of ballots, on proof by a contestant of a substantial compliance therewith, the ballots are admissible to overcome the prima facie correctness of the official canvass.—Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454, 29 L. R. A. 673.

[j] Upon the trial of an election contest, testimony of the officers of the election to the effect that the same was properly conducted, that the ballots were properly counted, and that the tally sheets were properly filled up, etc., and the tally sheets themselves, are admissible in evidence.—Packard v. Craig, 114 Cal. 95, 45 Pac. 1033.

[k] In an election contest, the declaration of a voter as to how he voted is admissible. Lauer v. Estes, 120 Cal. 652, 53 Pac. 262.

[l] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1116, requiring the contestant of an election canvass to serve a list of alleged illegal votes on defendant, evidence offered by contestant to prove the illegality of a vote not so specified was properly excluded, though it was named on a similar list served on contestant by contestee.—Smith v. Thomas, 121 Cal. 533, 54 Pac. 71.

[m] Where an elector receives assistance in marking the ballots, evidence of the elector so receiving assistance, or persons other than the election officers, is admissible in an election contest to show for whom his vote was cast, though the officers may be incompetent under Statutes of 1891, page 178, prohibiting election officers from disclosing the name of any candidate for whom an elector has voted. Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821, 975.

[n] The contestant, in order to succeed to the office, has the burden of showing title in himself.—Coghlan v. Alpers, 140 Cal. 648, 74 Pac. 145.

[p] The burden of proving any spoliation of the ballots by the election officers is on him who asserts it; and in the absence of such evidence it will be presumed that the officers obeyed the law, and preserved the ballots unaltered.—McMenomy v. Ruch, 142 Cal. 77, 75 Pac. 661.

[q] It may be shown that certain alleged distinguishing marks were made by the election officers.—Hannah v. Green, 143 Cal. 19, 76 Pac. 708.

[r] Where the contestant for a county office who charged irregularities in all or nearly all of the precincts offered in evidence the ballots from certain precincts until the judicial count of such precincts, taken with the official count of the remaining precincts, gave him a plurality, it was within his legal right to withdraw his objections to the vote of the uncounted precincts, and the contestee, by offering the ballots therefrom in evidence, waives the right to object that they were not so preserved as to be admissible.—McCardle v. Barstow, 145 Cal. 135, 78 Pac. 371.

[s] On an election contest, an objection to contain ballots on the ground that the returns were not properly and safely kept by their legal custodian, the county clerk, was of no avail, where it appeared that, while the clerk might have kept the ballots in a more secure manner, the envelopes containing the ballots were in the same condition as when received by the clerk, and unopened, and there was no evidence tending to show that they were disturbed or tampered with. Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

[t] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1116, prohibiting the introduction of testimony of illegal votes in an election contest unless the contestant deliver to the defendant, at least three days before trial, a written list of the votes which he intends to prove were illegal, evidence as to the illegality of a vote is properly excluded which did not appear on the list served on the defendant, although it did appear on a list served by the defendant on the contestant.—Smith v. Thomas, 52 Pac. 1079.

[u] Where ballots were not preserved in unbroken packages, as required by Political Code, sections 1259, 1264, 1265, they were inadmissible as evidence in the contest.—Chatham v. Mansfield (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 343.

§ 114. —— Best and Secondary Evidence.

[a] The ballots cast at an election are better evidence than the tally list made from them of the number of votes.—People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123.

[b] Ballots are primary and best evidence of number of votes received, if shown not to have been tampered with.—Coglan v. Beard, 65 Cal. 58 2 Pac. 737.

[c] Although the printed copy of an election proclamation with the affidavit of publication is not primary evidence of the contents of the original proclamation, yet, since it is admissible to prove the publication of the proclamation, an objection to its admission, upon the ground that absence of the original was not sufficiently accounted for, is properly overruled if the court is not requested to limit the evidence to the purpose for which it is admissible.—County of San Luis Obispo v. White, 91 Cal. 432, 24 Pac. 864, 27 Pac. 756.

[d] In an election contest the ballots are the best evidence of the manner in which the electors have voted only when their integrity can be satisfactorily established. Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454.

[e] Though the ballots are the best evidence of their contents, and must prevail over the official returns when in conflict therewith, yet the official returns are prima facie correct, and constitute legal evidence of the true vote and result in any precinct, in the absence of impeaching evidence.—Markley v. Trainor, 142 Cal. 265, 75 Pac. 656.

§ 115. —— Weight and Sufficiency.

[a] When admitted allegations as to whole number of votes corresponds with returns in evidence, it sufficiently appears that all returns were in evidence.—People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 124.

[b] The returns of the election boards are prima facie true, and, to overcome them by a recount, the contestants must affirmatively show that the ballots have remained in the same condition as they were when delivered to the proper custody by the election judges. Coglan v. Beard, 65 Cal. 58, 2 Pac. 737.

[c] In an action to contest an election, the ballots are not only competent and material evidence, but evidence of a very high order. Gibson v. Trinity County Supervisors, 80 Cal. 359, 22 Pac. 225.

[d] The contents of the original proclamation are sufficiently proved by the testimony of the clerk of the board of supervisors that he drafted the original of which the printed advertisement held in his hand, which was afterward introduced in evidence, is a copy, if such testimony was received without objection.—County of San Luis Obispo v. White, 91 Cal. 432, 24 Pac. 864, 27 Pac. 756.

[e] Where a ballot was found at the recount to be so marked that it could be identified, and there was some evidence that the mark was not on the vote when first taken from the box, the court's finding that it was made subsequently was warranted.—Smith v. Thomas, 121 Cal. 533, 54 Pac. 71.

[f] In an election contest, clear evidence must be furnished as to how an illegal voter cast his ballot, before his vote can be deducted from the total of contestee.—Smith v. Thomas, 121 Cal. 533, 54 Pac. 71.

[g] An admission, on the last day of trial of an election contest, that plaintiff and defendant were electors of the district, would be construed as an admission of electorship as alleged in the respective pleadings, and was sufficient to support a finding or residence as alleged.—Doty v. Jenkins, 142 Cal. 497, 77 Pac. 1104.

[h] Where a ballot bore on the back thereof the initials "W. H." and "R. L. O.," in different handwriting, in the upper left-hand corner, and on an election contest there was no pretense that the initials were not those of some of the election officers, placed on the ballot by them at some time during the canvass by the board of election, a finding that they were not placed thereon by the voter was warranted.—Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

[i] Evidence considered, and held sufficient to show that illegal ballots cast at an election were sufficient in number to make a difference in the result of the election.—People v. Davidson (Cal. App.), 83 Pac. 161.

[j] Evidence considered, and held sufficient to show that illegal ballots were cast in all of the precincts of a township.—People v. Davidson (Cal. App.), 83 Pac. 161.

§ 116. Proceedings Before Trial in General.

[a] Under the laws, no power is conferred on a county judge, at chambers, to grant a continuance of a cause to determine an election contest, which was pending and set down for trial at a future day in the county court. Norwood v. Kenfield, 34 Cal. 329.

[b] Defendant had been certified as elected by a majority of fifty-eight votes. The recount under the direction of the court showed no material change, except in one precinct, where it showed a difference, in favor of contestant, of one hundred and thirty-two votes out of a total vote of three hundred and fifteen. This result was announced on Saturday, and on Monday, before a decision was made, defendant moved a continuance, and presented the affidavit of the three commissioners of election at that precinct, stating that steps were being taken to discover the authorship of the fraud. Accompanying it was a certificate signed by more men, who claimed to have voted for defendant, than the recount showed him to have received votes; and the affiants alleged that they could procure many more signatures, and the personal attendance of these voters, all of whom had stated that they would swear that they voted for defendant. It was impossible to have procured the attendance of these witnesses without an adjournment of the case. Held, that the court erred in refusing an adjournment.—Lord v. Dunster, 79 Cal. 477, 21 Pac. 865.

[c] Statute contemplates speedy trial of election contests but court has power to adjourn special session for several days on account of prior engagement.—Falltrick v. Sullivan, 119 Cal. 616, 51 Pac. 947.

[a] Court has no discretion to dismiss or entertain case as it deems the public interest requires. Nor has the state's attorney such discretion. The case is prosecuted like any other action instituted by a private citizen, subject only to the provisions of the statute. Searcy v. Grow, 15 Cal. 117.

[b] Notwithstanding the consolidation of the contests for the convenience of trial, the contests remain distinct and several, and any one of the contestants may dismiss his contest if he chooses, or may, under ordinary circumstances, dismiss as to such of the contestees as he may choose.—Coghlan v. Alpers, 140 Cal. 648, 74 Pac. 145.

[a] The dismissal of a contest practically operates to confirm the election of a contestee who holds the certificate of election.—Langley v. Head, 142 Cal. 368, 75 Pac. 1088.

[a] In a proceeding in the county court to contest an election, a continuance for seven days, granted against the objections of the respondent, and without affidavit showing cause, was held to operate a discontinuance. Keller v. Chapman, 34 Cal. 635.

§ 120. Scope of Inquiry and Powers of Court or Board.

[a] The form and manner of proceeding, before the board of delegates, in deciding upon a contested election, is for the board to determine. And the courts will not undertake to say what is, or is not, sufficient for the board to proceed upon in the first instance. It is requisite simply that at some point of the proceedings it appear that the case is within the terms of the law.—People v. Board of Delegates, 14 Cal. 479.

[b] In an election contest the injury is limited to the examination of the right of the person "declared elected" at the election, the canvass of which is questioned; and the legality of another special election called after the result of a canvass declaring that no one was elected is not a question which can be tried in a contest of the first election. Austin v. Dick, 100 Cal. 199, 34 Pac. 655.

[c] Where the order of the board of supervisors, entered in the minutes, as required by Statutes 1883, page 94, section 3, under which an election as to town incorporation was held, shows that a majority of the votes "cast" were for incorporation, the fact that it also shows that such majority was less than a majority of votes "polled" may be explained, in an action attacking the incorporation, by a count of the ballots in court. People v. Town of Sausalito, 106 Cal. 500, 39 Pac. 937.

[d] Where, in an election contest for the office of supervisor of a county, the contestee rested his case on the question whether he or the contestant had received the highest number of votes, the contestee could not require the court to count ballots which did not show a vote for the contestant or contestee, for the purpose of showing that, though contestant received more votes than the contestee, other persons, not declared elected, and not parties to the proceeding, had received more votes than the contestant, though it would prevent a judgment declaring the contestee elected.—Coghlan v. Alpers, 140 Cal. 648, 74 Pac. 145.

[e] An election contest for the office of supervisor of a county—the board consisting of eighteen members—was instituted by contestants against all the eighteen persons declared elected. The contestants alleged misconduct on the part of the canvassing board in miscounting the vote received by the eighteen contestees, and in failing to count votes for the contestants which, if counted, would have made their poll higher than either of the persons declared elected. The contest was dismissed, except as to four. Held, that the remaining contestees had the right to have all the ballots claimed to be votes for the eighteen original contestees counted, for the purpose of showing, if possible, that when all were counted the four contestees would stand among the eighteen having the highest number of votes.—Coghlan v. Alpers, 140 Cal. 648, 74 Pac. 145.

[f] Only matters for court to inquire into on election contest are those prescribed in subdivisions 1, 2, 3 and 4 of section 1111, Code of Civil Procedure.—Maddux v. Walthall, 141, 415, 74 Pac. 1026.

[g] Though contestant in his statement of contest attacks the returns from all the precincts, and as to certain precincts attempts to prove the integrity of the ballots therefrom, yet at any time before actual admission of the ballots he may abandon the contest as to those precincts, accept as true the denial of the answer that there is no error in the returns thereof, and introduce the official returns therefrom, which are prima facie correct.—Merkley v. Trainor, 142 Cal. 265, 75 Pac. 656.

[h] On an election contest, the question whether the ballots were shown to have been so guarded as to preclude suspicion that they were not in their original condition was not largely within the discretion of the trial court.—Trafton v. Quinn, 143 Cal. 469, 77 Pac. 164.

[i] The legality of a vote in an election contest will not be determined where it was not claimed to have been cast for plaintiff, and it was not counted for defendant.—Smith v. Thomas, 52 Pac. 1079.

[a] Where an order was made December 1st fixing December 11th as the date for a special session of court to hear an election contest, the date of hearing "was not less than ten days" from the date of the order, contrary to the express provisions of Code of Civil Procedure, section 1118.—Hannah v. Green, 143 Cal. 19, 76 Pac. 708.

§ 122. Trial or Hearing.

[a] Objections, in an election contest case, as to the reception of illegal votes which will not affect the result, will not be considered. Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821-975.

[b] When the objection, in an election contest case, that testimony as to certain illegal votes is inadmissible because the contestant did not serve a list of the alleged illegal votes on the incumbent, which is necessary to render the evidence admissible under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1116, is not made when the evidence is offered, it is an admission that the statute was complied with, or at least a waiver of compliance.—Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821, 975.

[c] It was within the discretion of the court to consolidate fifteen election contests for the office of supervisor—the board consisting of eighteen members—instituted by fifteen different candidates for the office of supervisor against all the eighteen persons declared elected, thereby allowing them to be tried as one proceeding.—Coghlan v. Alpers, 140 Cal. 648, 74 Pac. 145.

[d] On an election contest, it having been found that one of the parties did not receive a majority of the votes, a failure to find that he was eligible to the office was not material.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[e] On an election contest it was not necessary for the court to find on such allegations in the statement as were admitted by the answer either by specific statement or failure to deny.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[f] On an election contest it was not necessary that the court should find as to the successful party's eligibility; no question thereto having been made under the pleadings.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

§ 123. —— Questions for Court and Jury.

§ 124. New Trial.

[a] The proceedings of the county court under Act of 1850 in contested election cases are "special cases," within Constitution, article 6, section 9, requiring the jurisdiction to be conferred by the legislature, thereby precluding such court in such proceedings from granting a new trial, there being no statute conferring such power.—Dorsey v. Barry, 24 Cal. 449.

[b] County court has no power to grant a new trial in an election contest.—Casgrave v. Howland, 24 Cal. 457.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1111-1127, regulating election contests, are special and summary; and, the only remedy provided therein for a party aggrieved by the decision of the superior court being an appeal to the supreme court, a motion for a new trial cannot be made.—Packard v. Craig, 114 Cal. 95, 45 Pac. 1033.

[d] Upon a new trial ordered as the result of an appeal the court need not recount ballots to which no objection was made at the first trial, but should take the results of such ballots as then ascertained; and election officers should not be compelled to disclose the contents of ballots of assisted voters.—Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 435; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 522-523, §§ 314.

§ 125. Dismissal and Nonsuit.

[a] Where two persons were found, on an election contest, to have received an equal and the highest number of votes, the contest was properly dismissed.—Wright v. Ashton, 143 Cal. 544, 77 Pac. 477.

[a] Under act of March 25, 1857, regulating the fire department of San Francisco, and providing, in section 2, that the board of delegates thereof should have power to decide contested claims to offices, such board cannot, where it is conceded that one of the claimants was elected, the dispute being merely as to which received the more votes, decide that neither was elected, and declare the election void.—People v. Board of Delegates of San Francisco Fire Dept., 14 Cal. 479.

[b] Where respondent defaults in an election contest it is not sufficient that ample causes of contest be set forth in the statement filed by a contestant; their truth must be established by clear proof, before an election can be annulled.—Searcy v. Grow, 15 Cal. 117.

[c] It is absolutely essential to the validity of a judgment in election contest that it be rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction, at the time and the place and in the form prescribed by law.—Norwood v. Kenfield, 34 Cal. 329.

[d] Proceedings to contest the election of county officers, being special and summary, the contestant will not be permitted to take judgment by default, but must prove his allegations.—Keller v. Chapman, 34 Cal. 635.

[e] The judgment in an election contest cannot properly adjudge that the defendant is unlawfully holding the office; and the provision of section 949 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides that an appeal does not stay proceedings where the judgment "adjudges the defendant guilty of usurping or intruding into, or unlawfully holding public office," etc., applies only to the judgment in an action of quo warranto, or for the usurpation of office, and not to any judgment proper to be entered in an election contest.—Day v. Gunning, 125 Cal. 527, 58 Pac. 172.

[f] A finding upon an election contest that the contestant and the contestee have "received an equal and the highest number of votes cast for said office,'' cannot sustain a judgment annulling the election. The judgment should be that the contestant take nothing by the proceeding, and that it be dismissed.—Snibley v. Palmtag, 128 Cal. 283, 60 Pac. 860.

[g] The consolidation of several election contests for the office of supervisor of a county, so as to allow them to be tried as one proceeding, does not make each contestant responsible for the pleadings or course of proceeding of any other contestant; and the findings and judgment, respectively, though each embraced in one document, must determine the right of each party with respect to his particular pleading as if there had been no consolidation.—Coghlan v. Alpers, 140 Cal. 648, 74 Pac. 145.

[a] Where the board of delegates of the San Francisco fire department, invested by act of March 25, 1857, section 2, with power to decide contested claims to fire offices, in hearing such a contest exceeded its jurisdiction by declaring the election void, and the contestant acquiesced, and took no further action to compel a decision of the contest, such action of the board amounted to dismissal, and he is concluded.—People v. Board of Delegates of San Francisco Fire Dept., 14 Cal. 479.

[a] The rulings of the trial court in counting the ballots will not be reviewed by the appellate court unless exceptions were reserved thereto at the trial.—Lay v. Parsons, 104 Cal. 661, 38 Pac. 447.

[b] Where, in an election contest, a ballot was not objected to on the ground that the voter had marked a cross after the words ''No Nomination,'' such objection cannot be considered on appeal.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[c] Where, in an election contest, a ballot was not objected to on the ground that the writing of a name was unauthorized because it was also printed on a ballot, such objection cannot be considered on appeal.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[d] An objection to ballots not made in the superior court will not be considered upon appeal.—Langley v. Head, 142 Cal. 368, 75 Pac. 1088.

[e] Where, in an election contest, before the ballots were opened, preliminary proof was made that they were in the same condition as when inclosed in the sealed packages by the election officers at the close of the count at the respective polling places, and the contestee at no time during the trial made any objection to the integrity of the ballots, he could not object for the first time on appeal that there was no sufficient proof that the objectionable identifying marks on certain of the ballots were placed there by the voters before they were handed to the election officers to be deposited in the box. McMenomy v. Ruch, 142 Cal. 77, 75 Pac. 661.

[f] The supreme court will not review the ruling of the trial court on any particular ballot in an election contest, in the absence of an exception reserved thereto by the party complaining.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[g] On an appeal in an election contest, no objection to a ballot will be considered by the supreme court unless it has been specifically made in the trial court.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[a] The policy of the law, as regards contested election cases, is that the proceedings should be summary; and it is proper, in case of appeal, that the whole case should be taken to the appellate court for final decision, if possible.—Webster v. Byrnes, 34 Cal. 273.

[b] The objection that the judgment in a contested election case is not sustained by the evidence cannot be made on appeal, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1126, authorizing such appeal subject to rules of law regulating appeals in other cases, unless the appeal has, as required in other cases, been taken within sixty days after judgment. Packard v. Craig, 114 Cal. 95, 45 Pac. 1033.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1127, where no appeal was taken from a judgment in an election contest within ten days, the judgment became final, and the subsequent filing of a bill of exceptions would have been ineffectual.—Wilson v. Arnot (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 293.

[d] Under Political Code, section 936, where a judgment annulling an officer's certificate of election was not appealed from within ten days, under section 1127, Code of Civil Procedure, he was not entitled to salary pending an appeal subsequently taken.—Wilson v. Fisher (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 421.

[a] In a special case to contest an election under the statute, the county court has no power to grant a new trial, and an appeal to the supreme court must be taken from the judgment, and a statement on appeal be made and settled, to enable the supreme court to review the proceedings below outside the judgment-roll.—Casgrave v. Howland, 24 Cal. 457.

[b] In an election contest, a ruling excluding a ballot on account of the insufficiency of the marking will not be reviewed unless the record contain the original ballot, or a fac simile copy thereof, a verbal description of the mark being insufficient.—Lay v. Parsons, 104 Cal. 661, 38 Pac. 447.

[c] In an election contest the court refused to allow ballots introduced in evidence to be incorporated into the bill of exceptions, on the ground that he had not ordered them to be marked as exhibits in the case. It appeared elsewhere in the bill of exceptions that the ballots were marked as exhibits, with the knowledge of the court, and that the court had ordered the clerk to preserve the ballots, and seal them up. Held that, since the ballots could be identified with certainty, plaintiff is entitled to have them certified to the supreme court.—Jennings v. Brown, 109 Cal. 290, 41 Pac. 1085.

[d] Where the only objection shown to ballots which are part of the record on appeal in an election contest case is that contestant or incumbent objected thereto, the failure to state the grounds of objection will prevent a consideration thereof on appeal.—Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821, 975.

[e] It is the duty of the court to afford to counsel an opportunity for such an inspection of the ballots as may be necessary to properly present the questions raised by the bill of exceptions.—Langley v. Head, 142 Cal. 368, 75 Pac. 1088.

[f] Upon an election contest, in cases where original ballots cannot be reproduced or described in a bill of exceptions so as to show the precise question raised, this court, under rule 25, will order original ballots to be reproduced; but this rule is not intended to dispense with the description of all disputed ballots in the bill of exceptions, and in cases where the question is such that the condition of the ballots may clearly be exactly shown in the bill of exceptions it devolves upon the person seeking the judgment of this court thereon so to show it; and it is not proper practice in such cases to abandon all description of ballots in the bill of exceptions, and merely to refer to the originals therein.—Langley v. Head, 142 Cal. 368, 75 Pac. 1088.

[g] Where a statement for the contest of an election did not allege that the contestant and contestee were the only candidates for the office, and the grounds of contest merely alleged that the contestant received a higher number of votes than the contestee, but not that he received the highest number of votes, the irregularity was cured by a recital in the judgment, "No other person received any votes for said office at said election in said township."—Abbott v. Hartley, 143 Cal. 484, 77 Pac. 410.

[h] Where an appealing contestee in an election contest did not bring up any of the ballots the counting or rejection of which was complained of by him, the supreme court could not reverse the judgment on any point arising out of the rulings on particular ballots.—Treanor v. Williams, 145 Cal. 315, 78 Pac. 884.

[a] Where court below rejected equal number of votes cast for each contestant, upon a state of facts equally applicable to each voter, the error, if such it was, is rendered immaterial.—Webster v. Byrnes, 34 Cal. 273.

[b] When the bill of exceptions taken upon an election contest fails to show error, or to show all that occurred at the trial in respect to the counting of ballots, the judgment of the court below will not be reversed because the court declined to recount the votes, after they had once been counted, and a tally kept by two clerks and the court reporter, all of whom agreed in the tally, and the court being satisfied that no mistake had been made.—Jennings v. Brown, 114 Cal. 307, 46 Pac. 77.

[d] Where one ballot appears to have been improperly counted for the appellant, and another for the respondent, a correction thereof cannot alter the result of the election.—Pratt v. O'Neil, 140 Cal. 539, 74 Pac. 27.

[e] Error in refusing to allow contestee to prove that certain distinguishing marks on account of which ballots were excluded were made by the election officers was harmless to contestee, where more of the excluded ballots were for contestant than for contestee.—Hannah v. Green, 143 Cal. 19, 76 Pac. 708.

plicable to an appeal in an election contest. McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[g] On appeal in an election contest, a contention that a review of the findings was sought to determine whether they were sustained by the evidence so as to call for an appeal within sixty days under Code of Civil Procedure, section 939, subdivision 1, held without merit.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[h] The ruling of the court on an objection to each particular ballot in an election contest when excepted to by the injured party is reviewable on appeal from the judgment. McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

[a] Where the record did not clearly show where a precinct line ran, and the judge below visited the locality, held, that his decision as to where a certain man should vote would not be reversed.—Preston v. Culbertson, 58 Cal. 198.

[b] Whether attempted erasure on ballot has been canceled so as to let the ballot stand is a question for the court below to find, and with the finding the appellate court is not inclined to interfere.—Coffey v. Edmonds, 58 Cal. 521, 526.

[c] On appeal in an election contest the action of the court in rejecting ballots having straight lines instead of a cross opposite some of the names would be held conclusive.—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

[d] In an election contest the question as to whether the ballots have been so cared for as to preclude any reasonable suspicion that they are not in their original condition is one largely in the discretion of the trial court, and its decision will not be disturbed if fairly supported by the evidence.—Hannah v. Green, 143 Cal. 19, 76 Pac. 708.

[e] In an election contest the question whether ballots have been so taken care of as to preclude any reasonable suspicion that they are not in their original condition is one largely within the judgment and discretion of the trial court, and its determination of it will not be disturbed on appeal if the evidence fairly warrants the conclusion which the court below reached.—McCardle v. Barstow, 145 Cal. 135, 78 Pac. 371.

[a] Where, on appeal from an election contest, the record discloses no exceptions to the rulings of the court in the admission of ballots cast for the appellant, so that it might appear that the errors relied on by him were without prejudice, and the judgment is reversed, the appellate court will not order the trial court to enter judgment in favor of appellant, but will remand the contest for further hearing.—Farnham v. Boland, 134 Cal. 151, 66 Pac. 200, 366.

[b] The supreme court, in an appeal from an election contest case, will remand the cause on reversal, though all the evidence essential to the final determination of the cause is before the court.—Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821, 975.

[c] Where a finding of the superior court as to malconduct of the election board was not sustained by the evidence as to one precinct, which was decisive of the election, this court cannot order final judgment, but will order a new trial, in which the court will determine the case in accordance with the views expressed by this court.—Kenworthy v. Mast, 141 Cal. 268, 74 Pac. 841.

[d] Under the amendment of 1903 to subdivision 4 of section 1211 of the Political Code, a distinguishing mark does not invalidate a ballot, unless it shall appear that such mark was placed thereon by the voter for the purpose of identifying such ballot; and in view of such amendment an appeal taken in a contest begun prior thereto, and disposed of after the amendment, will be decided according to the previous law as to distinguishing marks, without discussion thereof, which would have no value as a precedent.—Chubbuck v. Wilson, 142 Cal. 599.

[e] Where judgment upon election contest was in favor of contestant, and upon appeal all errors found in this court resulted in a net gain for contestant, judgment must be affirmed.—Taut v. Hawkins, 143 Cal. 104, 76 Pac. 897.

[a] In a suit under our statute by an elector to contest an election, he becomes a party, and is responsible for costs if he fail.—Searcy v. Grow, 15 Cal. 117.

[b] Where it was determined, in a contested election case, that it was a tie vote, neither party can recover costs.—Soto v. Vannoy, 65 Cal. 285, 3 Pac. 895.

EVIDENCE, § 145.
—— WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY, § 146.

§ 136. "Purity of Elections" Act.

[a] Section 32 of Purity of Election Law is to be construed as intended to secure evidence for conviction of offenders against provisions of other sections of the statute which require co-operation of two or more persons. Cohen, Ex parte, 104 Cal. 524, 43 Am. St. Rep. 127, 38 Pac. 364.

[ab] A statement made and filed under the Purity of Elections Act, by a successful candidate for office, which shows that no money was received by him, that two hundred dollars was contributed by him to a party committee for campaign purposes, and that twenty-two dollars and sixty-five cents was paid by him for sundries and incidentals, without specially itemizing them, does not disclose any substantial defect or bad faith, and the failure to itemize the sundries and incidentals, if it be a defect, is trivial and unimportant. The statement, as a whole, is sufficient to prevent a forfeiture of the office.—Land v. Clark, 132 Cal. 673, 63 Pac. 1071.

[b] The statute only contemplates a record of affirmative matters, and does not require negative declarations. The declaration in the statement that no money was received goes beyond the demands of the statute.—Land v. Clark, 132 Cal. 673, 64 Pac. 1071.

[c] A contribution for campaign purposes, paid to the regularly constituted committee of a political party, is allowable and proper under the law; and it will be presumed that the money so contributed was to be expended in a lawful way. A statement showing the nature and amount of such contribution, to whom it was paid, and for what purpose, is in substantial compliance with the law.—Land v. Clark, 132 Cal. 673, 64 Pac. 1071.

[a] The provisions of section 19 of the Purity of Elections Act of 1893 do not apply to primary elections for delegates to a political convention, which are purely a creation of political parties and associations, and an indictment charging the defendant with giving money to influence the choice of such delegates at a primary election duly and regularly called by the central committee of a certain political party states no offense.—People v. Cavanaugh, 112 Cal. 674, 44 Pac. 1057.

§ 138. Offenses and Responsibility Therefor in General—Violation of Registration Laws.

[a] Persons who falsely registered as voters in a precinct at defendant's procurement are not for that reason accomplices of his in the procurement of another to so register.—People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 3, 43 Pac. 198.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Under Penal Code, section 57, which provides that every person who gives or offers a bribe to any member of a political convention, and every member of such a body who receives or offers to receive any such bribe, is punishable with imprisonment in the state prison, one who offers to receive a bribe, with intent to influence his vote, is guilty, though no offer of bribery is made to him.—People v. Hurley, 126 Cal. 351, 58 Pac. 814.

[b] One elected as a delegate to a political convention not yet organized is a member thereof, within the meaning of Penal Code, section 57, which provides that every person, a member of such a convention, who receives or offers to receive a bribe, is punishable by imprisonment in the state prison.—People v. Hurley, 126 Cal. 351, 58 Pac. 814.

[c] A complaint charging defendant with a promise of patronage to a person named, with intent to promote defendant's own election, charges an offense.—Bradley v. Clarke, 133 Cal. 196, 65 Pac. 395.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 140. —— Illegal Voting—In General.

[a] A guilty intent is a necessary element in the offense created by the statute, which declares that a person voting twice at the same election shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and therefore a person who votes a second time when so intoxicated that he has no knowledge that he has voted before is not guilty under the statute.—People v. Harris, 29 Cal. 678.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 141. —— Willful Neglect of Election Officers to Perform Official Duty.

[a] On the prosecution of an election inspector for violation of Penal Code, section 41, prescribing punishments for election officers' willful neglect to perform official duties, and for knowingly and fraudulently acting in contravention of existing election laws, the court properly charged that "defendant is presumed, as inspector, to know at his peril what the law was, and it would furnish him no excuse that he may have supposed that the law was different from what it was. But, in order that you may find him guilty, it must appear that he acted knowingly and fraudulently."—People v. Burns, 75 Cal. 627, 17 Pac. 646.

[a] That in a civil case, under Political Code, section 1109, against the clerk, to procure cancellation of votes alleged to have been illegally placed on the voting register, one testified that he was deputy register, without testifying as to any offense, does not protect him from prosecution for procuring, "as deputy register," one to falsely register as a voter, in violation of "Purity of Election Law" (Stats. 1893, p. 24, sec. 22), under section 32, declaring that one testifying against a person offending against section 22 shall not himself be prosecuted for the offense with reference to which his testimony was given.—People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 3, 43 Pac. 198.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 143. Prosecution and Punishment—Preliminary Proceedings.

[a] Political Code, section 1265, provides that, on receipt of the package of ballots cast at an election, the clerk must file it, and keep it unopened for a year, after which he shall burn it, without examining the contents, if there is no contest about such election. Section 1266 provides that, if a contest is commenced within a year, he must keep the package unopened, unless ordered to produce it by the court in which the contest is pending, so that evidence may be had of its contents. Held, that a court has no power to compel the production of a package of ballots cast at an election, for the purpose of obtaining evidence in a preliminary investigation of a criminal charge against an election officer for violating election laws.—Brown, Ex parte, 97 Cal. 83, 31 Pac. 840.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 563, 565, § 352.

§ 144. —— Indictment and Information.

[a] Indictment for refusal of election inspector to administer oath prescribed by section 1234, Political Code, to challenged voter held sufficient.—People v. Burns, 75 Cal. 628, 629, 17 Pac. 646.

[b] An information charging that defendant "fraudulently voted at an election when he was not entitled to vote," though in the language of the statute (Pen. Code, sec. 45), is not sufficient to state an offense, but must set forth the facts relied on to show fraudulent voting.—People v. McKenna, 81 Cal. 159, 22 Pac. 488.

[c] An information which merely alleges that the defendant fraudulently voted at an election, when he was not entitled to vote, is insufficient, in the absence of an averment of the particular facts relied upon, to show the fraud and to show the disqualification of the defendant to vote, notwithstanding section 45 of the Penal Code declares that "every person not entitled to vote who fraudulently votes at any election . . . . is guilty of a felony."—People v. Neil, 91 Cal. 465, 27 Pac. 760.

[d] Under section 23 of the act to promote the purity of elections (Stats. 1893, p. 24), which enumerates several separate and distinct acts as constituting the crime of preventing an election or canvass "from being fairly had and lawfully conducted," an indictment charging defendant with willfully and unlawfully acting as election clerk is sufficient, though such act is not one of those enumerated in the statute as constituting the offense.—People v. Lee, 107 Cal. 477, 40 Pac. 754.

[e] The "Purity of Elections Law" (Stats. 1893, p. 24), making "every person who willfully causes, procures, or allows" false registration punishable, applies as well to a private citizen as an officer; and therefore the charge that defendant, "as deputy register," committed the offense, is surplusage, and need not be proved.—People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 3, 43 Pac. 198.

[f] The allegation in an indictment that a primary election was duly and regularly called, does not import that it was called under and pursuant to the provisions of the Political Code, inasmuch as it might have been duly and regularly called in entire disregard of those provisions.—People v. Cavanaugh, 112 Cal. 674, 44 Pac. 1057.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 145. Evidence.

[a] In a prosecution for offering to accept a bribe, evidence that defendant offered to accept a bribe from a candidate other than the one referred to and charged in the indictment is not admissible, where there is no connection between the two offers.—People v. Hurley, 126 Cal. 351, 58 Pac. 814.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction for altering election returns.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 147, 149, 47 Pac. 1009.

[b] In the absence of evidence of motive for altering election returns, and of opportunity for doing so, a conviction was not sustained merely by a comparison by the jury of the few words and figures alleged to have been altered, with the same words and figures written by defendant under abnormal conditions.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 146, 47 Pac. 1009.

§ 2. —— Refusal of Permission to Competing Company to Erect Poles.

[a] Remedy for granting permit to erect poles to one company and refusing it to another is suit to compel granting of permit.—Mutual Electric Light Co. v. Ainsworth, 118 Cal. 6, 50 Pac. 10.

§ 3. —— Erection Without Authority.

[a] Poles erected in street without authority constitute an illegal obstruction or public nuisance.—Amestoy v. Electric Rapid Transit Co., 95 Cal. 311, 30 Pac. 550.

§ 4. Injuries Incident to Production or Use—Care Required in General.

[a] The mere fact that a dangerous agency is used raises no presumption that the public knows enough of its nature to avoid the danger which may arise from its use; and the public—aside from the consumers using the commodity—owes no duty to those introducing it; but it is the duty of those making a profit from the use of a dangerous element, such as electricity, to use the utmost care to prevent injury to any class of people, and they must protect those possessing less than ordinary knowledge of the character of the commodity.—Giraudi v. Electric Imp. Co. of San Jose, 107 Cal. 120, 48 Am. St. Rep. 114, 40 Pac. 108.

§ 5. —— Defects, Acts or Omissions Causing Injury.

[a] Plaintiff was a dish washer in a restaurant, the wires to light which ran about sixty feet over the roof of the building at an average height of two feet. Plaintiff had seen the employees of defendant electric company placing the wires, and had been upon the roof in the daytime when the wires were in position. The night of the accident was stormy, and plaintiff, with his employer, went upon the roof to secure the business signs of the latter. Plaintiff, not knowing or forgetting the location of the wires, came in contact with them. Held, that defendant was negligent in not raising the wires so high above the roof that those having occasion to go there would not come in contact with them.—Giraudi v. Electric Imp. Co., 107 Cal. 120, 48 Am. St. Rep. 114, 40 Pac. 108, 28 L. R. A. 596.

[b] An electric company is responsible for injury from a live electric wire to an inexperienced servant, who had never performed the work of a "lineman," which required great skill, and to which he was assigned by a superior fellow-servant, and required to ascend a pole and scrape the wire, without being furnished with rubber gloves, or other protective appliances used by linemen, and without any instruction or warning as to the dangers attending the work, of which he was ignorant.—Tedford v. Los Angeles Electric Light Co., 134 Cal. 76, 66 Pac. 76.

§ 6. —— Illegal Maintenance of Wires.

[a] In an action for death caused by an improperly insulated electric wire maintained in violation of a city ordinance, the right of recovery is not precluded by the mere fact that the original position of the wire may have been subsequently changed by some extrinsic cause.—Wales v. Pacific Electric Motor Co., 130 Cal. 521, 62 Pac. 932, 1120.

[a] The fact that an employee in a building had been on the roof after electric wires were placed thereon did not show that he knew their location, so as to render him negligent in coming in contact with them on a stormy night while trying to secure certain articles on the roof.—Giraudi v. Electric Imp. Co., 107 Cal. 120, 48 Am. St. Rep. 114, 40 Pac. 108, 28 L. R. A. 596.

[b] If the insulating material with which the wires were covered was not in good condition it is the fault of the electric company; and if the fact that the wires were wet destroyed the insulation for the time, it cannot be presumed that the effect of moisture upon insulation is a fact generally known, and, if there is no evidence tending to show that plaintiff had knowledge of that fact, he cannot be charged with contributory negligence in coming in contact with the wires.—Giraudi v. Electric Imp. co. of San Jose, 107 Cal. 120, 48 Am. St. Rep. 114, 40 Pac. 108.

§ 8. Supply of Power or Light.

[a] A plaintiff held entitled to recover for breach of a contract to deliver electricity under a complaint charging breach of a contract for the sale and delivery of "personal property" (Civ. Code, secs. 654, 655, 663).—Terrace Water Co. v. San Antonio Light etc. Co. (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 562.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 3308, a plaintiff held entitled to recover for breach of a contract to deliver electric power the difference between the contract price and the cost to procure it from another, under a general ad damnum clause in the complaint.—Terrace Water Co. v. San Antonio Light etc. Co. (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 562.

[c] Where a seller broke a contract to furnish electricity, it was estopped to deny that the injured party had been damaged to the extent of his actual loss and his outlay fairly incurred.—Terrace Water Co. v. San Antonio Light etc. Co. (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 562.

§ 1. Nature and Elements of Offense in General.

[b] The essential elements of the offense of embezzlement are the fiduciary relation which arises where one intrusts property to another, and the fraudulent appropriation thereof by the latter.—People v. Gordon, 133 Cal. 328, 85 Am. St. Rep. 174, 65 Pac. 746.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

What is embezzlement: 98 Am. Dec. 126, note. See, also, 15 Cyc. 486-537; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 619-738, § 1.

§ 2. —— Distinction Between Larceny and Embezzlement.

[a] The chief distinction between larceny, as defined in section 60 of the Crimes and Punishments Act, and embezzlement, as defined in section 70 of the same act, is that in the former case the guilty party has, and in the latter case he has not, the possession of the property at the time of the commission of the offense.—People v. Belden, 37 Cal. 51.

§ 3. —— Demand as Condition Precedent.

[a] Authority to demand a statement of accounts is not an authority to demand payment, and such demand is not sufficient to sustain charge of embezzlement.—People v. Tomlinson, 66 Cal. 347, 5 Pac. 509.

[b] The fact that the treasurer of an association deposits a check drawn in its favor in a bank, and has the amount credited to his personal account, does not justify a conviction, in the absence of evidence of a demand by the association, or of inability to respond to a demand.—People v. Royce, 106 Cal. 173, 39 Pac. 524.

[c] It is not necessary, in order to sustain a conviction for embezzlement of the money, as the property of the one from whom the collection was made by the defendant without authority after his discharge from employment, that such person should have made a demand on the defendant for the return of the money.—People v. Van Ewan, 111 Cal. 144, 43 Pac. 520.

[d] Penal Code, section 503, defines embezzlement to be the fraudulent appropriation of property by one intrusted with it. Defendant was intrusted with a launch for the purpose of taking it from one place to another, on an understanding that he might have the privilege of purchasing it after arriving at his destination, or else deliver it to the owner, but he did not take it to the place agreed, but took it to another place, and started on a voyage with it. Held, that it was not necessary for the owner to have made a demand for the return of the launch in order to constitute defendant's offense that of embezzlement.—People v. Goodrich, 142 Cal. 216, 75 Pac. 796.

[e] A treasurer of a corporation who is also a member of a special committee appointed to investigate an alleged embezzlement of its funds by a former treasurer, with full power to act in reference thereto, is authorized to make a demand on such former treasurer for the money so embezzled.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[f] An embezzlement being the felonious conversion of money or other property, it is not an indispensable element that a demand should be made upon the person committing the embezzlement for the money so embezzled, but the demand and refusal is only evidence thereof.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

ulent and felonious taking of the money, which he is charged with having embezzled, evidence of an independent demand for its return is unnecessary.—People v. Coxe, 134 Cal. xix, 66 Pac. 725.

[a] One who obtains possession of property from the owner with the intention of stealing it, and carries out his intent, is guilty of larceny, but if the intent to steal was conceived after the taking of possession, the crime is embezzlement.—(Cal. 1863) People v. Smith, 23 Cal. 280.

[b] If one hires a horse, having at the time the felonious intent to deprive the owner of him, the offense is larceny. If the original intent was not felonious, but if the felonious intent was formed afterwards, the offense is embezzlement.—People v. Salorse, 62 Cal. 139.

[c] Where there is no evidence tending to show an intent to steal, or to convert the property of another clandestinely or feloniously, the offense of embezzlement is not made out; nor can the statute against embezzlement be used to punish a party for the mere failure to comply with a pecuniary obligation; and where the evidence shows merely a case of disputed mutual accounts between an attorney and client, for which a civil action is the appropriate remedy, the charge of embezzlement is not sustained.—People v. O'Brien, 106 Cal. 104, 39 Pac. 325.

[d] The fact that defendant drew money out of savings bank, deposited there to credit of his ward, does not show criminal intent to misappropriate money.—People v. Page, 116 Cal. 395, 48 Pac. 326.

[e] It is good defense that property was openly appropriated under claim of title made in good faith though legally untenable—e. g., agent retaining excess of sale price as commission.—People v. Lapique, 120 Cal. 26, 52 Pac. 40.

[f] Where it appears that the owner gave up all control of the money to the defendant, while he slept, and that the defendant accepted the trust to safely keep it in the same room until morning, the place where the money was kept was immaterial; and if the defendant violated the agreement, and either stole the money, or connived at its being stolen, with the intent to deprive the owner of it, the defendant was guilty of embezzlement.—People v. McMahan, 133 Cal. 278, 65 Pac. 571.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 491; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 621-625, § 3.

§ 5. —— Nature of Property.

[a] Shares of stock constitute property, and are therefore the subject of embezzlement.—People v. Williams, 60 Cal. 1.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 492; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 625, 626, § 4.

§ 6. —— Value of Property.

[a] The embezzlement of a horse or any other of the animals specified in Penal Code, section 487, subdivision 3, is a felony, irrespective of the value of the animal.—People v. Salorse, 62 Cal. 139.

[b] Under Penal Code, section 514, providing that "every person guilty of embezzlement is punishable in the manner prescribed for feloniously stealing property of the value of that embezzled," the embezzlement of a horse is a felony without regard to its value; the stealing of a horse being grand larceny, by the terms of the statute.—People v. Wickham, 116 Cal. 384, 48 Pac. 329.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 492; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 626, § 5.

§ 7. —— Ownership of Property.

[a] Any legally recognizable interest in property is sufficient to sustain averment of ownership in information for embezzlement.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 236, 10 Pac. 502.

[b] Ownership of property embezzled by agent is immaterial.—People v. Neyce, 86 Cal. 395, 24 Pac. 1091.

[c] The secretary of a company, authorized to draw and sign checks (to be signed also by the vice-president), received from the vice-president two blank checks signed by him to pay two certain bills, and filled out said checks for much larger sums, drew the money from the bank, and absconded. Held that, since the checks were drawn against an existing balance, the bank had no option but to pay them, and the defense that the money embezzled was the bank's, and not the company's, could not be maintained.—People v. Gallagher, 100 Cal. 466, 33 Pac. 890, 35 Pac. 80.

[d] If the title passed to the defendant when the launch was sold, he could not embezzle it; and if it was a sale on condition that the purchase money should be paid, it was incumbent on the prosecution to prove that it had not been paid.—People v. Goodrich, 138 Cal. 472, 71 Pac. 509.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 492; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 626-629, § 6.

§ 8. —— Possession or Custody of Property.

[a] Criminal Practice Act, section 70 (Wood's Digest, p. 339, art. 1930), providing that if any clerk or servant to whom money or property "shall be intrusted by his master or employer" shall withdraw from his master or employer, etc., he shall be punished, etc., does not include all embezzlements or fraudulent conversions of money or property which shall have come into the possession of the servant by virtue of his employment, but is confined to cases where the employee received the money or property directly from the employer.—People v. Bailey, 23 Cal. 577.

[b] Possession of property embezzled at time of offense is essential.—People v. Belden, 37 Cal. 51.

[c] Possession of horses by servant is possession of master, and will not support embezzlement.—People v. Belden, 37 Cal. 51.

[d] The evidence showed that defendant, pretending to illustrate the manner of drawings at the Louisiana lottery, placed upon a table a paper covered with squares and figures, and induced witness to place his money upon the table with the understanding that it would be returned as soon as defendant had completed the illustration; that as soon as the money was placed upon the table defendant took the same, and refused to return it. Held, that the evidence established larceny, and would not support a conviction for embezzlement.—People v. Johnson, 91 Cal. 265, 27 Pac. 663.

[e] If the servant or agent has merely the custody of the goods which he feloniously appropriates, the offense is larceny. If he has the possession, it is embezzlement.—(Cal. 1892) People v. Perini, 94 Cal. 573, 29 Pac. 1027.

[f] Embezzlement is statutory crime, unknown to common law, and consists of fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom it has been intrusted, and may cover a case in which the personal property fraudulently converted had not been in the possession of the prosecutor.—People v. Gallagher, 100 Cal. 466, 35 Pac. 80.

For Authorities From Other States:

See 15 Cyc. 493; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 629-632, § 7.

§ 9. —— Capacity or Character in Which Property is Received or Held.

[a] Penal Code, sections 503, 508, define embezzlement as the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom it has been intrusted, and declare that a clerk, agent, or servant who fraudulently appropriates to his own use any property of another which has come into his control or care by virtue of his employment is guilty of embezzlement. Defendant informed witness that he could sell certain goods dealt in by witness to a certain person, and would do so for a certain commission. The witness was to collect the price and defendant to return for his commission. Witness shipped the goods, and defendant went with them, sold them as his own, and appropriated the proceeds. Witness testified that defendant was not in his employ and had no authority to collect the money. Held, that defendant was not guilty of embezzlement.—People v. Dougherty, 143 Cal. 593, 77 Pac. 466.

See 15 Cyc. 494; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 632, 633, § 8.

[a] Fraudulent misappropriation is gist of offense.—People v. De Lay, 80 Cal. 56, 22 Pac. 90.

[b] In order to warrant the conviction of a defendant charged with embezzlement it is necessary for the people to prove that he had before the date of the complaint for his arrest for the offense, fraudulently converted to his own use the money alleged to have been embezzled.—People v. Wyman, 102 Cal. 552, 36 Pac. 932.

[c] Where an officer in charge of the funds of a bank takes therefrom such funds, and deposits in place thereof securities known by him to be worthless, and appropriates to his own use the funds thus taken, he is guilty of embezzlement.—People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302, 39 Pac. 617.

[d] A conviction of a guardian of an insane person for embezzlement is not sustained by evidence merely that he drew the ward's money out of the bank, and that he did not make payment, as ordered by court, to the asylum where the ward was confined.—People v. Page, 116 Cal. 386, 48 Pac. 326.

[f] Under an information charging embezzlement of jewelry intrusted to accused as agent and bailee, to be sold or the proceeds returned, that accused agreed to return the jewelry or its proceeds, and did neither, and when arrested was detected hiding some of the jewelry, and stated that he did not have the remainder of it, is sufficient to sustain a conviction, since, having been intrusted with the property and having fraudulently converted it, the crime was complete.—People v. McLean, 135 Cal. 306, 67 Pac. 770.

[g] Property must have been converted to defendant's use either temporarily or permanently.—People v. Jackson, 138 Cal. 462, 71 Pac. 566.

[h] In a prosecution for embezzlement of a check, the evidence showed that one T employed defendant as a broker to obtain a loan for him; that defendant went to complainant, who agreed to make the loan, and defendant was directed by her to attend to the matter of looking after the title to the land, and taking of a mortgage thereon; that defendant found the title satisfactory; that T made the mortgage, and gave it to defendant, to be delivered to complainant on receipt of the money; that afterwards she drew the check in question for the balance in favor of defendant, who cashed it, and with the proceeds paid certain of T's obligations; and that defendant refused to deliver to complainant the mortgage until she settled with him for his services in the matter, and for certain other services which he claimed to have rendered her. Held, that the evidence was insufficient to sustain a conviction.—People v. Van Sciever, 42 Pac. 451.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 11. —— Aiding and Abetting.

[a] The president of a corporation, to pay an indebtedness of the corporation, signed a blank check, payable to the secretary, with directions to fill in the amount, and pay the debt. He filled it in for a larger amount, and appropriated the entire sum. By previous appointment defendant went to a saloon near a bank, while the secretary drew the funds. They immediately went to another city, where defendant registered under a fictitious name, procured currency for part of the coin, took most of the funds, in a valise, to a railroad station, where he obtained two tickets, paying therefor from the appropriated funds. Defendant, when arrested, had some of them on his person. Held to warrant a conviction for aiding and abetting in the embezzlement.—People v. Gallagher, 33 Pac. 890.

§ 12. —— Property Received in One County and Converted in Another.

[a] Offense of embezzlement in county where horse was received was complete the moment it was taken with intent wrongfully to appropriate it, regardless of the subsequent removal of the property to another county and the sale of the horse therein.—People v. Leong Fly, 107 Cal. 497, 40 Pac. 805.

§ 13. Embezzlement by Particular Classes of Persons—Agents.

[a] Agent can commit crime of embezzlement by drawing on his principal, in favor of third person, the same as though he received the money in person, if principal pays draft. Hedley, Ex parte, 31 Cal. 108.

[b] If an agent obtains the money of his principal in the capacity of agent, but still in a manner in which he was not authorized by his agency to receive it, and converts the same to his own use with intent to steal or embezzle it, it is money received "in the course of his employment" as agent.—Hedley, Ex parte, 31 Cal. 108.

[c] To convict an agent on a charge of embezzlement, four propositions must be proved—that he was an agent, that he received the money in the course of his employment, that he received money belonging to his principal, and that he converted the money to his own use with the intent to steal and embezzle it.—Hedley, Ex parte, 31 Cal. 108.

[d] Party receiving money as agent is estopped to deny agency in prosecution for embezzling it.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 235, 10 Pac. 502.

[e] If an agent obtains the money of his principal in the capacity of an agent, but in a manner not authorized, and fraudulently converts the same to his own use, he receives it "in the course of his employment" as agent, and is guilty of embezzlement.—People v. Gallagher, 100 Cal. 466, 35 Pac. 80.

[f] Terms "bailee" and "agent" are, with respect to persons and property and offense of embezzlement, but different names for the same relation.—People v. Walker, 144 Cal. 1, 77 Pac. 705.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 14. —— Bailees or Others Having Possession Under Agreement.

[a] All conversions of money or property by a bailee are not "ipso facto unlawful or felonious under our statute. The word 'bailee,' under our statute must be construed in a limited sense, as designating 'bailees' to keep, transport, and deliver."—People v Cohen, 8 Cal. 42.

[b] Term "bailee," in the seventy-first section of the act of 1850, concerning crimes and punishments, is not used in the limited sense of a bailee "to keep, to transfer, or to deliver," overruling People v. Cohen, 8 Cal. 42. People v. Poggi, 19 Cal. 600.

[c] A defendant cannot be convicted of the embezzlement of money as bailee under Penal Code, section 507, upon evidence which shows without contradiction that he received the money from the complaining witness to be invested for her in stocks, and that he so invested it, and that if he was guilty of any offense it was the conversion of the stocks; the relation between the parties as to the money being one of agency, and not of bailment.—People v. Leipsic, 130 Cal. xviii, 62 Pac. 311.

[a] Attorney converting money collected for client to his own use is guilty of embezzlement.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 228, 10 Pac. 502.

[b] Where, on the decision of a contest before the United States land office, involving the right to purchase government land, the successful party has sixty days in which to make payment to such office, and fourteen days thereafter sends to her attorney the money to make such payment, the attorney is not guilty of embezzlement because he fails within thirteen days after receiving the money to make the payment, in the absence of any demand for a return of the money, or any directions by his client as to the time when he should pay for the land.—People v. Wyman, 102 Cal. 552, 36 Pac. 932.

[c] The fact that the defendant neglected up to the time of his arrest to cash orders sent to him to pay for land to be purchased from the government, and that, when arrested, he did not have on his person all of the money intrusted to him for that purpose, and did not offer to account for the same, are insufficient to prove that he had fraudulently appropriated the money to his own use prior to the filing of the complaint upon which he was arrested.—People v. Wyman, 102 Cal. 552, 36 Pac. 932.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 501; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 652, 653, § 19.

§ 16. —— Officers or Employees of Corporations or Associations.

[a] Embezzlement by officer of association is punishable regardless of whether officer is or is not member of association.—People v. Mahlman, 82 Cal. 587, 23 Pac. 145.

[b] A company's secretary, authorized to draw and sign checks (to be signed also by the vice-president), who receiving from the vice-president two blank checks, signed by him, to pay two certain bills, fills out said checks for much larger sums, draws the money from the bank, and absconds, obtains control of it "by virtue of his employment," within Penal Code, section 508, defining "embezzlement by servants."—People v. Gallagher, 100 Cal. 466, 33 Pac. 896, 35 Pac. 80.

[c] A de facto officer of a corporation is criminally liable for embezzlement of funds in his hands.—People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 102, 39 Pac. 617.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 502; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 654-658, §§ 22, 23.

§ 17. —— Public Officers or Employees.

[a] Acts of a defendant in wrongfully appropriating to his own use public moneys received by him in the official capacity of secretary of a state board constitute an embezzlement, within the meaning of section 504, Penal Code.—People v. Gray, 66 Cal. 271, 5 Pac. 240.

[b] Moneys collected as wharfage and tolls become the property of the state as soon as collected, and are capable of being embezzled before being paid into the state treasury.—People v. Gray, 66 Cal. 271, 5 Pac. 240.

[c] The facts that defendant, the treasurer of a state soldier's home, was required to report at stated periods only, and that the time for reporting a receipt of the money embezzled had not arrived, do not prevent the state from showing that defendant had already embezzled it.—People v. Royce, 106 Cal. 173, 37 Pac. 630.

[d] The willful omission of a public officer to pay over public money received by him is not necessarily embezzlement under section 424 of the Penal Code. The money might be retained for commissions, or under other bona fide claim of right. To sustain a conviction under that section, it must be alleged and shown that the defendant was authorized by law to receive the money, and that it was the duty of the defendant under the law to pay it over to the treasurer, as well as that he willfully omitted to do so.—People v. Westlake, 124 Cal. 452, 57 Pac. 465.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 18. —— Assignees for Benefit of Creditors.

[a] Assignee for benefit of creditors who fraudulently misappropriates trust property to payment of his own claim is guilty of embezzlement.—People v. De Lay, 80 Cal. 56, 22 Pac. 90.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 19. Defenses.

[a] That defendant has given an indemnity bond for the amount of property coming into his hands as assignee is not a defense to a prosecution for embezzlement.—People v. De Lay, 80 Cal. 52, 22 Pac. 90.

[b] Offer to return embezzled funds is no defense.—People v. De Lay, 80 Cal. 56, 22 Pac. 90.

[c] If a defendant has embezzled and converted trust moneys to his own use it cannot affect his guilt in the eye of the law if he afterward repents and restores the money.—People v. Royce, 106 Cal. 173, 37 Pac. 630, 39 Pac. 524.

[d] The fact that a draft which defendant was alleged to have embezzled was drawn under act of Congress of August 27, 1888, for the support of disabled soldiers and sailors, and was made payable to the order of the governor, instead of the state treasurer, as required by the act of Congress, is no defense, as defendant is estopped to deny the validity of the draft, or that the money belonged to the soldiers' home of which he was the treasurer.—People v. Royce, 106 Cal. 173, 37 Pac. 630.

[e] A deputy county assessor charged with embezzlement cannot set up as a defense that the assessor who appointed him never filed his official oath or bond as required by statute, it appearing that when the crime was committed the assessor was in the discharge of the duties of his office.—People v. Cobler, 108 Cal. 538, 41 Pac. 401.

[f] The fact that an appropriation of an employer's money was made without attempt at concealment is no defense to a charge of embezzlement.—People v. Connelly, 38 Pac. 42.

[a] Embezzlement is committed in county where money misappropriated was received. Palmer, Ex parte, 86 Cal. 632, 25 Pac. 130.

[b] Defendant was properly charged with embezzlement of the property in the county in which it was converted to his own use.—People v. McMahan, 133 Cal. 278, 65 Pac. 571.

[a] Indictment for embezzlement held not to sufficiently charge offense.—People v. Gale, 77 Cal. 121, 19 Pac. 231.

[b] Information for embezzlement substantially in language of statute is sufficient.—People v. Mahlman, 82 Cal. 586, 23 Pac. 145.

[c] Indictment of defendant for embezzlement as guardian need not set out particulars of his appointment or proceedings in matter of guardianship.—People v. Page, 116 Cal. 391, 48 Pac. 326.

[d] An information against the treasurer of a corporation for embezzlement, alleging that he embezzled certain funds "contrary to his trust as such officer," is a sufficient compliance with Penal Code, section 504, providing that every officer of a corporation who appropriates any property under his control, "not in the due and lawful execution of his trust," is guilty of embezzlement; section 958 providing that words used in a statute defining an offense need not be strictly pursued in an indictment.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[e] In an information for embezzlement, an averment that the money "had come into" the hands of the defendant was sufficient on that subject.—People v. Walker, 142 Cal. 90, 75 Pac. 658.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 23. —— Certainty.

[a] A complaint, under Penal Code, section 1426, requiring that it shall set forth the offense charged with such particulars of time, place, person, and property as shall enable the defendant to understand the offense complained of, alleging that accused was president of a corporation, and had under his control securities of a certain value held by the corporation as a pledgee, the names of the owners of the securities being unknown to the deponent, and that accused did willfully, unlawfully, and feloniously convert the securities to his own use, contrary to the execution of his trust, is a substantial compliance with the statute.—City and County of San Francisco v. Randall, 54 Cal. 408.

[a] Indictment against a servant for withdrawing himself from his employer and taking with him his employer's property intrusted to him, with intent to steal the same and defraud his employer thereof, is sufficient if it charge the offense in the language of the act defining it, and set out fully the circumstances under which it was committed.—People v. Garcia, 25 Cal. 531.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 25. —— Description of Property.

[a] An indictment which charges the defendant with converting moneys, goods, and chattels of the value of four hundred thousand dollars, without any particular specification of the different articles, is bad.—People v. Cohen, 8 Cal. 42.

[b] An indictment against a bailee for felonious conversion of coin, etc., must state the description of the coin.—People v. Cohen, 8 Cal. 42; People v. Peterson, 9 Cal. 313.

[c] An allegation that the property embezzled was of the value of so many dollars, without saying "of the coin of the United States," is sufficient.—People v. Poggi, 19 Cal. 600.

[d] The omission, in an indictment for embezzlement, to state any description or character whatever of the stolen money, is a fatal objection, whenever presented during the progress of the cause.—People v. Cox, 40 Cal. 275.

[e] It is not necessary to specify in information or prove kind of money embezzled.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 237, 10 Pac. 502.

[f] Under Penal Code, section 667, providing that, in an indictment for embezzlement of money, the coin, number, denomination, or kind thereof need not be alleged, an indictment which alleges that defendant embezzled "the sum of twelve dollars, lawful money of the United States," sufficiently describes the money.—People v. Cobler, 108 Cal. 538, 41 Pac. 401.

[g] Penal Code, section 426, declares that the phrase "public moneys" includes all money received or held by county officers in their official capacity. Held, that an allegation that moneys were received by defendant "in his official capacity" was the allegation of a fact which fixed their character as "public moneys."—People v. Hamilton, 32 Pac. 526.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 514-516; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 680-685, §§ 41, 42.

§ 26. —— Value of Property.

[a] An indictment for embezzlement must show the value of the property embezzled; merely alleging the damages resulting to the complaining witness not being sufficient.—People v. Cohen, 8 Cal. 42.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 516; 18 Cent. Digs., cols. 685, 686, § 43.

[a] Under Criminal Practice Act, section 243, making immaterial an erroneous allegation as to the person injured, if the offense charged in the indictment is described with sufficient certainty in other respects so as to identify the act, an indictment charging one with embezzling moneys of "the city of J, a municipal corporation of C county," etc., is not fatally defective, although the act of incorporation of the city of J provides for a city government, to be a body politic and corporate by the name and style of "The Mayor and Common Council of the City of J."—People v. Potter, 35 Cal. 110.

[b] Penal Code, section 504, provides that every officer of any association who fraudulently appropriates to any use or purpose, not in the due and lawful execution of his trust, any property which he has in his possession or under his control by virtue of his trust, is guilty of embezzlement. Held, that it is not necessary for the information, charging such officer with embezzlement, to state the persons composing the association, as the fact of the officer's being a member would not change the offense.—People v. Mahlman, 82 Cal. 585, 23 Pac. 145.

[c] In an indictment for embezzlement of money collected by defendant as an agent from a debtor of his principal, after his discharge, the debtor may properly be alleged as owner.—People v. Van Ewan, 111 Cal. 144, 43 Pac. 520.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 517, 518; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 686-698, §§ 44, 45.

§ 28. —— Capacity or Character in Which Property was Received or Held.

[a] An indictment against a bailee for felonious conversion of property must state the character of the bailment.—People v. Cohen, 8 Cal. 42; People v. Peterson, 9 Cal. 313; People v. Poggi, 19 Cal. 600.

[b] Averment that money was received as "servant and agent" is sufficient to show capacity in which it was received.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 236, 10 Pac. 502.

[c] An information for embezzlement which fully states the facts constituting the crime is good, though it does not designate the accused as "bailee," "trustee," or "agent," or formally put him in any of the classes named in the statute defining embezzlement. (1886) People v. Johnson, 71 Cal. 384, 12 Pac. 261; (1890) People v. Neyce, 86 Cal. 393, 24 Pac. 1091.

[d] Penal Code, section 503, defines embezzlement to be the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom it has been intrusted. Held, that an information for embezzlement need not necessarily set out the particulars constituting the fiduciary relation.—People v. Goodrich, 142 Cal. 216, 75 Pac. 796.

[e] Where an information for embezzlement alleged that defendant was intrusted as bailee with a launch for the purpose of taking it to a certain place, and there purchasing it, or, in case he did not purchase it, delivering it to its owner, and that defendant did not take the launch to the place agreed or purchase it, and embezzled the same, etc., the information sufficiently showed that defendant was intrusted with the launch as a bailee.—People v. Goodrich, 142 Cal. 216, 75 Pac. 796.

[f] An information charging defendant with embezzling money of a certain company received by him as its agent and by virtue of his employment is not a departure from the original complaint under which defendant was committed, charging him with embezzling money intrusted to him as bailee.—People v. Walker, 144 Cal. 1, 77 Pac. 705.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 29. —— Conversion or Appropriation of Property.

[a] Bailees to keep, transfer, or deliver, being those contemplated by the statute against embezzlement, the character of the conversion must be set forth in an indictment against a bailee under the statute.—People v. Cohen, 8 Cal. 42.

[b] It is sufficient to state the fact of the conversion by a bailee of the property in his possession in the language of the statute, without specifying any particular mode of conversion.—People v. Poggi, 19 Cal. 600.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 521, 522; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 695-699, §§ 51, 52.

§ 30. —— Prosecution of Public Officer.

[a] Where the act of incorporation of a city vested the municipal government in certain officers, including "a city marshal," it was held that an indictment charging a person with embezzling moneys of the city, alleging that he was at the time of the act "the city marshal of," etc., sufficiently averred that he was then an officer of the corporation.—People v. Potter, 35 Cal. 110.

[b] Under section 16, act of April 6, 1863 (Stats. 1863, p. 197), creating the office of "superintendent of public schools," and section 71, providing that the words "public school" or "public schools" shall be understood as having the same meaning as the words "common school" or "common schools," theretofore used in the school laws, an indictment for embezzlement against one as "superintendent of common schools" sufficiently describes the office.—People v. Doss, 39 Cal. 428.

[c] An indictment stating that the money embezzled consisted of public funds of the county, and was received by the defendant as deputy county assessor for the use and benefit of the county, sufficiently states the manner in which the defendant received the money, and the use and purpose for which he held it.—People v. Cobler, 108 Cal. 538, 41 Pac. 401.

[d] An indictment charging defendant with embezzlement of money which came into his possession by virtue of his trust as "county physician" is bad, there being no such public office as that of county physician; it being impossible to construe it as meaning the superintendent of hospitals and poorhouses, whom the county board of supervisors is authorized by County Government Act of 1897, section 25, subdivision 5 (Stats. 1897, p. 458, c. 277), to appoint; and if it be assumed to mean a graduate in medicine, whom such act authorizes such board to appoint to attend the indigent sick and dependent poor, such appointee is not authorized to receive or have in his possession any money belonging to the county.—People v. Shearer, 143 Cal. 66, 76 Pac. 813.

[e] The allegation that defendant received the money in his official capacity was sufficient, without referring to the statute under which the information was drawn, or to any statute which created a duty, the antecedent existence of which constituted a factor connected with the offense; the general conclusion of the information, "contra formam statuti," being sufficient.—People v. Hamilton, 32 Pac. 526.

[f] An information which alleged that defendant, "having theretofore" been a county clerk, and "charged with the receipt, safekeeping, transfer, and disbursement of public moneys, in his official capacity as such clerk and officer, and his official term . . . . having expired, ... and there then and there remaining in his hands certain public moneys theretofore received by him in his official capacity as such clerk," he willfully omitted to pay them over to his successor, the demand therefor "having then and there been made of" defendant by his successor, sufficiently charged that defendant, as county clerk, received money as such officer, and failed to pay it over to his successor; and the use of the participle instead of the past tense of the verb did not make the allegations mere recitals.—People v. Hamilton, 32 Pac. 526.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 31. —— Issues, Proof and Variance.

[a] It is not necessary that the precise sum alleged in an indictment for embezzlement should be proved to have been taken.—People v. Gray, 66 Cal. 271, 5 Pac. 240.

[b] Where a defendant is charged with embezzlement of moneys as an officer, manager, and servant of a banking corporation, "duly created, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the state of California," proof that such corporation existed as a corporation de facto, claiming in good faith to be a corporation organized under the laws of California, and doing business as such, is sufficient to sustain the indictment.—People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302, 39 Pac. 617.

[c] When an information for embezzlement aptly charges the defendant with having received the money of another, and willfully and feloniously appropriated it to his own use, additional averments describing the check or instrument upon which he obtained the money are immaterial, and a discrepancy between such description and the proof does not constitute a variance.—People v. Allen, 129 Cal. xviii, 62 Pac. 170.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 525-527; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 705-712, §§ 55-59.

§ 32. Evidence—Admissibility in General.

[a] The failure of the defendant to apply the money as directed after his arrest must be disregarded in considering the question of his guilt or innocence of the crime charged, and is inadmissible in evidence.—People v. Wyman, 102 Cal. 552, 36 Pac. 932.

[b] A letter written by the defendant to a third person, after the discharge of the prosecuting witness, replying to a letter of inquiry based upon an advertisement by the defendant for another person to take the same situation upon the same terms is admissible in evidence as tending directly to impeach the defendant's good faith in discharging the prosecuting witness, and the fact that it may have tended to show the commission of another offense by the defendant is immaterial.—People v. Tomlinson, 102 Cal. 19, 36 Pac. 506.

[d] Evidence of conversations with the defendant as to the condition of the books, tending to show the methods and conduct of the defendant touching the moneys charged to have been embezzled, and touching discrepancies occurring in a previous year, tending to show a method so long continued as to preclude the supposition that the later ones were accidental or the result of negligence, is competent and admissible.—People v. Bidleman, 104 Cal. 608, 38 Pac. 502.

[e] The question whether an embezzlement is to be proven only through the failure of the agent to account for or to pay over the money received goes only to the evidence, and not to the fact of embezzlement, which may be proved by other evidence before the period for accounting arrives.—People v. Royce, 106 Cal. 173, 37 Pac. 630, 39 Pac. 524.

[f] The entries in a cash-book kept in the bank by a bookkeeper under the direction of the defendant, as manager of the bank, are prima facie evidence of the balances of cash on hand at the several dates at which it was important to show such balance, and it is proper to instruct the jury that such entries are evidence tending to show the cash on hand at such dates.—People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302, 39 Pac. 617.

[g] Where the president of a bank testifies that a draft, the proceeds of which were alleged to have been embezzled, was deposited, and that it was mailed to a bank in New York for collection, he may testify on whom such draft was drawn.—People v. Royce, 106 Cal. 173, 37 Pac. 630, 39 Pac. 524.

[h] The president could also testify as to the amount paid defendant for such draft.—People v. Royce, 106 Cal. 173, 37 Pac. 630, 39 Pac. 524.

[i] The fact that a field deputy who assessed and collected taxes on personal property, which is the money alleged to have been embezzled, did not return a statement of the assessment or of the amount received at the assessor's office, and that no entry was made in the assessor's books, does not tend to show that the money collected does not constitute a part of the public funds of the county.—People v. Cobler, 108 Cal. 538, 41 Pac. 401.

[j] In embezzlement against an agent receipts given by him to debtors of his principal over his own name are admissible in evidence against him.—People v. Van Ewan, 111 Cal. 144, 43 Pac. 520.

[k] Recital in an order removing a guardian of an insane person, "It appearing to the satisfaction of the court that said P. (the guardian) has appropriated to his own use the funds of the said insane person, and that he has rendered no account thereof," is not evidence against him on indictment for embezzlement, being mere hearsay.—People v. Page, 116 Cal. 386, 48 Pac. 326.

[l] In a prosecution of a tax collector for embezzlement, his successor testified that at his first settlement as collector his attention was called to the condition of the retail liquor license book, from which he had procured his retail liquor license. Held, that he could not then be asked what he discovered unusual about the book, since it did not appear that the book was ever in defendant's possession, nor where it had been kept, and that it was in the same condition as when the witness received it.—People v. Westlake, 124 Cal. 452, 57 Pac. 465.

[m] The fact that it was defendant's duty, as secretary of a corporation, to know the contents of its books, which had been falsified while in his custody, to enable him to commit the crime of embezzlement or conceal it, did not make them admissible against him to show receipt of the money, and that he falsified them, without first showing that he was responsible for their condition.—People v. Blackman, 127 Cal. 248, 59 Pac. 573.

[n] Where an embezzlement by a bailee took place in the county where the trial was held, an objection to the owner's testimony as to what took place at the bailment in another county, as being without the jurisdiction of the court, was without merit.—People v. Gordon, 133 Cal. 328, 85 Am. St. Rep. 174, 65 Pac. 746.

[o] Where a corporation authorizes certain officers to withdraw its funds from banks in which they are deposited, for the purpose of defeating its creditors, and a portion of the various deposits is withdrawn by such officers, and one of their number is indicted for embezzling the portion withdrawn from one bank, evidence of the sums withdrawn from the other banks is admissible against him.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[p] On a prosecution for embezzlement of a specific sum belonging to a society, evidence of indebtedness of the defendant in a large sum on account with the society was inadmissible.—People v. Walker, 142 Cal. 90, 75 Pac. 658.

[a] Failure of officer to pay over money unexplained does not raise a legal presumption of embezzlement.—People v. Carrillo, 54 Cal. 63.

For Authorities From Other States:

§ 34. —— Weight and Sufficiency in General.

[a] In a prosecution against a deputy assessor, evidence that neither the statement of the assessment nor the money collected was returned to the assessor's office is sufficient to justify the jury in finding that the money was converted by the defendant to his own use.—People v. Cobler, 108 Cal. 538, 41 Pac. 401.

[b] On trial of a deputy county assessor for embezzlement, proof that defendant was engaged outside taking statements and collecting personal taxes, and that he received from a firm their statement and collected from them taxes thereon (the moneys charged to have been embezzled), is sufficient to show that he converted the money to his own use, and that the moneys received were public funds, though he did not return the statements to the assessor's office, and no entry was made on the assessment books; it being his duty to return the statements and money to the assessor.—People v. Cobler, 108 Cal. 538, 41 Pac. 401.

[c] Penal Code, section 503, defines embezzlement as "the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom it has been intrusted." Held, that the testimony of a witness that he "intrusted" his money to defendant does not conclusively show that the appropriation of it by defendant was embezzlement, but that expression must be read in the light of his whole testimony and all the circumstances.—People v. Montarial, 120 Cal. 691, 53 Pac. 355.

[d] On a prosecution for embezzlement, the evidence showed that the prosecuting witness, before retiring for the night, asked accused to count his money, and keep the same for him, and that accused counted it, asking another to notice how much there was. She then put the purse in a pocket of the owner's trousers, and hung them on a chair. The money disappeared, and subsequently most of it was found secreted in the roof of the house where accused lived. Held, that the evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction, under Penal Code, section 503, defining embezzlement as the fraudulent appropriation of property by one intrusted therewith.—People v. McMahan, 133 Cal. 278, 65 Pac. 471.

[e] Evidence that an alleged corporation is a de facto corporation is sufficient proof of its corporate existence to sustain a prosecution against its treasurer for the embezzlement of its funds.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[f] Where the defendant not only refused to comply with the demand for return of the money, but denied that he ever received any part of the money, alleged to be embezzled, and such denial was disproved, and it was found by the jury that he did receive it, the fact of such receipt renders the denial thereof convincing evidence of the offense charged. People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[g] Penal Code, section 507, makes it embezzlement for one to convert property intrusted to him as bailee. Section 511 provides that, on any indictment for embezzlement, it is a sufficient defense that the property was appropriated openly and under a bona fide claim of title, though such claim is untenable. On a prosecution for the embezzlement of a mare sold by defendant while in his possession, prosecutor testified that he intrusted her to defendant to have her for her keep until demanded; that prosecutor stated a price that he would sell the mare for, but that, in answer to a statement by defendant that he might buy the mare, prosecutor said that that would be "an after consideration." Defendant testified that prosecutor stated that he might buy the mare at any time for fifty-five dollars. Defendant did not inform prosecutor of the sale of the mare, or remit any of the alleged price. Held, that the evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction.—People v. Klee, 137 Cal. xix, 69 Pac. 696.

[h] A conviction of embezzlement of a steam launch as being the property of another person, intrusted to the defendant, and feloniously converted by him to his own use, is not sustained by the evidence, where it appears that the steam launch was purchased by the defendant from such other person, and there is no proof that the purchase price was not paid.—People v. Goodrich, 138 Cal. 472, 71 Pac. 509.

For Authorities From Other States:

§ 35. Trial—Questions for Jury.

[a] On an information for embezzlement, it appeared that defendant was the assignee of an insolvent debtor, and that the assignment contained preferences. A firm of which defendant was a member was second in the list, but defendant paid its debt first, leaving little for payment of other debts. He also received seven hundred and thirty-seven dollars from sales of milk, and only accounted for four hundred and twenty-seven dollars. Held, that the evidence justifed the verdict of guilty, as it was for the jury to say whether defendant intended fraudulently to appropriate the property.—People v. De Lay, 80 Cal. 52, 22 Pac. 90.

[b] Upon a trial upon a charge of the embezzlement of money fraudulently appropriated by the defendant, to whom it had been intrusted by the prosecuting witness for safekeeping, while the owner slept, the question whether the money was intrusted to the defendant is for the jury to determine, under proper instructions.—People v. McMahan, 133 Cal. 278, 65 Pac. 571.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 534.

[b] Upon a trial for embezzlement—that is, "the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom it has been intrusted," within section 503, Penal Code, an instruction relating to what constitutes embezzlement, and another relating to the question of fraudulent intent in the offense, both in substance containing the provisions of sections 506, 508 Penal Code, were proper.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 226, 10 Pac. 502.

[c] Where officer of bank is charged with embezzlement, an instruction to the effect that the prosecution must prove a corporation duly formed, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the state of California, is not in conflict with a modification thereof to the effect that if the jury find that the corporation existed as a de facto corporation at the time of the alleged offense, it was a corporation duly formed, organized, existing, and doing business, nor in conflict with another instruction solely relating to the sufficiency of proof of a corporation de facto.—People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302, 39 Pac. 617.

[d] An instruction that if the defendant knowing his insolvency, took large sums of money from the vaults of the bank, and executed therefor an unsecured promissory note to the bank, such taking of the money was a fraudulent appropriation falling within the definition of embezzlement, must be taken in connection with other instructions to the effect that the making of the note was not of itself a criminal act, and that the jury must find from other evidence independent of the notes that money was taken by defendant from the bank and appropriated contrary to his trust, and, when thus taken together, the instructions were not detrimental to the defendant.—People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302, 39 Pac. 617.

[e] On trial for embezzlement, it is not necessary to charge that the conversion must be made with intent to steal the money.—People v. Cobler, 108 Cal. 538, 41 Pac. 401.

[f] Where a tax collector was indicted, under Penal Code, section 504, for embezzlement in fraudulently misappropriating public money, it was error to instruct that defendant was guilty, if, after receiving public money, he willfully omitted to pay it over to the county treasurer.—People v. Westlake, 124 Cal. 452, 57 Pac. 465.

[g] An instruction that if one assumes to act as agent or bailee, and in such assumed capacity is intrusted with property, and feloniously converts it, he is guilty of embezzlement, is not erroneous because of the word "assumes," where the jury were further instructed, if they had a reasonable doubt as to whether the accused received the goods as agent or bailee, to acquit him.—People v. McLean, 135 Cal. 306, 67 Pac. 770.

[a] Where a defendant accused of the crime of embezzlement of a horse, wagon, and harness in the county in which they were received, is proved to have sold and traded off the horse in another county, but to have retained the wagon and harness which were found in his possession in the county where the horse was sold, a verdict finding the defendant guilty of embezzling the horse in the county in which the horse, wagon, and harness were all originally received, and not referring to the wagon and harness, will not be set aside upon the ground of inconsistency of the jury in not finding the defendant guilty of embezzling all of the property described, nor upon the ground that the effect of the verdict is to show that the defendant was prosecuted in the wrong county.—People v. Leong Fly, 107 Cal. 497, 40 Pac. 805.

[b] Where, in a prosecution for embezzlement of a ring by a bailee, the owner testified that defendant took the ring from her finger before she knew it, to have it fixed for an engagement ring, which he never brought back, but sold it, a conviction was not contrary to the evidence, nor to an instruction that if defendant obtained the ring against the owner's will he should be acquitted.—People v. Gordon, 133 Cal. 328, 85 Am. St. Rep. 174, 65 Pac. 746.

§ 38. Appeal and Error.

[a] Where the record upon appeal from a conviction of a tax collector for embezzlement shows that the tax collector paid into the public treasury more money than he is alleged and proved to have received between the dates mentioned in the indictment, the judgment must be reversed for insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict.—People v. Westlake, 126 Cal. 154, 58 Pac. 454.

[b] In a prosecution for embezzlement by a bailee, an instruction that the mere taking of property by one from another does not constitute larceny, but there must be felonious taking with intent to steal, was not prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Gordon, 133 Cal. 328, 85 Am. St. Rep. 174, 65 Pac. 746.

EMBRACERY.

Include improperly influencing or attempting to influence the action of a juror, arbitrator, or referee, in respect of the verdict, award, or other decision to be rendered, by any means not constituting bribery; nature and extent of criminal responsibility therefor, and grounds of defense; and prosecution and punishment of such acts as public offenses.

§ 1. Nature and Elements of Offense.

Interference with proceedings of jury as contempt of court. See Contempt, §§ 21, 22.

Interference with justice. See Obstructing Justice, § 1.

[a] Charge that the accused, who was not an attorney in the criminal case, violated section 95 of the Penal Code, by conspiring with the attorney for the defendant accused of murder, to publish a confession which would increase the difficulty of the court to get a jury, and would place before sworn jurors evidence not introduced at the trial and in court, is not sufficient, without showing a trial and conviction for such violation. § 1. Nature and Source in General.

[a] Taxation and eminent domain rest upon same foundation of public use.—Stockton etc. R. R. v. Stockton, 41 Cal. 181.

[b] The right to take private property under the power of eminent domain in no sense depends on any contract between the owner thereof and the public. The owner's assent is not required, and his objections are of no avail; but, under the constitution, his property cannot be taken until paid for.—Lamb v. Schottler, 54 Cal. 319.

[c] Enjoyment of public use need not be unconditional.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 304, 10 Pac. 674.

[e] The power of eminent domain is one of the inalienable incidents of sovereignty, which, treated simply as a question of power, may be exercised in favor of public uses over any and all property, private and even public; and the property and franchises of corporations as well as individuals, although dedicated to public use may be taken for other public uses; but this inalienable power is to be exercised under and by virtue of the legislative wills as expressed by the law-making power, and the right to exercise it must be given expressly or by necessary implication from power expressly given.—S. P. R. R. Co. v. S. Cal. Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 221, 43 Pac. 602.

[f] Proceeding in eminent domain is in exercise of sovereign power of state wherein it appropriates use of land to public.—Pool v. Butler, 141 Cal. 49, 74 Pac. 444.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Uses and purposes in favor of which power of eminent domain may be exercised: 102 Am. St. Rep. 809, note: 18 L. R. A. 113, 21 L. R. A. 212, 58 L. R. A. 240, 66 L. R. A. 897, notes. See, also, 15 Cyc. 557-562; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 753-773, §§ 1-12.

§ 2. Distinction Between Eminent Domain and Other Powers—Acts Constituting Exercise of Power.

[a] Act of 1866 (Stats. 1865-66, p. 552), which provides that the tax collector shall receive the fees allowed by law, but that forty-five per cent of the compensation allowed for the collection of certain taxes shall be paid by him into the county treasury for the benefit of the school fund, is not open to the objection that it takes private property for public use.—Ream v. Siskiyou County, 36 Cal. 620.

§ 3. —— Police Power.

[a] The destruction of a building, to stop the spread of a conflagration, cannot be deemed a taking of private property for public use, within the meaning of that clause in the constitution which prohibits such taking without just compensation.—Dunbar v. Alcalde etc. of San Francisco, 1 Cal. 355.

[b] Destroying property to stop conflagration is not taking for public purposes, but a destruction for individual benefit or for the city, and not for the state.—Surocco v. Geary, 3 Cal. 69.

[c] Necessity for destruction of property to stop conflagration must be clearly shown. But in all such cases the individual must be regulated by his own judgment; and, if done without actual or apparent necessity, he is liable in trespass.—Surocco v. Geary, 3 Cal. 69.

[d] The constitutional provision that requires payment for private property taken for public use does not apply where a house is destroyed to stop a conflagration. This right belongs to the state in virtue of her right of eminent domain.—Surocco v. Geary, 3 Cal. 69.

[a] An act of the legislature providing that the expense of grading a street shall be assessed on property fronting on such street is not an exercise of the right of eminent domain, and therefore is not unconstitutional for failing to provide for just compensation. Emery v. San Francisco Gas Co., 28 Cal. 345; Walsh v. Mathews, 29 Cal. 123.

[b] Constitution, article 1, section 8, which provides that property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, merely fixes a limitation on the otherwise unrestrained power of eminent domain inherent in the state government, and does not apply to proceedings to recover an assessment for an illegal street improvement.—Chambers v. Satterlee, 40 Cal. 497.

[c] The provision that the city council may determine that if the cost of the improvement be more than a certain amount per front foot, when more than a certain amount of assessment against a lot remains unpaid a certain time after notice, a bond running for not more than ten years, payable in equal annual installments, shall be issued by the city for the unpaid assessment, payable out of the fund created by the assessment, is not a taking of property for public use without compensation.—German Savings etc. Soc. v. Ramish, 138 Cal. 120, 69 Pac. 89.

[a] The right to take private property, for public uses, that is, the right of eminent domain, is inherent in government. The state possesses this right as one of the rights of sovereignty.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 6. —— Appropriation for Benefit of United States.

[a] Statutes of 1859, page 26, providing that the state may, on application of an authorized agent of the United States, condemn lands to be used for the erection of public works of the United States for military or naval purposes, is a valid exercise of the right of eminent domain; for there is no constitutional prohibition against the state's assisting the United States in administering its duties and functions.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

§ 7. Power of United States.

[a] The federal government has the right of eminent domain in territory acquired by the United States either by conquest or purchase.—People v. Folsom, 5 Cal. 373.

[b] Federal government does not represent general sovereignty of eminent domain in the state.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 254.

[c] Whether federal government can take and appropriate land within state for "forts," etc., without the aid or sanction of the state, query?—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 564; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 778, 779, §§ 19-23.

§ 8. Delegation of Power.

[a] State is not limited to any given mode of applying property to satisfy the want or to meet the exigency. The power which is authorized to take is also empowered to appropriate or apply the thing taken to the use designated. Hence, it may itself make the application, or it may make it through the instrumentality of others.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 566-578; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 779-796, §§ 24-50.

§ 9. —— To Municipality.

[a] Municipal corporation cannot take private property for public use, unless power is conferred by law.—Dunbar v. Alcalde San Francisco, 1 Cal. 355, 452.

[b] Under Constitution, article 11, section 6, providing that all cities shall be controlled by general laws; and Civil Code, section 1001, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 1238, providing that any person may by exercise of eminent domain acquire private property for the use of "canals, aqueducts, flumes, ditches, or pipes for conducting water for the use of the inhabitants" of any city—a city, though not authorized by its charter so to do, may condemn the waters of a creek for the use of its inhabitants.—City of Santa Cruz v. Enright, 95 Cal. 105, 30 Pac. 197.

[c] Act of April 25, 1863, authorized the board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco to widen streets, and to provide compensation to owners of land taken or damaged, but did not authorize condemnation of land for that purpose. Held, that after the board had, by proper proceedings, determined to widen a street, it could acquire the land therefor by condemnation pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure, section 1238.—City and County of San Francisco v. Kiernan, 98 Cal. 614, 33 Pac. 720; Heffernan v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 33 Pac. 725.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 568; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 780-784, §§ 27-34.

§ 10. —— To Private Corporation.

[a] The fact that the board of supervisors of San Francisco, by an order ratified by the legislature, gave the company the privilege of laying pipes along the public streets of that city, does not operate as a restriction upon the right to condemn private lands under the act of 1858 in cases where the purposes of the company require the use of such lands. People v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

[c] Power of eminent domain may be delegated by legislature to corporations or individuals.—Moran v. Ross, 79 Cal. 160, 21 Pac. 549.

[d] Under Civil Code, section 465, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 1242, permitting railroad companies to enter on private land and make examinations, surveys, etc., to determine the most advantageous route for a proposed road, a railroad company is not authorized to enter and construct its road without commencing condemnation proceedings.—Robinson v. Southern California Ry. Co., 129 Cal. 8, 61 Pac. 947.

§ 12. —— Delegation by General Law as Distinguished from Special Act.

[a] Right of eminent domain may be granted by general laws to every person complying with terms on which right is given. It need not be specifically granted in every instance.—Moran v. Ross, 79 Cal. 161, 21 Pac. 549.

§ 13. What Constitutes Public Use.

[a] The words "public use," in the eighth section of article 1 of our constitution, mean a use which concerns the whole community, as distinguished from a particular individual or a particular number of individuals. But it is not necessary that each and every individual member of society should have the same degree of interest in this use, or be personally or directly affected by it, in order to make it public.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[b] If use for which property is taken be to satisfy great public want or public exigency it is a public use in the meaning of the constitution.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[c] The only test of the admissibility of the power of the state to condemn land for "public use" is, that the particular object for which the land is condemned tends to promote the general interest, in its relation to any legitimate object of government.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[d] "Public use" defined.—Turlock I. D. v. Williams, 76 Cal. 369, 18 Pac. 379.

[e] The public use requisite to the exercise of eminent domain held not necessarily by the whole community or by any considerable portion of it.—Madera Ry. Co. v. Raymond Granite Co., 87 Pac. 27.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

What is taking of property for a public use: 16 Am. St. Rep. 610, note. See, also, 15 Cyc. 578-583; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 764-766, § 7; cols. 796-800, §§ 51-54.

§ 14. Particular Uses or Purposes—Highways or Other Roads or Ways.

[a] Street cannot be extended over private property previously acquired, without condemnation.—People v. Kruger, 19 Cal. 411.

[b] A law providing for the opening of a road from the farm or residence of A, across the land of B, to a main road leading through the country, upon just compensation being made, does not have the effect of taking the property of B, and applying it to the private use of A, and is constitutional.—Sherman v. Buick, 32 Cal. 241, 91 Am. Dec. 577.

[c] The mere fact that individuals subscribed money or gave bond to a city to contribute to the expense of laying out a street will not vitiate the proceedings, or prove that the land was taken for the accommodation of private persons, and not for a public use.—City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

[g] An alley in a city or town is declared by statute to be a public use; and in proceeding by a city to condemn a right of way therefor, it need only be shown that the taking is necessary for the purposes of an alley.—Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234, 64 Pac. 287.

[h] Political Code, section 2692, authorizing the condemnation of land for private roads, is not unconstitutional as a taking of private property for private use, the road being open to the public.—Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 Pac. 915, rehearing denied, 72 Pac. 989.

[i] Political Code, section 2692, provides that a private road may be opened for the convenience of one or more residents or freeholders in the same manner as public roads are opened, except that only one petitioner shall be necessary. Held, that while the principal use of such private road may be for the petitioner, as a means of egress from his farm, it is also for the use of the public, in deriving the benefit of his products, and in going to his place, and the legislature has the power to declare it a public use, for which the right of eminent domain may be exercised.—Los Angeles County v. Reyes, 32 Pac. 233.

[j] Taking of land by a county for the widening of a public highway is the taking of land for a public use within Code of Civil Procedure, section 1238, subdivisions 3, 4, Political Code, section 2681, and County Government Act, section 25, subdivision 4 (Gen. Laws 1903, p. 121).—Mendocino County v. Peters (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1122.

[a] A person to whom the proper board of supervisors has granted a ferry franchise has the right to maintain an action to condemn land for such ferry.—Pool v. Simmons, 134 Cal. 621, 66 Pac. 872.

For Authorities From Other States:

§ 16. —— Railroads.

[a] Railroads for carriage of passengers and transportation of merchandise are public highways, for the construction of which, though made by private corporations, the land belonging to private persons may be taken upon paying to the owner a just compensation.—San Francisco etc. R. R. Co. v. Caldwell, 31 Cal. 367.

[b] A taking of land by a railroad company for railroad purposes in the exercise of the power of eminent domain, under authority granted to it by the legislature, is, though the railroad is a private corporation, a taking of private property for "public use," within the constitutional provisions that private property shall not be taken for public use without compensation being made therefor.—Contra Costa R. Co. v. Moss, 23 Cal. 323; Stockton & V. R. Co. v. City of Stockton, 41 Cal. 147.

[c] Constitution, article 1, section 14, providing that private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation, and that no right of way shall be appropriated to the use of any private corporation until compensation shall have been made, irrespective of any benefit from any improvement proposed by such corporation, does not restrict the condemnation of land to railways under the control of corporations.—Moran v. Ross, 79 Cal. 159, 21 Pac. 547; Moran v. Farley, 21 Pac. 549.

[d] If Constitution, article 12, section 22, providing for a railroad commission with power to establish rates "for railroad and other transportation companies" applied to corporations alone, it would not limit the power to construct and operate railroads to corporations alone.—Moran v. Ross, 79 Cal. 159, 21 Pac. 547; Moran v. Farley, 21 Pac. 549.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1238, subdivision 4, providing that the right of eminent domain may be exercised "by steam, electric and horse railroads, canals, ditches," etc., "for irrigation, public transportation," etc., a complaint in condemnation proceedings alleging that plaintiff was incorporated to operate a steam railroad for carrying passengers and freight for hire sufficiently alleges a public use, the words "public transportation" in the section quoted only referring to canals, ditches, etc.—San Francisco etc. Ry. Co. v. Leviston, 134 Cal. 412, 66 Pac. 473.

[f] Neither the length of a railroad nor the fact that it is a spur track bears any necessary relation to the question in condemnation proceedings as to whether the use is a public one.—Madera Ry. Co. v. Raymond Granite Co., 87 Pac. 27.

[g] In condemnation proceedings by a railroad certain facts held not to show that the use was not a public one.—Madera Ry. Co. v. Raymond Granite Co., 87 Pac. 27.

20 L. R. A. 434, note. See, also, 15 Cyc. 587-592; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 805-816, §§ 59-67.

§ 17. —— Water Supply in General.

[a] The supplying of the inhabitants of a town with water is a "public use" for which the right of an individual to enjoy the flow of the water in its natural channel upon his land may be condemned.—St. Helena Water Co. v. Forbes, 62 Cal. 182, 45 Am. Rep. 659.

[b] Since the adoption of the constitution of 1879, individuals or corporations, without special legislation, may lay gas or water pipes in the streets of towns and cities, subject to the direction of the municipal authorities, the towns and cities also having the right to regulate the charges to be imposed for the use of the gas or water thus supplied.—People v. Stephens, 62 Cal. 209.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1238, declares that supplying a city with water is a public use, in behalf of which the right of eminent domain may be exercised, but does not expressly provide for taking land for reservoir purposes. Section 1239 provides that the fee simple of land may be condemned when needed 'for public buildings, ... reservoirs," etc. Held, that land may be condemned by a water company for its reservoir.—Lake Pleasanton Water Co. v. Contra Costa Water Co., 67 Cal. 659, 8 Pac. 501.

[d] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1238, which provides that the right of eminent domain may be exercised in taking land for conducting water for the use of the inhabitants of any county, incorporated city, or city and county, and under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1239, which provides that a fee simple may be taken for a reservoir, a corporation organized for the purpose of supplying the city and county of San Francisco with water may condemn land for a reservoir site.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. Drinkhouse, 92 Cal. 528, 28 Pac. 681.

the design was to conduct water for mining, irrigating, manufacturing, household, and domestic purposes, and alleged that along the line of the canal were many valuable mining claims and such agricultural land, which could not be developed or cultivated unless water was brought upon it by artificial means. Held, that it was sufficiently shown that a public use was intended; Code, section 1238, including in the enumeration of what shall be considered public uses canals, ditches, etc., for supplying mines and farming neighborhoods with water.—Cummings v. Peters, 56 Cal. 593.

[b] Plaintiff water company averred that it owned the water rights in a creek appertaining to the riparian lands on both sides within certain defined limits, and that to supply said "farming neighborhood" with water it was necessary to condemn and take a portion of the waters of the creek. Held, that the averments failed to show that the condemnation was for the use of the public. Aliso Water Co. v. Baker, 95 Cal. 268, 30 Pac. 537.

[e] The term "farming neighborhood," as used in the code provision, is an indefinite expression, and whether it can be applied to any particular tract of land must be determined by evidence; and the term "public use" is also an expression of indefinite signification, and its application to the facts of any particular case is to be determined from evidence.—Lindsay Irrigation Co. v. Mehrtens, 97 Cal. 676, 32 Pac. 802.

[f] A "farming neighborhood" is a region in which there are several tracts of farming land with a proximity of location, and which can be regarded as a whole with reference to some common interests, although they are distinct in boundaries, and held in individual proprietorship. Its extent need not be characterized by fixed boundaries, nor is its existence determined by any definite number of proprietors, and while a tract of land, though large in extent, might, if held in different proprietorships, constitute a neighborhood, yet it would not if it were held in single ownership.—Lindsay Irr. Co. v. Mehrtens, 97 Cal. 676, 32 Pac. 802.

[g] It is not necessary, in order to render the supplying of water to a farming neighborhood a public use, that the entire public shall enjoy the use, or even that it be capable thereof, but the use must be capable of enjoyment by all who may be within the neighborhood, and there must be within that neighborhood so great a number of the entire public as to destroy its character as a private use.—Lindsay Irr. Co. v. Mehrtens, 97 Cal. 676, 32 Pac. 802.

[h] It is the proximity of several tracts of land which constitutes a farming neighborhood, and it is not necessary, in order that the use should be public, that a proprietor should reside upon or cultivate his land in person, but it is sufficient that the lands are cultivated by tenants or employees of the proprietors.—Lindsay Irr. Co. v. Mehrtens, 97 Cal. 676, 32 Pac. 802.

[i] Laws of 1887, page 29, authorized plaintiff to construct waterworks for irrigation, and section 12 gave it power to acquire property "necessary for the construction, use, supply, maintenance, repair, and improvement of said canal or canals and works . . . . and all necessary appurtenances." Held to authorize taking land for constructing a pipeline.—Rialto Irr. Dist. v. Brandon, 103 Cal. 384, 37 Pac. 484.

[a] The drainage act of 1881 is unconstitutional, in permitting private property to be taken or damages for private use, and only requiring that the condemnation of land for a ditch, drain, or watercourse thereunder shall "be conducive to the general welfare of the land owners petitioning therefor," without requiring or intimating that the land is to be taken for any public use.—Nickey v. Stearns Ranchos Co., 126 Cal. 150, 58 Pac. 459.

[b] The drainage act (Stats. 1885, p. 204, c. 158), providing for formation of drainage districts, each consisting of land susceptible of one mode of drainage, does not, in authorizing condemnation by a district of land for a drainage ditch, contravene Constitution, article 1, section 14, providing that private property may be condemned only for a public use; the increase of cultivable land and the promotion of public health by drainage being public uses.—Laguna Drainage Dist. v. Charles Martin Co., 144 Cal. 209, 77 Pac. 933.

[c] It cannot be said, as matter of law, that the condemnation of land for a drain, for a drainage district, is not for a public use, merely because the area of overflowed land in the drainage district is only one hundred and sixty acres.—Laguna Drainage Dist. v. Charles Martin Co., 144 Cal. 209, 77 Pac. 933.

[a] Evidence, in condemnation proceedings for a sewer, that the city had agreed to allow a hotel outside the city limits to use the sewer, was properly excluded, since that fact would not render the proposed use less a public use.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

[b] Legislature having declared by statute that sewerage is public use, the inquiry on that head is closed.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 594; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 824, § 78.

§ 21. —— Development or Working of Mines.

[a] The legislature has no power to authorize the taking of private property to be used by another for mining purposes, though the latter pay the former therefor. Gillan v. Hutchinson, 16 Cal. 153.

[b] The legislature cannot, in the exercise of the power of eminent domain, take private property for a purely private industry; such as to enable a person to build a flume on the land of another, to carry off the tailings from his mine, or to enable him to deposit the tailings on such land.—Consolidated Channel Co. v. Central Pacific R. Co., 51 Cal. 269.

[c] The right of eminent domain cannot be exercised in favor of the owners of mining claims, to enable them to obtain water for their own use in working such claims, though the intention may also be to supply water to others for mining and irrigating purposes.—Lorenz v. Jacob, 63 Cal. 73.

[d] Section 1238 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not authorize the condemnation of a right of way through a mining claim for the private use of another mine owner in working his mine.—Amador Queen Min. Co. v. Dewitt, 73 Cal. 482, 15 Pac. 74.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 22. —— Lighthouses and Forts.

[a] A "fort" is an object of "public use," and a state may, for its own purposes, condemn land for a fort, or may authorize the land to be condemned for such purpose, for and on behalf of the federal government.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[b] Act of February 14, 1859, providing for relinquishment of land to the United States for lighthouses and other purposes, and authorizing proceedings by the United States to condemn land for forts or other military or naval purposes, is a taking of private property for public use, within Constitution, article 1, section 8.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[a] Authority to condemn private lands for use by a corporation includes the right to condemn any estate or interest therein for the same object.—People v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

[a] Under Political Code, section 3454, providing that the trustees of a reclamation district shall have power to acquire, by purchase or condemnation, a right of way, and the right to take material for the construction of all works necessary to accomplish that object, including levees and embankments, the trustees of a reclamation district may acquire levees built by the owners of land for their own protection, where such levees are necessary to the reclamation of land within their district.—Reclamation Dist. No. 542 v. Turner, 104 Cal. 334, 37 Pac. 1038.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 25. —— Water Rights.

[a] Rights of a riparian proprietor are part of realty, and may be condemned for public use.—St. Helena Water Co. v. Forbes, 62 Cal. 182, 45 Am. Rep. 659.

[b] Riparian owner's property in water may be taken to supply farming neighborhoods with water.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 299-307, 10 Pac. 674.

[c] Water collected by a water company supplying public is property which cannot be taken without just compensation.—Spring Valley W. W. v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 307, 16 Am. St. Rep. 116, 22 Pac. 910, 1046.

[d] Means of access to navigable waters over lands of private owner of shore can only be obtained by exercise of eminent domain and just compensation.—Oakland v. Oakland W. F. Co., 118 Cal. 185, 50 Pac. 277.

§ 26. —— Personal Property.

[a] The property which can be taken by right of eminent domain is something other than money.—Burnett v. City of Sacramento, 12 Cal. 76; Emery v. San Francisco Gas Co., 28 Pac. 345.

§ 27. —— Property Previously Devoted to Public Use.

[a] A public square in a village cannot be condemned for the site of a schoolhouse, such public uses being inconsistent.—McCullough v. Board of Education of San Francisco, 51 Cal. 418.

[b] Land dedicated as a street cannot be condemned as such.—City of San Jose v. Freyschlag, 56 Cal. 8.

[c] Civil Code, section 1112, provides that "a transfer of land bounded by a highway passes the title to the soil of the highway to the center thereof." Held, that the owner of land abutting on a street cannot complain of its use for railroad purposes conducive to the public good, and not interfering with his right to its use as a highway. Montgomery v. Santa Ana etc. Ry. Co., 104 Cal. 186, 43 Am. St. Rep. 89, 37 Pac. 786, 25 L. R. A. 654.

[d] Land of a private person subject to an easement for a public highway may be taken by a water company for a dam and reservoir as for a more necessary public use.—Marin County Water Co. v. Marin County, 145 Cal. 586, 79 Pac. 282.

§ 28. —— Locating Railroad on Land or Right of Way of Another Railroad.

[a] The grant of a corporate franchise to build a road does not exclude the right of another to build a road on or near the same line.—Indian Canyon Road Co. v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 519.

[c] A railroad can under Code of Civil Procedure, section 466, providing for a location on an improved line, condemn the land of defendant for that purpose, though at the time of the first location a right of way was acquired over the same defendant's land. Eel River etc. R. Co. v. Field, 67 Cal. 429, 7 Pac. 814.

§ 29. —— Necessity for Second Appropriation.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1240, providing that property appropriated for a public use shall not be taken unless for a more necessary public use than that to which it has already been appropriated, plaintiff railroad company had the right to appropriate part of a street which was purchased by defendant railroad company, subject to the right of the public for highway purposes, and on which it had laid its tracks; such appropriation being necessary for the construction of plaintiff's road, but not materially curtailing defendant's right to operate its road.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Southern Cal. Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 221, 43 Pac. 602.

§ 30. —— Use not Inconsistent with or Injurious to Existing Use or Franchise.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1241, subdivision 3, providing that before property already appropriated to some public use can be taken it must appear that the public use to which it is to be applied is a more necessary public use, does not apply to condemnation proceedings to subject a highway to a right of way for a sewer, since the second servitude will not disturb the first.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

§ 31. —— Property not in Actual Use, or not Necessary to Enjoyment of Existing Franchise.

[a] The construction of a spur track across the line of plaintiff's road without necessary use therefor, and for the purpose of preventing the plaintiff from having and using the portion of the right of way sought to be condemned, cannot give the defendant any advantage, or prevent the condemnation for a more necessary public use.—Southern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Southern Cal. R. Co., 111 Cal. 221, 43 Pac. 602.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 32. Exercise of Delegated Power.

[g] Civil Code, section 297, gives a railroad corporation no right to begin an action to condemn a right of way not authorized by its articles of incorporation, and then support the complaint by amended articles subsequently filed.—Boca etc. R. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 298.

[h] Under Civil Code, section 291, held that plaintiff was entitled to condemn a railroad crossing three-fourths of a mile east of the town of Beckwith.—Boca etc. R. Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 298.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 881-914, §§ 135-160.

§ 33. —— Conditions upon Which Power may be Exercised.

[a] San Francisco Water Works Company, organized in June, 1857, under the act of 1853, and the act 1855 amendatory thereof, has power to condemn private lands in accordance with the act of April, 1858, "For the incorporation of water companies," whether the company be reincorporated under the act of 1858 or not.—People v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

[b] Civil Code, section 299, providing that any corporation holding property in a county shall not maintain an action in relation to such property without filing a copy of its articles of incorporation with the clerk of the county in which such property is situated, does not apply to corporations seeking to acquire property by condemnation.—Emigrant Ditch Co. v. Webber, 108 Cal. 88, 40 Pac. 1061.

[a] Where, in condemnation proceedings by a water company to secure an additional source of supply, it appears that such company already owns sources which would, if utilized, increase its supply to a practically unlimited extent, it is no ground for a right to take the lands sought that its resources could be utilized at much less expense than could those of the lands which the company already owns.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Mateo Waterworks, 64 Cal. 123, 28 Pac. 447.

[b] No such "necessity," as contemplated by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1241, exists for the condemnation of land, by a water company to secure an additional source of supply, where it is shown by its own evidence that it already owns sources which would, if utilized, increase its supply to a practically unlimited extent.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Mateo Waterworks, 64 Cal. 123, 28 Pac. 447.

[c] Whether quantity of water sought to be condemned is necessary to supply the public use is for court to determine.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 306, 10 Pac. 674.

[d] Route sought to be condemned by railroad is not rendered unnecessary by reason of existence of other route equally good and convenient.—California Central Ry. Co. v. Hooper, 76 Cal. 412, 413, 18 Pac. 599.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, which provides (sec. 1238, subd. 8) that private property may be taken for sewerage in any city or town, whether incorporated or unincorporated, and (section 1241, subdivision 2) that before property can be taken it must appear that the taking is necessary to a use authorized by law, it is only necessary to show that the property to be taken is necessary for the sewer, and not that the sewer is necessary for the town.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

[f] Under Civil Code, section 3482, providing that "nothing which is done or maintained under the express authority of a statute can be deemed a nuisance," a sewer, the construction of which is authorized by section 1238, though a necessary evil, is not a nuisance per se; and, in proceedings to condemn land for a right of way therefor, it is unnecessary to show that the proposed route is least injurious to private rights.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

[g] Where the waters of the creeks from which a water company receives its supply are insufficient in the summer time to supply the present wants of the inhabitants of a growing city to whom the company furnishes water, the city shows a necessity for condemning the waters of a stream sufficient in quantity and superior in quality, all other streams nearer the city being used by the water company.—City of Santa Cruz v. Enright, 95 Cal. 105, 30 Pac. 197.

[h] In an application to condemn land for a pipe-line for an irrigation district, it is not necessary to show that the water could be brought no other way.—Rialto Irr. Dist. v. Brandon, 103 Cal. 384, 37 Pac. 484.

§ 35. Determination of Questions as to Validity of Exercise of Power.

[a] In taking private property for "public use" the legislature is the final judge of the public necessity or advantage.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[b] The inquiry into the necessity of any particular railroad will very seldom be entered on by the courts. It is a political, rather than a judicial, question, and rests principally in the sound discretion of the legislature.—Contra Costa Coal-Mines R. Co. v. Moss, 23 Cal. 323.

[c] Whether a proposed road will subserve the public need or convenience is a question for the legislature, and not for the judiciary.—Sherman v. Buick, 32 Cal. 241, 91 Am. Dec. 577.

[d] The "public use" mentioned in the constitution (art. 10, sec. 8), upon which the power of eminent domain is to be exerted, is left in large measure to legislative determination; and the legislative resolve, by which a tax is imposed or private property taken is such a legislative determination that the public use is to be promoted by the tax or the taking directed.—Stockton etc. R. R. Co. v. City of Stockton, 41 Cal. 147.

[e] Although, as a general rule, a legislative declaration that a certain business is a public use, for which the right of eminent domain may be exercised, is not open to review by the courts, yet, when it appears plain that property is sought to be taken for a purely private use, courts are not bound by the declaration.—Consolidated Channel Co. v. Central Pac. R. R. Co., 51 Cal. 269.

[g] Whether use is public is to be determined by legislature except when property is sought to be taken for a use in no sense public.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 303, 304, 306, 10 Pac. 674.

[h] Whether public improvement is of sufficient importance to justify exercise of right of eminent domain is question for legislature. Moran v. Ross, 79 Cal. 161, 21 Pac. 547.

[j] Where the legislature has designated the uses in behalf of which the right of eminent domain may be exercised the designation is a legislative declaration that such uses are public, and will be recognized by the courts; but whether, in any individual case, the use is a public use must be determined by the court from the facts and circumstances of that case.—Lindsay Irr. Co. v. Mehrtens, 97 Cal. 676, 32 Pac. 802.

[k] Legislative department is the source of power to determine what shall be held to be a public use, as a general rule; and its action on the question is not, except in extreme cases, open to review by the courts.—City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

[l] The determination as to whether or not the right of eminent domain shall be exercised, and as to what lands are necessary to be taken in the exercise of that right, is a political and legislative question, and not a judicial one. If the use is a public use, the power of the court is confined to seeing that the burdens cast upon the citizen are in conformity with the methods prescribed by the legislature, and that those methods are not in conflict with the fundamental rights of the people.—Wulzen v. Board of Supervisors, 101 Cal. 15, 40 Am. St. Rep. 17, 35 Pac. 353.

[m] Under act of March 6, 1889, section 18 (Stats. 1889, p. 70), relating to the condemnation of realty, and declaring that resolutions ordering the work to be done shall be conclusive evidence of the necessity in condemning realty for an alley, the court may properly instruct the jury that the resolution ordering the alley opened was conclusive proof of the necessity for opening of the way, and they were only to determine whether it was necessary for the city to take a strip of ten feet, and, if the whole of such strip was not necessary, then to find how much of it was necessary for the alley.—City of Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234, 64 Pac. 287.

§ 36. —— Determination by Agent to Whom Power is Delegated.

[a] As acts of 1889, page 70, giving the city council power to open streets, imposes on it the duty of determining the necessity, and makes the official order opening the street conclusive evidence of the necessity, the question of necessity is purely for the council, and will not be passed upon by the courts.—City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

§ 37. Necessity for Compensation or Provision Therefor in General.

[a] Property of citizen cannot be taken from him for public use unless ample means of remuneration are provided.—McCann v. Sierra County, 7 Cal. 121.

[ab] Act of legislature appropriating private property, without providing compensation, is unconstitutional and void. It may not be absolutely essential that the compensation should be provided in the same act which authorizes the seizure, but it is essential that it should be provided before the seizure can be enforced or justified.—McCauley v. Weller, 12 Cal. 500.

[b] The provision of our constitution that "just compensation" be made for private property taken for public uses only requires that a certain and adequate remedy be provided by which the owner can obtain his compensation without unreasonable delay.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[c] Statute which fails to provide method of ascertaining compensation to be paid to the owner, and the way and means of paying the same before the road is opened, is unconstitutional.—Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 427.

[d] Private property can only be taken for a public use after just compensation adjudged the owner.—Charnock v. Rose, 70 Cal. 191, 11 Pac. 625.

[e] Law providing for taking private property for public use without compensation is void.—Green v. State, 73 Cal. 34, 14 Pac. 610, 11 Pac. 602.

[f] To take land compensation must be made or provided for in advance.—Green v. State, 73 Cal. 34, 11 Pac. 602, 14 Pac. 610.

[g] Legislature cannot authorize public use, natural result of which will be to deprive owners of property of its beneficial use, without allowing compensation to party injured. Rudel v. Los Angeles County, 118 Cal. 288, 50 Pac. 400.

§ 38. —— Effect of General Laws or Subsequent Act as Supplying Omission.

[a] An act changing the grade of a certain street is not necessarily unconstitutional because it modifies, pro tanto, general statutes, and makes no provision for compensation. As to the latter point, the provisions of the general laws will be deemed to apply.—Jennings v. Le Roy, 63 Cal. 397.

[a] Statutes of 1859, page 26, providing for the condemnation of lands by the state for public works or military or naval stations for the United States, and making it the duty of the district court to impanel a jury to assess the value of the land and all damages sustained by the owner thereof, and providing that the amount so assessed, with the costs, shall be paid into the county treasury of the county in which the proceedings are had until ordered to be paid out by a court of competent jurisdiction, provides a just compensation for the taking of the lands.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[b] Statutes of 1867-68, page 283, concerning roads and highways in the county of San Mateo, in reference to the notice to be given of a proposed alteration of a public road, and requiring persons claiming compensation for land to be taken to present their claims for damages within a certain time, or to be deemed as waiving all damages, is not in violation of Constitution, article 1, section 8, guaranteeing to a party whose lands are appropriated to public use compensation therefor.—Potter v. Ames, 43 Cal. 75.

[c] A state legislature may prescribe the several steps to be pursued in the assertion of a right to compensation for land appropriated for public use, but the prescribed procedure must not destroy or substantially impair the right itself.—Potter v. Ames, 43 Cal. 75.

[d] That portion of the railroad act of 1861, as amended in 1863, which permits the court or judge on proceedings for the condemnation of land to make an order allowing the company to enter into possession and use the land sought to be condemned during the pendency of the proceedings, without providing compensation for the use and waste committed if the proceedings finally fail, is in violation of that clause in the constitution which prohibits private property from being taken for public use without compensation.—Davis v. San Lorenzo R. R. Co., 47 Cal. 517.

[e] Section 1249 of the Code of Civil Procedure which provides that for the purpose of assessing compensation and damages the right thereto shall be deemed to have accrued at the date of the summons is not inconsistent with section 14 of article 1 of the constitution.—California Southern R. R. v. Kimball, 61 Cal. 90.

[f] The provisions of act of March 18, 1885, relative to the formation of assessment districts, and levying assessment for street improvement according to the frontage of the lots, and not in proportion to the benefits received, are not in conflict with Constitution, article 1, section 14, prohibiting the taking of property without just compensation, since there is merely a possibility that an assessment might be unjust.—Banaz v. Smith, 133 Cal. 102, 65 Pac. 309.

[g] The state constitution provides that private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without compensation to the owner. Held, that as change of grade act of March 9, 1893 (Stats. 1893, p. 89), provides for a petition for damages by a lot owner, the act is not void for not giving such right to a lienholder.—German Savings etc. Soc. v. Ramish, 138 Cal. 120, 69 Pac. 89.

§ 40. Necessity for Payment Before Taking or Entry.

[a] Private property cannot be taken for public use without compensation being made before the citizen is devested of his rights.—City of San Francisco v. Scott, 4 Cal. 114.

[b] No title nor any right of possession comes from mere condemnation of private property for public use. Just compensation actually made, or secured according to law, is a condition precedent.—Bensley v. Mountain Lake Water Co., 13 Cal. 306, 73 Am. Dec. 575.

[c] Where the compensation for land taken by a county for public use, as for a road, does not precede or accompany the taking, the entire action of the county authorities is void.—Johnson v. Alameda County, 14 Cal. 106.

[d] The legislature has no authority to authorize the taking of private property for a public use unless it also provide that compensation to the owner of the property taken shall precede or accompany the taking.—Gillan v. Hutchinson, 16 Cal. 153.

[e] A right of way cannot be acquired by the public unless the owner of the land, or his authorized agent, has been tendered compensation.—Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 427.

[f] The second clause of Constitution, article 1, section 14, providing that no right of way shall be appropriated by any private corporation until full compensation be first made and paid into court for the owner, is violated by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1254, authorizing an order for a railway company to enter into possession of land during proceedings seeking to condemn it for a right of way.—Steinhart v. Superior Court of Mendocino County, 137 Cal. 575, 70 Pac. 629, 59 L. R. A. 404.

[g] The state has power to authorize the appropriation of water running through its own lands, and such an appropriation would vest in the appropriator a right in the water thus appropriated superior to that of a subsequent purchaser from the state of the lands through which such water had previously run. But neither the state nor federal government has power to authorize the appropriation of water running through private lands for a private purpose, nor for a public purpose until just compensation is first made therefor.—Lux v. Haggin, 4 Pac. 919, 938.

See 6 Cyc. 270; 15 Cyc. 775-782; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 959-992, §§ 188-204.

§ 41. —— Entry on Giving Security or on Making Deposit or Payment into Court.

[a] That clause in the constitution which provides that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation does not prohibit the legislature from authorizing private lands to be entered on and taken possession of for public use while proceedings for condemnation are pending and before the compensation is paid, upon security being given for the payment of the damages when ascertained.—Fox v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 31 Cal. 538.

[b] When land is sought to be taken for a public use by a private corporation, under proceedings in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, the court has no power to make a preliminary order, placing the corporation in possession of the land during the pendency of the proceedings, upon giving security to pay damages.—Davis v. San Lorenzo R. Co., 47 Cal. 517; California Pac. R. Co. v. Central Pac. R. Co., 47 Cal. 528; San Mateo Waterworks v. Sharpstein, 50 Cal. 284; Sanborn v. Belden, 51 Cal. 266.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1254, allowing the court in condemnation proceedings to authorize plaintiff, on the payment of a sufficient amount into court, to take possession of and use the property "during the pendency of and until the final conclusion of the litigation," is not unconstitutional; and the court may, upon payment into court by plaintiff of a sufficient sum, allow him to take and retain possession pending determination of an appeal by the landowner from its judgment, and pending a new trial on the question of damages ordered by the appellate court on reversing the judgment.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. Drinkhouse, 95 Cal. 220, 30 Pac. 215.

[e] A city will be enjoined from changing the course of a natural stream flowing within its limits so as to make it flow along a public street in such a manner as to impair free access to property abutting thereon, where compensation for damage to such property has not, as required by Constitution, article 1, section 14, been first made or paid into court for the owners.—Geurkink v. City of Petaluma, 112 Cal. 306, 44 Pac. 570.

[f] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1254, provides that during condemnation proceedings the plaintiff may obtain an order to take possession of the property by paying into court sufficient money to compensate the defendant for the land if eventually condemned, or for damages if it is not condemned. Constitution, article 1, section 14, provides that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation having first been made to or paid into court "for the owner." Held, that the statute is unconstitutional, since the money cannot be considered as "first" paid into court "for the owner" unless he can take it, and, if the condemnation proceedings should fail, the money would be only a security for his damages, not available by him until judicially determined.—Steinhart v. Superior Court of Mendocino County, 137 Cal. 575, 70 Pac. 629, 59 L. R. A. 404.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 980-991, §§ 200-203.

§ 42. Waiver of, or Estoppel to Claim Compensation.

[a] Legislature may prescribe mode of obtaining compensation for land taken by eminent domain, and mode prescribed must be pursued, or claim is waived.—Harper v. Richardson, 22 Cal. 251.

[b] Where a person through whose premises a new road has been laid is a party to the proceedings, a failure to bring an action of damages therefor within the time of limitation, under the provisions of the road law, is a waiver of all claim for such damages.—Harper v. Richardson, 22 Cal. 251.

[c] It is competent for legislature to fix mode of condemnation of land for public highways and the method by which damages shall be ascertained, and the proceedings to be had for their recovery, and as strict a compliance with the act is required by those claiming damages, as by the public making the condemnation.—Lincoln v. Colusa County, 28 Cal. 662.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 782, 804; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 992-1006, §§ 205-214.

§ 43. —— Effect of Conveyance or Agreement to Convey by Land Owner.

[a] An award by the commissioners of damages for land over which the railroad company had already obtained a valid deed of the right of way will be set aside. The grantor must look to his contract for compensation.—Western Pac. R. Co. v. Reed, 35 Cal. 621.

[a] Compensation must be made within short period, or the privilege of taking the property under the condemnation will be deemed abandoned.—Bensley v. Mountain Lake Water Co., 13 Cal. 306, 73 Am. Dec. 575.

[b] Where more than thirty days have elapsed after the final judgment without the payment or deposit in court of the sum of money assessed by the verdict of the jury, in a proceeding brought by the county, upon order of the board of supervisors, to condemn the right of way for a road, the defendant is entitled, under sections 1251 and 1252 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to have the entire proceedings in the superior court vacated and annulled.—Glenn County v. Johnston, 129 Cal. 404, 62 Pac. 66.

—— INJURIES FROM CONSTRUCTION OR OPERATION OF WORKS, § 58.
—— RAILROAD RIGHTS OF WAY, § 59.
—— EFFECT ON VALUE OF PROPERTY OF CONSTRUCTION OF PROPOSED WORKS, § 60.

§ 45. Property and Rights Subject to Compensation.

[a] Under Political Code, section 2619, where a franchise to keep a toll road has expired, the road thereupon becomes a free public highway, and the owner has no claim to compensation for the land covered by it.—People v. Davidson, 79 Cal. 166, 21 Pac. 538; People v. O'Keefe, 79 Cal. 171, 21 Pac. 539.

[b] A toll road, at the time of its construction, becomes a public highway by dedication, subject to the right of the company to collect tolls for the period prescribed by statute; and, after the expiration of that period, neither the company nor its stockholders have any interest in the road for which they are entitled to compensation.—McMullin v. Leitch, 83 Cal. 239, 23 Pac. 294.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 646-652; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1006-1032, §§ 215-232.

§ 46. —— Fee of Abutting Owner in Street or Highway.

[a] The legislature can grant the right to lay down and construct a railroad upon public streets without providing for compensation for the damage to the owners of property along the line of such streets, provided such owners are not the owners of the contiguous land ad filum viae.—Carson v. Central R. Co., 35 Cal. 325.

[b] The right to a just compensation for the injuries inflicted on private property by the appropriation of the street to a public use not contemplated when it was opened and dedicated as a highway for ordinary travel, as for a railroad, is in no wise affected by the question whether the city authorities did or did not consent to such appropriation.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Reed, 41 Cal. 256.

[c] A steam railroad corporation cannot acquire a right of way for its road over a street in a municipality, the fee in which is owned by an abutting proprietor, except upon compensation first made to him.—Weyl v. Sonoma Val. R. Co., 69 Cal. 202, 10 Pac. 510.

[d] A street railway company may use a street for its track without compensating the owner of the fee.—Finch v. Riverside etc. Ry. Co., 87 Cal. 597, 25 Pac. 765, distinguishing (1886) Weyl v. Sonoma Valley R. Co., 69 Cal. 203, 10 Pac. 510.

[e] An abutting owner's easement, in the street is "property," within Constitution, article 1, section 14, providing that private property cannot be taken for public use without compensation.—Bigelow v. Ballerino, 111 Cal. 559, 44 Pac. 307.

[f] Damages special and peculiar to an abutting owner, authorizing recovery by him, may be caused by the construction of a railroad in a highway on his side of the street, and close to his property, though the rails are flush with the surface of the street, and the construction works no change of grade.—Smith v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 146 Cal. 164, 79 Pac. 868.

[g] Under Constitution, article 1, section 14, providing that private property cannot be taken or damaged for public use save upon compensation first made, a railroad company is not entitled to right of way over a public highway for a steam railroad save on compensation to the owner of the fee, allowed by a jury.—Porter v. Pacific Coast Ry. Co., 18 Pac. 428.

§ 47. —— Rights in Public Lands.

[a] The act of Congress of August, 1852, giving railroad companies certain rights of way over public lands, refers only to such lands as are vacant, and relinquishes to the company any claim for compensation that might belong to the United States as proprietor, under any proceeding under the state law to appropriate the land for public use; but any one in actual possession of such land, though with no other title or right than that of bare occupancy, is still entitled to recover from the company damages for the land taken from him.—California N. R. Co. v. Gould, 21 Cal. 254.

[b] The city of San Francisco, as successor of the pueblo of that name, had the right to take pueblo lands, in the possession of others, for public squares, without making compensation therefor.—Hoadley v. City and County of San Francisco, 70 Cal. 320, 12 Pac. 125.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 48. —— Water or Riparian Rights.

[a] A lot of land in the harbor of San Francisco, lying within the line of streets as laid down and recognized by the city on its official map, and being in the actual possession of a person who claims to be the owner, cannot be taken from him and appropriated to the public use without paying him a just compensation. § 49. Nature of Injury to Property not Taken—General or Special Injuries.

[a] Where a railroad company so lays its track as to cause special damage to an owner of land, not necessary, nor contemplated by the city granting permission to lay the track, the company is liable, and cannot shelter itself behind the authority conferred by the city.—Ford v. Santa Cruz R. Co., 59 Cal. 290.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 50. —— Proper or Improper Construction or Operation of Works.

[a] Where a public work, authorized by the city, is skillfully performed and in strict accordance with the law, incidental damages to private property do not amount to a taking of private property within the meaning of the constitution, providing that private property shall not be taken without due compensation.—Moulton v. Parks, 64 Cal. 166, 30 Pac. 613.

§ 51. Elements of Compensation for Injuries to Property not Taken.

[a] In proceedings to condemn land taken for public uses, the land owner should not be allowed damages for the cost of removing his personal property from the premises.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

§ 52. —— Alteration of Flow or Discharge of Water, and Flooding Lands.

[a] If act is passed authorizing channel of river to be turned or straightened where it empties into another river, and the performance of the work causes the current of the river emptying into the other to destroy land on the opposite side of such other river, the damage thus sustained is not taking land for public use, and the act is a sufficient defense to an action brought to recover such damages. Green v. Swift, 47 Cal. 536.

[b] An overflow of lands on the Sacramento river, caused by a levee built on the other side of the stream, two miles above the lands flooded, when the overflow comes seven years after the erection of said levee, is not an exercise of the power of eminent domain, so as to entitle the owner to compensation therefor.—Lamb v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 73 Cal. 125, 2 Am. St. Rep. 775, 14 Pac. 625.

[c] Under the constitution as it existed prior to 1879, where the state, for public purposes, turns or straightens the channel of a river where it empties into another river, so that the land on the opposite side is, five years afterward, injured or destroyed by the increased velocity of the current, such damage is not a taking of land for public use, and does not entitle the owner to compensation. —(1886) Green v. State, 73 Cal. 29, 11 Pac. 602, 12 Pac. 683, 14 Pac. 610; (1887) Todhunter v. State, 12 Pac. 684, 14 Pac. 615; (1889) Hoagland v. State, 22 Pac. 142.

[d] A city ordinance passed under legislative authority, providing for an improvement of the banks of a stream, is not void because it fails to provide for compensation to one whose land is injured by a change in the channel of the stream caused by such improvement.—De Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257, 46 Am. St. Rep. 237, 39 Pac. 610.

[e] Constitution, article 1, section 14, prohibiting the damaging of private property for public use without compensation first made, prevents the legislature from authorizing the construction of channels, for the benefit of a certain district, to collect surface water, and take it where it will injure other property not compensated therefor.—Rudel v. Los Angeles County, 118 Cal. 281, 50 Pac. 400.

[f] In determining the value in condemnation proceedings of percolating waters as distinguished from a watercourse, it is competent to consider whether the owner might not at any time be deprived of them by the exercise by others of the same right in their lands as claimed by him with respect to his own.—City of Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585.

§ 53. —— Opening or Vacating Street or Other Highway.

[a] A grant made, with the necessary formalities, by the alcalde of the pueblo of San Francisco, after the acquisition of California by the United States, and before the incorporation of the city, was valid, and operated to deprive the pueblo and its successor, the city, of the right to open streets through the land granted, except upon compensation paid or secured, and in pursuance of proceedings prosecuted for the purpose.—Scott v. Dyer, 54 Cal. 430.

[b] The vacation of a highway established by statutory proceedings is not a taking of property from an abutting owner for a public use, requiring compensation to be first made to him, since he has no interest in such highway that is not common to the public, and must be held to have acquired and improved his property in view of the statute authorizing the vacation of such highways.—Levee Dist. No. 9 v. Farmer, 101 Cal. 178, 35 Pac. 569.

§ 54. —— Alteration of Grade of Street or Other Highway.

[a] Under the constitution, providing that private property shall not be taken or "damaged" for public use without compensation, a city is liable for injuries to the foundation of a house caused by the soil sinking on account of dirt placed on the street to raise the grade.—Reardon v. City and County of San Francisco, 66 Cal. 492, 56 Am. Rep. 109, 6 Pac. 317; Van Daalen v. City and County of San Francisco, 6 Pac. 689.

[b] Under Constitution, of 1879, article 1, section 14, providing that private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation being made to the owner, a municipal corporation is liable to the owner of an abutting lot for damages caused by the excavation of a street.—Eachus v. City of Los Angeles, 130 Cal. 492, 80 Am. St. Rep. 147, 62 Pac. 829.

[c] Under Constitution, of 1879, article 1, section 14, providing that private property shall not be taken "or damaged" for public use without just compensation having been first made, damages peculiar to property of an abutting owner may be recovered of one who fills earth into a street to conform to a new grade to which it had been lawfully changed, though he is duly authorized to do so.—De Long v. Warren, 36 Pac. 1009.

§ 55. —— Inconvenience in Use of Property and Expenses Occasioned.

[a] If, by the construction of a railroad through the inclosure of a farmer, it is made necessary to construct fences on either side of the road, to protect his crops, the cost of such fences must be included in the compensation paid for land.—Sacramento Valley R. R. Co. v. Moffatt, 6 Cal. 74.

[b] The fact that Code of Civil Procedure, section 1248, subdivision 4, requires that, when lands are condemned for a railroad right of way, the cost of fencing the line shall be assessed as damages, does not, by implication, preclude an assessment for the cost of fencing in other cases, if fences are rendered necessary by the taking.—Butte County v. Boydston, 64 Cal. 110, 29 Pac. 511.

[c] Although there was a "No-fence Law" (Stats. 1873-74, p. 310), in the county, under which no person is bound to fence land, the cost of fencing the remainder of land, for restraining the cattle of the owner and other purposes, by one whose land has been condemned, may be considered as an element of injury.—Butte County v. Boydston, 64 Cal. 110, 29 Pac. 511.

[d] Where there is no evidence of circumstances existing, making the cost of fencing an element of damage, the statutory provisions which require fencing of a railroad, or payment for fencing, are not to be considered in fixing compensation to be paid for taking land.—California Southern R. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 67 Cal. 59, 7 Pac. 123. 128.

[f] Cost of fencing land not taken is proper element of damages.—Colusa County v. Hudson, 85 Cal. 637, 24 Pac. 791,

[g] Where the land through which a right of way is sought to be taken is adapted to cultivation, the increased cost of cultivating it, caused by building the road, may be considered in assessing damages.—San Bernardino etc. Ry. Co. v. Haven, 94 Cal. 489, 29 Pac. 875.

[h] Under the provisions of sections 1253 and 1251 of the Code of Civil Procedure the cost of maintaining fences after their erection is not a subject of damage in condemnation proceedings; and under section 485 of the Civil Code, construed in connection with section 1248 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the duty of maintaining a fence after its erection is upon the owner, and the expense of doing so is included in the damages allowed for the right of way.—Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co. v. Rumpp, 104 Cal. 20, 37 Pac. 859.

[b] The owners abutting upon a street which is so diminished in width by the city authorities that thereafter it will have the same width as the majority of the streets of the city, cannot claim that the proposed reduction will interfere with their enjoyment of light and air, or that access to their lots is in any degree impaired.—Brown v. Board of Supervisors, 124 Cal. 274, 57 Pac. 82.

§ 57. —— Effect of Foul Odors.

[a] The probability of the temporary escape of sewer gas, during repairs of a proposed sewer, is a proper element of damages to be considered in fixing compensation for land condemned for the construction of such sewer.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

§ 58. —— Injuries from Construction or Operation of Works.

[a] The ordinary use of railroad tracks constructed entirely on the private property of the railroad company, though parallel with and contiguous to an alley, by moving engines and trains along them and leaving cars standing thereon, constitutes no legal damages to a party who has leased property abutting on such alley, opposite the tracks.—Kishlar v. § 59. —— Railroad Rights of Way.

[a] If a party dedicates a public street through his land, and a railroad company afterward procures a condemnation of land along the street for its track, and damages are awarded to him therefor, this is no reason why he should not be awarded further damages, to be paid by another railroad company, which seeks to build another track on the same street.—Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Reed, 41 Cal. 256.

Co. v. Mahoney, 29 Cal. 112.

§ 63. —— Time of Filing Complaint or Serving Summons.

[a] Section 1249, Code of Civil Procedure, fixing date of summons as time for ascertaining value of land condemned is constitutional. Tehama County v. Bryan, 68 Cal. 65, 8 Pac. 673.

[b] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1249, provides that compensation and damages on condemnation proceedings shall be assessed as of the date of summons. Section 1243 provides that the proceedings "must be commenced by filing a complaint and issuing a summons thereon." The verdict of a jury in a condemnation suit assessed the damages at the present value of the land. Held, that the verdict was to be construed with reference to the issues in the pleadings, which related to the time of the beginning of the proceeding in this case identical with the summons.—Pacific Coast Ry. Co. v. Porter, 74 Cal. 261, 15 Pac. 774.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1249, making the "actual value" at date of summons the measure of compensation in condemnation proceedings, means the actual market value, and would not include additional elements of intrinsic value not known at that time.—City of Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585.

§ 64. —— Time of Trial.

[a] In an action to condemn land as a right of way for a railroad, where no evidence is given of an increase in the value of the land between the commencement of the action and the trial, an instruction that in assessing the damages the jury should consider the market value of the land on the day after the action was commenced is not erroneous.—Arcata etc. R. R. Co. v. Murphy, 71 Cal. 122, 11 Pac. 881.

[b] Under Constitution, article 1, section 14, the compensation for land taken is the value of it at the time of trial, and not at the date of the summons, as prescribed in Code of Civil Procedure, section 1249.—California Southern R. Co. v. Colton Land etc. Co., 2 Pac. 38.

§ 65. Nature and Extent of Right Taken.

[b] Where there is a substantial difference between the values of the fee and the easement, the value of the easement must be considered in determining the damages.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 290, 79 Pac. 961.

[c] If the ownership in oils underlying the surface is left to the owner of the fee after the surface has been condemned, damages should be assessed only for the value of the surface.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 290, 79 Pac. 961.

§ 66. —— Leasehold Interests.

[a] In measuring damages done to a leasehold interest in land, the value of the lease at the time of the injury is not its value to the lessee for a particular purpose, but is its fair market value.—Kishlar v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 134 Cal. 636, 66 Pac. 848.

§ 67. Taking Entire Tract or Piece of Property—Measure of Compensation in General.

[a] Damage to property is not what owner could realize at forced sale but price he could obtain in making private sale.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 68, 20 Pac. 372.

[b] There is a difference between damage accruing to owner from taking and value of property taken in estimating damage for latter market value of property and not its value in use to owner is criterion.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 67, 68, 20 Pac. 372.

[c] In an action against a railroad company for damages for the occupation of a street, one-half of the fee of which is in plaintiff, the latter is entitled to recover the value of his interest in the street taken, subject to the easement for a public street.—Muller v. Southern Pac. etc. Ry. Co., 83 Cal. 240, 23 Pac. 265.

[a] Question of value is distinct from question of ownership.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 72, 20 Pac. 372.

[b] Fact that defendant's land is of no value without that of plaintiff cannot be considered in estimating its value.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 72, 20 Pac. 372.

[c] Value of land condemned in connection with other land for purpose for which it is most suitable seems to be true basis.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 71, 73, 20 Pac. 372.

[d] Compensation cannot be based on value of land to plaintiff nor his necessities.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 62, 25 Pac. 977.

[e] Necessities of public cannot be considered in fixing value.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 65, 25 Pac. 977.

[f] Value of land condemned taken in connection with plaintiff's land cannot be considered.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 65, 66, 25 Pac. 977.

[g] Defendant is entitled to the market value of the land, to be determined in view of all the facts which would naturally affect its value in the minds of purchasers generally.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. Drinkhouse, 92 Cal. 528, 28 Pac. 681.

[h] The term "present market value" of land means the price he could obtain after such a reasonable and ample time to sell as would ordinarily be taken by an owner.—City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

[i] Where a city condemns realty for an alley, the owner is entitled to receive an amount equal to that for which the strip could be sold in the open market.—City of Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234, 64 Pac. 287.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 69. —— Value Enhanced by Proposed Improvement.

[a] Defendant cannot be allowed for enhancement of value of his land brought about by very act of taking it.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 80, 20 Pac. 372.

[b] Enhancement in value of adjacent lands caused by improvement proposed by plaintiff cannot be considered.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 75, 20 Pac. 372.

[c] Benefit arising from proposed improvement cannot be considered as element of value.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 55, 25 Pac. 977.

§ 70. —— Value for Special Use.

[a] Prospective value of land for a particular use is not to be considered in estimating value at time of condemnation.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 19 Cal. 60.

[b] Compensation to owner is to be estimated by reference to uses for which property is suitable.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 70, 20 Pac. 372.

[c] All capabilities or uses to which land is adapted should be considered. Same considerations as influence private sale.—Muller v. Southern Pacific etc. Ry. Co., 83 Cal. 245, 23 Pac. 265.

[d] Condition of property, uses to which it may be practically put and such advantages as may be reasonably expected in immediate future may be considered in estimating value. San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 66, 25 Pac. 977.

[e] Neither value in use to plaintiff nor to owner governs in determining value.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 56, 25 Pac. 977.

[f] It is proper to show value of land for special purposes though never used for such purposes.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 55, 25 Pac. 977.

[g] In condemnation of land for reservoir purposes, estimates of value based on the cost of the proposed waterworks, the increase of population, extension of the water system, and the probable income and profit from the works, are not admissible.—San Diego Land etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 50, 25 Pac. 977, 11 L. R. A. 604.

[h] Where the land sought to be condemned is, because of its situation and adaptability for reservoir purposes, regarded by purchasers generally as more valuable than if it did not possess such advantages, defendant should be allowed to show it, and for that purpose should be permitted to ask whether a witness has the means of knowing, and does know, the value of land for reservoir purposes.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. Drinkhouse, 92 Cal. 528, 28 Pac. 681.

[i] In proceedings to condemn land, the present market value is the measure of damages, and not its value in use to the owner or to those seeking to condemn.—City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

[j] In condemnation proceedings, the owner is entitled to show the adaptability of the land to the different practical purposes to which it is naturally adapted, but the proof should be limited to showing the present condition of the property, and the uses to which it is adapted, and not extended to speculative inquiries as to possible future uses under altered circumstances.—City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

[k] The availability of the property for any particular use may be shown; but where all the facts bearing on the use for which the property was adapted and for which it is used are shown, the question to be considered is, what value in the market could be obtained, if the plaintiff wished to sell his property, from parties who wished to buy and would give its fair value.—Kishlar v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 134 Cal. 636, 66 Pac. 848.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1249-1257, § 356.

§ 71. Improvements and Fixtures.

[a] Where a railroad company, under proceedings for condemnation, enters on land under an order of the county judge, and constructs its road across it in such a manner that it is imbedded in the soil and becomes a part of the realty, and the proceedings are dismissed and new ones for the condemnation of the land are commenced, the owner is not entitled to have the value of the ties and iron constituting the track included in his damages upon the final condemnation.—California Pac. R. Co. v. Armstrong, 46 Cal. 85.

[b] When the government, by its agents, enters wrongfully on land, and erects a building thereon, which becomes a part of the realty, and then seeks to condemn the land for a public use, the owner has a right to have the value of the structure allowed him in the estimate of damages.—United States v. Land in Monterey County, 47 Cal. 515.

[c] Where proceedings are instituted to condemn land for the benefit of a railroad, in determining the compensation to be awarded for the lands taken, the value of ties, rails, etc., already laid, with consent of the owner of the land, are to be considered as part of such realty.—California Southern R. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 67 Cal. 59, 7 Pac. 123, 128.

[d] A railroad company, having no positive knowledge as to the ownership of land, while guilty of a technical trespass, does not become a tort feasor by entering on the land, and constructing a bridge and track thereon, intending subsequently to condemn it to the public use; and the land owner, who himself was ignorant of his title at the time of the entry, is not entitled to have the value of such track and bridge allowed him as a part of his "just compensation" for the taking of his land.—Albion River R. Co. v. Heeser, 84 Cal. 435, 24 Pac. 288.

[e] Where private road is condemned as public highway, its value as a graded road must be considered in estimating damages.—Colusa County v. Hudson, 85 Cal. 638, 639, 24 Pac. 791.

[f] Compensation cannot include value of track built by company before proceedings begun.—San Francisco etc. Co. v. Taylor, 86 Cal. 248, 24 Pac. 1027.

§ 72. Taking Part of Tract or Property—Depreciation of Value of Whole Tract.

[a] In the assessment of damages to the owner of land occupied by a railroad, the true rule is a fair and just comparison of the value of the whole tract through which the road passes before and after the improvement is made.—San Francisco etc. R. Co. v. Caldwell, 31 Cal. 367.

[b] The measure of damages to abutting property caused by the construction of a railroad in a public street is the depreciation of the market value of the property.—Muller v. Southern Pac. etc. Ry. Co., 83 Cal. 240, 23 Pac. 265.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 73. —— Injuries to Property not Taken.

[a] In a proceeding to condemn part of an unsubdivided city block, an instruction authorizing the jury to find the arrangement of the lots into which the property might be divided, and assess damages only to such lots, held erroneous, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1248, subdivision 2.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Hart (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 218.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 74. Deduction or Setoff of Benefits.

[a] The commissioners, in determining the just compensation to be allowed for lands taken for railroad purposes, should take into consideration the benefits and advantages accruing by the building of the railroad.—San Francisco etc. R. Co. v. Caldwell, 31 Cal. 367.

[b] Railroad act of 1861, section 30 requiring commissioners, in assessing the value of lands sought to be taken by a company, to make allowance for any benefit that will accrue to the person whose lands are taken, is not repugnant to the constitution, providing that private property shall not be taken for public use without compensation; since it is within the power of the legislature to declare that, in ascertaining what is a just compensation to the owner of land taken for a railroad, the benefit which shall accure to remaining land shall be set off in satisfaction of the value of that taken.—San Francisco etc. R. Co. v. Caldwell, 31 Cal. 367.

[c] Under the constitution granting the owner of land taken for public purposes a just compensation, not only the benefit which may result to remaining land of a parcel taken, but also the injury which such remaining part sustains, must be considered.—San Francisco etc. R. Co. v. Caldwell, 31 Cal. 368.

[d] If a part of a tract of land is taken for a railroad, and that part of the tract not taken is enhanced in value by the construction of the railroad, but receives no special benefits over other lands in the vicinity, and this enhancement in value is common to the contiguous lands, it is a benefit which is to be deducted from the injury caused to that part of the tract not taken.—California P. R. R. Co. v. Armstrong, 46 Cal. 85.

[d] The court cannot set off the benefits which will accrue to the owner by opening the road against the value of the land taken. Ventura County v. Thompson, 51 Cal. 577.

[e] Under Constitution, article 1, section 14, providing that no right of way shall be appropriated to the use of any corporation not municipal, until compensation is made, irrespective of any benefits from the proposed improvements, the benefits supposed to result to the rest of a piece of land, by taking part of it for the right of way for a railroad, cannot be considered in determining the damages. Pacific Coast Ry. Co. v. Porter, 74 Cal. 261, 15 Pac. 774.

[f] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1248, defendant is entitled to the full value of the land taken, for the use of a private individual, and also to the damages sustained by the balance of the tract by the severance from the part taken, less the benefits accruing to such part; and it is immaterial that Constitution, article 1, section 14, makes different provisions in case of the taking of land for the use of a private corporation.—Moran v. Ross, 79 Cal. 549, 21 Pac. 958; Moran v. Farley, 21 Pac. 1135.

[g] Damages caused cannot be offset by benefits to remainder of property.—Muller v. Southern Pacific etc. Ry. Co., 83 Cal. 245, 23 Pac. 265.

[h] Under Constitution, article 1, section 14, which provides that no right of way shall be appropriated until compensation is made, irrespective of any benefits from the proposed improvements, the court properly refused to permit a railroad company to show that the construction of its road would prevent the depreciation of the land not taken, by reason of making the products more accessible to the markets.—San Bernardino etc. Ry. Co. v. Haven, 94 Cal. 489, 29 Pac. 875.

[i] The use to which a street might be put after a change of grade does not affect the damage caused to an abutting lot by the change of grade; and the fact that it might receive a benefit from the construction or operation of a railroad thereon is immaterial upon the question of damages.—Eachus v. Los Angeles Consolidated Electric Ry. Co., 103 Cal. 614, 42 Am. St. Rep. 149, 37 Pac. 750.

[j] In condemning land for a railroad the jury may consider benefits to the land not taken, though such benefits also accrued to other land in the vicinity.—Beveridge v. Lewis, 137 Cal. 619, 67 Pac. 1040.

[k] Under Constitution, article 1, section 14, providing that no right of way shall be appropriated to the use of any corporation other than municipal until compensation be made "in money" or paid into court, irrespective of any benefit from any improvement proposed by such corporation, general benefits resulting from such an improvement cannot be set off against the damages.—Beveridge v. Lewis, 137 Cal. 619, 70 Pac. 1083, 59 L. R. A. 581.

§ 75. Counsel Fees as Element of Compensation.

§ 76. Amount Awarded.

[a] In an action by a railroad company to condemn land for a right of way, where the only evidence given at the trial as to the cost of building a lawful fence along the line of the proposed railroad was thirty cents per foot, and it appeared that the length of the right of way was one thousand and one feet, a finding that the fence would cost one hundred dollars is not sustained by the evidence. § 77. Persons Entitled.

[a] Damages assessed for the value of land taken for a railroad should be paid to the true owner, if he recovers possession before the damages are paid by the company, although at the time of the damage a trespasser was in possession who had filed his claim to the damages.—Rooney v. Sacramento Valley R. R. Co., 6 Cal. 638.

[b] Parties in possession are entitled to compensation in condemnation proceedings, though third parties have given notice of ownership.—Sacramento Valley R. R. Co. v. Moffatt, 7 Cal. 577.

[c] When the compensation to be paid to the owner of the land has been ascertained, the amount thereof must be paid to the one who is the owner at the time or his authorized agent.—Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 427.

[d] Parties claiming compensation for value of land condemned for railroad purposes must be owners of the land taken, or have an interest therein.—San Francisco etc. R. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 29 Cal. 112.

§ 78. Determination of Conflicting Claims.

[a] The determination of the board of commissioners, in the matter of widening a street, as to who is the owner of a building, and who is entitled to damages for property taken, is not conclusive. Where there are conflicting claims to damages assessed, the board of supervisors should pay the money into the county board where such claims can be settled as provided by the act.—Appeal of Lefevre, 32 Cal. 565.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 80. —— Medium of Payment in General.

[a] In a proceeding to condemn land for a public use, if the court finds the value of the land taken, generally, in dollars and cents, without saying that the estimated value is in gold coin, it cannot render a judgment in gold coin.—North Pac. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 50 Cal. 280.

§ 81. —— Payment into Court.

[a] When land which a railroad crosses is claimed to be a part of a confirmed Mexican grant of half a league within external boundaries embracing a larger quantity, and a survey thereof has been made from which an appeal is pending, the money awarded as the value of the land taken by the road should be paid into court until the title to the property is settled.—San Francisco etc. R. [b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1247, authorizing the court in condemnation proceedings to determine all adverse and conflicting claims to the property, a city may in the same action assert its claim to an interest in the property, and condemn the outstanding interest of others.—City of Los Angeles v. § 83. —— Special Proceedings or "Special Case."

[a] Proceedings taken under the act of 1859 (Stats. 1859, p. 26), for the condemnation of land are those of a special inquisition, and though taken by the district court or judge, are to be construed not by the general rules applicable to courts of general jurisdiction, but as the acts of a court sitting under a limited, special, statutory authority.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 19 Cal. 47.

§ 84. Statutory Provisions.

[a] The legislature possesses the constitutional power to prescribe the proceedings by which the taking of land for public use shall be effected, and the time at which, in view of the mode adopted, the taking shall be deemed complete.—Fox v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 31 Cal. 538.

[b] Section 18 of the act of 1889, as to the form of the complaint to an action to condemn land as respects the averment of necessity, is not unconstitutional.—City and County of San Francisco v. Kiernan, 98 Cal. 614, 33 Pac. 720.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 830, 831; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1414-1425, §§ 451-456.

§ 85. —— Construction.

[a] Statutes like this act of 1859 providing for the appropriation of private property for public use are in derogation of general right and of common-law modes of procedure, and must be strictly construed.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 19 Cal. 47.

[b] Powers conferred by statute for incorporation of water companies (Stats. 1858, p. 218; Stats. 1853, p. 99), and all others to condemn private property to the use of another, without the consent of the owner, are in derogation of the common law and of general private rights, and must be strictly construed.—San Francisco etc. Water Co. v. Alameda Water Co., 36 Cal. 639.

[c] The rule that proceedings in invitum must be strictly construed and strictly pursued has no application to a proceeding by the property owners in making their protest in order to prevent the taking of their property for a public improvement, and the statute, so far as designed for their protection, should receive a liberal construction, with a view to effect its object and promote justice. City Street Imp. Co. v. Babcock, 139 Cal. 690, 73 Pac. 666.

[a] Statutory provisions for the appropriation of private property for public use must be strictly complied with.—Bensley v. Mountain Lake Water Co., 13 Cal. 306, 73 Am. Dec. 575; Gilmer v. Lime Point, 19 Cal. 47; Stanford v. Worn, 27 Cal. 171; Damrell v. San Joaquin County, 40 Cal. 154; Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Wilson, 49 Cal. 396; Ventura County v. Thompson, 51 Cal. 577.

[c] Statutory provisions as to mode of conducting condemnation proceedings must be strictly pursued.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 301, 10 Pac. 674.

[d] The laying out of a public highway is a proceeding to condemn land, and the mode is in some sense the measure of the power, and it must appear that the statute has been substantially complied with to render the proceedings valid; yet the courts make very liberal indulgences in favor of the records of the board of supervisors in such proceedings, which, though of great importance, are usually imperfect.—Hill v. Board of Supervisors of Ventura County, 95 Cal. 239, 30 Pac. 585.

[e] In proceedings where the property of a citizen is to be taken, every requirement of the statute having the least semblance of benefit to the owner must be complied with, and when the form of the statutory proceeding is prescribed, its observance becomes essential to the validity of the proceedings.—Shipman v. Forbes, 97 Cal. 572, 32 Pac. 599.

[a] Under Constitution, article 20, section 6, Code of Civil Procedure, section 1240, subdivision 2, sections 1244, 1245, and Political Code, section 472, condemnation proceedings instituted against the state, and in which the attorney general appeared for the state, held authorized prior to the passage of act of March 15, 1901 (Stats. 1901, p. 307, c. 144), adding subdivision 7, Code of Civil Procedure, section 1240.—California etc. Ry. v. State, 1 Cal. App. 142, 81 Pac. 971.

[b] The trial court should not refuse to grant an application for the appointment of commissioners to assess damages for land taken by a railroad company on the ground that there was another petition pending before him for the condemnation of the same lands at the suit of another corporation, and that he could not determine which of the two companies had the better right to condemn.—Lake Merced Water Co. v. Cowles, 31 Cal. 214.

[c] A municipal corporation may maintain an action to condemn land for a public street, under Code of Civil Procedure, part 3, title 7, relating to condemnation proceedings in general, before it has resorted to the steps and processes contemplated by statute of 1889, page 70, relative to the laying out of streets of municipalities.—City of Los Angeles v. Leavis, 119 Cal. 164, 51 Pac. 34.

[d] Statute of 1889, page 70, section 18, provides that if any owner of land to be taken for a public street does not accept the warrant drawn in his favor for damages, or objects to the report of the necessity of taking his lands, proceedings for the condemnation thereof shall be taken, as provided by law, under the right of eminent domain. The complaint need not set forth the proceedings therein provided for, and the resolution and ordinance ordering said work to be done shall be conclusive evidence of the necessity of taking the land. Held that, if the resolution and ordinance are passed as in the law provided, authority exists to bring an action condemning property for a public street under the right of eminent domain, without proof of the regularity of the proceedings for levying assessments thereon.—City of Alameda v. Cohen, 133 Cal. 5, 65 Pac. 127.

[e] A natural person may not maintain proceedings to condemn lands for railroad purposes unless he is in charge of a public use, and intends to perform a public service, and may not maintain the proceedings merely in order that he may transfer the rights to be acquired to another.—Beveridge v. Lewis, 137 Cal. 619, 70 Pac. 1083, 59 L. R. A. 581.

[g] In condemnation proceedings by a railroad to condemn a right of way along a highway, held, that the owner of the land could not object on the ground that another corporation had not conveyed to the railroad a franchise to build a railroad along the highway. Civil Code, sec. 494.—Madera Ry. Co. v. Raymond Granite Co. (Cal. App.), 87 Pac. 27.

[b] Conceding that the streets of a city cannot be used by a railroad company until the right to use the same has been granted by the city as prescribed in code, section 470, it is not necessary that such grant shall first be obtained in order to maintain an action to condemn the rights of adjacent land owners in such streets.—California Southern R. R. Co. v. Kimball, 61 Cal. 90.

[c] Where a ditch company incorporated in T. county seeks to condemn defendant's land, in F. county, and pleads its ownership of ditches, canals, and water in F. county, which ownership defendant's pleadings deny, the issue involves the determination of the ownership of property claimed by plaintiff, and the action cannot be maintained until a copy of its articles of incorporation is filed in F. county, as required by Civil Code, section 299. Emigrant Ditch Co. v. Webber, 108 Cal. 88, 40 Pac. 1061.

[d] In an action to condemn a right of way for a public road, it is only necessary, in order to make out a prima facie case, for plaintiff to prove the presentation to the board of supervisors of a regular petition, with a sufficient bond; the record of the board showing the appointment of viewers, the report of the viewers and its approval, the assessment of damages and the setting apart out of the proper fund of the money awarded defendant, his refusal for ten days to accept the same, and the order to commence suit for condemnation.—Siskiyou County v. Gamlich, 110 Cal. 94, 42 Pac. 468.

[e] Where a city adopted its engineer's report, recommending in general outline a plan of a water system, and also a resolution directing its attorney to commence condemnation proceedings as soon as the ordinance providing for the system should be signed, and, after suit brought, the ordinance was published, and orders and resolutions were adopted providing for carrying out the proposed plan, it could not be said that the suit was commenced without authority, pursuant to a plan not formally adopted.—City of Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585.

[f] An order by a board of supervisors for the payment out of "the proper fund" of money awarded for land to be taken for a highway, made in statutory proceedings, before the board of supervisors, for the establishment of such road, is sufficient to sustain an action for condemnation thereof, since the particular fund need not be designated.—Sutter County v. McGriff, 130 Cal. 124, 62 Pac. 412.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 89. —— Inability to Agree with Land Owner in General.

[a] Act of 1859 does not give United States any unqualified right to cause the forced sale or to condemn the land, but only a right qualified by the existence of the particular fact recited in the act, to wit, the disagreement between the United States and the owners as to the price. If there be no disagreement as to the price, and if, as defendants contend, the government has contracted to purchase at a sum agreed upon, these proceedings to condemn the land must fail.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 19 Cal. 47.

[b] The courts are not authorized to condemn lands for railroad purposes, unless it is shown by evidence that the petitioners have endeavored to contract for the purchase of the same, but have been unable to do so.—Contra Costa R. R. Co. v. Moss, 23 Cal. 323.

[c] Proceedings to take private property cannot be instituted unless there was a prior attempt to agree with the owner on a purchase of the premises.—(Cal. 1869) San Francisco etc. Water Co. v. Alameda Water Co., 36 Cal. 639.

[b] Under the act of March 27, 1876, authorizing the city and county of San Francisco to provide and maintain public waterworks for such city and county, and to condemn and purchase private property for that purpose, and which required the mayor, district attorney, and auditor to enter into negotiations with the owners of any land and water rights, for the purchase of the same, before taking any steps towards the condemnation thereof, where a majority of the commissioners never agreed among themselves upon a price to offer for the lands and water, and there was nothing to show that owners ever offered to sell at any price, or refused to name a price, there was no such negotiation as authorized proceedings to condemn.—Mahoney v. San Francisco Supervisors, 53 Cal. 383.

[a] Where municipality proceeds to enforce its right to condemn land for a public street, the fact that a property owner's land is irregularly assessed does not affect the right of the municipality to condemn the land.—City of Alameda v. Cohen, 133 Cal. 5, 65 Pac. 127.

[b] In condemnation proceedings by a railroad, the good faith of the corporators in forming the corporation cannot be called in question.—Madera Ry. Co. v. Raymond Granite Co. (Cal. App.), 87 Pac. 27.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 92. Jurisdiction.

[a] Unwarranted determination of a proceeding to condemn land for highway purposes without hearing held an error only and not a jurisdictional defect.—San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175, 81 Pac. 972.

[b] An objection to the jurisdiction of a county court can be taken at any stage of the proceedings in that court.—In re Grove St. in City of Oakland, 61 Cal. 438.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 93. —— Jurisdiction of Particular Courts.

[a] No authority is vested, by the act of April 22, 1858, for the incorporation of water companies, in the county court or judge to try and determine conflicting adverse claims of rival corporations, or whether the lands or waters were liable to condemnation to the use of the applicant as against another party claiming a prior appropriation for the same purpose.—San Francisco etc. Water Co. v. Alameda Water Co., 36 Cal. 639.

[b] Under Constitution, article 6, section 8, providing that county courts shall have jurisdiction of all special cases and proceedings not otherwise provided for, the act of April 22, 1858, conferring on the county judge of Napa county jurisdiction of proceedings for the condemnation of the waters of certain creeks in said county for the purpose of a public water supply, is unconstitutional; and hence the judge has no jurisdiction of such proceedings.—Spencer Water Co. v. Vallejo, 48 Cal. 70.

[c] Superior court has power to hear and determine rights of city to maintain condemnation proceedings under municipal government act.—Bishop v. Superior Court, 87 Cal. 231, 232, 25 Pac. 435.

§ 94. —— Conflict Between State Courts and United States Courts.

[a] The federal government, in taking private property in California for a fort site, under the act of the legislature of February 14, 1859, providing for relinquishing to the United States lands for sites of lighthouses and other purposes, etc., may properly proceed in the state courts.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

§ 94½. Venue in General.

[a] In the absence of any law defining the residence of a corporation, it is not necessary where its principal place of business is, and an action against a corporation to condemn land should be brought in the county where the land lies.—California Southern R. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 65 Cal. 394, 409, 4 Pac. 344, 346, 388; Thomas v. Placerville Gold Quartz Min. Co., 65 Cal. 600, 4 Pac. 641.

[b] An action to condemn land for a ferry is properly brought in the county in which the land is situated.—Pool v. Simmons, 134 Cal. 621, 66 Pac. 872.

§ 95. Parties.

[a] The state itself, in taking private property for "public use," may make the application itself, or may make it through the agency of others, whether domestic or foreign corporations, or, a fortiori, foreign governments, or a member of the domestic government, or even the federal government itself.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[b] Where the act authorizing proceedings for the condemnation of land for the use of the state directs them to be commenced in the name of the people of the state, and they are commenced in the name of the governor, the lieutenant governor, and secretary of state, the whole proceedings are null. Stanford v. Worn, 27 Cal. 171.

[c] It seems that mortgagee is not necessary party in proceedings for the condemnation of land for street improvement.—Schumacher v. Toberman, 56 Cal. 508.

[d] Misnomer of land owner in proceedings by supervisors under section 2690, Political Code, does not vitiate proceedings.—Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 513, 23 Pac. 700.

[e] Proceedings in eminent domain to procure a right of way, which Political Code, section 2690, authorizes the supervisors of the county within which the road is to be located to institute, are properly brought in the name of the county, rather than in the name of the people.—Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507, 23 Pac. 700.

[f] Proceedings in eminent domain for a right of way over land of a decedent's estate are properly brought against the executrix, within Code of Civil Procedure, section 1582, providing that actions for the recovery of any property, or the possession thereof, may be maintained by or against executors where the same might have been maintained by or against their testators, as the word "recovery" does not here imply previous possession.—Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507, 23 Pac. 700.

[g] Under Political Code, section 2690, providing that in proceedings to acquire a right of way, the board of supervisors shall, by order, direct proceedings in eminent domain against all the land owners who shall not accept the award of damages, an order merely stating, in general terms, that suit be brought against the nonconsenting land owners, is sufficient; and the fact that the order directed suit against a decedent who, after his death, had been before the board, and had refused to accept the award of damages, will not render the suit against his executrix void.—Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507, 23 Pac. 700.

[h] It is only in a modified sense that the state is the principal and the plaintiff, in a proceeding to condemn lands, the agent of the state; and the plaintiff in such proceeding is not prevented by the law of agency from questioning the conditions upon which the state authorizes him to act.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

[i] Condemnation proceedings to open a private way over land may, under Political Code, section 2692, be maintained in the name of the county.—Lake County v. Allman, 102 Cal. 432, 36 Pac. 767.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1462-1477, §§ 477-487.

§ 96. —— Substitution on Sale or Transfer of Interest.

[a] The water corporation act does not empower a water company, after commencing proceedings for the taking of private property, to sell and transfer its right to another water company, nor to prosecute proceedings for the taking of private property in the name of another company.—Mahoney v. Spring Valley Waterworks, 52 Cal. 159.

[b] Where a railroad is consolidated with other road pending condemnation proceedings, consolidated company may be substituted as plaintiff.—California Central Ry. Co. v. Hooper, 76 Cal. 410, 411, 18 Pac. 599.

§ 97. —— Substitutions of Representatives on Death of Party.

[a] Proceedings in eminent domain may, on the death of the owner of the land, be continued against the executrix from the stage at which they then stood.—Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507, 23 Pac. 700.

§ 98. Process or Notice and Appearance—Necessity.

[a] The proceedings for the condemnation of land for road purposes fall within the class denominated "special cases" in the constitution, and in such proceedings the person whose land is to be taken against his will must have notice on the proceedings will be void.—Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 427.

[b] If the act authorizing proceedings for the condemnation of land directs a notice to claimants to be published for four weeks, and only twenty-four days elapse from the day of the first publication to the day the defendants are notified to appear, the court acquires no jurisdiction over parties who do not voluntarily appear in the action.—Stanford v. Worn, 27 Cal. 171.

[c] In a proceeding to open a road across private land, the person whose rights are to be affected thereby, against his will, is entitled to notice.—Silva v. Garcia, 65 Cal. 591, 4 Pac. 628.

[e] Where a complaint in a suit to acquire land for highway purposes contained all the averments required by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1244, nonassenting owners who appeared held not entitled to judgment on the pleadings for want of notice.—San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175, 81 Pac. 972.

§ 99. —— Notice of Lis Pendens.

[a] Section 409, Code of Civil Procedure, providing for filing of notice of lis pendens applies to condemnation proceedings.—Roach v. Riverside Water Co., 74 Cal. 265, 15 Pac. 776.

[a] An appearance before the board of one of the persons whose land is about to be taken is a waiver of service of notice upon such person.—Kimball v. Alameda County Supervisors, 46 Cal. 19.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1493-1495, § 499.

§ 101. Maps, Plans, Surveys, or Locations.

[a] In order to recover compensation for "outside lands" in San Francisco, the claim must be delineated on the "outside land map."—Clark v. City of San Francisco, 53 Cal. 306.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 817; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1495-1504, §§ 500-504.

§ 102. Possession and Use Pending Proceedings—Bond or Deposit as Security.

[a] The court allowed an amended bond to be filed after the expiration of thirty days from the rendition of the judgment. Held, that the court exceeded its power, and that the bond was ineffectual.—California S. R. R. Co. v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 65 Cal. 293, 4 Pac. 12.

[b] Where, in an action for condemnation of land, judgment is given defendant for the value of certain fences and cattle-guards with a provision that, unless plaintiff elects, in thirty days, to build such fences and cattle-guards, and gives a bond, with sureties, in double the assessed value of the same, defendant may have execution, a bond with but one surety in double the assessed value of such fences and cattle-guards, is insufficient.—California Southern R. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 65 Cal. 293, 4 Pac. 12.

[c] Approval by the supervisors of a bond accompanying a petition for the laying out of a road is equivalent to a declaration that the sum named in the bond is double the amount of probable cost as required by statute.—Sutter County v. Tisdale, 136 Cal. 474, 69 Pac. 141.

[d] Under Political Code, sections 2692 and 2683, requiring the bond in support of a petition for condemnation of a private road to be conditioned to pay to the land owner his necessary costs and disbursements, etc., such a bond for a definite sum, double the probable cost of viewing and laying out the road as recited in the bond, was sufficient, though not containing an unlimited and unconditional promise to pay all disbursements, etc.—Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 Pac. 915, rehearing denied, 72 Pac. 989.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 829; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1505-1508, § 506.

§ 103. —— —— Actions on Bonds.

[a] Demand on principal is not prerequisite to suit against sureties on bond given for purpose of taking possession under section 1254, Code of Civil Procedure.—Coburn v. Brooks, 78 Cal. 445, 21 Pac. 2.

[a] Where, in condemnation proceedings to appropriate lands for public use, an interlocutory order is entered authorizing the person seeking the condemnation to take possession of and use the lands during the pendency of proceedings and until their conclusion, the court has authority, when the circumstances seem to require it, to set such order aside and direct that all proceedings under it be stayed.—Templeton v. Twelfth District Court, 47 Cal. 70.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1294, a district judge at chambers has no power to make an order authorizing a person to take possession of and use property during the pendency of proceedings to condemn land for public use.—Loomis v. Andrews, 49 Cal. 239.

[c] Where, pending the proceedings, possession has been taken without an order authorizing it, possession may be restored on motion to the court in which the proceedings are pending.—Bryan, In re, 65 Cal. 375, 4 Pac. 304.

§ 104½. Pleading—Petition or Complaint.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1244, a complaint in a proceeding to condemn land for highway purposes held not demurrable for failure to specify the manner in which the road was to be constructed.—San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175, 81 Pac. 972.

[b] To give the court jurisdiction over a petition to condemn land for railroad purposes, under general railroad act of 1861, section 1, an averment that they were unable to contract for the purchase of the land is indispensable.—Contra Costa Coal Mines R. Co. v. Moss, 23 Cal. 323.

[c] The right of a water company to resort to the judicial proceeding for the condemnation of lands and waters as prescribed in the act for incorporation of water companies (Stats. 1858, p. 218; Stats. 1853, p. 99) only arises after its due incorporation and an unavailing effort, made in good faith on its part, to acquire said property by purchase and consent of its proprietors; and a petition for such condemnation must show said facts also that the property sought to be condemned is necessary and proper for the lawful objects and purposes of such incorporation.—San Francisco etc. Water Co. v. Alameda Water Co., 36 Cal. 639.

[d] In proceedings to condemn portion of tract, damage resulting to remainder of tract is not special damage, and need not be specially pleaded.—North Pacific R. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 50 Cal. 90.

[e] Complaint not averring that land has been appropriated for a public use need not aver that it is required for a more necessary public use.—Lake etc. Co. v. Contra Costa etc. Co., 67 Cal. 659, 8 Pac. 501.

[f] In a proceeding to condemn land for the right of way of a railroad, a complaint which states "the general route," giving the termini as National City and "a connection with the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, at or near the thirty-fifth parallel, north latitude, in the state of California," sufficiently complies with Code of Civil Procedure, section 1244.—California Southern R. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 67 Cal. 59, 7 Pac. 123, 128.

[g] In condemnation proceedings, the value of the land sought to be taken need not be alleged or proved by plaintiff, as for such purposes the value is immaterial.—California Southern R. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 67 Cal. 59, 7 Pac. 123, 128.

[h] Complaint in proceeding to condemn right of way held to insufficiently describe land sought to be taken.—California Central Ry. Co. v. Hooper, 76 Cal. 413, 414, 18 Pac. 599.

[i] A complaint in a proceeding to condemn land for sewer purposes by a municipal corporation of the fifth or sixth class need not aver to what class of municipal corporations the plaintiff belongs, nor that an effort has been made to agree upon a price, which effort has failed; and a complaint omitting such averments is not subject to general or special demurrer by reason of such omission.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

[j] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1244, providing that the complaint in condemnation proceedings for a right of way must show the "location, general route, and termini, and must be accompanied with a map thereof," a complaint to condemn land for a sewer already partially built, which states the termini of the whole sewer, need not state the exact spot to which it has been already constructed; and the phrase "along and east of the center line" of a certain avenue sufficiently shows the location of the proposed sewer.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

[k] A complaint in an action by a water company to condemn water rights and a strip of land, which alleges that it is necessary to condemn and take the water rights, in order to carry out the purpose of the water company to supply a "farming neighborhood," composed of land riparian to the creek, with water for domestic use and irrigation, but which does not otherwise show whether the "farming neighborhood" is inhabited, not only fails to show that the use for which condemnation is sought is a public use, but shows affirmatively that it is not.—Alisо Water Co. v. Baker, 95 Cal. 268, 30 Pac. 537.

[m] Act of March 6, 1889, section 18, providing that "the complaint [in an action to condemn] may aver that it is necessary for the city to take or damage and condemn the said land, ... without setting forth the proceedings herein provided for," is constitutional.—City and County of San Francisco v. Kiernan, 98 Cal. 614, 33 Pac. 720; Heffernan v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 33 Pac. 725.

[n] Condemnation proceedings are sufficient, where the statement in the complaint of the land sought to be taken, together with the name filed, constitute a sufficient description of such land.—Lake County v. Allman, 102 Cal. 432, 36 Pac. 767.

[o] The complaint, in proceedings by an irrigation district, alleged that, in order to properly irrigate the lands in the district, it was necessary to construct a pipe line across defendant's land, which adjoins the district. Held sufficient to show the use a public one, and the taking necessary.—Rialto Irr. Dist. v. Brandon, 103 Cal. 384, 37 Pac. 484.

of land sought to be taken, and whether the same includes the whole or only a part of an entire tract.—San Francisco etc. Ry. Co. v. Gould, 122 Cal. 601, 55 Pac. 411.

[q] A complaint by a city showed that the object of the proceeding was to condemn all the estate and interest of defendants in certain land described; alleging the interest to be the fee, subject only to the city's ownership of the exclusive right to the use of all the waters of a river flowing through it. Held, on demurrer, that the complaint sufficiently described the property sought to be condemned.—City of Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585.

[r] The right of action by a city to condemn an easement or right of way for an alley is derived from statute, and is given in the interest of the general public. The complaint in such action need not show any previous right of the city to the easement, nor any previous user or servitude.—Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234, 64 Pac. 287.

[s] In a condemnation of realty for an alley, a complaint which definitely describes the land, and asserts the purpose to be to acquire an easement or right of way for a public use by the extension of an alley through the land described, is not demurrable on the ground of ambiguity and uncertainty.—City of Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234, 64 Pac. 287.

[t] In an action by a city to condemn a strip of land for a sewer, the defendant, under the general denial of the necessity to construct the sewer over the proposed line as alleged in the complaint, may give evidence to show that the sewer could as readily be located along a designated street of the city; but if such defense be specifically pleaded in the answer, it is not error to allow the answer to stand as against a demurrer.—Santa Ana v. Gildmacher, 133 Cal. 395, 65 Pac. 883.

[u] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1244, subdivision 4, requiring a complaint in proceedings to condemn land for a railroad right of way to show the "location, general route, and termini" of the road, an allegation that "the location and general route of said road are from some point in the city and county of S. or some point on the Bay of S., or the waters discharging into it, in a general easterly direction to the city of A., and from thence in a general easterly and southerly direction to a point in the vicinity of the city of B," and that "the termini of the road are, respectively, the city and county of S. and the point in the vicinity of B," is a sufficiently definite statement of the location, general route, and termini.—San Francisco etc. Ry. Co. v. Leviston, 134 Cal. 412, 66 Pac. 473.

[v] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1244, prescribing requisites of a complaint for condemnation of land, no statement that the proposed location of a railroad is compatible with the greatest public good and the least private injury is required.—San Francisco etc. Val. Ry. Co. v. Leviston, 134 Cal. 412, 66 Pac. 473.

[w] The sufficiency of a petition for the laying out of a road was not impaired by its asking the abandonment of an old road as well as the laying out of the new one.—Sutter County v. Tisdale, 136 Cal. 474, 69 Pac. 141.

[x] Where a natural person, acting as agent of one in charge of a public use, and who intends to perform a public service, institutes proceedings for condemnation of land, it is necessary that the agency should be alleged.—Beveridge v. Lewis, 137 Cal. 619, 70 Pac. 1083, 59 L. R. A. 581.

[y] Where the description of the land condemned is aided by a map attached to and made part of the complaint, and which is referred to in the judgment, and a surveyor could, with the description and the map, have no difficulty in definitely locating the road, the description is sufficiently certain.—County of Madera v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 Pac. 915.

[z] Complaint alleging that plaintiff required title to land sought to be condemned and to other lands for the purpose of excavating a tunnel, states no cause of action for condemnation of the land.—City of Santa Barbara v. Gould, 143 Cal. 421, 77 Pac. 151.

[aa] Complaint contained the name of defendant as a corporation duly organized and acting under the laws of California, and alleged that plaintiff was constructing a railroad, and "seeks to acquire a right of way, one hundred feet in width, through the lands of the defendant, said right of way being more particularly described as follows: Being a strip of land, one hundred feet in width, located and included between lines on each side of, parallel to, and fifty feet distant from, the center line of location of plaintiff's railroad, as the same is located through the lands of the defendant." Held sufficient under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1244. California Southern R. Co. v. Colton Land etc. Co., 2 Pac. 38.

[bb] A complaint in a proceeding by a county to condemn land for a highway held sufficient within Political Code, sections 2688, 2689, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, subdivisions 15-20.—Mendocino County v. Peters (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1122.

[a] An answer in proceedings by the city to condemn a right of way for the opening of a street, setting forth that the action is instituted upon the motion and at the request and for the benefit of a railroad company, goes to the public character of the use and the necessity for its establishment, and may properly be stricken out as insufficient. City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

[b] In condemning land for an alley, a mere denial of the city's right to lay out the alley raises no issue of fact.—City of Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234, 64 Pac. 287.

[c] In condemning realty for an alley, a contention that the city had no right to condemn the land, because one of its trustees signed the petition which was presented to the board, is untenable, where it is not alleged that such trustee's vote was essential to the hearing.—City of Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234, 64 Pac. 287.

[d] In condemning realty for an alley, an answer alleging that the right of way was sought for the convenience of the adjoining land owners, and not for the public benefit, and that other land could be taken, presents no material issue, since a city in condemning land for an alley need only prove that the taking of the property sought to be condemned was necessary for alley purposes.—City of Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234, 64 Pac. 287.

[a] The court has full power to grant leave to amend a petition to condemn land for railroad purposes whenever it shall be of opinion that justice may require it.—Contra Costa R. R. Co. v. Moss, 23 Cal. 323.

For Authorities From Other States:

§ 107. —— Issues, Proof and Variance.

[a] To obtain the condemnation of land for railroad purposes, the averment that the company have endeavored to contract for the land, but have been unable to do so, must be proved.—Contra Costa R. Co. v. Moss, 23 Cal. 323.

[b] Court exercises limited and statutory jurisdiction in proceedings for the condemnation of land for public use, and should confine the issues to matters which are material to and directly connected with the judgment sought.—California Pacific R. R. Co. v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 47 Cal. 549.

[c] In a proceeding to condemn land for railroad purposes, damages resulting to the remainder of the tract not taken, on account of the shape in which it will be left, or of the effect of an embankment built along the railroad track, or from cutting off the front from a county road, so as to injure its sale for building sites, are not special damages, and may be proved without being set up in the answer.—North Pac. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 50 Cal. 90.

[cd] In an action by a city to condemn land as a street, where the plaintiff alleges title to be in defendant, evidence of a dedication by him is inadmissible.—City of San Jose v. Reed, 65 Cal. 241, 3 Pac. 806.

[d] In proceedings to condemn lands for railroad purposes, there being no allegation in the answer that fences and cattle-guards would be necessary to be constructed in case the railway should be built, it is not error to fail to find upon that question.—Moran v. Ross, 79 Cal. 159, 21 Pac. 547; Moran v. Farley, 21 Pac. 549.

[e] It is duty of owner to allege and prove value of land.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 55, 25 Pac. 977.

[f] In condemnation proceedings for sewerage of a city or town it is immaterial whether or not it is incorporated, and it is therefore unnecessary to prove its incorporation, although averred in the complaint.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

[g] An averment in the complaint that the city tendered a specified sum to the defendant as compensation was unnecessary, and a denial thereof in the answer raised an immaterial issue.—Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234, 64 Pac. 287.

[h] In proceedings for the condemnation of land for a public street, the owner must allege and prove damages for improvements, if such damages are claimed.—City of Alameda v. Cohen, 133 Cal. 5, 65 Pac. 127.

For Authorities From Other States:

See 15 Cyc. 862, 863; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1545-1548, § 524.

§ 108. Hearing and Determination as to Right to Take.

[a] Title to land cannot be tried in proceeding of eminent domain.—Sacramento Val. R. R. Co. v. Moffatt, 7 Cal. 577.

[b] The first order in proceedings for the condemnation of land, under the act of 1859, determines nothing, but involves a right to contest the averments of the pleading which set up a right to condemn the land. The force or use of these averments is not limited to a mere statement of facts authorizing the judge below to give notice.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 19 Cal. 47.

[c] In condemning land for an alley, an objection that the board of trustees failed to acquire jurisdiction because there was no hearing of the objections cannot be maintained, where defendant had an opportunity and did state his reasons for objecting to the board, though he was afterward excluded from the room, so that the board might pass on the objections privately.—City of Santa Ana v. Brunner, 132 Cal. 234, 64 Pac. 287.

[d] A water company furnishing water to inhabitants of a village owned land adjacent to a stream, with a right to a certain amount of its water. In a proceeding by a city to condemn the land for a water supply, the court found that the water company was not devoting the water to any public use when the action was commenced, but that the land was of special value to the company for the preservation of the stream; that the company had a right to a certain amount of water from the stream, but that, because of drought, and a tunnel previously dug through the land by plaintiff, the water had ceased to flow to the point where the company diverted it for its use. Held that the finding that the company was not devoting the water or the land to any public use was in conflict with the other findings, inasmuch as the temporary cessation of the flow of water caused by the construction of the tunnel by plaintiff and by the drought did not deprive the company of its right to use the water.—City of Santa Barbara v. Gould, 143 Cal. 421, 77 Pac. 151.

[a] Want of power to obstruct navigation by a bridge may be considered in condemnation proceedings, so far as affecting the right of condemnation and no further.—California P. R. R. Co. v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 47 Cal. 553.

[b] A petition alleging that "the council duly passed an ordinance in writing" condemning certain property, and "that it is now necessary to condemn said land for public use," is a sufficient showing of the passage of the ordinance, and of the necessity of taking the land for public use.—City of Los Angeles v. Waldron, 65 Cal. 283, 1 Pac. 883.

[c] Evidence that a witness had surveyed a route fourteen hundred and thirty-two feet shorter than that proposed for a sewer, on a better grade, through lands not thickly settled, was admissible.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

[d] An offer of the defendant to prove a shorter and more practicable route than the one sought to be condemned is properly rejected as inadmissible.—County of Siskiyou v. Gamlich, 110 Cal. 94, 42 Pac. 468.

[e] Under the statute requiring a certain form for the tender of money awarded the owner of property sought to be taken for a highway before a condemnation suit can be commenced, the presumption that the official duty has been regularly performed will not dispense with evidence showing a compliance with an order of the board of supervisors awarding damages.—Sutter County v. McGriff, 130 Cal. 124, 62 Pac. 412.

[f] Under Civil Code, section 465, subdivisions 1, 4, 7, giving railroad corporations power to select the most advantageous routes, to lay out their routes, and to purchase land, etc., as may be required, the necessity of a right of way through private property is conclusively established by the existence of the public use and the fact that the location has in fact been made through the property.—San Francisco etc. Ry. Co. v. Leviston, 134 Cal. 412, 66 Pac. 473.

[g] In an action by a county to condemn land for a road, the introduction of a petition to the supervisors for the laying out of the road, with a bond for the costs and expenses of viewing and surveying, accompanying the same; the record of the appointment of viewers; their report, and its approval by the board, and the assessment of damages; the order of the board that the damages assessed and awarded be set apart in the treasury out of the proper fund; and proof that the same was set apart more than ten days prior to the commencement of the action, but had not been accepted—made a prima facie case for plaintiff.—Sutter County v. Tisdale, 136 Cal. 474, 69 Pac. 141.

[h] In condemnation proceedings by a railroad evidence considered, and held sufficient to show the use a public one.—Madera Ry. Co. v. Raymond Granite Co. (Cal. App.), 87 Pac. 27.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 868-871; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1555-1560, §§ 529-534.

§ 110. —— Burden of Proof.

[a] Since the state has the general power to take private property for "public use," in any particular case, it devolves upon one objecting to such taking to show that it is an exception to the general power.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[b] Before land can be taken for a public use it must appear that the taking is necessary for such use, and such necessity is a question of fact to be determined by the court or jury, in view of all the evidence in the case, the burden of proof being upon the corporation seeking the condemnation, to show that the land is reasonably required for the purpose of effecting the object or carrying on the business for which the corporation was organized.—Spring Valley W. W. v. Drinkhouse, 92 Cal. 528, 28 Pac. 681.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1238, 1241, held, that in condemnation proceedings by a railroad the burden is on the corporation to show the use a public one.—Madera Ry. Co. v. Raymond Granite Co. (Cal. App.), 87 Pac. 27.

§ 111. —— Priority Between Conflicting Proceedings.

[a] If two corporations each start proceedings against same person for the condemnation of the same land, and neither becomes a party to the action brought by the other, the land will belong to the one over whose proceedings the court first acquired jurisdiction.—Lake Merced Water Co. v. Cowles, 31 Cal. 215.

[a] Whether workshops for repairing and safely keeping the cars and locomotives of a railroad are necessary appendages to a railroad, and whether land sought to be condemned as a site for such workshops is really needed for that purpose, are questions of fact on which issues may be joined, to be decided at the trial.—Southern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Raymond, 53 Cal. 223.

[c] In proceedings to condemn private property for a sewer, the proposed sewer ran parallel to and ninety-five feet from a street. This street was paved with asphalt, and the evidence showed that it would be more convenient and less expensive to the property owners to have the sewer constructed as proposed, rather than in the street, and that the street would be materially damaged in having the pavement torn up. Held, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1242, providing that, where land is taken for public use, such use must be located where most beneficial to the public and least injurious to the citizens, error to direct a verdict for defendant on the question of the necessity for the construction, as being a question of fact for the jury.—City of Santa Ana v. Gildmacher, 133 Cal. 395, 65 Pac. 883.

[a] Where, in proceedings to condemn property for a public use, the question whether the taking of the same is necessary for such use is submitted to a jury, and the jury find on the issue, the court has no power to disregard the finding of the jury and make findings of its own.—Wilmington Canal etc. Co. v. Dominguez, 50 Cal. 505.

[b] In a proceeding to condemn land for a ditch or canal, in which the proposed public use is alleged by defendant to be a mere pretense, defendant is entitled to a special finding of the jury upon that issue, there being no general verdict.—Cummings v. Peters, 56 Cal. 593.

[c] After the court has submitted the question, "Were the lands described in plaintiff's complaint, and sought to be condemned for the right of way, ... necessary for such right of way?" it is not an abuse of discretion to refuse to recall the jury, and submit an interrogatory requested by defendants as to whether it was necessary for plaintiff to take any of their tract for its right of way. California Cent. Ry. Co. v. Hooper, 76 Cal. 404, 18 Pac. 599.

[a] If no evidence be introduced upon any issue finding must be against party having burden of proof.—Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 510, 23 Pac. 700.

[b] Burden of proving value of property condemned is on defendant.—Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 510, 23 Pac. 700.

[c] Burden is on defendant to prove value of land.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 55, 25 Pac. 977.

[d] The acts of the state or its agents in charge of a public use in surveying and locating land under express statutory authority, in exercise of the right of eminent domain, are presumed correct and lawful, in the absence of evidence to the contrary; and where it is attempted to show that the location made is unnecessarily injurious to the owners of property affected thereby, the burden of proof is upon them, and the proof ought to be clear and convincing.—Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

[e] Where defendant, through whose land a private road was surveyed, refused to accept the compensation awarded, and the case was tried by a jury, he cannot complain of the jury's action in assessing damages on the ground that the evidence is insufficient to justify the verdict, as the burden of proving damages rests on defendant.—Los Angeles County v. Reyes, 32 Pac. 233.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 898; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1566, 1567, § 540.

§ 114. —— Admissibility in General.

[a] In a proceeding by the government to condemn land, evidence of a contract between the owner and the government for the sale of the land, and evidence of the value of the land to the government as a fort, is properly refused.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 19 Cal. 47.

[b] Evidence of dedication of a street sought to be condemned cannot be considered as affecting compensation.—City of San Jose v. Freyschlag, 56 Cal. 8.

[c] In proceedings by private individuals to condemn land for railway purposes, it is not error to refuse to permit defendant to prove that the general line of plaintiff's projected road was first located by a railroad corporation, and that some of it on a different portion of the line was actually built.—Moran v. Ross, 79 Cal. 159, 21 Pac. 547; Moran v. Farley, 21 Pac. 549.

[d] The general rule is that in actions to condemn land for public use no damages can be allowed for injury to business caused merely by the improvement, and not by the taking of the property, and where a general offer is made to show damage to business on the line of the proposed widening of a street, without specifying the nature of the alleged damages, or whether the business was done on the land taken or on the land damaged, for which compensation was awarded by the jury, it does not appear that the proffered testimony is competent, and no error appears in its exclusion.—City and County of San Francisco v. Kiernan, 98 Cal. 614, 33 Pac. 720.

[e] The supervisors who acted upon the petition are competent as witnesses to testify as to the damages sustained by the defendant, and their testimony cannot be rejected upon the ground that their records are the best evidence of their determination as to damages.—County of Siskiyou v. Gamlich, 110 Cal. 94, 42 Pac. 468.

[f] Where there is no suggestion or claim that any of the signers to the petition were minors, proof of their age or ages before the board of supervisors is not required, and testimony as to whether the board took or heard any evidence as to their age or ages is properly excluded.—County of Siskiyou v. Gamlich, 110 Cal. 94, 42 Pac. 468.

[g] In proceedings by a county to condemn land for widening a highway, the admission in evidence of the auditor's warrant in favor of the owner of the land for the damages awarded was admissible, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 1.—Mendocino County v. Peters (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1122.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 899; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1567-1572, § 540½.

[a] Witnesses having knowledge of surroundings and of values may testify as to values though they are not experts.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 76-79, 20 Pac. 372.

[b] Bona fide offers made for purchase of land are admissible to prove value of land on issue of damages.—Muller v. Southern Pacific etc. Ry. Co., 83 Cal. 243, 23 Pac. 265.

[c] In condemnation proceedings it is error, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1249, making the value of the land at the date of the summons the measure of damages, to permit a witness to answer as to the present value.—San Jose etc. R. Co. v. Mayne, 83 Cal. 566, 23 Pac. 522.

[e] Witnesses should not be allowed to give their opinions as to the value of the property for a particular purpose, but should state its market value in view of any purpose to which it is adapted.—City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1572-1574, § 541.

§ 116. —— Expert Testimony.

[a] Value may be ascertained from expert evidence based on purposes for which land is suitable though never used for such purposes.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 68, 69, 20 Pac. 372.

[b] Expert opinion of market value should be based on existing business wants of community or such as may be reasonably expected in immediate future.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 62, 25 Pac. 977.

[c] Experts should support their estimates by description of property, giving location, surroundings and advantages for particular uses.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 62, 25 Pac. 977.

[d] Widest latitude should be allowed on cross-examination of expert testifying as to value.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 62, 25 Pac. 977.

§ 117. —— Damages.

[a] In an action by a city to condemn land for a street, and to determine the damages to the land owners, evidence that the assessment of other property for the expense of the improvement was irregular is inadmissible.—City and County of San Francisco v. Kiernan, 98 Cal. 614, 33 Pac. 720; Heffernan v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 33 Pac. 725.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1248, subdivision 2, evidence of damages to defendants' land not taken by the construction of plaintiff's railroad across a street on which such land fronted held admissible. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Hart (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 218.

[d] In condemnation proceedings by a railroad, held, that there was no prejudicial error in admitting the testimony of a witness in other condemnation proceedings.—Madera Ry. Co. v. Raymond Granite Co. (Cal. App.), 87 Pac. 27.

See Cent. Dig., cols. 1580-1582, § 544.

§ 119. Mode of Assessment of Compensation.

[a] For fixing the compensation for private property taken for public use, any fair and equitable mode may be provided whether it involves a trial by jury or not.—People v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

§ 120. —— Scope of Inquiry and Questions to be Determined in Fixing Compensation.

[a] Where land is taken for a railroad, the commissioners, under the statute, are not required to pass on questions of title, or to apportion the amount of damages among several claimants of the property taken. Spring Valley Waterworks v. City of San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434.

[b] Commissioners appointed to appraise land to be taken for the use of a railroad company have no power to pass upon any question of title, or to make any apportionment of the money assessed for the value among the owners.—San Francisco etc. R. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 29 Cal. 112.

[c] Evidence, in proceedings to condemn land for a sewer, that the sewer farm to which the sewer was to extend would become a nuisance, was inadmissible, as involving a question not in this proceeding.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

§ 121. Assessment by Jury—Conduct of Proceedings, View, and Questions for Jury.

[a] An absent co-owner of land sought to be condemned for highway purposes represented in the proceedings by his co-owner held to have acquiesced in the court's action in refusing to accompany the jury during a view.—San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175, 81 Pac. 972.

[b] Section 1248, Code of Civil Procedure, does not apply to proceedings before supervisors; they are regulated by Political Code. Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 514, 23 Pac. 700.

[c] Damages to be awarded are to be estimated by jury.—Colusa County v. Hudson, 85 Cal. 637, 24 Pac. 791.

[d] On proceedings to condemn a right of way for a public highway, where the owner of the land claims damages for the additional fencing required, it is question for the jury whether the land is worth fencing for any use to which it may be put.—Colusa County v. Hudsoen, 85 Cal. 633, 24 Pac. 791.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 122. —— Instructions.

[a] It was proper for the court to instruct the jury that they were to estimate the value of the lease at the time when the track complained of was first completed and operated, and that the market value of the lease was not its value in use to the plaintiff for a particular purpose, but only its fair market value.—Kishlar v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 134 Cal. 636, 66 Pac. 848.

[b] An instruction that the jury, in estimating damages to land taken, "are permitted to exercise, in weighing the evidence, their individual judgment as to values on subjects within their knowledge which they have acquired through experience and observation." was not erroneous.—Beveridge v. Lewis, 137 Cal. 619, 67 Pac. 1040.

[c] In proceedings to condemn land for a railroad right of way, evidence held to justify an instruction requiring the jury to determine the value of the property taken and the damage to property not taken.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Hart (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 218.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 123. —— Verdict.

[a] Verdict of jury is conclusive of value of property taken.—California etc. Co. v. Southern Pacific R. R., 67 Cal. 59, 7 Pac. 123.

[b] Fact that amount of damages awarded by jury may sometimes be unjust will not affect conclusiveness of verdict.—Colusa County v. Hudson, 85 Cal. 637, 24 Pac. 791.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 881; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1636-1647, §§ 568-573.

§ 124. Assessment by Commissioners.

[a] The provision of the water company act of 1858, directing that the compensation to the owners of the land condemned shall be estimated by commissioners as in the Railroad Act of 1853, instead of a jury, is constitutional.—People v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

[b] The same rule prevails whether the question be as to the value of the property taken or as to the extent of the damages which the owner may sustain from the use made of his property. In either case the proceedings, so far as the constitution is concerned, may be with or without a jury, as the statute directs.—People v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 883-894; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1656-1734, §§ 580-620.

§ 125. —— Qualifications.

[a] Where two of the three members of a board of trustees of a reclamation district are owners of different levees required for the purpose of the board, but have no interest in common therein, they are both disqualified to act in proceedings to acquire a levee belonging to either.—Reclamation Dist. No. 542 v. Turner, 104 Cal. 334, 37 Pac. 1038.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 126. ——Appointment.

[a] When the proceedings for the condemnation of land are regular it is the duty of the court to appoint commissioners to appraise the same, regardless of the question as to whether the purchaser will acquire a good title.—Lake Merced Water Co. v. Cowles, 31 Cal. 215.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 883, 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1661-1668, § 582.

§ 127. —— Compelling Appointment by Mandamus.

[a] If county judge refuses to appoint commissioners to appraise land in proceedings to condemn the same a writ of mandate will be issued compelling him to do so.—Lake Merced Water Co. v. Cowles, 31 Cal. 215.

§ 128. —— Conduct of Proceedings, and View.

[a] When lands are taken for the use of a water company under the act of 1858, the commissioners make their view of the premises before hearing the evidence.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. City of San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434.

[b] The commissioners appointed by the court to assess lands condemned for railroad purposes are not bound by the testimony of witnesses, but are not only allowed, but required, to view the premises and found their awards upon their own judgment, as well as that of the witnesses.—Western Pac. R. Co. v. Reed, 35 Cal. 621.

[c] Commissioners appointed to assess the damage for taking land for public uses must hear the evidence offered by the parties, and in doing so must be governed by the same rules by which the admission and exclusion of evidence in other cases is regulated.—Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 888; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1670-1680, §§ 585-589.

§ 129. —— Report and Findings or Award.

[a] A party, after procuring an order for the condemnation of property to public use, cannot lay by for four years without complying at all with those requirements of the proceeding which are of service to the owner, and then, without notice, give effect to the previous and initiatory acts through which he deraigns his title.—Bensley v. Mountain Lake Water Co., 13 Cal. 306, 73 Am. Dec. 575.

[b] Commissioners appointed to assess damages for taking land for public uses exercise a special delegated power, and their report should show upon its face that they have acted in the appointed mode.—Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

[c] Where a statute requires commissioners appointed to assess lands taken for railroad purposes to "set forth their proceedings," it is error to confirm a report which fails to show that they met at the time and place ordered, and were duly sworn.—(Cal. 1868) Central Pac. R. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

[d] If the report of commissioners in proceedings to assess damages for lands taken for railroad purposes does not show fully what their proceedings were, it should be set aside or sent back to them for amendment.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

[e] A bill of exceptions to the report of the commissioners in proceedings to assess damages for lands taken for railroad purposes, though signed by the commissioners after the trial, should be considered by the court a part of the report, as an amendment thereto.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

[f] The court should compel the commissioners in proceedings to assess damages for lands taken for railroad purposes to amend their report where it is not such as the statute and the nature of their power demand.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

[g] Under act of January 31, 1870, authorizing the opening of streets in Oakland, it is the duty of the commissioners to report the damages suffered by the owner of each specific parcel of land affected by the work, including the value of the land taken for the street.—Jacobus v. Council of City of Oakland, 42 Cal. 21.

[h] Where commissioners are appointed to assess compensation for the taking of private property for public uses, and it is claimed that the commissioners have not assessed "compensation for each piece of land taken, and for each source of damage, separately," an objection to the action of the commissioners on that ground must be taken before the commissioners themselves, to afford them an opportunity to obviate the objection; and, if they refuse, an exception must be noted. If the party fails to make the objection before the commissioners, he cannot move to set aside the report on that ground in the court to which the report of the commissioners is made.—In re Clear Lake Water Co., 48 Cal. 586.

[i] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1248, provides that, in condemnation proceedings, the court, with or without a jury, must ascertain and assess (1) the value of the land, (2) the damage by reason of severance, and (3) the benefit. Held, that these elements of compensation must be separately assessed, and that until such assessment a judgment of condemnation is void.—Butte County v. Boydston, 64 Cal. 110, 29 Pac. 511.

[j] The value of land and property and of all improvements thereon pertaining to the realty is to be taken, but the improvements are not required to be assessed separately from the land, and a finding of total damages without finding the value of the land, is sufficient.—Tehama County v. Bryan, 68 Cal. 57, 8 Pac. 673.

[k] Under Political Code, section 2690, declaring that in an action to condemn land for a public road no informality in the proceedings of the board of supervisors shall vitiate the suit, but the order of the board directing the district attorney to bring suit shall be conclusive proof of the regularity thereof, failure of the viewers to report as to the cost of the road upon the route proposed in the petition, as required by Political Code, section 2686, and defects in the form of the bond presented with the petition, the form of the clerk's notice to land owners, the form of the viewers' report, or the manner in which they performed their duty, are not defenses to an action to condemn land for a public road; the decision of the supervisors as to the sufficiency and regularity of the preliminary proceedings being a final judgment, not subject to collateral attack.—Sutter County v. Tisdale, 136 Cal. 474, 69 Pac. 141.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 890-893; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1681-1709, §§ 592-604.

§ 130. —— Objections and Exceptions.

[a] Objection that commissioners have not assessed items of damage separately must be made to them and exception taken.—Matter of Clear Lake W. Co., 48 Cal. 586.

[b] Where, in an action by a county to condemn real property for a highway, the county shows the appointment of viewers, their report in proper form, and its approval, the burden of proof is on the defendant to show that the viewers did not take the required oath for the faithful discharge of their duties, and that for that reason the proceedings were invalid.—Sutter County v. McGriff, 130 Cal. 124, 62 Pac, 412.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1696-1700, § 601.

§ 131. —— Setting Aside Report or Award.

[a] The rule that a verdict will not be set aside as contrary to evidence, where there is substantial conflict in the evidence, applies to the reports of commissioners assessing damages and benefits resulting from the widening of a street.—Appeal of Piper, 32 Cal. 530.

[b] The provisions of the practice act in relation to new trials have no application to a motion to set aside the report of commissioners to assess damages for land condemned for railroad purposes, the statute under which such proceedings are taken neither in terms nor by necessary implication making such provisions applicable thereto.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

[c] If "good cause" within the meaning of section 31 of the act of May 20, 1861 (1 Hitt. Laws, art. 855), providing for proceedings to assess damages for lands taken for public uses, exists for setting aside the report of the commissioners in such proceedings, which does not appear on its face, such as fraud or misconduct on the part of the commissioners or others, such cause may be shown by affidavits, or in any other legal mode which the court may prescribe.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

[d] The award of commissioners in proceedings to condemn land for railroad purposes, under the act of May 20, 1861, will not be set aside when there is a substantial conflict in the evidence.—Western Pac. R. Co. v. Reed, 35 Cal. 621.

[e] The provisions of the practice act in relation to motions for new trials have no application to a motion to set aside the report of commissioners in proceedings, under act of May 20, 1861, to condemn lands for railroad purposes; and such motion may properly be founded upon the report itself, of which the testimony taken by the commissioners properly forms a part.—Western Pac. R. Co. v. Reed, 35 Cal. 621.

[f] Under Statutes of 1861, page 607, providing that the report of commissioners appointed to assess damages for property taken by railroad companies in condemnation proceedings may be set aside for good cause shown, the court has no jurisdiction to set aside a report as to the owner of an undivided interest in a tract, but the motion, if made, must be to set aside the report as to the whole tract.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Wilson, 49 Cal. 396, 397.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 131½. —— Review of Report.

[a] The review by the court of the report of commissioners appointed to assess damages for taking land for public uses is intended to be had upon the report itself, so far as all matters which should be stated there are concerned, and not upon bills of exceptions or statements in the sense of the practice act in relation to new trials.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

§ 132. Dismissal and Nonsuit.

[a] Failure of a city, which seeks to condemn a right of way for a sewer, to prove that its location was most compatible with the greatest public good and least private injury, is not a ground for a nonsuit.—Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

§ 133. Assessment by Court.

[a] In condemnation proceedings, the action of the court in vacating former orders for condemnation of lands of a defaulting defendant, prematurely entered, and inoperative, and entering a final decree, such former orders not purporting to adjudge the rights of any of the other defendants or condemn any of the other lands, is not prejudicial as to such other defendants.—Alameda County v. Crocker, 125 Cal. 101, 57 Pac. 766.

§ 134. New Trial.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1254, provides that if, after the judgment in condemnation proceedings, plaintiff wishes to take possession, it must pay into court the full amount of the judgment; that defendant, upon filing an abandonment of all defenses except as to the amount of damages on a new trial, shall be entitled to receive the amount of the judgment; and that the receipt of such amount shall be held to be an abandonment by defendant of all defenses excepting his claim for greater compensation. Held, that where defendant has filed an abandonment, and received the amount of the judgment, the only issue on a new trial is whether he is entitled to greater compensation; and, if the award is for a smaller amount, plaintiff is not entitled to a judgment against him for the difference.—Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co. v. Rump, 104 Cal. 20, 37 Pac. 859.

[b] In condemnation proceedings by a railroad company, defendant will not be allowed on a second trial to show the comparative value of her property before and after the construction of the railroad, which took place after the first and before the second trial.—Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co. v. Rump, 104 Cal. 20, 37 Pac. 859.

§ 135. Judgment or Award.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 941, 1254, on payment into court of damages awarded for land taken in proceedings to establish a highway, an order letting plaintiff into possession held proper.—San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175, 81 Pac. 972.

[b] If commissioners, appointed to assess damages and benefits in an application to condemn land for a railroad, assess the cost of fencing separately from the estimate of damage to land not taken, there is no substantial error, although the directions of the statute are not technically complied with; and, in such case, the court may enter judgment for the value of the land taken and the cost of fencing, and the excess of damages over benefits to land not taken, if there are any.—California Pacific R. R. Co. v. Frisbie, 41 Cal. 356.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1254, which provides that at any time after judgment, or pending an appeal, when plaintiff shall have paid into court the amount of the judgment and costs, and such further sum as may be required by the court, the court may authorize plaintiff to take possession of the land, when possession is taken without such order, the court may order it to be restored to defendant.—Neale v. Superior Court of San Diego County, 77 Cal. 28, 18 Pac. 790.

[d] In condemnation proceedings, a finding specifically as to the ownership of all the lands sought to be condemned, and as to all lands about which there is any issue presented, necessarily excludes the idea of any ownership in a defendant not specifically mentioned, and is, in effect, a finding against him.—Alameda County v. Crocker, 125 Cal. 101, 57 Pac. 766.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1251, providing that the plaintiff in condemnation proceedings must within thirty days of the final judgment pay the sum of money assessed, the condemnation judgment is not void because payment is made before it is due.—Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 Pac. 915, rehearing denied 72 Pac. 989.

[a] In condemnation proceedings, where judgment of condemnation was entered March 11th and filed March 12th, and the final order, entered May 23d, stated that it was as of date March 11th, it will be presumed, if it was competent for the court to make such a nunc pro tunc order, that it did not take effect until after the entry of judgment. Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 Pac. 915, rehearing denied 72 Pac. 989.

[b] The final order took effect when entered, and not nunc pro tunc, the clause "as of date March 11th" merely identifying the order as supplementing the judgment of that date.—Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 Pac. 915, rehearing denied 72 Pac. 989.

[c] In condemnation proceedings by a municipal corporation in which the damages were paid into court, the owner of the land condemned was not prejudiced by the fact that the judgment was in personam, and did not in form require the payment of damages before appropriation of the land.—Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 Pac. 915, rehearing denied 72 Pac. 989.

[a] Under Statutes of 1889, page 70, providing that streets may be laid out in municipalities, and property condemned therefor, a property owner, refusing to accept from the commissioners the amount awarded her, is bound by the judgment in subsequent condemnation proceedings, though the amount awarded therein is less than the amount of assessment on the land.—City of Alameda v. Cohen, 133 Cal. 5, 65 Pac. 127.

[b] Damages to land caused by the seepage of water from a canal, due to faulty construction thereof, were not included in the damages awarded the land owner in proceedings to condemn land for the canal.—Turpen v. Turlock Irr. Dist., 141 Cal. 1, 74 Pac. 295.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 922-927; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1743-1757, §§ 627-629.

§ 137. —— Bond as Requisite.

[a] No bond is required as a condition to a final order for the condemnation of land for highway purposes except in the cases specified in Code of Civil Procedure, section 1248, subdivision 5.—San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175, 81 Pac. 972.

[a] Where, subsequent to a determination by the board of water commissioners of the city of San Francisco that the acquisition of certain waterworks by condemnation proceedings was necessary, and the appointment of appraisers to determine the value thereof, and subsequent to their appraisal, or before the property is taken, the act authorizing such condemnation is repealed, the owner of such property is not entitled to any compensation.—Lamb v. Schottler, 54 Cal. 319.

[b] Defendant is not entitled to compensation deposited with clerk until he abandons all defenses except as to sufficiency of award. Pool v. Butler, 141 Cal. 48, 74 Pac. 444.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 929; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1766-1770, § 637.

§ 139. —— Interest on Award or Judgment.

[a] Where a statute authorizing the condemnation of private property for a railway provides that the company shall pay or tender the amount of the award within thirty days after the final confirmation of the report, the owner of land which has been condemned for such purpose is entitled to interest on the amount of the award after the expiration of such thirty days.—Phillips v. Pease, 39 Cal. 582.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 929-933; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1770-1779, §§ 638-643.

§ 140. Abandonment or Dismissal of Proceedings.

[a] Where after proceedings have been taken to condemn land for the use of the state, the damages have been assessed, and a decree of condemnation entered, it shall appear that the state has acquired no title by the decree, the court should, on motion of the attorney general, quash all the proceedings, and order the money to be refunded to the state.—Stanford v. Worn, 27 Cal. 171.

[b] Plaintiff recovered a judgment condemning a right of way through defendant's land, but afterward determined to change its line, and filed a petition and made a motion to have the judgment rendered set aside and annulled. The court entered an order denying plaintiff's petition and motion. Held that, although the motion was based upon new matter occurring subsequently to the judgment, there was no statutory provision for such a motion, or for the proceedings which plaintiff sought to institute.—Eureka etc. R. Co. v. McGrath, 74 Cal. 49, 15 Pac. 360.

[c] Plaintiff may abandon condemnation proceedings at any time before possession has been taken without incurring liability to pay awarded damages.—Pool v. Butler, 141 Cal. 50, 52, 54, 74 Pac. 444.

[a] Government is under no obligation to take property if the terms, when ascertained, are not satisfactory.—Fox v. Western Pac. R. R. Co., 31 Cal. 538-555; Lamb v. Schottler, 54 Cal. 319.

[b] By bringing action to condemn land plaintiff does not bind himself to take the land and pay compensation fixed by court or jury.—Pool v. Butler, 141 Cal. 49, 74 Pac. 444.

§ 142. Appeal—Decisions Reviewable.

[a] The decision of the court in proceedings to condemn land for public use, which determines the merits of the case, is a final judgment rendered in a special proceeding, from which an appeal may be taken.—Sacramento etc. R. Co. v. Harlan, 24 Cal. 334.

[b] An order confirming the report of commissioners appointed to condemn realty for railroad purposes is a final judgment, within Practice Act, section 347, providing for an appeal from a final judgment rendered in a special proceeding in the district court. Phillips v. Pease, 39 Cal. 582.

[c] The award of commissioners appointed to appraise land to be condemned for the benefit of a state university is not a final judgment until approved and affirmed by the governor.—People v. Pfeiffer, 59 Cal. 89.

[d] A final order for the condemnation of land, made after an alleged payment of damages awarded therefor, is a special order after a final judgment, from which an appeal may be taken under Code of Civil Procedure, section 939, subdivision 3.—City of Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 132 Cal. 340, 64 Pac. 477.

§ 143. —— Right of Review.

[a] Where a party is permitted, on an ex parte order, to intervene, but is afterward dismissed from the suit on the setting aside of the order, he is not such a party to the action as to be entitled to appeal.—People v. Pfeiffer, 59 Cal. 89.

[b] In condemnation proceedings, defendant does not waive his right to appeal from an order overruling his demurrer by answering and going to trial.—San Francisco etc. Ry. Co. v. Gould, 122 Cal. 601, 55 Pac. 411.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 144. —— Presentation and Reservation in Lower Court of Grounds of Review.

[a] An objection to the jurisdiction of the county court can be taken for the first time on appeal.—Grove St., In re, 61 Cal. 438.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1820-1823, § 666.

§ 145. —— Taking and Perfecting Appeal.

[a] A county brought an action to condemn for a road lands owned by the respective defendants, one of whom appealed from the judgment. Held, that the other defendants were adverse parties, on whom, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 940, notice of appeal should have been served.—Butte County v. Boydstun, 68 Cal. 189, 8 Pac. 835.

[b] Where a defendant whose land, together with that of his codefendants, is condemned, appeals, the latter are "adverse parties," on whom notice of appeal must be served. United States v. Crooks, 116 Cal. 43, 47 Pac. 870.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 951-954; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1826-1838, §§ 668-671.

§ 146. —— Record.

[a] In an appeal in condemnation proceedings on the judgment-roll alone, wherein the final order recited the payment of the damage money, such recital was conclusive.—Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 Pac. 915, rehearing denied, 72 Pac. 989.

[b] In an appeal in condemnation proceedings on the judgment-roll alone, a certificate signed by the trial judge, but bearing date subsequent to the notice of appeal and to the stipulation of counsel as to printing the transcript, is not a part of the judgment-roll, and cannot be considered in support of a claim that appellant was given no opportunity to be heard in opposition to the final order, or that the trial judge inadvertently signed the same.—Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 Pac. 915, rehearing denied, 72 Pac. 898.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 147. —— Review.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1244, subdivision 5, the separation of proceedings to condemn several parcels of land lying in the same county for highway purposes is within the jurisdiction of the court, the exercise of which will not be reviewed in the absence of abuse.—San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175, 81 Pac. 972.

[b] In a proceeding to condemn land for highway purposes, the entry of an order of condemnation without hearing held harmless. San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175, 81 Pac. 972.

[c] Where the lowest estimate as to the value of the land was two thousand seven hundred dollars, a verdict for one dollar will be set aside.—City of San Jose v. Reed, 65 Cal. 241, 3 Pac. 806.

[d] Failure to find as to the benefit which would accrue to the portion of lands not taken, in a proceeding to condemn land for a public road, is not prejudicial error.—Tehama County v. Bryan, 68 Cal. 57, 8 Pac. 673.

[e] The admission of evidence as to the benefits to defendant by the location of a railroad on his land, and an instruction thereon, though error, is not prejudicial, where the jury finds that there are no benefits.—San Jose etc. R. Co. v. Mayne, 83 Cal. 566, 23 Pac. 522.

[f] Where both parties proceed with trial upon assumption that certain facts are in issue they cannot complain on appeal of want of it.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 55, 25 Pac. 977.

[g] Although the assessment of the cost of fencing in a proceeding by a railroad to condemn a right of way is made to enforce a duty imposed by law, and not as damages to the land owner for an injury to his land, still it is a duty in which the land owner has a special and substantial interest, and an error committed in the assessment of the cost of the fence is a prejudicial error, of which the land owner has the right to complain. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co. v. Rumpp, 94 Cal. 432, 29 Pac. 872.

[h] Whether a particular region is a "farming neighborhood," and whether the supplying of water to that neighborhood is a "public use," within Code of Civil Procedure, section 1238, providing that eminent domain may be exercised in the following "public uses": canals, ditches, and pipes for supplying "farming neighborhoods with water," are questions of fact for the trial court, and its findings thereon are conclusive, where the evidence upon which they were based was not insufficient to support them.—Lindsay Irrigation Co. v. Mehrtens, 97 Cal. 676, 32 Pac. 802.

[i] Defendant's motion to strike out the testimony of one of plaintiff's witnesses that "the railroad would prevent any further wash, and it affords a good embankment to protect the balance of the property," was denied. Held, that an instruction that "the compensation to be awarded . . . . must be ascertained without respect to any benefits that would accrue to the remainder of the land from the building of the railroad," was sufficient to remove any prejudice to the defendant from the refusal to strike out.—Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co. v. Rump, 104 Cal. 20, 37 Pac. 859.

[j] Where the court improperly entered a premature judgment condemning the interest of one defendant not appearing, before other defendants had appeared and answered, and properly included the interest of that defendant in the final judgment of condemnation of the interests of all the defendants, it will be presumed, upon appeal of another defendant, that the court made an order vacating the premature judgment, and such judgment must be deemed harmless as to the appellant.—Alameda County v. Crocker, 125 Cal. 101, 57 Pac. 766.

[k] Upon appeal in condemnation proceedings awarding a judgment for the value of the land taken and damages as assessed by the jury, mere irregularities or errors of the board not affecting its jurisdiction do not affect the judgment appealed from, and cannot be considered.—Glen County v. Johnston, 129 Cal. 404, 62 Pac. 66.

[l] In a proceeding by a city to condemn private property for the construction of a sewer, an answer outlining a different route for the sewer through the streets of the city, and alleging that such route was better than the proposed one, though such facts could have been shown under a general denial of the necessity to construct the sewer, error in allowing the answer to stand was not prejudicial.—City of Santa Ana v. Gildmacher, 122 Cal. 395, 65 Pac. 883.

[m] In condemnation proceedings the land owner was not prejudiced by the deposit of the amount of damages before the judgment therefor was entered.—Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 Pac. 915, rehearing denied 72 Pac. 989.

§ 148. —— Determination and Disposition of Cause.

[a] The power conferred by Code of Civil Procedure, section 957, is discretionary; and where, after an appeal by the land owner from a judgment of damages in condemnation proceedings, the court allows plaintiff to take possession of the land, and occupy it pending the litigation, as authorized by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1254, on the payment into court of a sum in addition to the judgment, the supreme court, on reversing the judgment and remanding the cause for a new trial as to the amount of damages only, will not put the land owner back into possession unless the circumstances render it just and necessary.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. Drinkhouse, 95 Cal. 220, 30 Pac. 218.

[b] As a final decree of condemnation can be made only after full compensation has been made to the owner, or ascertained and paid into court for him, an order for possession, being founded on the decree, must fall with the reversal thereof for inadequacy of the compensation made.—(1900) San Mateo v. Coburn, 130 Cal. 631, rehearing denied (1901) 130 Cal. 631, 63 Pac. 621.

[c] In condemnation proceedings by a city the money awarded to the property owners was actually deposited with the clerk of the court within the proper time, but the clerk, because of their refusal to take it, deposited it with the county treasurer, in accordance with the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure, section 2104. It appears that the money was in the county treasury, but that the property owners would not receive it. Held, that the final judgment of condemnation will not be reversed on the technical point that the money was not actually carried from the treasurer's room to the courtroom. City of Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 133 Cal. 529, 65 Pac. 1049.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 149. —— Effect of Appeal.

[a] The giving of a bond on an appeal, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 941, from a final order for the condemnation of land, made after an alleged payment of damages therefor, stops all proceedings thereunder till the appeal is determined.—City of Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 132 Cal. 340, 64 Pac. 477.

[b] Where the plaintiff in condemnation proceedings has recovered judgment, and paid into court the sum assessed as damages, the court has no power to order payment to defendants pending an appeal by them upon other grounds than the insufficiency of the damages awarded.—Pool v. Butler, 141 Cal. 46, 74 Pac. 444.

§ 150. —— Review on Certiorari—Nature and Grounds.

[a] Certiorari will not lie to review an action of the board of water commissioners of the city of San Francisco in determining that it was necessary for said city and county to acquire certain waterworks by condemnation proceedings, and appointing appraisers to determine the value thereof, since such determination was not judicial in its nature. Lamb v. Schottler, 54 Cal. 319.

[b] An order of a city council, to whom has been delegated power to appropriate land for public use, declaring that certain land is hereby "condemned, appropriated, acquired, set apart, and taken for public use," is subject to review on certiorari, as such order is the exercise of a function judicial in its nature.—Wulzen v. Board of Supervisors of the City and County of San Francisco, 101 Cal. 15, 40 Am. St. Rep. 17, 35 Pac. 353; Brickell v. Board of Supervisors of the City and County of San Francisco, 35 Pac. 357.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 969-973; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1886-1895, §§ 688, 689.

§ 151. Costs, Fees, and Expenses.

[a] Party seeking to condemn should pay costs.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neal, 88 Cal. 67, 68, 25 Pac. 977.

[b] The discretionary power conferred upon the court in condemnation proceedings by section 1255 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is limited by section 14 of article I of the constitution, which provides that "private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation having been first made." The court has only the power to determine what are proper and improper items of costs in such proceedings, but to disallow such as are improper, as in other cases.—City and County of San Francisco v. Collins, 98 Cal. 259, 33 Pac. 56.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1251, requiring plaintiff in condemnation proceedings to pay the sum of money assessed within thirty days after final judgment, the costs of court need not be deposited.—City of Alameda v. Cohen, 133 Cal. 5, 65 Pac. 127.

[d] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1251, requiring plaintiff in condemnation proceedings to pay the sum of money assessed within thirty days after final judgment, the costs of court need not be deposited.—City of Alameda v. Cohen, 133 Cal. 5, 65 Pac. 127.

§ 152. —— Counsel Fees and Interest.

[a] Counsel fees cannot be allowed on a general judgment for defendant in condemnation proceedings.—Coburn v. Townsend, 103 Cal. 233, 37 Pac. 202; Coburn v. Brooks, 103 Cal. 233, 37 Pac. 202; Coburn v. Josselyn, 103 Cal. 233, 37 Pac. 202.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1251, 1253, stating as conditions to judgment of condemnation the payment of "the sum of money assessed," interest cannot be allowed on the amount, nor payment of costs required.—San Francisco etc. Ry. Co. v. Leviston, 134 Cal. 412, 66 Pac. 473.

§ 153. Nature and Grounds.

[a] Under Constitution, article 14, section 1, declaring the use of water appropriated for sale or distribution to be a public use, an irrigation company is the agent of the state in the administration of a public use, and owners of land who tacitly acquiesce in the construction of a canal by such a company through their land, while they may have a right to demand and receive compensation for any damage to their lands caused thereby, have no right to abate the canal by action, nor to injure or destroy it, thus jeopardizing the interests of the community dependent on the continuous operation of the canal. Crescent Canal Co. v. Montgomery, 143 Cal. 248, 76 Pac. 1032, 65 L. R. A. 940.

[a] Private property cannot be taken by a municipal corporation for public use without compensation or provision therefor; and, if none is made, the party may retake the property.—Colton v. Rossi, 9 Cal. 595.

§ 155. Recovery of Compensation.

[a] Where action of county authorities in taking land for a public use is void because compensation did not precede or accompany the taking, a suit against the county for the compensation does not lie.—Johnson v. Alameda County, 14 Cal. 106.

[b] If compensation has not been had for property taken by statutory condemnation proceedings, it may be recovered in civil action.—Bigelow v. Los Angeles, 85 Cal. 618, 24 Pac. 778.

[c] Where amount of compensation fixed by court is deposited with clerk, court cannot order it paid to defendant who appeals from judgment, until appeal is determined.—Pool v. Butler, 141 Cal. 48, 51, 74 Pac. 444.

§ 156. Action for Damages.

[a] The award of the road viewers for damages sustained by a person for laying out a road across his land is not conclusive. The applicant may, after the award and tender of the money awarded, commence suit against the county in the district court for his damages.—Grigsby v. Burtnett, 31 Cal. 406.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 985; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 1944-1955, §§ 725-736; col. 1961, § 741.

§ 157. Recovery of Possession of Property.

[a] The entry of a railroad corporation on land for the purposes of a survey is not a trespass, nor is any disturbance of the soil for corporation purposes, until the time for compensation is past, or the corporation has concluded not to take the land, and then the owner is allowed to maintain an action for the recovery of the land, and for damages he may have sustained by the trespass. Fox v. Western Pac. R. Co., 31 Cal. 538.

[b] Where plaintiff takes possession without paying amount awarded to defendant, latter may have former removed by action but cannot do so on motion unless case comes within provisions of section 1252, Code of Civil Procedure.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 82, 83, 20 Pac. 372.

[c] Where, when a railroad track was laid so as to encroach on the rights of a street railway company to the use of a street under its franchise, the president of the latter company desisted from a contemplated injunction at the request of the president of the former, and on promise of payment of all resulting damages, such street railway company or its assigns cannot thereafter maintain ejectment to remove such railroad from such street.—Fresno St. R. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 135 Cal. 202, 67 Pac. 773.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 986; 18 Cent. Dig., col. 1913, § 697; cols. 1954-1962, §§ 736-740, 742.

§ 158. Injunction.

[a] Where private property is appropriated to public use by the supervisors of a county, without making provisions for paying for the same, such act is illegal, and may be enjoined. McCann v. Sierra County, 7 Cal. 121.

[b] Where an owner of land through which a highway has been laid out commences an action against the county for damages, he is entitled to an injunction enjoining the removal of his fences, or the opening of the highway through his land, pending such action and until final judgment is entered. Grigsby v. Burtnett, 31 Cal. 406.

[c] If facts exist which give the defendant a cause of action in equity to restrain the petitioner from acts injurious to the defendant, they must be asserted in an independent action, and cannot be set up by way of cross-complaint in the proceeding for condemnation.—California P. R. R. Co. v. Central P. R. R. Co., 47 Cal. 549.

[d] When, on an application by one railroad company to condemn the land of another, the defendant, by way of cross-complaint, sets up facts which would be a legal defense to the petition, they do not constitute ground for an injunction to restrain the plaintiff from entering upon or taking possession of the property sought to be condemned. If such facts show that the petitioner had no power to condemn the lands of the defendant, or that the lands are not necessary and proper for the purposes named in the petition, they can be urged on the hearing for the appointment of commissioners, and there is no necessity for an injunction so far as they are concerned.—California Pac. R. Co. v. Central Pac. R. Co., 47 Cal. 549.

[e] The owner of land not part of a public street, but bordering on it, cannot have the laying of a railway track in the street enjoined unless his injury differs in character, and not in degree merely, from that suffered by the public generally.—Crowley v. Davis, 63 Cal. 460.

[f] Where injunction would be useless and unnecessary, it should be refused.—Cohen v. Gray, 70 Cal. 86, 11 Pac. 508.

[g] Court in which proceedings are pending has authority to prevent plaintiff from taking possession until order therefor is made.—Neale v. Superior Court, 77 Cal. 29, 18 Pac. 790.

[h] Taking will not be enjoined until compensation is made where there is no doubt as to defendant's ability to respond in damages.—Bigelow v. Los Angeles, 85 Cal. 618, 24 Pac. 778.

[i] An abutting owner upon a street of a city, whether he owns the fee in the street or has only an easement for its use, may enjoin the city from so changing a natural watercourse as to damage his property by preventing a free access to and use thereof, unless compensation for such damage is first made to, or paid into, court for him.—Geurkink v. Petaluma, 112 Cal. 306, 44 Pac. 570.

[j] Injunction will lie to restrain the construction of a track of a steam railroad in a street to the damage of an abutter to whom § 159. —— Injunction After Award of Compensation.

[a] When land has been duly condemned as a public highway, and the amount the owner shall receive as compensation has been duly ascertained, and a warrant for the sum tendered him, which he has refused, a court of equity will not enjoin the road overseer from tearing down the fences and opening the highway.—Creanor v. Nelson, 23 Cal. 464.

§ 160. Equitable Action to Annul Proceeding.

[a] Corporation acquiring right by purchase may sue in equity to annul proceeding of a rival corporation.—San Francisco etc. Co. v. Alameda etc. Co., 36 Cal. 639.

[b] Equity will annul a decree of condemnation unlawfully obtained.—San Francisco etc. Co. v. Alameda etc. Co., 36 Cal. 639.

§ 161. Limitations and Laches.

[a] An action to recover damages for a wrongful entry by a railroad company upon the land of plaintiff, and the construction of its railroad thereupon, without proceedings for condemnation, and without plaintiff's consent, if commenced more than three years after the road was built and operated, is barred by subdivision 2 of section 338 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—Robinson v. Southern California Ry. Co., 129 Cal. 8, 61 Pac. 947.

§ 162. Parties.

[a] Owners of separate tracts of land must sue separately to recover damages to their respective tracts caused by the same public improvement.—Geurkink v. City of Petaluma, 112 Cal. 306, 44 Pac. 570.

[b] Owners of separate tracts of land which will be permanently injured by a contemplated public improvement may unite in an action to enjoin the improvement.—Geurkink v. City of Petaluma, 112 Cal. 306, 44 Pac. 570.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 163. Evidence.

[a] A railroad company was authorized by law to lay a double track with proper and necessary switches and turnouts in the streets of a city. Held, in a suit by the owner of a lot upon the street who had no title to the soil of the street, that the presumption of law was that a switch, turnout and side track laid down by the company were necessary and proper, and that the burden was on the plaintiff to establish an averment to the contrary.—Carson v. Central R. Co., 35 Cal. 325.

[b] On issue as to whether one was estopped from asserting the invalidity of condemnation proceedings for a levee, and that the actual width was not as great as claimed, facts held insufficient to show an estoppel. McCarty v. Southern Pac. Co. (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 615.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 164. Trial.

[a] In ejectment for land occupied by defendant's railroad and depot, the defendant in effect pleaded that it had entered by permission of plaintiffs, and had paid plaintiffs for the right of way over the land, and for the privilege of maintaining a depot, and that thereupon plaintiffs had granted to defendant said right and privilege. The court did not find on this issue, but in effect found that plaintiffs had consented to the erection of the depots, and had recognized the land as defendant's, and had waived error in the location of the premises. Held, that this finding was beyond the issue, and defective in not finding upon the issue presented.—Robinson v. Pittsburg R. Co., 57 Cal. 417.

[b] A statement of facts showing the construction of a steam railroad so that an abutting owner has the use of only thirty-one feet of street between his property and the track, in the absence of which he would have the use of seventy-two feet, sustains a finding that such owner was damaged.—O'Connor v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 122 Cal. 681, 55 Pac. 688.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 165. Appeal and Error.

[a] Where defendant railroad corporation has been perpetually enjoined from entering upon and constructing its road over private lands, such injunction must be modified so far as it prohibits the exercise of rights subsequently acquired by defendant under right of eminent domain pending its appeal from the decree.—Southern Cal. Ry. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 43 Pac. 1123.

V. TITLE OR RIGHTS ACQUIRED.

NATURE OF ESTATE OR INTEREST ACQUIRED, § 166.
—— OILS AND MINERALS BENEATH SURFACE, § 167.
TIME OF PASSING OF TITLE OR RIGHT, § 168.

§ 166. Nature of Estate or Interest Acquired.

[a] Where lands are in terms condemned or taken for the purposes of a corporation, the prevailing doctrine is that the title does not vest absolutely in the corporation, but only to the extent necessary for its purposes.—People v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

[b] The condemnation of lands is but a purchase of them in invitum, and the title acquired is but a quitclaim.—Lake Merced Water Co. v. Cowles, 31 Cal. 215.

[c] The condemnation of land in a street for the use of a railroad company, to enable it to lay and operate its track, gives it no title to the land condemned, nor any interest in it, except a mere easement in common with the general public.—Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Reed, 41 Cal. 256.

[d] Where property is taken for public use and an easement is sufficient for the use, the fee will not be deemed to be appropriated unless expressly stated, or by necessary implication.—McCarty v. Southern Pac. Co. (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 615.

[e] Under act of May 13, 1861 (Stats. 1861, p. 358, c. 352) section 16, act of April 9, 1862 (Stats. 1862, pp. 152, 153, c. 158) sections 6, 8, and the proceedings in which land was condemned for levee purposes by the city of Sacramento, held that the city did not acquire the fee to the lands so condemned.—McCarty v. Southern Pac. Co. (Cal. Sup.) 82 Pac. 615.

[a] The "taking" of land by a railroad corporation consists of a series of acts, commencing with the entry for the purpose of location and terminating in the act of payment; and the land is not considered "taken," so as to devest the owner of the title, until this last act is performed.—Fox v. Western Pac. R. Co., 31 Cal. 538.

[b] When the act for condemning land for a public highway requires the money allowed to a land owner for damages to be set apart in the treasury by the supervisors for the owner, the land is not taken for public use until it is so set apart. An order of the supervisors awarding the damages allowed, payable from the current expense fund of the county, is not a taking of the land for public use; and a tender to the land owner of the damages allowed, made after such order, is of no avail.—Murphy v. De Groot, 44 Cal. 51.

[c] Title does not pass to plaintiff until payment of compensation awarded.—Callahan v. Dunn, 78 Cal. 369, 20 Pac. 737.

[d] Title to condemned land does not vest in plaintiffs until final order of condemnation is made and a copy filed with county recorder.—Pool v. Butler, 141 Cal. 50, 74 Pac. 444.

[a] Civil Code, section 3423, subdivision 1, which provides that an injunction cannot be granted to stay a judicial proceeding pending at the commencement of the action in which the injunction is demanded, unless such restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of such proceedings, is not in violation of the constitutional provision that the superior courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases in equity. The statute affects the rights of persons, and not the jurisdiction or procedure of courts.—Spreckels v. Hawaiian Commercial etc. Co., 117 Cal. 377, 49 Pac. 353.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 28, 29; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 17-21, § 2.

§ 2. Nature and Source of Jurisdiction.

[a] Equity jurisprudence generally embraces the same matters of jurisdiction and modes of remedy as exist in the court of chancery of England.—People v. Davidson, 30 Cal. 379.

[b] Courts of equity in this state, while keeping within the rules and principles on which their remedial jurisdiction is founded, will apply their jurisdiction to those new questions which are continually arising.—Dougherty v. Creary, 30 Cal. 290, 86 Am. Dec. 116.

[c] There are no fixed rules limiting the power of equity in dealing with subject matters coming generally within its jurisdiction; and equity has power to deal with novel conditions.—Southern Pacific Co. v. Robinson, 132 Cal. 408, 64 Pac. 572.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See, also, 16 Cyc. 23-30; 18 Cent. Dig., col. 17, § 1; col. 25, § 1.

§ 3. —— Abolition of Distinctions Between Law and Equity.

Abolition of distinction between legal and equitable actions. See Action, § 39.

[a] Although the distinction between actions at law and suits in equity has been abolished by the Code so far as regarding form of procedure, still the principles by which the rights of parties are to be determined remain unchanged.—(Cal. 1852) De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 163, 91 Am. Dec. 352; (1853) Smith v. Rowe, 4 Cal. 6.

[c] The distinction between actions at law and suits in equity is abolished by the codes and practice acts.—Cordier v. Schloss, 12 Cal. 143.

[d] Recovery may be had on a complaint which states facts constituting a cause of action either at law or in equity.—Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 99 Am. Dec. 423.

[e] Section 307, Code of Civil Procedure, does not abolish distinction between law and equity but makes subsequent provisions applicable to both.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 267, 10 Pac. 674.

§ 4. Extent of Equitable Jurisdiction.

[a] A court of equity has jurisdiction in cases of fraud or mistake, provided it has jurisdiction of the subject matter in connection with which the fraud or mistake occurred, but it has no jurisdiction of the subject matter of fraud or mistake connected with legislative or political action, which is beyond judicial control.—County of Riverside v. County of San Bernardino, 134 Cal. 517, 66 Pac. 788.

[a] A court of equity will relieve against mistake, as well as fraud, in a deed or contract in writing.—Wagenblast v. Washburn, 12 Cal. 208.

[b] Equity will not aid the nonexecution of a power; but when a party undertakes to execute a power, and by mistake does it imperfectly, equity will, in favor of creditors and others peculiarly within its protective favor, aid the defective execution.—Beatty v. Clark, 20 Cal. 11.

[c] Equity will correct a mistake in the notation of record of a mortgage as against a subsequent mortgagee with knowledge sufficient to put on inquiry.—Donald v. Beals, 57 Cal. 399.

[d] Equity will decree reconveyance of excess included in deed by mistake.—Sepulveda v. Sepulveda, 77 Cal. 609, 20 Pac. 145.

[e] Equity will not assist one to profit by mistake of another.—Weyant v. Murphy, 78 Cal. 282, 12 Am. St. Rep. 50, 20 Pac. 568.

[ef] When the legal rights of parties have been changed by mistake, equity restores them to their former condition when it can be done without interfering with any new rights acquired on the faith and strength of the altered condition of the legal rights, and without doing injustice to other persons.—Shaffer v. McCloskey, 101 Cal. 576, 36 Pac. 196.

[f] Where equally innocent parties have dealt with one another under a mistake, the burden of loss resulting from the common error will ordinarily be left where the parties themselves have placed it; and a recovery can only be had where in equity and good conscience the defendant should be called upon to refund.—Crocker-Woolworth National Bank of San Francisco v. Nevada Bank of San Francisco, 139 Cal. 564, 96 Am. St. Rep. 169, 73 Pac. 456.

[a] A mistake will not be corrected in partnership accounts when both parties had equal opportunities of knowledge and no fraud appears.—Belt v. Mehen, 2 Cal. 159, 56 Am. Dec. 329.

[b] General rule being that equity will not relieve from consequences of mistake, unless the party seeking relief used due diligence to ascertain the facts, and it being immaterial whether the mistake be the result of ignorance, surprise, imposition, or misplaced confidence, whether an action to cancel warrant on the ground of fraud could be maintained between the original parties, query?—El Dorado County v. Elstner, 18 Cal. 144.

§ 7. —— Placing Parties in Statu Quo.

[a] Where, on redeeming from the sheriff's sale, counterfeit money is paid, and such money is paid and received under a mutual mistake as to its character, it is not a valid redemption, and the party from whose purchase the redemption was thus made is entitled to be placed in statu quo, on returning the money which he received. A court of equity will relieve the defendant from the consequences of his mistake, when it is innocent, and allow him to perfect the redemption on payment of good money and interest. Pownall v. Hall, 45 Cal. 189.

§ 8. Mistakes of Law.

[a] Equity will not relieve a party against mistakes of law.—Smith v. McDougal, 2 Cal. 586.

[b] Plaintiff is not entitled to relief on the ground of mistake, which was of law, and not of fact.—Gross v. Parrott, 16 Cal. 143.

[c] Mistake of law, unless accompanied by special circumstances, is no ground for relief in equity.—Guy v. Du Uprey, 16 Cal. 196, 76 Am. Dec. 518.

[d] Mistake of law, unless accompanied by special circumstances, constitutes no ground for independent relief in equity.—Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461.

[e] One of two tenants in common mortgaged his estate, and subsequently the two conveyed one-third of the whole estate to a third party. The mortgagee foreclosed without making such vendee a party, and became the purchaser at the foreclosure sale for the amount of his debt and costs, under a mistake, supposing that he thereby acquired the vendee's interest in the property. The vendee afterward acquired the remaining interest of the two tenants in common

The mortgagee applied for a sale of the whole property, on the ground that it was incapable of partition, and asked to be reimbursed out of the proceeds to the extent of one-third of the amount paid, on the ground of his mistake in bidding on the supposition that he acquired a title to one-half instead of only one-third, of the property. Held that, his mistake being one of law, he was not entitled to relief under the particular circumstances.—Goodenow v. Ewer, 16 Cal. 461, 76 Am. Dec. 540.

[f] Equity will not, in an independent action, relieve from mistakes of law, unless accompanied with special circumstances, such as misrepresentation, undue influence, or misplaced confidence.—Boggs v. Fowler, 16 Cal. 559.

[g] A court of equity will not relieve a party from a contract entered into by mistake where the mistake is one purely of law, unattended with misrepresentation, undue influence, misplaced confidence, or other special circumstances of similar character.—Kenyon v. Welty, 20 Cal. 637, 81 Am. Dec. 137.

[h] A contract entered into by parties under a mutual supposition that the law affecting the subject of the contract was in accordance with a previous decision of the supreme court upon a similar state of facts will not be set aside because of a subsequent decision by the same court overruling the former one, and declaring a different rule upon the subject.—Kenyon v. Welty, 20 Cal. 637, 81 Am. Dec. 137.

[i] In the absence of fraud or mistake a party cannot escape the consequences of an arrangement voluntarily made by him, because of a misunderstanding of its legal effect.—Parsons v. Fairbanks, 22 Cal. 343.

[j] Fact that person is unlearned and ignorant of legal proceedings affords no ground of relief in equity, unless it also appears that he relied for information upon the person against whom relief is sought, and such person misrepresented the state of facts.—Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 19, 87 Am. Dec. 146.

[k] Parties will be relieved from a mistake of law in defective execution of a mortgage. Love v. Sierra etc. Co., 32 Cal. 639, 91 Am. Dec. 602.

[m] A mere mistake of law on the part of the grantor of a deed of trust as to the nature and effect of the instrument, supposing it to be a mere testamentary disposition of his property remaining within his control, is not ground for relief in equity, especially where it appears that he intended to put the property beyond the reach of an unfavorable judgment.—Kopp v. Gunther, 95 Cal. 63, 30 Pac. 301.

[n] A plain and acknowledged mistake of law is not beyond the reach of equity; and where all parties understood the law alike, all making the same mistake, and where the mistake operates to deprive one of the parties of a valuable right, such as that of redemption, and to give to the other party a material advantage not contemplated by either, a court of equity will adjust their rights as though the law relating thereto was in fact as the parties supposed it to be, if necessary to do justice between them.—Benson v. Bunting, 127 Cal. 532, 78 Am. St. Rep. 81, 59 Pac. 991.

Ignorance of the laws as a ground for relief: 10 Am. Dec. 323, note.

Ignorance of one's own rights, as a ground for relief: 55 Am. St. Rep. 494, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 73-75; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 35-42, §§ 15, 16.

§ 9. Fraud.

[a] Fraud in use of instrument is as much ground for interposition of equity as fraud in its creation.—Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116.

[b] Whether a party can go into equity to set aside a contract for fraudulent representation as to title, when he has been let into and enjoyed peaceably the possession, and when the vendor has executed a warranty deed and there is no charge of insolvency, query?—Fratt v. Fisk, 17 Cal. 380.

[c] If the title to property, has been acquired through fraud equity will grant relief by undoing what has been done and placing the title where it was before.—Gorham v. Gilson, 28 Cal. 479.

[d] It is the peculiar province of equity to strip off the disguises of fraud.—Perkins v. Center, 35 Cal. 721.

[e] No person can complain in equity of fraudulent practices of another, unless he has been injured by such practices.—Patterson v. Donner, 48 Cal. 369.

[f] Equity will relieve one who has been induced to alter his position to his injury by means of fraud.—Newman v. Smith, 77 Cal. 26, 18 Pac. 791.

[g] Equity will relieve one who was induced to marry another on fraudulent representation that he would convey certain land to her. Peek v. Peek, 77 Cal. 110, 11 Am. St. Rep. 244, 19 Pac. 227.

[h] Two persons may concur in an illegal act without being deemed to be in pari delicto; and, where but one of them is guilty of fraud, he cannot take advantage of his own wrong or avail himself of his own fraud as a defense against the other person.—Victoreno v. Corea, 92 Cal. 69, 28 Pac. 95.

[i] The relations between a husband and wife are confidential, and all transactions between them respecting property are subject to the same rules that control a trustee and cestui que trust. If one of the spouses uses the influence which is given by the marriage relation to obtain any advantage over the other spouse it is a fraud against such other, for which equity will grant appropriate relief.—Jackson v. Jackson, 94 Cal. 446, 29 Pac. 957.

[j] That a complaint in equity contains an allegation of fraud does not give the court jurisdiction where it has no jurisdiction of the subject matter.—Riverside County v. San Bernardino County, 134 Cal. 517, 66 Pac. 788.

[k] The jurisdiction of equity extends to all cases of fraud save those in which a judgment for damages affords adequate relief.—Montgomery v. McLaury, 143 Cal. 83, 76 Pac. 964.

[b] Bills quia timet are applied to prevent wrongs or anticipated mischief, not to redress wrongs done.—Archbishop v. Shipman, 69 Cal. 589, 11 Pac. 343.

[c] Where adequate and complete remedies exist at law or equity for any injuries which may happen in future, quia timet will not lie. Archbishop v. Shipman, 69 Cal. 593, 11 Pac. 343.

[a] In England, it is well settled by a long series of decisions that the comprehensive jurisdiction exercised by courts of chancery in setting aside instruments obtained by fraud does not extend to wills, and that those courts have no power to determine the validity of a will of either personal or real property.—State v. McGlynn, 20 Cal. 233, 81 Am Dec. 118.

[b] Courts of chancery in England, in their efforts to defeat fraudulent practices, have, in some cases, deprived parties of the benefit of the fraudulent will by decreeing that such parties should hold the property under their will in trust for the parties who would have been entitled to it if such will had not been probated, but in all such cases they have disclaimed any power to set aside the will or the probate.—State v. McGlynn, 20 Cal. 233, 81 Am. Dec. 118.

[c] Equity has no jurisdiction to confirm probate sales.—Hill v. Den, 54 Cal. 21.

[d] A proceeding to set aside administration cannot be said to be a suit in equity, where no summons was served on the administrator, or pleading filed by him.—Costa v. Superior Court of Santa Clara County, 137 Cal. 79, 69 Pac. 840.

§ 12. Equitable Estates and Interests in General.

[a] A purchaser of realty borrowed the purchase money from B, to whom a deed in form absolute was made by the seller, on agreement that when payment was made of the money loaned B was to convey the property to the purchaser. To discharge the indebtedness the purchaser obtained money from a loan company, on agreement that he would pay B, and receive from him the conveyance, and at the same time executed a mortgage to the loan company to secure the last loan. The loan company assigned an unpaid balance of its demand, with the mortgage, to the plaintiff, who sought a foreclosure, making C a party, to whom the purchaser, being indebted at the time of the purchase, had on account thereof promised to buy a lot for him and erect a building thereon, which was to become C's property. While such realty was in B's name, the purchaser pointed out to C one of the lots as the one on which he intended to erect such building, and C took possession, but there was no accounting between such purchaser and C, nor any price agreed on such lot. Held, that the transaction created no equitable title in C. enforceable in a court of equity, as against such purchaser.—Doe v. Culverwell, 35 Cal. 291.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 88, 89; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 75-78, §§ 46, 47.

§ 13. —— Enforcing Equitable Rights.

[a] In a proceeding in equity an equitable title is as good as a legal title, either for defense or recovery.—Ortman v. Dixon, 13 Cal. 33.

[b] Equitable title will control the legal title in an equitable proceeding.—Hill v. Den, 54 Cal. 19.

[c] An action to foreclose a lien is always within the jurisdiction of a court of equity.—Kreling v. Kreling, 118 Cal. 413, 50 Pac. 546.

§ 14. Penalties and Forfeitures.

[a] Forfeitures and denouncements are not to be favored by basing them upon language which does not plainly and unmistakably provide for them.—Belcher Con. G. M. Co. v. Deferrari, 62 Cal. 160.

[a] Where a note provides that it shall become due at the option of the holder on default in the payment of interest, equity will not relieve from the enforcement of the provision.—Whitcher v. Webb, 44 Cal. 127.

[b] In an action to compel a reconveyance of land on which plaintiff had entered for breach of a condition subsequent, that defendant (plaintiff's grantee) should maintain a lumber yard on the premises conveyed, for five years, the trial court found that the conveyance was made at a time of great excitement in the real estate market, and both plaintiff and defendant believed that large quantities of lumber would be required for building, as represented by plaintiff, but that there was little, if any, demand for lumber when defendant discontinued the lumber yard, and has not been any since. Held, that equity would not relieve defendant from the forfeiture, as the damage to plaintiff by the breach of the condition could not be ascertained, and it was immaterial whether or not the price paid by defendant for the land was its full value at the time of the conveyance.—Parsons v. Smilie, 97 Cal. 647, 32 Pac. 702.

[a] Equity will never enforce a penalty or forfeiture.—Keller v. Lewis, 53 Cal. 113; McCormick v. Rossi, 70 Cal. 474, 15 Pac. 35.

§ 17. Illegal Contracts, Combinations, and Transactions.

[a] Equity will not relieve against an executed illegal contract.—Miners' Ditch Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 544.

[b] A court of equity cannot enforce the performance of an act which is prohibited by law.—Martin v. Zellerbach, 38 Cal. 300, 49 Am. Dec. 365.

[c] Under Civil Code, section 1918, providing that parties may contract in writing for the payment of any rate of interest, equity will not relieve one who has contracted to pay interest largely in excess of the current rates, in the absence of accident, mistake, actual fraud, or undue influence.—Boyce v. Fisk, 110 Cal. 107, 42 Pac. 473.

[d] Defendant sold to plaintiff, his partner, his interest and good will in a manufacturing business for seventeen thousand five hundred dollars. Previous to such sale, plaintiff, unknown to defendant, had entered into an agreement with others in the same business, to effect, and afterwards did effect, a combination in said business, thereby enhancing the value of defendant's interest to twenty-five thousand dollars. Held that, as the combination was illegal, equity would not aid in distributing the profits thereof.—Meyers v. Merillion, 118 Cal. 352, 50 Pac. 662.

[a] Where a city lot is assessed only two dollars and fifty cents for a street improvement, and sold for nonpayment, and the owner could redeem from the sale by paying three dollars and ninety cents, the maxim, "De minimis non curat lex," applies, and a court of equity will not restrain the execution of a deed pursuant to such sale, if invalid.—Mietzsch v. See 16 Cyc. 124; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 142, 143, § 98.

[a] There is no principle of equity which would make person responsible for a wrong that he has neither done nor threatened to do.—Keyes v. Little York etc. Co., 53 Cal. 724.

[a] A court of chancery, having jurisdiction for one purpose, will retain it for all purposes and do complete justice as between the parties.—(Cal. 1855) Ord v. McKee, 5 Cal. 515.

[b] A suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage is a subject of equity jurisdiction; and, when the district court gains jurisdiction of the case for the purpose of foreclosure, it has the right to give full relief, and for this purpose to decree and execute a sale of the mortgaged premises.—Belloc v. Rogers, 9 Cal. 123.

[c] If A, for his own benefit and without the knowledge of B, who paid no consideration, has a conveyance of land made to B by a third person, a court of equity in dealing with the transaction at the instance of creditors of A, or those claiming under him, will treat the land as the property of A, and regard him as the real party in interest.—Quivey v. Baker, 37 Cal. 465.

[d] If all the parties in interest with sufficient pleadings are before a court of equity, equity can and will take hold of the entire case and give effect to their contracts legally made.—Cross v. Zellerbach, 63 Cal. 623, 643.

[e] In an action to have certain land adjudged to be the property of the estate of a decedent, brought against the widow and others as holders of the legal title, it is not an abuse of discretion for the court, after having determined the issue submitted to it, to refuse to take the entire administration away from the usual probate jurisdiction, and to proceed to settle the estate and close the administration.—Burton v. Burton, 79 Cal. 490, 21 Pac. 847.

[f] It is the duty of a court of equity to settle all matters of account which would affect parties in interest, though items accruing after commencement of suit are involved. Wise v. Walker, 81 Cal. 13, 20 Pac. 81, 22 Pac. 293.

[g] When equity court takes jurisdiction it will afford complete relief.—Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 395, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 121, 10 L. R. A. 627.

[h] When court of equity has once obtained jurisdiction it will do complete justice by deciding whole case.—Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 528, 24 Pac. 172, 25 Pac. 64.

[i] The rule that when a court of equity has jurisdiction, it will determine in one action all questions that may arise, and will not remit the party to another tribunal, applies only when the party seeking the relief has a standing in the court of equity upon a sufficient bill.—Behlow v. Fischer, 102 Cal. 208, 36 Pac. 509.

§ 21. —— Exercise of Jurisdiction Outside of Territorial Limits.

[a] Court of equity may compel reconveyance of property outside of state when it has jurisdiction of person.—McGee v. Sweeney, 84 Cal. 100, 23 Pac. 1117.

§ 22. —— Denial of Equitable Relief Demanded.

[a] Where a bill was filed by one against his partner and others to take an account of partnership accounts then running, and to establish his rights in certain lands, as to all of which rights he had an effectual remedy at law, except those arising out of the partnership, the allegations as to that standing admitted by defendant's default, the bill should be dismissed as to all but the defendant partner, and as to him proceeded on for an accounting.—Brush v. Maydwell, 14 Cal. 208.

LOSS OF LEGAL REMEDY, § 26.
EXCLUSIVE OR CONCURRENT JURISDICTION, § 27.
MULTIPLICITY OF SUITS, § 28.
WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS, § 29.

§ 23. Existence of Legal Remedy as a Bar to Equitable Relief.

[a] To entitle plaintiff to equitable interposition of court he must show a proper case, and one in which he has no adequate remedy at law.—De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 463, 56 Am. Dec. 352.

[b] Legal remedy must be exhausted before equity will grant relief.—Kelley v. Kriess, 68 Cal. 216, 9 Pac. 129.

[c] Rule under which a court of equity declines to interfere until after application for relief has been made to court in which the judgment was rendered has no application when relief has been sought and denied in that court; and the denial of that court to grant that relief gives to a court of equity the same authority to interfere as if other court was powerless to render aid.—Merriman v. Walton, 105 Cal. 403, 45 Am. St. Rep. 50, 38 Pac. 1108.

[d] An action for services by plaintiff as a member of the county board of education, where the amount claimed is not within the jurisdiction of the superior court, presents no equitable issues bringing it within the general jurisdiction of the court "in all cases in equity."—Wright v. Del Norte County, 115 Cal. 464, 47 Pac. 258.

[d] Denial of motion to recall execution in action of claim and delivery gives court of equity same authority to interfere as if court in that action was powerless to render aid.—Eppinger v. Scott, 130 Cal. 275, 62 Pac. 460.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 24. —— Necessity that Legal Remedy be Adequate.

[a] Before case can be considered beyond reach of equity it must be made to appear that the legal remedy would be adequate and complete.—Hager v. Schindler, 29 Cal. 47; Hills v. Sherwood, 48 Cal. 386.

[b] Equity has jurisdiction of action brought to set aside deed alleged to have been fraudulently executed many years before the commencement of the action, and to charge the grantees therein as trustees of the land conveyed, notwithstanding the complaint alleges that the deed was executed without consideration. In such a case the remedy by ejectment is not adequate.—Duff v. Duff, 71 Cal. 513, 12 Pac. 570.

See 16 Cyc. 41-59; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 259-290, §§ 151-163.

§ 25. —— Effect in General.

[a] To entitle the plaintiff to subject the assets of an absent debtor to the payment of his claim he must show that he is without a remedy at law.—Lupton v. Lupton, 3 Cal. 120.

[b] A bill in chancery, in the nature of a "bill of peace," and praying for a discovery against joint and several trespassers on real estate, will not lie in favor of a plaintiff out of possession, claiming title to the land. Ritchie v. Dorland, 6 Cal. 33.

[c] A party who has his remedy provided by law, but does not avail himself thereof, and fails to show wherein he is injured, is not entitled to relief in a court of chancery. Merrill v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 41.

[d] Where a clerk of the district court improperly refuses to issue execution on a judgment rendered in that court, on the ground that it has been attached at the suit of another party, a bill cannot be sustained to release the attachment and compel him to issue the execution, as the injured party has a remedy at law by an action on the clerk's official bond.—Miller v. Sanderson, 10 Cal. 489.

[e] Equity will not exercise jurisdiction to compel surrender and cancellation of promissory note where the party has a clear remedy at law.—Lewis v. Tobias, 10 Cal. 574.

[f] Equity will not entertain jurisdiction of a suit merely on the ground that the demand may be unconscientious and that injustice may have been done, provided it was competent for the party to have placed the matter before the court in the original action, either upon issue joined or upon motion to set aside the verdict or judgment.—Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 440.

[g] Where adequate damages can be had and are susceptible of an exact admeasurement, as in an action on a bond of indemnity to a sheriff, equity will not interfere.—White v. Fratt, 13 Cal. 521.

[h] Equity will not entertain jurisdiction where there is an adequate remedy at law. Chipman v. Bowman, 14 Cal. 157; Ketchum v. Crippen, 37 Cal. 223.

[i] Upon a bill to set aside a mechanic's lien sale on the ground of fraud, it is not open to the plaintiff to object that the deed insufficiently describes the premises. The remedy on this point is by ejectment.—Gamble v. Voll, 15 Cal. 507.

[j] Equity will not settle disputed boundary, if remedy at law is adequate.—Wetherbee v. Dunne, 36 Cal. 249.

[k] Where party to equitable action has plain and speedy remedy by motion in the action he cannot maintain a separate suit in equity to obtain the desired relief.—Ketchum v. Crippen, 37 Cal. 223.

[l] Where two persons agreed to form a partnership for doing certain work before any contract for doing the work was obtained, and the partnership was never launched, and one of the parties carries on the work alone, the only remedy of the one excluded is an action at law for breach of contract.—(1872) Powell v. Maguire, 43 Cal. 11; (1892) Thomason v. De Greayer, 31 Pac. 567.

[m] Where the complaint in action to compel the defendant to make a conveyance of real estate alleges facts which show that the plaintiff has the legal title already, upon which he may recover in ejectment, the bill contains no equity.—Dalton v. Hamilton, 50 Cal. 422.

[n] The action of an assignee in insolvency in excluding a claim from the statement of claims was approved by the insolvency court. The owner of the claim thus excluded sought by a proceeding in equity the interposition of the superior court. Held, that no ground for such interposition was shown, and that relief should have been sought by appeal.—Julien v. Riley, 61 Cal. 242.

[o] Equity may compel assignee in insolvency to perform his trust and account, notwithstanding remedy under insolvent law. Sanderson v. McIntosh, 65 Cal. 36, 2 Pac. 728.

[p] When defendant has no equity, action will not be dismissed because plaintiff's legal remedy is adequate.—People v. Center, 66 Cal. 552, 5 Pac. 263, 6 Pac. 481.

[r] Equity will not interfere where there is a plain, speedy and adequate legal remedy. Heller v. Dyerville Mfg. Co., 116 Cal. 135, 47 Pac. 1016.

[s] One who alleges that he has a perfect title to land under a Mexican grant, not barred by the statute of limitations, may maintain a legal action for the possession, and there is no necessity for the interference of a court of equity to enable him to assert his rights.—Ohm v. City and County of San Francisco, 25 Pac. 155.

§ 26. Loss of Legal Remedy.

[a] If the party moving for a new trial in an action at law loses the same through his own blunders and laches, without any fraud, mistake, surprise, or excusable neglect existing, equity will not relieve him.—Boston v. Haynes, 33 Cal. 31.

§ 27. Exclusive or Concurrent Jurisdiction.

[a] Equity has concurrent jurisdiction with courts of law in cases of fraud, accident or confidence.—People v. Houghtaling, 7 Cal. 348.

[b] Where an administrator took possession of moneys held by his intestate as an officer in trust for the state, and refused to give them up, a bill in equity lies as in case of a suit against a trustee de son tort, though an action at law would also lie for money had and received.—People v. Houghtaling, 7 Cal. 348.

[c] Jurisdiction of probate court over testamentary and probate matters is not exclusive. Most of its general powers belong peculiarly and originally to the court of chancery, which still retains its jurisdiction. Deck v. Gerke, 12 Cal. 433, 73 Am. Dec. 555.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 33; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 244-252, §§ 141-145.

§ 28. Multiplicity of Suits.

[a] A court of equity will not permit litigation by piecemeal. The whole subject matter and all the parties should be before it, and their respective claims determined once and forever.—Wilson v. Lassen, 5 Cal. 114.

[b] Where question of boundary affects large number of persons, and by proceeding in equity to determine the controversy a multiplicity of actions at law will be prevented, the additional circumstance that "the boundaries have become confused by lapse of time, accident, or mistake," is all that is required to give a court of equity jurisdiction of the case.—Beatty v. Dixon, 56 Cal. 619.

[c] Where Civil Code, section 322, gives a joint and several action at law against stockholders for their proportionate share of the corporate debt, but provides that the judgment must be several, a suit to enforce contribution by stockholders on a company's note cannot be maintained in equity under the guise of avoiding a multiplicity of suits. Myers v. Sierra Val. Stock etc. Assn., 122 Cal. 669, 55 Pac. 689.

[d] Equity abhors a multiplicity of suits, and will not permit litigation by piecemeal. A court of equity will administer complete relief and adjust the case in all of its branches, and determine the whole controversy, and will give effect to contracts legally made between the parties in interest, who with sufficient pleadings are before it. Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67, 58 Pac. 376.

See 6 Cyc. 288; 16 Cyc. 60-64; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 293-304, §§ 167-171.

[a] Where a bill in equity shows on its face that plaintiff is not entitled to relief, the defect may be taken advantage of in the appellate court, even though no demurrer be filed.—White v. Fratt, 13 Cal. 521.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 127, 128; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 305-315, §§ 173-176.

C. PRINCIPLES AND MAXIMS OF EQUITY.

EQUITY PERMITS NO RIGHT TO BE WITHOUT A REMEDY, § 30.
EQUITY REGARDS SUBSTANCE RATHER THAN FORM, § 31.
EQUITY REGARDS THAT AS DONE WHICH OUGHT TO HAVE BEEN DONE, § 32.
EQUALITY IS EQUITY, § 33.
WHERE EQUITIES ARE EQUAL, THE FIRST IN TIME MUST PREVAIL, § 34.
WHEN EQUITIES ARE EQUAL THE LAW WILL PREVAIL, § 35.
WHERE EQUITY IS EQUAL THE POSITION OF DEFENDANT IS BETTER, § 36.
WHERE EQUITIES ARE EQUAL THE POSITION OF THE PERSON IN POSSESSION IS THE BETTER, § 37.
WHAT CONSTITUTES EQUAL EQUITIES, § 38.
SUPERIOR EQUITY MUST PREVAIL, § 39.
EQUITY FOLLOWS THE LAW, § 40.
EQUITY ACTS IN PERSONAM NOT IN REM, § 41.
EQUITY AIDS THE VIGILANT, NOT THOSE WHO SLEEP ON THEIR RIGHTS, § 42.
HE WHO COMES INTO EQUITY MUST COME WITH CLEAN HANDS, § 43.
HE WHO SEEKS EQUITY MUST DO EQUITY, § 44.
GOLDEN RULE AS PRINCIPLE OF EQUITY, § 45.
DOCTRINE OF RELATION, § 46.
INNOCENT PARTY MOST AT FAULT MUST SUFFER, § 47.
REFUSAL TO AID WRONGDOER, § 48.
—— PARTIES IN PARI DELICTO, § 49.

§ 30. Equity Permits no Right to be Without a Remedy.

[a] A court of equity cannot because of individual hardship reject from its consideration principles and rules upon which the right to relief has always been based, and the enforcement of moral obligations merely is not within the domain of equity or law.—Gard v. Gard, 108 Cal. 19, 40 Pac. 1059.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 133; 19 Cent. Dig., col. 316, § 177.

§ 31. Equity Regards Substance Rather than Form.

[a] Equity looks through the form to the substance.—Chater v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 19 Cal. 237; Miners' Ditch Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 608; Johnston v. San Francisco Savings Union, 75 Cal. 142, 16 Pac. 753; Tolman v. Smith, 85 Cal. 288, 24 Pac. 743.

[f] Equity looks to intent and purpose rather than form. Instance.—Hall v. Cayot, 141 Cal. 19, 74 Pac. 299.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 134; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 316, 317, § 178.

§ 32. Equity Regards that as Done Which Ought to have been Done.

[a] Equity looks upon that as done which ought to have been done.—Daggett v. Rankin, 31 Cal. 321.

[b] Equity will treat as done that which the parties agreed to have done, and which ought to have been done.—Remington v. Higgins, 54 Cal. 620.

[c] Equity gives that which ought to have been done force and effect as if done.—Ward v. Waterman, 85 Cal. 506, 24 Pac. 930; Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 527, 24 Pac. 172, 25 Pac. 64; Flickinger v. Shaw, 87 Cal. 133, 22 Am. St. Rep. 234, 25 Pac. 268; Peers v. McLaughlin, 88 Cal. 298, 22 Am. St. Rep. 306, 26 Pac. 119.

[d] Equity looks upon things agreed to be done as actually performed in favor of him to whom and against him from whom the performance is due, and will treat the subject matter as to collateral consequences and incidents in the same manner as if the final acts contemplated by the parties had been executed exactly as they ought to have been. Beverly v. Blackwood, 102 Cal. 83, 36 Pac. 378.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 135; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 317, 318, § 179.

§ 33. Equality is Equity.

[a] "Equality is equity."—Crowell v. Gilmore, 18 Cal. 370; Chipman v. Morrill, 31 Cal. 135.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 137; 19 Cent. Dig., col. 318, § 180.

§ 34. Where Equities are Equal the First in Time Must Prevail.

[a] The maxim, "Qui prior est tempore, potior est jure," only applies where the equities are equal; otherwise, preference is given to the superior equity.—Salter v. Baker, 54 Cal. 140.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 139; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 318-320, § 181.

§ 35. When Equities are Equal the Law will Prevail.

[a] When equities are equal the law will prevail.—Maina v. Elliott, 51 Cal. 11; Newhall v. C. P. R. R. Co., 51 Cal. 350.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 138; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 320-322, § 182.

[a] "Where equity is equal, the position of defendant is better."—State v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 15 Cal. 336.

[a] When two persons have been equally innocent, and equally diligent, the equity is equal.—Maina v. Elliott, 51 Cal. 11.

[a] Equity follows the law.—Billings v. Hall, 7 Cal. 8.

[b] It is well settled that in an action at law for the conversion or nondelivery of personal property agreed to be delivered, interest may be awarded by way of damages for a breach of the contract; and there are even more cogent reasons why equity should adopt the same rule in the settlement of a long-standing account.—Pujol v. McKinlay, 42 Cal. 559.

[c] Equity follows law and rules as the law rules.—Hannan v. McNickle, 82 Cal. 127, 23 Pac. 271.

[d] Equity will not allow that to be done indirectly which law or its policy forbids to be done directly.—Jackson v. Torrence, 83 Cal. 537, 23 Pac. 695.

[e] Equity is bound by the rules of law, and cannot controvert the law, nor set aside the provisions of a trust deed contrary to the will of the trustee, or contrary to his intentions as evidenced by his instructions.—Floyd v. Davis, 98 Cal. 591, 33 Pac. 746.

and in regard to duty he owes to others. Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 518, 24 Pac. 172; 25 Pac. 64.

[b] Equity generally operates by its decree in personam; and if the court has jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, the decree may run against him, though it may collaterally act in rem, and affect property out of the jurisdiction of the court.—Peninsular T. & F. Co. v. Pacific Steam W. Co., 123 Cal. 689, 56 Pac. 604.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 134; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 323, 324, § 148.

[a] Equity aids only the vigilant.—Norris v. Denton, 2 Cal. 378.

[c] Equity aids vigilant applied.—Jones v. Police Commissioners, 141 Cal. 97, 74 Pac. 696.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 140.

§ 43. He Who Comes into Equity must Come with Clean Hands.

[a] He who seeks equity must show that he is not in fault.—Fowler v. Pierce, 2 Cal. 173.

[b] Plaintiffs must come into court of chancery with clean hands; otherwise they are not entitled to relief.—Gunter v. Laffan, 7 Cal. 588.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Relief of particeps criminis in equity: 7 Am. St. Rep. 587, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 144-148; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 324-329, §§ 185-187.

§ 44. He Who Seeks Equity must do Equity.

[a] "He who seeks equity must do equity." Weber v. City of San Francisco, 1 Cal. 455.

[b] Those who seek equity should offer to do equity.—Bell v. Walsh, 7 Cal. 84; Burham v. San Francisco Fuse Mfg. Co., 76 Cal. 28, 17 Pac. 939.

[d] A plaintiff cannot come into a court of equity, and ask for a decree debarring the defendant from asserting a claim under an instrument executed by the former, without restoring the consideration received by him. Chandler v. Chandler, 55 Cal. 267.

[e] One coming into equity asking for the interference of equity must not only show an equitable right to relief, but he must offer to do equity.—Aurrecoechea v. Sinclair, 60 Cal. 532, 545.

[f] In imposing a condition to do equity court must consider all circumstances in order to arrive at the justice of the case.—Johnston v. San Francisco Savings Union, 75 Cal. 146, 16 Pac. 753.

[g] Who seeks equity must do equity, applied.—Johnston v. San Francisco Savings Union, 75 Cal. 143, 16 Pac. 753; Benson v. Shotwell, 87 Cal. 60, 25 Pac. 249.

[i] The maxim of equity jurisprudence, that he who seeks equity must do equity, only applies when the relief sought by the plaintiff and the right demanded by the defendant grow out of the same transaction, and does not apply where the demand of the defendant is based upon a contract separate and distinct from that which forms the subject of the action.—Mahoney v. Bostwick, 96 Cal. 53, 30 Pac. 1020.

[j] A plaintiff seeking equity must do equity, and a complaint in equity which does not offer to do equity is demurrable.—Buena Vista Fruit etc. Co. v. Tuohy, 107 Cal. 243, 40 Pac. 386; Peshine v. Ord, 119 Cal. 314, 51 Pac. 536, 63 Pac. 131.

[l] An action to quiet title to land under Code of Civil Procedure, section 738, authorizing an action against any person claiming an interest in land adverse to plaintiff to determine such adverse claim, is not the same as the equity suit to remove a cloud on title, and hence plaintiff was not required in such action, in which a city appeared and alleged a void tax levy as a lien on the land, to pay such taxes as a condition to relief on the principle that he who seeks equity must do equity.—Dranga v. Rowe, 127 Cal. 506, 59 Pac. 944.

[m] Sale under trust deed will not be enjoined when it appears by complainant's own showing that no sale would be made if he should pay what he admits to be due and what he avers his ability and willingness to pay. Meetz v. Mohr, 141 Cal. 673, 75 Pac. 298.

[n] Who seeks equity must do equity. Instance.—Meetz v. Mohr, 141 Cal. 673, 75 Pac. 298.

See 16 Cyc. 140-143; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 329-336, §§ 188-190.

§ 45. Golden Rule as Principle of Equity.

[a] Golden rule is a principle of equity to be enforced as fully as possible.—Webster v. King, 33 Cal. 352.

[a] Doctrine of relation is a fiction of the law adopted for purpose of justice and will not be given effect when it would work injustice.—Hawkins v. Harlan, 68 Cal. 238, 9 Pac. 108.

§ 47. Innocent Party Most at Fault Must Suffer.

[a] When one of two innocent parties must suffer it must be he who trusted most, or he whose misplaced confidence enabled the wrong to be committed.—Ruiz v. Norton, 4 Cal. 355.

[b] When one of two innocent parties must suffer loss by fraudulent act of third, he who enables such third party to occasion the loss must bear it.—Poorman v. Mills, 39 Cal. 345, 2 Am. Rep. 451.

[c] When one by carelessness and undue confidence has enabled another to obtain money of innocent third person, he must answer for loss.—Bedell v. Herring, 77 Cal. 573 11 Am. St. Rep. 307-n, 20 Pac. 129.

[d] Party affording agent opportunity to defraud principal and aiding him in doing so is party most at fault.—Taft v. Presidio etc. R. R. Co., 84 Cal. 140, 18 Am. St. Rep. 166, 24 Pac. 436.

[e] Where one of two innocent persons must suffer by the act of a third, he by whose negligence it happened must be the sufferer.—Blaisdell v. Leach, 101 Cal. 405, 40 Am. St. Rep. 65, 35 Pac. 1019.

[f] Innocent party most at fault must suffer, has no application where loss is result of criminal act of third person. It does not then fall on one making act possible.—Walsh v. Hunt, 120 Cal. 52, 53, 52 Pac. 115.

[g] The maxim that where one of two innocent parties must suffer loss, it is to be borne by the one whose fault or neglect occasioned the loss, cannot apply where no loss was occasioned to the other party by such fault or neglect.—Macdonald v. Cool, 134 Cal. 502, 66 Pac. 727.

[h] When one of two innocent persons must suffer by the act of a third, he by whose negligence it happened must be the sufferer.—Ballard v. Nye, 69 Pac. 481.

[b] It may be stated, as a general proposition, that an act which the law prohibits to be done is in so far infirm that a court of equity will not lend its aid to enforce its performance. To grant any relief, the court must first decide that the transaction on which it is claimed was lawful and valid.—Martin v. Zellerbach, 38 Cal. 300, 99 Am. Dec. 365.

[c] Equity will leave parties to fraudulent transactions where it finds them.—Mitchell v. Cline, 84 Cal. 415, 24 Pac. 164.

[d] Equity will not stoop to investigate and enforce agreements relating to division of land among conspirators who have obtained it from government by fraud.—Mitchell v. Cline, 84 Cal. 415, 24 Pac. 164.

§ 49. —— Parties in Pari Delicto.

[a] The members of an association, who have continued for years to pay to their chosen agents money to be expended in a specified way, cannot, after the failure of the scheme, sue their chosen agents in an action for money had and received to recover back the sums so paid. They are in pari delicto, and must share the loss.—Meyer v. Bishop, 129 Cal. 204, 61 Pac. 919.

Laches as bar to foreclosure suit. See Mortgages, § 206.

§ 50. Nature and Elements, in General.

[a] The principal factors in determining the question of laches are acquiescence and lapse of time, but other circumstances are also material, such as that a change in the value or character of the property has taken place. Chapman v. Bank of California, 97 Cal. 155, 31 Pac. 896.

[b] Refusal to grant relief to plaintiff guilty of laches is not based upon presumption of payment, nor upon analogy to the statute of limitations, but upon considerations of public policy, and the difficulty of doing entire justice between the parties in consequence of the unreasonable delay.—Chapman v. Bank of California, 97 Cal. 155, 31 Pac. 896.

[b] The defense of laches differs from that of limitation, in that, in order to bar a remedy because of laches, there must appear, in addition to mere lapse of time, some circumstances from which the defendant or some other person may be prejudiced, or there must have been such lapse of time that it may reasonably be supposed that such prejudice will result if the remedy is allowed.—Cahill v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 145 Cal. 42, 78 Pac. 467.

[c] Equity will refuse to entertain suit brought after unreasonable delay, regardless of the question whether there has been a plea of the statute of limitations.—Chapman v. Bank of California, 97 Cal. 155, 31 Pac. 896.

[d] Plaintiff who has slept upon his rights so long that notes which were surrendered to him upon settlement and discharge of an express trust have become barred by the statute of limitations, and who intimated no dissatisfaction with the settlement for nearly eight years, and took no steps for rescission of it during that period, has no equity, but his claim is stale, and the court will not enforce it.—Chapman v. Bank of California, 97 Cal. 155, 31 Pac. 896.

§ 52. —— What Constitutes Unreasonable Delay.

[a] A stale and uncertain demand, as to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance, nineteen years old, ought not to be allowed in equity.—Dominguez v. Dominguez, 7 Cal. 424.

[b] A delay of less than six months after discovering the fraud held not to be such laches as to deprive one of the right to rescind the contract therefor.—Marston v. Simpson, 54 Cal. 189.

[c] One whose consent to execute a contract has been obtained through fraud or undue influence may rescind the contract, but he must do it promptly on discovering the facts which entitle him to rescind. In this case, where a trust deed by a married woman was executed on May 23, 1884, and the plaintiff, having full knowledge of the facts, did not commence the action to set aside the deed on the ground of undue influence or fraud until October 10, 1885, and the complaint then failed to allege any reason for such delay, held, that the delay was unreasonable, and fatal to the action.—Burke v. Levy, 70 Cal. 250, 11 Pac. 643.

[d] Where, in a suit for an accounting brought by the administrator of a deceased partner, appointed twenty-five years after his decease, against the executors of the surviving partner, also deceased, the complaint shows that the surviving partner continued in the individual possession of all the real and personal property of the partnership, and managed and disposed of the same as he saw fit, for twenty-five years after his partner's decease, and fails to allege that the heirs of plaintiff's decedent had not knowledge of the proceedings of defendant's decedent, or that there was any impediment to their action, a demurrer to the complaint will be sustained on the ground of staleness.—Bell v. Hudson, 73 Cal. 285, 2 Am. St. Rep. 791, 14 Pac. 791.

[f] In an action brought in March, 1889, for an accounting, it appeared that in October, 1875, plaintiff, being indebted to a bank, executed a deed of lands by a conveyance absolute in form, but as security for the indebtedness; that in August, 1876, this indebtedness and the conveyances were assigned to defendant; that in September, 1876, plaintiff, being largely indebted to defendant, executed several notes to the amount of his indebtedness, payable to one F, who was also indebted to defendant, and which were by F indorsed to defendant; that at the same time F executed several notes to the amount of his indebtedness, which notes were payable to the plaintiff, and were by him indorsed to defendant; that in November, 1876, the defendant executed to plaintiff and F an instrument designed as a "deed of trust" in which defendant declared that it held all the land assigned it by the bank as security for these notes; that in September, 1879, plaintiff conveyed the lands in fee simple in payment of his indebtedness to defendant, who canceled the debt, and surrendered to him his promissory notes as well as those of F. Held, that plaintiff's right of action, if any, was barred by his laches.—Chapman v. Bank of California, 97 Cal. 155, 31 Pac. 896.

[g] Where plaintiff purchased and caused to be conveyed to the infant son of the defendant a certain lot of land upon a parol agreement, that if the child should die unmarried and without issue before he arrived at age, the defendant, after distribution of the property to him as heir, would, on demand of plaintiff, immediately convey the same to plaintiff, and the child died when a little over five years of age, but no demand was made by plaintiff for a conveyance for about twenty-four years after the death of the child, an action brought one year after such demand, to enforce the trust, is barred by the laches of the plaintiff.—Seculovich v. Morton, 101 Cal. 673, 40 Am. St. Rep. 106, 36 Pac. 387.

edy to invoke the authority of the court, and, upon service of process in the manner prescribed by the statute, could have procured the appointment of the commissioner to convey the property to him.—Seculovich v. Morton, 101 Cal. 673, 40 Am. St. Rep. 106, 36 Pac. 387.

[i] Where a firm, without excuse, delays for more than seven years to take any steps to set aside an order suspending it from membership privileges in a produce exchange, a finding that its rights to equitable relief have been barred by its laches will not be disturbed.—Meherin v. San Francisco Produce Exchange, 117 Cal. 215, 48 Pac. 1074.

[j] An unexplained delay of forty days after the filing of amended articles of incorporation of a water company, before a suit by stockholders to enjoin the issue of additional stock in accordance therewith, is not laches per se.—McDermont v. Anaheim Union Water Co., 124 Cal. 112, 56 Pac. 779.

[k] Mere lapse of time short of that prescribed by the statute of limitations held insufficient to convict a plaintiff of laches in the absence of hardship or injustice to the other party.—Cook v. Ceas, 147 Cal. 614, 82 Pac. 370.

[l] Equity will not entertain a cause of action seeking relief from an alleged fraud, where complainants could have informed themselves of the facts by the exercise of reasonable diligence, but delayed bringing suit for over 10 years, and until after the death of all the participants in the transactions.—Burling v. Newlands, 39 Pac. 49.

[a] The fact that the heirs of a decedent omit for many years to assert their claim to the rents, issues, and profits of property, of which the administrator of the estate had control, will not render them guilty of laches so as to estop them from contesting the final account of the administrator, for which he seeks judicial sanction, or preclude them from seeking to charge him with the rents and profits in such account.—Estate of Misamore, 90 Cal. 169, 27 Pac. 68.

[b] Mere lapse of time less than statutory period of limitation will not bar action for equitable relief, unless the delay, under the circumstances, has been such as to justify the presumption that the defendant may have been prejudiced thereby. The bar of an equitable remedy in such cases is not imposed upon the plaintiff as a penalty for his negligence, but is intended merely to protect the defendant from such consequences of the delay as may be prejudicial to his rights.—Ex-Mission Land etc. Co. v. Flash, 97 Cal. 610, 32 Pac. 600.

§ 55. —— Prejudice to Defendant or Third Persons.

[a] A stockholder who suffers his stock to be sold for nonpayment of an assessment thereon, and who afterward refuses to redeem because he does not think it is worth the expense, will not be allowed afterward, when the stock has reached a considerable value through the exertions of others, to maintain an equitable proceeding to set aside the assessment sale, and redeem his stock.—(1885) Sayre v. Citizens' Gaslight etc. Co., 69 Cal. 207, 7 Pac. 437, 10 Pac. 408.

[b] A decree of foreclosure was rendered against a corporation April 5th, the stockholders first obtained notice of fraud June 5th, and an action to set aside the decree was begun in December. Held, that, as defendants were in control of the corporation till the last of September, and the delay in beginning the action had not prejudiced defendants, plaintiff's right of action was not barred.—Ex-Mission Land etc. Co. v. Flash, 97 Cal. 610, 32 Pac. 600.

[c] Delay for a time less than the period of limitation does not amount to laches, unless it occasions, or may be presumed to occasion, prejudice to the other party.—Cohen v. Cohen (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 267.

§ 56. Knowledge of Facts.

[a] An application to have a sale in mass of distinct parcels of real estate, at a price greatly below the actual value, set aside, held to come too late, made in the first instance three years after the sale, and by a cross-complaint in ejectment brought by the successor of the purchaser. The judgment debtor's knowledge of the judgment, execution, and advertisement was equivalent to a knowledge of the sale.—Vigoureux v. Murphy, 54 Cal. 346.

[b] In a decree for partition there was nothing to show that the referees had made a mistake as to the description of the land, and defendants therein relied upon the representations made to them by the referees, and the attorney for plaintiffs, and by surveyors familiar with the land that the survey adopted by the referees was correct. Within a year after entry of the decree, defendants suspected that a mistake had been made, and employed counsel to ascertain the correctness of the survey adopted, and to prosecute an action to set aside the decree in partition. Held, that defendants were not guilty of laches.—Sullivan v. Lumsden, 118 Cal. 664, 50 Pac. 777.

[a] Delay, laches and acquiescence defined and distinguished.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 269, 270, 10 Pac. 674.

§ 59. Excuses in General.

[a] Where a beneficiary did not commence suit to enforce a trust for two years after her trustee's death, eight years after marriage, sixteen years after attaining her majority, and nineteen years after the execution of a deed conveying the land in dispute to the trustee, the delay will not be considered laches, when it appears that she lived with her trustee most of the time, and that the defendants have expended nothing upon the lands.—Butler v. Hyland, 89 Cal. 575, 26 Pac. 1108.

§ 60. —— Recognition of Right by Adverse Party.

[a] Where a trustee holding certain shares of corporate stock has acknowledged his trust from time to time, though failing to account for dividends on the stock, it was not laches for the beneficiary to refrain from taking an action to enforce an accounting under the trust till over two years after the death of the trustee.—Hovey v. Bradbury, 112 Cal. 620, 44 Pac. 1077.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 174; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 433-435, § 231.

§ 61. —— Possession or Control of Property.

[a] A cestui que trust, owning the entire beneficial interest in land, is not guilty of laches in not asserting his rights against the holder of the legal title out of possession.—Barroilhet v. Anspacher, 68 Cal. 116, 8 Pac. 804.

[b] Plaintiff had owned the beneficial interest in property, and had been in possession thereof since 1879, and was in possession in 1883, when she brought action to have defendants, who held the naked legal title, declared trustees for her. Held, that the plaintiff was not guilty of laches in asserting her rights.—Mallagh v. Mallagh, 16 Pac. 535.

§ 62. —— Fraud, Concealment, or Other Act of Adverse Party.

[a] Plaintiff, in an action for divorce, alleged in her complaint that there was no common property, and the decree made no reference to any. For sixteen months prior thereto she had not lived with her husband. Three years and a half later, and after his death, she brought this action against his estate to recover her share of the community property, alleging that she was ignorant of the law, and had always relied upon her husband's statements, and that he had "systematically and persistently, during all the time of their residence in California, continuously represented, declared, and asserted to plaintiff that the property he owned, and had acquired since said marriage, was his sole and separate property." Held, that her right to relief, if any, was barred by her negligence and laches.—Champion v. Woods, 79 Cal. 17, 21 Pac. 534.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 63. Ignorance of Facts.

[a] A boarding-house keeper falsely represented to a prospective lessee from her of the premises, and purchaser of the furniture, that she had been and was still doing a fine business in the house, and that the furniture, all of which he did not examine, had cost her much more than the price she asked for it. The purchaser closed the contract, and it was six months after entering into possession before he found out that the representations were false. He then rescinded the contract of purchase, and offered to put her in statu quo, and upon her refusal brought suit. Held, that he was not guilty of laches.—Hart v. Kimball, 72 Cal. 283, 13 Pac. 852.

[b] A complaint for relief on the ground of fraud stated that plaintiff's ancestor had executed a power of attorney to defendants' ancestor, empowering him to sell for him certain realty; that soon thereafter he left the state, and never returned, and during the next ten years defendants' ancestor secretly, without consideration, and without notice to plaintiff's ancestor, conveyed to defendants (who were conversant with the fraud) the property in question; and that shortly after the death of plaintiff's ancestor, who devised all his property to plaintiff, she was first informed of the fraudulent conveyances. Held, that the complaint showed a good cause of action for concealed fraud, not barred by laches or lapse of time.—Duff v. Duff, 87 Cal. 104, 23 Pac. 874.

[c] Laches is not imputable to a beneficiary when he has no notice or knowledge of facts putting him upon notice of a repudiation of the trust; nor when there is no word or act or omission on his part which has given the trustee the right to suppose that the beneficiary had surrendered his ownership, or led him to change his position, or imposed upon him any injustice; nor can it be invoked to aid a faithless trustee in consummating a wrong, nor as a check upon the right of a person to impose confidence and trust in another.—Hovey v. Bradbury, 112 Cal. 620, 44 Pac. 1077.

in ignorance of fraud.—Tynan v. Kerns, 119 Cal. 451, 51 Pac. 693.

[a] The right of a plaintiff to invoke a court of equity for relief against fraud, after the expiration of three years from the time when the fraud was committed, is an exception to the statute, which must be affirmatively pleaded, and the plaintiff must bring himself within the terms of the exception, and state the facts showing that he is within those terms.—Lady Washington Con. Co. v. Wood, 113 Cal. 482, 45 Pac. 809.

§ 65. Laches of Plaintiff as Concluding Defendant.

[a] When plaintiff is guilty of laches, he cannot conclude the defendant therewith.—Flint v. Lyon, 4 Cal. 21.

§ 66. To What Claims a Bar.

[a] Plaintiff brought suit for possession of realty and to quiet title, alleging the invalidity of certain judgments annulling a certificate of purchase from the state. Held that, if the issue was one of law, the question of laches could not arise, as defendant must rely upon the statute of limitations.—Hyde v. Redding, 74 Cal. 493, 16 Pac. 380.

§ 67. Following Statute of Limitations.

[a] Courts of equity generally follow the analogy of the law in cases where statutes of limitation are invoked, one of the defenses peculiar to equity being the lapse of time or staleness of the demand. (Per Murray, C. J.) Dominguez v. Dominguez, 7 Cal. 424.

[b] Statute of limitations prescribed in section 343, Code of Civil Procedure, applies to suits in equity.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 267, 10 Pac. 674.

[c] Equity's power to entertain or refuse to entertain cause is exercised independent of statute of limitations.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 268, 10 Pac. 674.

[d] Equity will sometimes refuse relief before statute of limitations has run.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 270, 10 Pac. 674.

[e] In action to recover possession of land, where the plaintiff asserts no equitable rights, the statute of limitations, and not the doctrine of laches, generally furnishes the rule by which to determine whether the delay to assert the right is fatal to the action.—Anzar v. Miller, 90 Cal. 342, 27 Pac. 299.

[f] Entirely independent of statutory limitation periods, equity will not enforce stale demands.—Kleinclaus v. Dutard, 147 Cal. 245, 81 Pac. 516.

§ 69. —— Nature and Extent of Interest.

[a] If a debtor assigns his property to trustees to be by them sold, and the proceeds divided pro rata among creditors, one creditor cannot, after the property has been converted into money, maintain a bill against the trustees for an accounting and for his pro rata share, without making the other creditors parties and making the assignor defendant.—McPherson v. Parker, 30 Cal. 455, 89 Am. Dec. 129.

§ 70. —— Parties Indispensable to Final Determination.

[a] Equity requires all to be made parties whose presence is necessary for a final end of litigation.—Wilson & Wilson v. Lassen, 5 Cal. 114.

[b] Necessary parties are those without whom no decree can be made determining principal issues.—Tregear v. Etiwanda Water Co., 76 Cal. 541, 9 Am. St. Rep. 245, 18 Pac. 658.

and distribution of its effects; the whole of neither class of stockholders being made parties. Held, that the stockholders being numerous, and it being difficult, if not impracticable, to bring them all into court, enough of them had been made parties to authorize the court to adjudicate the rights of all, and make a decree according to the prayer of the bill.—Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 55.

[b] Where parties interested are numerous and suit is for object common to all of them, some may maintain bill on behalf of themselves and others.—Meyer v. San Diego, 121 Cal. 110, 66 Am. St. Rep. 22, 53 Pac. 434.

§ 72. Proper Parties.

[a] Proper parties are those without whom substantial decree can be made, but not one completely settling all questions involved and concluding rights of all interested persons.—Tregear v. Etiwanda Water Co., 76 Cal. 541, 9 Am. St. Rep. 245, 18 Pac. 658.

§ 74. Persons Who may be Joined as Defendants.

[a] In this state the jurisdiction of courts of equity over questions of title to real estate, acquiesced in to avoid the consequences of the fictitious actions of ejectment at common law, has no existence; as those actions must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, and the plaintiff may join any number of parties defendant, without regard to the extent or character of their possession, subject only to their right to answer separately and have separate verdicts. Ritchie v. Dorland, 6 Cal. 33.

§ 77. —— Facts Necessary to be Alleged.

[a] In order to set aside a judgment or conveyance on the ground of fraud, it is not sufficient to aver in general terms that such judgment on conveyance was fraudulent, but the facts and circumstances constituting the alleged fraud must be set forth.—Castle v. Bader, 23 Cal. 75.

[b] Complainant must aver in his bill all that is necessary to show his right and title to the relief he seeks.—Mercier v. Lewis, 39 Cal. 532.

[c] A complaint in equity, claiming relief because of mistake of complainant in attempting to effect a redemption after the sheriff's sale on the foreclosure of a mortgage, must not only aver the fact of the mistake, but must also set forth the circumstances under which it occurred, in so far as such circumstances may be necessary to present a case within the rule of equity on which relief is granted.—Wright v. Shafter, 48 Cal. 275.

[d] A demurrer is properly sustained to a petition against the personal representative of a surviving partner for a partnership accounting, brought more than twenty years after the right accrued, which alleges concealment by the surviving partner of the existence of the partnership, and that its existence was first discovered after his death, without alleging the nature of the concealment, what or of whom any inquiries were made, or why they were not made sooner, and that diligence would not have led to discovery before his death.—Robertson v. Burrell, 110 Cal. 568, 42 Pac. 1086.

[e] A pleading which asks for the interposition of equitable relief must state the specific facts upon which the relief is sought; and inferences, generalities, presumptions and conclusions have no place in such a pleading. Davitt v. American Bakers' Union, 124 Cal. 99, 56 Pac. 775.

[f] In an action to have his name inserted as one of the parties to a contract between defendant D. and defendant corporation, plaintiff alleged that his name was omitted through the fraud practiced by D. on the corporation and on plaintiff. Held, that the allegations were insufficient to sustain the action, since no facts constituting the fraud were set up. Thomason v. De Greayer, 31 Pac. 567.

[a] A bill in equity is multifarious when several matters are united against one defendant which are perfectly distinct and unconnected, or when relief is demanded against several defendants of several matters of a distinct and independent nature.—Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420.

[b] No fixed rule can be laid down by which to determine whether a bill in equity is or is not multifarious; but it is said to be multifarious when distinct and independent matters are joined therein. It is not multifarious when the matters set forth are properly connected, and no new parties are necessary, though all the parties do not have an interest in all of the matters in the suit, and though the plaintiffs are not entitled to a decree in their favor jointly or in solido, or equally against all of the defendants.—Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67, 58 Pac. 376.

[a] Plaintiff held notes and mortgages. B, for a certain purpose connected with a proposed purchase of the same, got possession of the papers, by means of which he obtained fraudulently a deed of the premises from the mortgagors, and then, concealing this fact, declined to purchase. Plaintiff in his bill claimed that B acted as his agent, and that the deed should have run to him. The mortgagor and wife, B, and other parties claiming interests subsequent to plaintiff, were made defendants, and plaintiff sought an injunction against B to restrain him from selling the property, that the trust be declared, that B execute a deed of the property to plaintiff, that the mortgagor's wife make such conveyances and releases to plaintiff as were proper under the mortgages, and that all the defendants be barred, foreclosed, etc., or that B's deed be declared void, and B foreclosed, and then that plaintiff have judgment against the mortgagor and wife on the notes, and that all the defendants be barred and foreclosed, and the premises sold to pay, etc. Held, that a demurrer for the union of inconsistent causes of action would not lie.—De Leon v. Higuera, 15 Cal. 483.

[b] The objection of multifariousness to a bill in equity will be overruled, if the parties are all interested in the main issue, and the issues tendered are simple, and foreshadow no embarrassment to a convenient and orderly trial, and a multiplicity of suits is avoided.—People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 336.

[c] A bill in equity is not multifarious when the point in issue is a matter of common interest among all the parties to the suit, though the interests of the several defendants are otherwise unconnected.—Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420.

[d] There is no misjoinder to an action to reform a defective certificate of acknowledgment to a mortgage with one to foreclose the mortgage.—Hutchinson v. Ainsworth, 63 Cal. 286.

[e] A bill for a rescission of a sale of one partner's interest to another, and for a dissolution of the firm, is multifarious.—Behlow v. Fisher, 102 Cal. 208, 36 Pac. 509.

[f] A complaint to set aside the election of the directors of a corporation as illegal, and to annul the illegal action of the directors, and an illegal contract made by them without authority, and also complaining of the violation of a contract made by the defendant controlling the election, with the stockholders of the corporation, to give to one of the plaintiffs, as trustee, for the benefit and protection of the corporation, a transfer of stock, with irrevocable proxy to vote it for the period of five years, is not multifarious.—Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67, 58 Pac. 376.

[g] In a suit on behalf of a municipal corporation for the improper construction of waterworks, it is not stating different causes of action or misjoinder of defendants to include prayers for annulment of the contract, for such construction, and the return of bonds issued therefor, and to include as defendants those interested in only a part of the relief sought.—Mock v. City of Santa Rosa, 126 Cal. 330, 58 Pac. 826.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 241-248; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 650-700, §§ 341-367.

[a] A bill in equity is not multifarious if there is a common liability in the defendants and a common interest in the plaintiffs, or if the interests of the plaintiffs are the same and the defendants have not a coextensive common interest, but their interests are acquired under different instruments from the same source of title.—Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420.

[b] When a person received a grant of a tract of land from the Mexican government, and died intestate, leaving a brother and sister, his heirs at law, and a wife, and the wife afterward divided the tract into two parcels and granted one away, and she and her grantee afterward received a patent, by way of confirmation from the United States, for their respective shares, and the parties claiming under the heirs at law brought a bill to enforce the trust under which, as they claimed, the wife and her original grantee held the land for the heirs, and made the wife and her grantee, with several others claiming title to several distinct parcels under them, codefendants to the bill, it was held that the bill was not multifarious.—Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420.

[c] An administrator was made, in the same action, a defendant in his representative capacity, and in his personal capacity with others, plaintiffs being creditors of the estate whose claims had been rejected, and the purpose of the action being to compel a transfer to the estate of property which it was charged that his codefendants and himself held on a constructive trust for the estate. Held, that there was a misjoinder of parties defendant.—Mesmer v. Jenkins, 61 Cal. 151.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 248-250; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 700-707, §§ 368-370.

§ 81. —— Relevancy of Allegations.

[a] In an action to set aside as fraudulent a conveyance of land, so much of the complaint as sets out in detail the inceptive steps which culminated therein is not irrelevant or redundant matter.—Perkins v. Center, 35 Cal. 713.

§ 82. —— Prayer for Relief.

[a] When grounds of legal and equitable relief are the same, equity jurisdiction will be determined by the prayer.—People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61.

[b] A court of equity will not grant a relief which complainant does not ask for.—Morrison v. Bowman, 29 Cal. 337.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 224; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 603-608, §§ 319-321.

§ 83. Plea or Answer.

[a] General denial, though the answer is sworn to, is insufficient in equity where the complaint is verified.—Dewey v. Bowman, 8 Cal. 145.

[b] In equity, general denials, made by traversing literally and conjunctively the statements of a sworn bill, are not legitimate for the purpose of putting in issue specific allegations; for, in this way, a party may deny the entire charges in form as stated against him, in consistency with admitting the truth of the specific charge or even the substantial fact.—Blankman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 638.

[c] As a defense in equity a plea is insufficient if it fails to show by direct and proper averment that the consideration supporting alleged agreement to convey was adequate in amount and not disproportionate to value of land.—Bruck v. Tucker, 42 Cal. 346.

[d] In setting up an equitable defense in an action at law, the defense interposed becomes a pleading in equity, the sufficiency of which—in matters of substance—is to be determined by the application of the rules of pleading observed in courts of equity, when relief is sought there in cases of like character.—Bruck v. Tucker, 42 Cal. 346.

[e] Where an express statute of limitations applies to a suit in equity, and defendant relies on mere delay of complainant in bringing the suit and his own adverse use, the statutory period having expired, he must plead the statute.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 Pac. 674.

See 16 Cyc. 286-297; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 738-763, §§ 393-412.

[a] Facts stated in an unanswered petition are admitted.—Kirby v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 606, 10 Pac. 119.

[a] A plea of disclaimer by part of several defendants, sued by bill to quiet title and for the recovery of property which they have obtained by a conspiracy, is not ground for dismissing the complaint against them, as they are still liable for costs.—Dupuy v. Leavenworth, 17 Cal. 262.

For Authorities From Other States:

See 16 Cyc. 260; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 818, 819, §§ 436-438.

§ 86. Cross-bill.

[a] In an action to quiet title, where the answer consists of denials of plaintiff's allegations, and contains none of the elements of a cross-complaint, and contains no prayer for affirmative relief, it is error to award such relief.—Hungarian Hill Gravel Min. Co. v. Moses, 58 Cal. 168.

[b] Although the matters in the two cross-complaints should have been stated in one, yet, since they are not unintelligible or ambiguous, it is not a ground of demurrer.—Van Bibber v. Hilton, 84 Cal. 585, 24 Pac. 308.

[c] Plaintiff, as riparian owner, sought to enjoin defendants, riparian owners above him, from diverting the waters of a stream, except a certain part to which they were entitled by prior appropriation. Defendants, by cross-complaint, alleged that plaintiff had drawn off the water so as to prevent it from irrigating their lands as it would do in its natural flow, and by a second cross-complaint alleged that he threatened to do so as to the part to which they were entitled, and asked an injunction. Held, that these matters were proper subjects of cross-complaint under Code of Civil Procedure, section 442, which provides that, when defendant seeks affirmative relief affecting the property to which the action relates, he may file a cross-complaint. Van Bibber v. Hilton. 84 Cal. 585, 24 Pac. 308.

[d] New parties may be brought in by defendant on a cross-bill, if the cause of action to which they are made parties defendant is the proper subject of a cross-complaint.—Stockton Savings etc. Soc. v. Harrold, 127 Cal. 612, 60 Pac. 165.

[e] A separate defense, in an action to quiet title, in which it was alleged that plaintiff's deed was acquired by fraud, did not constitute a cross-complaint, and hence plaintiff's failure to answer it was not an admission of its truthfulness.—Cohn v. Kelly, 132 Cal. 468, 64 Pac. 709.

For Authorities From Other States:

Cross-bills, nature and objects of: 63 Am. Dec. 251, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 324-327; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 828-838, §§ 446-449.

[a] If the bill to subject the assets of an absent debtor to a claim discloses a remedy at law it will be dismissed upon demurrer.—Lupton v. Lupton, 3 Cal. 120.

[b] When a bill in equity shows on its face that plaintiff, by reason of lapse of time, and of his own laches, is not entitled to relief, the objection may be taken by demurrer.—(Cal. 1858) Sublette v. Tinney, 9 Cal. 423.

[c] Objections to the prayer of a complaint cannot be taken by demurrer. If the specific relief asked cannot be granted, such relief as the case stated in the bill authorizes may be had under the clause in the prayer for general relief, and, even in the absence of such clause, where an answer is filed.—Rollins v. Forbes, 10 Cal. 299.

[d] Failure to make proper parties defendants is not ground for demurrer.—Tregear v. Etiwanda Water Co., 76 Cal. 541, 9 Am. St. Rep. 245, 18 Pac. 658.

For Authorities From Other States:

§ 88. —— Form and Sufficiency of Demurrer.

[a] Under the laws, by which all distinctions between law and equity, in matters of procedure and form, have been abolished, where a complaint presents a case of equitable relief, but all the proper persons are not made parties, a demurrer to the complaint for want of facts, and not for want of parties, is bad.—Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 99 Am. Dec. 423.

[a] A demurrer to a prayer for an injunction admits the fact alleged—that plaintiff has a right and defendant a fictitious claim.—Tuolumne Water Co. v. Chapman, 8 Cal. 392.

For Authorities From Other States:

See 16 Cyc. 276, 277; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 895-899, § 494.

§ 90. Striking Out Pleading.

[a] Equity court has no power to strike out answer and deny defendant right to answer over.—Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 41, 42, 65 Am. St. Rep. 147, 52 Pac. 122.

For Authorities From Other States:

See 16 Cyc. 315; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 955, 956, § 535.

§ 91. Amendment.

[a] Discovery of fraud after suit brought would entitle plaintiff so to shape his action as to include it.—Truebody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 269.

[ab] Facts which occur subsequent to filing of original complaint, and which change the liabilities of the defendants, and in consequence the character of the judgment which is sought, cannot be incorporated into the original complaint by an amendment, without presenting averments inconsistent with the date of the commencement of the action. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308.

[c] In an action by an administratrix to quiet title to land, it was not error for the court to permit plaintiff to amend her complaint after the cause was tried and submitted, but before findings had been filed or judgment given; the submission being set aside, and defendant allowed to answer the amended complaint and to introduce further evidence.—Andrus v. Smith, 133 Cal. 78, 65 Pac. 320.

[d] The inclusion by an amendment of specific tracts omitted in the original complaint in partition was within the discretion of the court, whether or not the original complaint stated a cause of action.—Adams v. Hopkins, 69 Pac. 228.

[e] Where an amendment included specific tracts omitted in the original complaint in partition, the cause of action as to the rest of the land remained the same, and defendants in adverse possession thereof were not affected by the change, in so far as they relied on the statute of limitations.—Adams v. Hopkins, 69 Pac. 228.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 92. —— Amendment of Demurrer.

[a] In an action by a vendee to recover the installments paid on the purchase price of land, where a cross-complaint by the vendor for specific performance fails to show that he has tendered a deed conveying the title he has agreed to convey, or that he is in a condition to convey such a title, and also fails to allege how or when conveyance of title is to be made, or how deferred payments are to be secured, it is not prejudicial error to allow the withdrawal of a demurrer for want of facts, and for ambiguity and uncertainty, and the filing of a second demurrer on the same grounds, but adding further specifications of ambiguity and uncertainty.—Smith v. Taylor, 82 Cal. 533, 23 Pac. 217; Good v. Taylor, 23 Pac. 220; Carscaddon v. Taylor, 23 Pac. 220.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 19 Cent. Dig., col. 1035, § 580.

§ 93. —— Conforming Allegations to Proofs.

[a] Where the proof does not sustain the allegations of the bill, and where, by the proof, the complainant would be entitled to relief in a court of equity if his pleadings had been properly framed, an amendment should be allowed or directed, to conform the pleadings to the facts which ought to be in issue, in order to enable the court to decree fully on the merits; and to refuse amendment is error.—Connalley v. Peck, 3 Cal. 75.

[b] In equity a party may generally amend his pleadings to meet the proof.—Tryon v. Sutton, 13 Cal. 490.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 346; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 967-973, § 547.

§ 94. Supplemental Bills.

[a] A fact occurring subsequently to the filing of the original bill must be averred by way of supplemental bill, and cannot be brought to the knowledge of the court by amendment.—(Cal. 1860) Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 357-362; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1035-1056, §§ 581-593; col. 1061, § 599.

[a] That the wife did not swear to her answer in a foreclosure suit is no ground for vacating the decree on her petition, especially where it appears that she has no defense.—Pfeiffer v. Riehn, 13 Cal. 643.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 366; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1072-1076, §§ 614-620.

§ 96. —— Authority of Officer Administering Oath.

[a] A jurat to an answer is, in form and substance, an affidavit, and may be taken before a county recorder.—Pfeiffer v. Riehn, 13 Cal. 643.

§ 97. Issues, Proof and Variance.

[a] It is a cardinal rule in equity, as in all other pleadings, that the allegata and probata must agree, and that averments material to the case omitted from the pleading cannot be supplied by the evidence.—Green v. Covillaud, 10 Cal. 317; Murdock v. Clarke, 59 Cal. 683.

[b] Allegations and proof must agree.—Noonan v. Nunan, 76 Cal. 49, 18 Pac. 98.

[c] Where a bill alleges that plaintiff agreed to buy, and defendant to sell, and the answer alleges that, at "the time of entering into the agreement aforesaid," the contract was deposited with one G, to hold for 30 days, until plaintiff made a payment, in default of which "the trade should be considered off," and "that said agreement never was delivered to plaintiff," but that he obtained "possession thereof forcibly," the question of nondelivery is raised by the answer.—Haskell v. Doty, 78 Cal. 424, 21 Pac. 10.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 370; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1087-1092, §§ 635-640.

§ 98. —— Evidence Admissible Under Pleadings.

[a] Material facts as of full performance on the part of complainant, omitted in the pleadings, cannot be supplied by proof.—Green v. Covillaud, 10 Cal. 317.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 372-375; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1100-1106, §§ 648-650.

§ 99. —— What Constitutes Variance.

[a] Where the complaint avers that the note and mortgage sued on were made to "E.," a married woman, and by her assigned to plaintiff, he cannot recover, because the right to assign was in the husband; and this, too, where the proof was that both husband and wife assigned the note and mortgage. In chancery cases the party must recover according to the pleadings, and not the proof where there is a variance.—Tyron v. Sutton, 13 Cal. 490.

[b] When the pleadings set up that the parties applying for a decree of specific performance of a contract to convey are joint assignees of the right under the contract to a conveyance, the objection that documentary evidence should be excluded which showed that one part of the lot affected by the equitable title has been assigned to one of the parties, and another and distinct part to the other of the parties, is not valid.—Owen v. Frink, 24 Cal. 171.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 99a. Cure of Defects by Subsequent Pleading.

[a] Plaintiff cannot rely on a cross-bill as stating a cause of action in his behalf.—Mercier v. Lewis, 39 Cal. 532.

§ 99b. Waiver of Objections to Pleading.

[a] Though the complaint in an action by several persons to quiet title to their lots, owned in severalty, alleges that plaintiffs deraign title through a common source, Code of Civil Procedure, section 381, providing that several persons claiming an interest in lands under a common source may unite in an action to determine an adverse claim, yet it being found that they each own their respective lots, a finding that they deraign title through a common source is immaterial, and objection that there is no evidence to sustain it cannot be raised; the question of misjoinder not having been raised by answer or demurrer, and section 434 providing that objections to the complaint, except the questions of jurisdiction and that it does not state a cause of action, not taken by demurrer or answer, are waived.—Dewey v. Parcells, 137 Cal. 305, 70 Pac. 174.

V. EVIDENCE.

ANSWER AS EVIDENCE, § 99c.
—— OATH AS AFFECTING ANSWER AS EVIDENCE, § 99d.
—— CONCLUSIVENESS WHERE ACTION IS HEARD ON PLEADINGS, § 99e.

§ 99c. Answer as Evidence.

[a] In verified answer evasion of controlling fact in issue is strong circumstance against the defendant.—Baker v. Baker, 13 Cal. 87.

[b] Equity rule requiring two witnesses to controvert answer under oath does not prevail in this state. The answer is only a pleading, and is not evidence for defendant.—Bostic v. Love, 16 Cal. 69.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 383-401; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1151-1220, §§ 685-724.

§ 99d. —— Oath as Affecting Answer as Evidence.

[a] Verified answer of defendant in an equity case is not evidence for defendant, under Practice Act.—Goodwin v. Hammond, 13 Cal. 168, 73 Am. Dec. 574.

§ 99e. —— Conclusiveness Where Action is Heard on Pleadings.

[a] Where a chancery suit is heard on bill and answer, all the allegations in the answer, whether upon knowledge or upon information and belief, are to be taken as true. If the complainant wishes to dispute any of the allegations in the answer, he must file a replication, and thus enable the defendant to establish them by proof, if he can.—Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 55.

[b] Where cause is heard on bill and answer the allegations of the latter are to be taken as true.—Belt v. Davis, 1 Cal. 134.

§ 101. Submission of Issues to Jury.

[a] Where there was no need of a jury, it does not vitiate the decree that the chancellor informed his conscience by a verdict. Pfeiffer v. Riehn, 13 Cal. 643.

[b] It is entirely within discretion of court to grant or refuse a demand for a jury trial in an equity case.—Société Francaise v. Selheimer, 57 Cal. 623.

[c] Granting jury trial in equity is in discretion of trial court.—Curnow v. Happy Valley M. Co., 9 Pac. 149.

[d] Allowance of jury trial in equity cases is within discretion of court.—Graham v. Stewart, 68 Cal. 376, 9 Pac. 555.

[de] In an equity suit for the abatement of a nuisance the judge charged the jury that damages could be recovered against defendant after the commencement of the action. The plaintiff, however, disclaimed all damages after the filing of the complaint. Held no error, since the verdict was merely advisory. Sullivan v. Royer, 72 Cal. 248, 1 Am. St. Rep. 51, 13 Pac. 655.

[e] Action to cancel shares of stock and to compel their transfer from the corporation to executors, however regarded, is an equitable action, in which it is not error to refuse a demand of trial by jury.—Ashton v. Heggerty, 130 Cal. 516, 62 Pac. 934.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 413-428; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1298-1351, §§ 788-820.

§ 102. —— Issues Proper for Jury.

[a] Special issues framed by the court according to the established rules of chancery practice may be tried by a jury in equity cases.—Brewster v. Bours, 8 Cal. 501.

[b] The court sitting in equity may direct, when proper, an issue to be framed upon the pleadings and submitted to a jury if questions of a purely legal character in relation to thetitle arise.—Curtis v. Sutter, 15 Cal. 259.

[c] Where defendant's answer raises issues of fact on which he is entitled to a jury, but the principal features of his defense are equitable, a demand for a jury must relate to the specific issues on which he is entitled to the same.—Bates v. Escot, 127 Cal. xviii, 59 Pac. 943.

[d] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 592, where plaintiff alleged ownership and defendant asserted title in himself, plaintiff was entitled to a jury to try the issue of ownership.—Reiner v. Schroder, 146 Cal. 411, 80 Pac. 517.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 418; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1309-1319, §§ 794-799.

§ 103. —— Preliminary Proceedings.

[a] In chancery case, court may direct that special issues of material facts be framed or settled, and stated in writing, before proceeding to trial.—Smith v. Rowe, 4 Cal. 6.

[b] Special issues must be framed, according to chancery practice, to have a special verdict.—Brewster v. Bours, 8 Cal. 501.

§ 104. Proceedings at and After Trial.

[a] In a suit in equity, for relief on the ground that defendants' ancestor, who was, by power of attorney, authorized to sell for plaintiff's ancestor certain realty, had fraudulently exercised this power by a conveyance to defendants, a special finding of the jury that property referred to in a letter, being a power of attorney, is held in trust for plaintiff, as stated in it, should find that the property referred to in the letter is held in trust "in the manner and proportions mentioned" in the letter.—(1886) Duff v. Duff, 71 Cal. 513, 12 Pac. 570; (1890) Duff v. Duff, 87 Cal. 104, 23 Pac. 874, 25 Pac. 265.

[b] The verdict of the jury on an issue out of chancery is a part of the judgment-roll in the suit under Code of Civil Procedure, section 670.—Goldman v. Rogers, 85 Cal. 574, 24 Pac. 782.

[c] In equity, where a jury is impaneled merely as a body advisory to the court, to assist it in determining disputed facts, the court may direct a verdict, though the evidence is conflicting.—Galvin v. Palmer, 113 Cal. 46, 45 Pac. 172.

from the decree.—Reiner v. Schroder, 146 Cal. 411, 80 Pac. 517.

§ 105. —— Effect of Verdict.

[a] Verdict in chancery cases is merely advisory to the court, and may be adopted or disregarded.—Gray v. Eaton, 5 Cal. 448; Still v. Saunders, 8 Cal. 281; Stockman v. Riverside L. & I. Co., 64 Cal. 57; Sweetser v. Dobbins, 65 Cal. 529; Schneider v. Brown, 85 Cal. 205, 4 Pac. 540.

[b] Conceding that a special verdict of a jury in an equity case is only advisory, and may be disregarded by the court, yet, if it is adopted by the court, it has the conclusive effect of a final adjudication.—Clink v. Thurston, 47 Cal. 21.

[c] The findings of a jury on special issues submitted in an equity case are merely advisory to the court, and, if adopted by it, are the findings of the court.—Bates v. Gage, 49 Cal. 126.

[d] A suit to foreclose a mortgage of chattels is equitable, and the special verdicts of a jury thereunder are advisory only.—Johnson v. Powers, 65 Cal. 179, 3 Pac. 625.

[e] Where, in ejectment, defendant files a counterclaim for specific performance of a parol contract for a lease of the land, the issues thus raised are equitable, on which the verdict of a jury is advisory only.—Haggin v. Raymond, 67 Cal. 302, 7 Pac. 721.

[f] In equity cases findings of jury are merely advisory.—Bell v. Marsh, 80 Cal. 414, 22 Pac. 170; Schneider v. Brown, 85 Cal. 206, 24 Pac. 715.

[h] Verdict of jury in equity case does not bind court.—Moore v. Copp, 119 Cal. 434, 51 Pac. 630.

§ 106. —— Disregard or Modification of Verdict or Findings.

[a] Even though it be unnecessary that there be findings in an equity case, still when there are findings, they are not to be disregarded.—Lyons v. Lyons, 18 Cal. 447.

[b] In a suit in equity the general verdict of a jury is to be disregarded, and the court must find the facts.—Brandt v. Wheaton, 52 Cal. 430.

[c] Where the court submits a special issue to a jury, but finds on the same issue differently from the jury, the court's finding determines the fact.—Freeman v. Stephenson, 63 Cal. 499.

[d] Verdict is merely advisory until adopted by court and it may disregard and set it aside of its own motion.—Clavey v. Lord, 87 Cal. 418, 25 Pac. 493.

[e] Where the evidence as to whether there was a parol gift is conflicting, the court does not abuse its discretion in disregarding the advisory verdict of a jury, and finding that there was not.—Shirley v. Shirley, 92 Cal. 44, 27 Pac. 1097.

§ 107. —— Setting Aside Verdict.

[a] Verdict in equity case may be set aside without motion for new trial.—Wingate v. Ferris, 50 Cal. 105.

[b] The findings of a jury in an equity case may be set aside by the court of its own motion.—Wakefield v. Bouton, 55 Cal. 109.

[c] Where an action was brought to cancel a contract for the sale of land to one defendant, and to enjoin another from removing wood from the land, and the defendant to the injunction claimed a lien on the wood for cutting it, and asked for foreclosure thereof, the plaintiff's action being equitable, as were also the predominant features of the defense, it was not error for the court to set aside the jury's answers to interrogatories, and substitute findings of his own, though they were contrary to the findings of the jury.—Diamond Coal Co. v. Cook, 129 Cal. xviii, 61 Pac. 578.

[a] Under the Practice Act the rule requiring the court to find its conclusions of law and fact does not apply to equity cases, and does not conflict with our decision here. (Walker v. Sedgwick, 5 Cal. 192.) But we doubt that case, and leave the question of overruling it open.—Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 375.

[b] In equity facts should be found by court, or specially by jury under an order of the court.—Wingate v. Ferris, 50 Cal. 105.

[b] In an equity case, when the special issues are submitted to a jury, and they find thereon, and the court afterward renders a judgment, the party against whom the judgment is rendered, if he wishes to have the findings of fact reviewed on a motion for a new trial, must wait until the judgment is rendered by the court before giving notice and moving for a new trial.—Bates v. Gage, 49 Cal. 126.

[c] In an equity case, where special issues are submitted to a jury, the trial is not terminated when they render a verdict, but when the court renders a judgment; and hence a motion for a new trial should not be made until rendition of judgment.—Bates v. Gage, 49 Cal. 126.

[d] New trial should not be granted in an equity case when a general verdict is found.—Wingate v. Ferris, 50 Cal. 105.

[e] The verdict of the jury in equity is merely advisory, and until findings have been made by the court there is no decision upon which to base a motion for a new trial. Spottiswood v. Weir, 66 Cal. 525, 6 Pac. 381.

§ 110. Errors and Irregularities at Trial.

[a] Instructions are not required in a chancery case when jury is to try special issues, and it is not error to refuse them.—Dominguez v. Dominguez, 7 Cal. 424.

[c] An action to enjoin a nuisance is a case in equity, and the verdict of the jury in such a case is merely advisory to the court; and if instructions given to the jury are erroneous, such error is not ground for reversing the judgment, the correctness of the decision of the court and not the propositions of law it laid down for the guidance of the jury, being the only question for determination upon appeal.—Richardson v. Eureka, 110 Cal. 441, 42 Pac. 965.

[d] Instructions given to a jury in a suit in equity are not a subject of an exception, the verdict being merely advisory to the court. Scheerer v. Goodwin, 125 Cal. 154, 57 Pac. 789.

[a] Equity is not bound to strict legal rights of parties, but will consider all circumstances to arrive at justice of case.—Walkerly v. Bacon, 85 Cal. 141, 24 Pac. 638.

VII. MASTERS AND COMMISSIONERS, AND PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THEM.

APPOINTMENT OF COMMISSIONER, § 112.
POWER TO REFER, § 113.
REPORT, § 114.
DISPOSITION OF REPORT, § 115.

§ 112. Appointment of Commissioner.

[a] Equity court has power to appoint a "commissioner" to execute a conveyance in behalf of heirs of grantor to enforce its decree.—Scadden etc. Co. v. Scadden, 121 Cal. 41, 53 Pac. 440.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 430, 431; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1394-1397, § 852.

§ 113. Power to Refer.

[a] A court of equity may order a reference without the consent of the parties.—Smith v. Rowe, 4 Cal. 6.

[b] Though, in an action to dissolve a partnership and obtain settlement of the partnership accounts, the court has power to order a reference for the trial of all issues of fact relating to the condition of the partnership accounts, it cannot invest the referee with power to report a judgment.—Williams v. Benton, 24 Cal. 424.

[c] The court in an equity suit has no power under the Practice Act, without the consent of parties, to order a reference for the trial of any issue of fact, except one which requires the examination of an account.—Williams v. Benton, 24 Cal. 424.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Where the referee excludes proper testimony, or admits improper evidence, or does any other act materially affecting the rights of either party during the progress of the trial before him, then such party should except, and see that the exception is truly stated in the report; but error in a referee's final conclusions of fact or law, where the evidence is certified to the court by the referee, should be taken advantage of by a motion to set aside the report and for a new trial.—Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 353.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 444-447; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1439-1491, §§ 893-931.

[a] In a suit in chancery it is perfectly competent for the judge who tried the cause, after exceptions have been filed to the report of a referee upon the facts, and the report set aside for cause shown, to take up the testimony reported by the referee, find the facts, and render a decree in the cause.—McHenry v. Moore, 5 Cal. 90.

OPERATION AND EFFECT OF DECREE, § 130.

§ 116. Nature, Form and Validity in General—Decree on Verdict of Jury.

[a] In an equity case, where issues are submitted to a jury, their verdict is merely advisory to the court. The adoption of a verdict is equivalent to a finding by the court to the extent to which the verdict covers the issues made by the pleadings. It is the duty of the court, when it adopts a verdict, to find upon all the issues not covered by it unless such findings are waived.—Warring v. Freear, 64 Cal. 54, 28 Pac. 115.

[b] In an equity case, the court may not enter judgment on the jury's general finding on issues, but must itself find, the general verdict not being determinative of the issues made by the pleadings.—Learned v. Castle, 67 Cal. 41, 7 Pac. 34.

[c] Where, in a suit to quiet title, there is an issue out of chancery, it is sufficiently shown that the court adopted the verdict of the jury by recitals in the judgment that the court made its findings of fact and conclusions of law in part from such verdict.—Goldman v. Rogers, 85 Cal. 574, 24 Pac. 782.

[d] It is not necessary that word "adopt" be used to show adoption of verdict by court. Goldman v. Rogers, 85 Cal. 578, 24 Pac. 782.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 117. Nature and Extent of Relief.

[a] In an action to compel the conveyance to the plaintiff of certain stock, if the particular stock in question has passed out of the control of the defendant, the plaintiff, if successful, is not entitled on this ground to a judgment for the market value of the stock at the commencement of the suit, if the defendant still has in his possession other shares of the same stock equivalent in amount to the particular stock sued for.—Hardenbergh v. Bacon, 33 Cal. 356.

[b] In a case in equity where issues are joined the court is authorized to grant any relief consistent with the case and embraced within the issues, though not specifically prayed for.—Zellerbach v. Allenberg, 99 Cal. 57, 33 Pac. 786.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 478-487; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1568-1588, §§ 986-1000; cols. 1605-1618, §§ 1009-1014.

§ 118. —— Interlocutory Orders.

[a] Under the Code of Civil Procedure and the decisions of this state, an interlocutory order may be rendered in an equity case. Thompson v. White, 63 Cal. 505.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 471; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1508-1516, §§ 947-949.

§ 119. —— Final Adjustment of all Issues.

[a] A court of equity, to which a creditor has resorted to get personal property and fixtures protected from detriment, may also decree a sale of the real estate proper, included in the same deed of trust.—Kraft v. De Forest, 53 Cal. 656.

§ 120. —— Parties.

[a] Where the plaintiff sued on behalf of some two hundred persons besides himself, who claimed separate parts of a tract of land, deraigning title from the same source, with the object of removing a cloud cast upon the title by the execution of invalid conveyances, it was held that a judgment, enjoining the defendants from future alienations in respect to the land of the plaintiff, and adjudging the previous conveyances to be invalid, was all that he was entitled to. He had no such community of interest with the other parties as entitled him to an injunction in their favor.—Gibbons v. Peralta, 21 Cal. 629.

[b] Where a decision is made in a suit in equity on any particular subject matter, the rights of all persons whose interests are immediately connected with that decision and affected by it should be provided for.—McPherson v. Parker, 30 Cal. 455, 89 Am. Dec. 129.

[c] If a sale of lands, made under a power of attorney procured through fraud, be set aside as fraudulent and void ab initio, the fraudulent vendee is not entitled to a decree against the vendor for restitution of a part of the purchase money paid to the attorney who was privy to the fraud.—Sanchez v. McMahon, 35 Cal. 218.

[d] Where a suit is brought to have a deed absolute on its face declared a mortgage, and to redeem the defendant, by cross-complaint, may assert the deed to be absolute, and, if successful, may have a judgment for possession.—Taylor v. McLain, 64 Cal. 513, 2 Pac. 399, 401.

[e] In an action to enjoin the sale by defendants of certain stock pledged by plaintiff to defendants, to have judgments recovered by the latter against the former, for money loaned, adjudged paid, and for an accounting, plaintiff alleged that the money loaned to him by defendants was embezzled from him by one of them, who was his clerk, under a conspiracy between all the defendants. Defendants denied the fraud and conspiracy, alleged that the stock was pledged to secure the loans, pleaded as estoppels the judgments against plaintiff, and asked for affirmative relief. Held, that under Code of Civil Procedure, section 580, authorizing the court to grant any relief consistent with the case made, the court could decree that plaintiff was indebted to defendants in certain sums, that defendants had a lien on the stock for such sums, and to order a sale to satisfy such indebtedness.—Zellerbach v. Allenberg, 99 Cal. 57, 33 Pac. 786.

[f] Although the answer in an action for an accounting is confined to a denial of the allegations of the complaint, and does not ask for affirmative relief, a court of equity, having obtained jurisdiction of the cause, may render an affirmative judgment in favor of defendant, even though such judgment is inconsistent with the denials.—Vierra v. Fontes, 135 Cal. 126, 66 Pac. 241.

§ 121. Conformity to Pleading and Proofs.

[a] The relief afforded by the decree must conform to the case made out by the pleadings as well as to the proofs.—(Cal. 1870) Bachman v. Sepulveda, 39 Cal. 688.

[b] Where the complaint alleged that all the defendants except two had acquired interests in the land in controversy the prayer was that the "defendants" be required to convey to the plaintiff the interest which he claimed, and the action was dismissed as to two of the defendants, the other defendants being required by the judgment to convey to the plaintiff the whole amount claimed, held, that the relief granted by the judgment was not in excess of the prayer of the complaint. Brooks v. Carpentier, 53 Cal. 287.

[c] In an action for an accounting, it appeared that plaintiff, being indebted to defendant, executed several notes, to the amount of the indebtedness, payable to one F., who was also indebted to defendant, and that, at the same time F. executed notes to the amount of his indebtedness, which were payable to plaintiff and indorsed by him to defendant, both plaintiff and F. conveyed to defendant certain lands to secure their debts. Held, that a contention by plaintiff that he was entitled to the proceeds of the sale by defendant of the land conveyed to it by F. as security would not be considered, where there was no prayer for such relief.—Chapman v. Bank of California, 97 Cal. 155, 31 Pac. 896.

[d] Where, in an action to determine water rights, each defendant answered, setting up affirmatively his rights to the water, and prayed to have the same adjudicated, a decree determining the relative rights of the defendants among themselves was within the issues, notwithstanding the rights of such defendants were not urged by way of cross-complaint.—Miller v. Dondero, 139 Cal. 643, 73 Pac. 583.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 483-487; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1588-1604, §§ 1001-1008.

§ 122. Relief Under General Prayer.

[a] Although the prayer of a bill be inartificially framed, the court will, under the general prayer for relief, disregard mistakes, and grant such relief as will conform to the bill. Truebody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 269.

[b] Under a prayer for general relief, no relief can be granted in equity beyond that which is authorized by the facts stated in the bill.—Carpentier v. Brenham, 50 Cal. 549.

[c] In an action to compel the return to a city of bonds issued by it to defendants for the construction of a waterworks costing less than the value of the bonds, a judgment that the bonds should not be affected, but that the defendants be charged with their value, and credited with the value of the waterworks, is warranted, under a prayer for general relief.—Mock v. City of Santa Rosa, 126 Cal. 330, 58 Pac. 826.

[d] In courts of equity, if the specific relief asked cannot be granted, such relief as the case stated in the bill authorizes may be had under a prayer for general relief; but under such prayer no relief can be granted beyond that which is authorized by the facts stated in the bill.—Oliver v. Blair, 8 Pac. 612.

§ 123. Amendment—During Term of Entry.

[a] Where amended decree rendered at same term as first decree, is simply what the original decree should have been, and does no injustice to a party, this court will not disturb it on account of any alleged irregularity not affecting the merits.—Gronfier v. Minturn, 5 Cal. 492.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 501-512; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1622-1635, §§ 1020-1033.

§ 124. —— Interlocutory Decrees.

[a] That a final decree is inconsistent with an interlocutory decree is immaterial as the latter may be modified on final hearing. Thompson v. White, 76 Cal. 381, 18 Pac. 399.

§ 125. Opening or Vacating—Notice.

[a] Where the notice of the motion to set the decree aside is defective, the order is not void on that account.—Pedrorena, In re, 80 Cal. 144, 22 Pac. 71.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 501-512; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1635-1652, §§ 1034-1047.

§ 126. Construction.

[a] In a petition for divorce, plaintiff described a certain homestead, alleging it to be community property; and the decree, granting her a divorce, awarded in general terms all community property to the husband. Held, in an action of ejectment brought by her against the husband's administrator to recover as homestead a portion of such community property, that the petition in the divorce suit might be considered in determining what property was awarded to the husband by the decree, and that the homestead was included in such award.—Stockton v. Knock, 73 Cal. 425, 15 Pac. 51.

§ 127. Performance.

[a] In a suit in equity by a judgment creditor who had a sheriff's deed of land, to set aside and cancel a deed of the same given by the judgment debtor before the recovery of the judgment to defraud the creditor, a decree appointing a commissioner to execute to plaintiff a deed of all the interest of defendant grantee, if such grantee should fail to do so within a certain time, is not error affecting any substantial right of defendants, where said adverse deed was decreed null and void. Hager v. Shindler, 29 Cal. 47.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1658, 1659, § 1052; cols. 1663, 1664, § 1054.

§ 128. —— Proceedings for Enforcement.

[a] A bill to carry a decree into effect must ordinarily show such decree to have been final in its character, and that, by reason of something occurring subsequently to its rendition, the rights of the parties cannot be properly enforced thereunder.—McFadden v. McFadden, 44 Cal. 306.

[b] Court of equity will always find means of enforcing its decree against delinquent defendant, and its power in this respect is as extensive as the exigencies of the case. Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17, 28 Pac. 788.

§ 129. Setting Aside Decree.

[a] Decree rendered on cross-bill held interlocutory merely, so that it was not within rule 19 of the rules of practice in equity in the federal courts, making decrees absolute unless set aside at same term, but within rule 1, providing that the circuit courts, as courts of equity, shall be deemed always open for certain purposes.—Blythe Co. v. Bankers' Inv. Co., 147 Cal. 82, 81 Pac. 281.

[a] Party to accounting accepting benefits thereof and making no objection thereto is bound thereby.—Wise v. Walker, 81 Cal. 13, 20 Pac. 81, 22 Pac. 293.

IX. BILL OF REVIEW.

§ 131. Grounds.

[a] Bill to vacate an affirmed judgment can be availed of only by bill of review, with proper averments.—Riddle v. Baker, 13 Cal. 295.

[ab] If a judgment is rendered payable in currency, and the record shows that it should have been made payable in gold, the error cannot be corrected by a bill of review.—San Francisco Savings etc. Soc. v. Thompson, 34 Cal. 76.

[b] It is doubtful whether a bill of review for errors apparent on the face of the record could be maintained under the old chancery system after an affirmance of the decree on appeal.—San Francisco Savings etc. Society v. Thompson, 34 Cal. 76.

[c] If judgment is erroneous upon face of record a bill of review will not lie to correct the same. In such case the error must be corrected by an appeal from the judgment. San Francisco Savings etc. Society v. Thompson, 34 Cal. 76.

[d] A bill of review to set aside a judgment as fraudulent will not be sustained on the ground that the opposing party was sworn as a witness in the case in which the judgment was rendered, and knew of a fact which, if proved, would have given judgment to the other party, and failed to disclose it, and witnesses have since been discovered who will testify to such fact.—Allen v. Currey, 41 Cal. 318.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 526-532; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1682-1705, §§ 1078-1094.

§ 132. —— Errors at Trial.

[a] In a chancery case it is doubtful whether the refusal to give instructions to the jury, even conceding them to be correct, can be assigned as error.—Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 353.

[b] Error in giving or refusing instructions is not ground for reversal of equity case. Hewlett v. Pilcher, 85 Cal. 545, 24 Pac. 781.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 526; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1686-1696, §§ 1079-1090.

§ 133. Time to Take Proceedings.

[a] Bill of review for new trial must be filed within time for which appeal or writ of error may be prosecuted.—Allen v. Currey, 41 Cal. 321.

[b] A court of equity will not entertain a bill of review for a new trial, after the lapse of the period within which an appeal or writ of error might be prosecuted; but the question is not decided whether a bill of review to set aside a judgment or decree for fraud is subject to such limitation by analogy, if the fraud is discovered after the lapse of such period.—Steen v. March, 132 Cal. 616, 64 Pac. 994.

ESCAPE AND RESCUE.

Include voluntary departure and attempts of prisoners to depart from lawful custody of officers or other persons, or from any place where they are lawfully confined, with or without force or fraud, and voluntary or negligent allowance by officers of such departure, aiding such escape, and concealing or harboring escaped prisoners, as offenses against public justice and authority; nature and elements of the crimes of escape, jail breaking, prison breach, etc.; nature and extent of criminal responsibility therefor, and grounds of defense; and prosecution and punishment of such acts as public offenses.

[a] Escheats and forfeitures are not favored by the law; and the remedy of escheat does not exist, in the absence of an express provision therefor.—People ex rel. v. Stockton Savings etc. Soc., 133 Cal. 611, 85 Am. St. Rep. 225, 65 Pac. 1078.

[b] The state does not come in by way of succession on failure of heirs or next of kin to take an estate of a decedent, but in such event the property, whether real or personal, goes to the state by escheat—Miner's Estate, In re, 143 Cal. 194, 76 Pac. 968.

[c] Under the statute providing that if a nonresident alien takes by succession he must appear and claim the property within five years, and Civil Code, section 1404, declaring that no nonresident foreigner can take by succession unless he claims the property within five years, the portion of an estate to which a nonresident would be entitled if he claimed it in five years, but which he does not so claim, does not return to the estate to be distributed to other heirs, but goes to the state.—Pendergast's Estate, In re, 143 Cal. 135, 76

[a] Section 474, Political Code, providing proceedings for discovery of escheated property construed.—People v. Hibernia Savings etc. Soc., 72 Cal. 22-27, 13 Pac. 48.

[b] Section 474, Political Code, does not authorize attorney general or counsel appointed by him to examine books and papers of corporation except under order or supervision of court.—People v. German Savings etc. Soc., 72 Cal. 28, 13 Pac. 51.

[c] An order of the probate court reciting that the affairs of an estate had been finally settled and that there were no heirs or other claimants thereof, and ordering "that the county treasurer of this city and county forthwith pay into the state treasury all moneys and effects in his hands belonging to such estate," did not ipso facto operate to vest in the state the title to the fund ordered to be deposited in the state treasury, as upon a decree in an action brought to escheat the same.—Miner's Estate, In re, 143 Cal. 194, 76 Pac. 968.

[d] Under Civil Code, sections 1386, 1404, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 1269, certain allegations as to the absence of heirs held sufficient in a proceeding by information to enforce an escheat.—State v. Miller, 85 Pac. 609.

[e] Under Civil Code, sections 1386, 1404, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 1269, an escheat proceeding commenced within less than five years after the death held premature.—State v. Miller, 85 Pac. 609.

[f] Under Civil Code, sections 1386, 1404, and Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1269, 1271, absence of claimants in an escheat proceeding held sufficient, without other evidence, to authorize judgment for the state.—State v. Miller, 85 Pac. 609.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 552-556; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1779-1793, §§ 7-17; cols. 1801, 1802, § 24.

§ 5. —— Where Alleged Forged Will is Admitted to Probate.

[a] The state is not entitled to claim an escheat when a will has been admitted to probate, though alleged to be forged.—State of California v. McGlynn, 20 Cal. 234.

[a] By civil law, as well as common law, king cannot take upon himself possession of estate said to have escheated until the fact is judicially ascertained by a proceeding in the nature of an inquest of office.—People ex rel.. Attorney General v. Folsom, 5 Cal. 373.

[b] Twelve days before the ratification of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, Leidesdorff, a naturalized citizen of Mexico, died, seised of certain lands in San Francisco, and Anna M. Sparks, his mother and heir, through whom the defendant claims title, was not at the time of his death a citizen of the United States or of Mexico, but was a subject of Denmark, and never resided in Mexico or the United States. Held, that, in order that the United States should take any interest in the land, it was necessary that the forfeiture should have been ascertained, either by the United States or by Mexico.—People ex rel. Attorney General v. Folsom, 5 Cal. 373.

[c] Proceeds of estates of deceased persons dying without heirs do not become part of school fund under Constitution, section 4, article 9, without procedure in nature of office found.—State v. Smith, 70 Cal. 157, 12 Pac. 121.

[d] While the provision of the Code of Civil Procedure in reference to escheats, when taken by itself, might imply that an action of escheat is only necessary where real estate is involved, yet, under Political Code, section 4480, providing that the provisions of the various codes bearing upon the same subject matter must be construed together, the various provisions of the several codes bearing on the same subject make it evident that, in every case of a failure of succession for want of heirs or kindred of a decedent, an action of escheat becomes necessary to vest the title in the state, whether the estate so escheated consists of real or personal property.—Miner's Estate, In re, 143 Cal. 194, 76 Pac. 968.

[e] There is no limit to the time in which native-born American citizens may come forward and claim property to which they have succeeded, so long as no judgment or decree in a proper proceeding to escheat has been entered.—Miner's Estate, In re, 143 Cal. 194, 76 Pac. 968.

[f] Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1269, 1272, relating to escheats, providing that a person not a party or privy to a proceeding may, within twenty years after the judgment, file a petition showing his claim or right to the property, has no application to a case where no action has been brought or judgment rendered in favor of the state under the provisions of the Code.—Miner's Estate, In re, 143 Cal. 194, 76 Pac. 968.

§ 7. Time to Commence Proceedings.

[a] Escheat proceeding brought by attorney general under title 8, part 3, Civil Code., is premature if commenced before expiration of five years after death of ancestor of nonresident alien.—State v. Smith, 70 Cal. 157, 12 Pac. 121.

[b] Alien heirs have five years after descent cast to claim their right, and attorney general cannot begin escheat proceedings before that time.—People v. Roach, 76 Cal. 296-299, 18 Pac. 407.

§ 8. Citation and Appearance.

[a] On a bill for the discovery of property which has escheated, a citation must be issued before the right to examine a person accrues; and a judgment ordering certain defendants to permit the attorney general to examine their books and papers, upon a complaint alleging that he has made a demand on them to be allowed to do so, which demand has been refused, and upon findings in accordance with the allegations of the complaint, is erroneous.—People v. Hibernia Savings etc. Soc., 72 Cal. 21, 13 Pac. 48; People v. German Savings etc. Soc., 72 Cal. 28, 13 Pac. 51.

ESCROWS.

Include deeds, bonds, and other obligatory writings delivered to a person not a party thereto to be held by him until the performance of a specified condition or the happening of a certain contingency, and then to be delivered to the grantee or obligee; and rights, duties, and liabilities of parties to such instruments and of the depositaries, as affected by the delivery thereof as escrows and the final delivery.

NATURE AND REQUISITES, § 1.
RETENTION OF CONTROL BY DEPOSITOR, § 2.
CONDITIONS OR CONTINGENCIES, § 3.
REVOCATION OF DELIVERY, § 4.
PERFORMANCE OF CONDITIONS OR CONCURRENCE OF CONTINGENCY, § 5.
TIME WHEN INSTRUMENT TAKES EFFECT, § 6.
REPRESENTATIVE CHARACTER OF DEPOSITARY, § 7.
DELIVERY BY DEPOSITARY, § 8.

Conditional delivery of bill or note. See Bills and Notes, § 26.

Deposit of deed for delivery after grantor's death. See Deeds, § 51.

[a] Escrow, defined.—Kile's Estate, In re, 72 Cal. 139, 140, 13 Pac. 320.

[b] Deed cannot be delivered in escrow to grantee.—Mowry v. Heney, 86 Cal. 475, 25 Pac. 17.

[c] An actual contract of sale on the one side and purchase on the other, definitely assented to by both parties, is essential to a delivery in escrow.—Miller v. Sears, 91 Cal. 282, 25 Am. St. Rep. 176, 27 Pac. 289.

[a] A deed deposited with a third person by the grantor, to be delivered to the grantee upon the order of the grantor's agent, is not an escrow, as the contract is not so complete between the parties to the deed that it only remains for grantee to perform some condition in order to have the deed delivered to him; but the grantor may, before the agent gives such order, direct the third person not to deliver the deed.—Fitch v. Bunch, 30 Cal. 208.

[b] The essential requisite to the validity of a deed transferred in escrow is, that when placed in the hands of a third party it has passed beyond the power of the grantor for all time, and that question is to be determined by the grantor's intention in the matter, and is a question of fact to be solved by the light of all the circumstances surrounding the transaction.—Wittenbrock v. Cass, 110 Cal. 1, 42 Pac. 300.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 561-567; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1803-1808, §§ 1-3, 5.

§ 3. Conditions or Contingencies.

[a] Bill of sale delivered in escrow upon condition that claim be worked and proceeds applied in payment, is defeated by abandonment of work.—Beem v. McKusick, 10 Cal. 538.

[c] M., in consideration of the agreement of defendant, agreed to build a certain street railroad, for which defendant agreed to pay M. a certain amount, in notes of defendant one-half, by a two months note, when the grading was done and the iron was on the ground, the balance, by a four months note on completion of the road; that the road should be constructed, weather permitting, within four months; that the notes should be deposited with B. in trust till the conditions of the contract were performed by M., and the certificate of the engineer that the conditions had been performed should be served on said trustee, and on delivery to him of said certificate he should deliver to M. the two months note and the four months note, respectively. The notes were deposited with B., with instructions to deliver the two months note to M. on the certificate of the engineer that the grading was done and the iron on the ground, and the four months note on his certificate that the road was completed. Held, that the completion of the road within four months was not a condition precedent to the right of M. to a delivery to him of the notes.—Witmer Bros. Co. v. Weid, 108 Cal. 569, 41 Pac. 491.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 564-567; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1813-1817, § 8.

[a] Escrow is not revocable by vendor.—Cannon v. Handley, 72 Cal. 140, 13 Pac. 315; McDonald v. Huff, 77 Cal. 282, 19 Pac. 499.

[c] On the question whether a grantor had power to recall a deed delivered in escrow, evidence of subsequent acts of the grantor, tending to show his intentions at the time he made the deed, is inadmissible.—Bury v. Young, 98 Cal. 446, 35 Am. St. Rep. 186, 33 Pac. 338.

§ 5. Performance of Conditions or Occurrence of Contingency.

[a] Delivery in escrow does not become absolute until conditions are fulfilled.—Beem v. McKusick, 10 Cal. 538.

[b] Where an instrument is conditionally delivered to a third party, it is not operative and binding until the conditions are performed.—Dyson v. Bradshaw, 23 Cal. 528; McLaughlin v. Clausen, 85 Cal. 322, 24 Pac. 636.

[c] When condition is performed by grantee of escrow he is absolutely entitled to it.—Cannon v. Handley, 72 Cal. 140, 13 Pac. 315.

[d] Where a deed of gift provided for its delivery to be held in escrow and delivered to the grantee at the moment of the grantor's death, a compliance with the provision constituted a delivery, and operated to convey title to the grantee.—Schuur v. Rodenback, 133 Cal. 85, 65 Pac. 298.

[e] Holder of option for the purchase of certain land, being in default, held not entitled to enforce a delivery of the deed either against the vendors or a depositary of the deed in escrow.—White v. Bank of Hanford (Cal. Sup.), 83 Pac. 698.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 575; 19 Cent. Dig., col. 1829, § 16.

§ 6. Time When Instrument Takes Effect.

[a] The delivery of a note in escrow during the lifetime of a party becomes absolute upon the happening of the condition after his death.—Bostwick v. McEvoy, 62 Cal. 496.

[b] Deed delivered in escrow vests title in grantee upon delivery to him by depositary, but takes effect immediately as against intervening grantee with notice.—McDonald v. Huff, 77 Cal. 282, 19 Pac. 499.

[c] Contract to convey on certain conditions is binding on vendor from its delivery to depositary without signature or written contract from vendee.—McDonald v. Huff, 77 Cal. 282, 19 Pac. 499.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 588; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1823-1828, §§ 12-14.

§ 7. Representative Character of Depositary.

[a] When condition is performed depositary becomes custodian of grantee, holding deed for him.—Cannon v. Handley, 72 Cal. 141, 13 Pac. 315.

[a] Facts held sufficient to show a valid delivery of a deed in escrow.—Hayden v. Collins, 1 Cal. App. 259, 81 Pac. 1120.

[b] Depositary is bound to deliver deed on performance of condition in contract under which he holds it.—McDonald v. Huff, 77 Cal. 282, 19 Pac. 499.

[bc] A mortgagor agreed in writing to execute a deed to the mortgagee, and leave it in escrow, to be delivered on default by him in paying an agreed sum less than the amount due, provided the mortgagee gave a receipt in full. The deed was left with a third person. Default was made, but the mortgagor demanded the deed back, and, though he did not receive it, conveyed to another, who knew the facts. The holder delivered the deed to the mortgagee's attorney, who receipted for all demands against the mortgagor. Held, that this delivery and acceptance were binding on the mortgagor, and his grantee took no title.—McDonald v. Huff, 77 Cal. 279, 19 Pac. 499.

[c] Defendant executed a deed, naming plaintiff as grantee, and delivered it to M. There was no evidence to show for what purpose such deed was executed, nor was there any agreement between plaintiff and defendant in regard thereto. Held, that a delivery of the deed to plaintiff by M. could only constitute either an absolute sale of the land to plaintiff, or a mortgage of it by defendant to plaintiff, for some liability of her own to plaintiff, and that M. was not acting within the apparent scope of his authority when he delivered the deed to secure plaintiff for advances made to himself.—Hubback v. Ross, 96 Cal. 426, 31 Pac. 353.

[d] Where an agent for the sale of land, intrusted with a deed thereof, through the negligence of the vendee, who knew that he was authorized to deliver the deed only after a purchase money note and mortgage were executed to the vendor, fraudulently took the note and mortgage in his own name, there was no valid delivery, and the vendor was entitled to a lien for the price, as against an innocent purchaser of the mortgage.—Raymond v. Glover, 37 Pac. 772.

[a] In most cases difference between legal and equitable estates is of no practical importance.—Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 527, 24 Pac. 172, 25 Pac. 64.

§ 3. Presumptions in Favor of Vesting.

§ 4. Merger.

[a] At law, a merger always takes place when greater and less estate meet in the same person, in the same right, without an intermediate estate.—Rumpp v. Gerkens, 59 Cal. 496.

[b] In respect to the merger of a lesser estate in a greater, equity is not controlled by the rules of law; but is governed by the actual or presumed intention of the person in whom the interests are united.—Shafer v. McCloskey, 101 Cal. 576, 36 Pac. 196.

[c] Where a cotenant on an estate for years is also the owner of the reversion, the estate for years will not be deemed merged in his reversionary interest so as to prevent a separate sale in partition of the estate for years, where his interests would be jeopardized by the sale of such reversionary interest.—Jameson v. § 5. Presumptions Where Party Enters Estate Under Good and Bad Claim.

[a] Where a party has entered into the enjoyment of an estate, under two claims, one of which is good and the other bad, he will be regarded as having entered under the better claim.—Wood v. Curran, 99 Cal. 137, 33 Pac. 774.

§ 6. Power of Owner to Annex Condition to His Estate.

[a] One owning land, and who continues to hold all the interest he ever had in it, cannot annex a condition to his estate of such a character that, upon its breach, the estate shall vest by a forfeiture in a person who never held any interest in the land.—Wiseman v. McNulty, 25 Cal. 230.

§ 1. Judicial Proceedings in General.

[a] If plaintiff offers competent testimony to prove certain facts, and it is rejected by the court on the objection of the defendant, the defendant will not afterward be permitted to allege that the plaintiff failed to prove the facts embraced in the offer.—Thompson v. McKay, 41 Cal. 221.

[b] Party whose appeal is entertained is estopped to deny to that judgment was final.—Clark v. Dunnam, 46 Cal. 208.

[c] Party cannot allow known irregularity to exist during whole trial, take chances on favorable verdict and object for first time after defeat.—Ipswitch v. Fernandez, 84 Cal. 641, 24 Pac. 298.

[e] The plaintiff, if interested in preventing a judgment against the receiver, had ample opportunity, as a party codefendant, to defend against such judgment; and if he had himself dismissed as to the action, and relied upon the receiver making a proper defense, he must abide the result.—Painter v. J. B. Painter Co., 133 Cal. 129, 65 Pac. 311.

[b] One who sues defendants as joint trespassers is estopped to deny they were such.—Fowler v. Frisbie, 37 Cal. 39.

§ 3. —— Pleadings.

[a] Parties are estopped to deny or disprove express allegations, or admissions of their own pleadings.—Edgar v. Gray, 5 Cal. 267.

[b] An allegation in a pleading does not estop the party pleading it from proving that the allegation is not correct, unless the allegation is made of an issuable fact.—Patterson v. Keystone Min. Co., 30 Cal. 360.

[c] A defendant on the trial cannot controvert a fact admitted by the pleadings.—Bradbury v. Cronise, 46 Cal. 287.

[d] If a defendant in his answer admits a material allegation in a complaint he is afterward precluded from contesting it.—Howard v. Throckmorton, 48 Cal. 482.

[e] Sureties made parties to an action and dismissed upon their own demurrer are estopped to deny that they were parties.—People v. Blake, 60 Cal. 504.

[f] Defendant is not at liberty to dispute a positive averment in his answer.—Brusie v. Gates, 96 Cal. 265, 31 Pac. 111.

[g] A party is not estopped by allegations in his pleadings in a prior action, admitting the existence of a corporation, when the parties to the second action and the issues presented therein are different.—Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27, 62 Pac. 386.

[h] Plaintiff, by bringing the lessor into court, and asking it to find the amount of rent due to him, and by allowing the court to pass upon the issues raised by the answer as though properly made, is estopped from claiming that the matter pleaded in the answer was not the subject of a counterclaim. He will not be allowed to lull his adversary into repose until his claim is barred by statute in an independent action, and then raise a point which is destructive of the claim.—McDougald v. Hulet, 132 Cal. 154, 64 Pac. 278.

[i] A party in one action is not bound by allegations in a complaint in another action to which he is not a party.—Mellus v. Mellus, 8 Pac. 1.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1889-1901, §§ 2-5; cols. 1903, § 7.

§ 4. —— Admissions During Trial.

[a] Where one of the issues was the condition of the goods (hops) in question when they left New York, and defendant had admitted on the trial that "if merchantable when they left New York, he made no claim," held, that he was concluded by this admission.—Burritt v. Gibson, 3 Cal. 396.

[b] Party is estopped to deny an admission made upon the trial of a cause.—Vandall v. South etc. Co., 40 Cal. 92.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1903-1908, § 8.

§ 5. —— Stipulations.

[a] Where the parties stipulate that the deposition of a witness out of the state may be taken by a designated person, and when taken may be used on the trial, they are afterward estopped from objecting that the deposition was not taken under a commission issued by the trial court.—Palmer v. Uncas Min. Co., 70 Cal. 614, 11 Pac. 666; Holm v. Uncas Min. Co., 70 Cal. 614, 11 Pac. 666.

[a] The doctrine of res judicata not being applicable to motions for alias writs, and such other like motions made in the course of practice, the court may, on a proper showing, allow the renewal of such a motion, which has been once decided.—Ford v. Doyle, 44 Cal. 635.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1908, 1909, § 9.

§ 7. Petitions.

[a] A person held land under a Spanish grazing grant for a period of twenty years, and after his death his four sons occupied the same under a claim of ownership. On the death of two of the sons, the widows agreed with the survivors on a verbal partition of the premises, and later they presented a petition to the governor, representing that the premises had been granted to their ancestors, and asking that the title to the separate portions, as determined by the partition, be declared to be in petitioners. This petition was granted. Afterward the children of one of the widows mentioned brought an action for their father's share of the land in question, claiming that the title vested in them at his death, and that their mother had no right to convey. Held that, in this action, the averments of the petition to the governor did not work an estoppel as against the widow or her grantee, preventing their denial that at any time the title had vested in their ancestors.—Nieto's Heirs v. Carpenter, 21 Cal. 455.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1901-1903, § 6.

§ 8. Estoppel of City, by Ordinances.

[a] Subsequent ordinance appropriating proceeds of an invalid sale of city property under first ordinance does not ratify it by implication, and the city is not estopped from denying the sale and asserting title to the property sold.—McCracken v. City of San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591.

§ 9. Persons Estopped.

[a] A woman was twice married, and, having heard that her first husband was living, began proceedings to obtain a divorce from him. Held, that her affidavit in such case that she was the wife of defendant at the time of her subsequent marriage to another did not estop her from denying such fact in an action by her second husband to annul the second marriage.—Hunter v. Hunter, 111 Cal. 261, 43 Pac. 756.

§ 10. Pleading Estoppel.

[a] If no objection is taken when an estoppel by record is offered in evidence that it was not specially pleaded, no objection can afterward be made for that reason.—Flandreau v. Downey, 23 Cal. 354.

[b] Estoppel by record, to be available, must be pleaded.—(1853) Hostler v. Hays, 3 Cal. 302; (1869) Blood v. Marcuse, 38 Cal. 590, 99 Am. Dec. 590.

§ 11. Instruments Operating as Estoppel—Deeds.

[a] A deed of conveyance, release, and partition, between all the claimants of a certain tract, with a proviso that it is to take effect when, and only when, the commissioners thereby appointed to make partition shall have recorded their report, estops a party to it to deny that he had title, and to dispute the title the other parties derive under it. He cannot afterward set up that he only released a certain title to the land, and that he held at the time, and now holds, by a paramount title.—Tewskbury v. Provizzo, 12 Cal. 20.

[b] A deed of land executed by a defendant in an action of ejectment, to which the plaintiff in the action is an entire stranger, cannot operate in that action as an estoppel by deed upon the defendant who executed it.—Franklin v. Dorland, 28 Cal. 175.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 688, 689, 706-710; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1915-1917, §§ 19-21.

§ 12. —— Mortgages.

[a] A mortgage or any encumbrance gives rise to an estoppel, under our statute, as much as an absolute conveyance.—Clark v. Baker, 14 Cal. 612, 76 Am. Dec. 449.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Estoppel created by mortgage against the mortgagor: 45 Am. Dec. 392, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 689; 19 Cent. Dig., col. 1917, § 23.

§ 13. —— Acknowledgments.

[a] Where a person named in a grant of real property appears in person before a notary and acknowledges a signature attached thereto as his own he is estopped from afterward denying his declaration, as well as his signature, against anyone who, without any other notice or knowledge than is conveyed by the deed, parts with his property on the strength thereof.—Blaisdell v. Leach, 101 Cal. 405, 40 Am. St. Rep. 65, 35 Pac. 1019.

§ 14. —— Invalid or Defective Instruments.

[a] Where a deed of partition is invalid as a conveyance by reason of its nonacceptance by some of those who were parties to it, and some of the parties entered under such imperfect deed upon the portion set apart therein, a party who had signed the deed, but who had not done anything to adopt or ratify the partition, is not estopped to deny the validity of the deed.—Tewksbury v. O'Connell, 21 Cal. 60.

[b] Married woman is not estopped to dispute validity of her defectively executed mortgage which was of no benefit to her, where mortgagee was not deceived into contracting the loan.—Tolman v. Smith, 74 Cal. 350, 16 Pac. 189.

§ 15. Recitals in Instruments in General.

[a] Estoppel is not created by a recital in a sublease that she held a lease of the property for the unexpired term, which only tended to show that she then knew of the assignment, which in fact had no existence for want of delivery.—Canale v. Copello, 137 Cal. 22, 69 Pac. 698.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1921-1962, §§ 27-51.

§ 16. —— Recitals in Deeds.

[a] Party is not allowed to controvert declaration he has made by deed.—Tartar v. Hall, 3 Cal. 263.

[b] A party making a deed is not estopped, as between the original parties to it, by recitals unnecessary to the conveyance.—Osborne v. Endicott, 6 Cal. 149, 65 Am. Dec. 498.

[c] Recital of payment in a deed is not an estoppel.—Cahoon v. Robinson, 6 Cal. 226.

[d] A grantor and his representatives, in the absence of fraud, are estopped by the consideration clause in a deed from alleging that it was executed without consideration.—(Cal. 1862) Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47.

[e] Recital of material fact in deed is binding and conclusive upon the party reciting it, and all claiming under him as privies. This rule applies to a recital of the fact that a notice of sale, essential to the validity of the deed, was fully given.—Simson v. Eckstein, 22 Cal. 580.

[f] The parties to a deed are not estopped by the consideration expressed in it from showing the real consideration.—(Cal. 1863) Irvine v. McKeon, 23 Cal. 472.

[g] An executor is estopped from denying the recitals of a deed made by him, as to his having taken the oath of office and received letters testamentary.—Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 560.

[h] A deed is not conclusive evidence of the existence of facts therein recited dehors the contract of transfer, such as its date, acknowledgment of payment, consideration, etc.—Rhine v. Ellen, 36 Cal. 362.

[i] Parties to deed are not estopped from denying collateral facts recited therein, not essential to its validity, as an operative conveyance of the estate granted.—Ingersoll v. Truebody, 40 Cal. 603.

[j] A recital in a deed, to the effect that the grantee is about to divert the waters of a certain creek (which flowed through the grantor's land) and to appropriate the same, followed by a grant of the right of way to conduct water over the land of the grantor, does not estop the grantor from denying the right of the grantee to divert the waters of said creek.—Zimmler v. San Luis Water Co., 57 Cal. 221.

[k] Particular recitals in a deed are binding upon parties and privies, and this doctrine applies to the authorized acts of a corporation; but it is essential to an estoppel by deed that the deed itself should be a valid instrument, and if void, though under seal, it does not work an estoppel at law or in equity.—Gordon v. City of San Diego, 101 Cal. 522, 40 Am. St. Rep. 73, 36 Pac. 18.

[a] Where defendant gave plaintiff his note in consideration of certain lands conveyed by plaintiff to defendant, and at the same time gave a mortgage on the lands as security, it was held that, in an action on the note, defendant was estopped by his declarations in the mortgage to deny the want of title of plaintiff in the lands, as a want of consideration to the note.—Tartar v. Hall, 3 Cal. 263.

[b] Where a surety gives a mortgage to secure payment of a note and also payment of three thousand and sixty-four dollars according to terms of an agreement attached to and made part of the mortgage, by which the mortgagee makes a sale to the principal, in the form of a lease, of certain enumerated articles, and the principal agrees to pay three thousand and sixty-four dollars therefor, the mortgagor is not estopped by recitals of the mortgage that the principal is justly indebted in the sum of three thousand and sixty-four dollars, "agreed to be paid as rent . . . . for [certain enumerated articles] in accordance with the lease, ... of which a copy is attached hereto and made a part hereof," to assert that thereafter the lease was materially altered as to what was to be done by the mortgagee, and that, consequently, no indebtedness accrued "in accordance with the lease."—Parke & Lacy Co. v. White River Lumber Co., 110 Cal. 658, 43 Pac. 202.

[c] A husband who signs a mortgage in which it is stipulated that, in case of foreclosure, the surplus of the purchase money should be paid to his wife or her heirs or assigns, is estopped, both as against the mortgagee and as against his wife, from asserting that the mortgaged property was community property.—Hoeck v. Greif, 142 Cal. 119, 75 Pac. 670.

[d] A mortgagor is estopped by the terms of the mortgage deed importing a conveyance of the fee to deny that his estate was other than an estate in fee.—Trope v. Kerns, 20 Pac. 82.

§ 18. —— Recitals in Bonds.

[a] The sureties on a statutory undertaking given to release property attached, reciting the fact of the levy, cannot, when sued on the undertaking, question the fact of the levy.—McMillan v. Dana, 18 Cal. 339.

[b] The recitals of a bond given to dissolve an attachment are conclusive as between the parties, and the sureties cannot show that the property attached did not belong to the principal, as whose property it was attached.—Pierce v. Whiting, 63 Cal. 538.

[c] A recital in an executor's bond that, "by order of the probate court . . . . duly made and entered, ... the above-bounden H. was appointed executor," etc., estops the surety to deny that the order appointing the executor was duly made and entered.—Moore v. Earl, 91 Cal. 632, 27 Pac. 1087.

§ 19. —— Covenants.

[a] A covenant of nonclaim in a deed amounts to the ordinary covenant of warranty, and operates equally as an estoppel.—Gee v. Moore, 14 Cal. 472.

[b] Defendant conveyed the premises in controversy by warranty deed to C., and plaintiff claimed under an execution sale thereof against C. Held, that defendant was estopped by his deed from asserting any title against all claiming under C.—Dodge v. Walley, 22 Cal. 224, 83 Am. Dec. 61.

§ 20. Persons Estopped.

[b] Estoppels by deed bind only parties and privies.—(Cal. 1865) Franklin v. Dorland, 28 Cal. 175, 87 Am. Dec. 111.

[c] Estoppels must be mutual; and where it does not appear that the first grantee of a city, or his successor to an undivided half of a pueblo lot, do not still hold an undivided interest in the west half of the lot, the city cannot be estopped from claiming its original undivided interest in the east half thereof by reason of the conveyance of the west half of the lot as a specific tract to a subsequent grantee.—Gordon v. City of San Diego, 101 Cal. 522, 40 Am. St. Rep. 73, 36 Pac. 18.

[d] Estoppels must be mutual; and the party failing to sign the contract cannot be estopped by a voluntary compliance with a part of its conditions, where the party signing the same cannot be held bound under the proposed contract, but can repudiate it at any time.—Spinney v. Downing, 108 Cal. 666, 41 Pac. 797.

§ 21. —— Persons Acting in Particular Character or Capacity.

[a] A deed executed by an attorney who has a general power "to make and execute conveyances," the consideration for which has been received by the principal, cannot be assailed by him.—Hunter v. Watson, 12 Cal. 363, 73 Am. Dec. 543.

§ 22. —— Purchaser from Mortgagor.

[a] In action for possession of a city lot, defendant claimed under a sale and deed to him, made under a power of sale mortgage. Plaintiff claimed under a deed from mortgagor, dated subsequent to defendant's deed. Held, that plaintiff, as claiming under mortgagor, is estopped from denying that notice of sale under mortgage was properly given.—Simson v. Eckstein, 22 Cal. 580.

§ 23. Grantors or Mortgagors and Privies.

[a] Grantor cannot question his own conveyance.—Burkett v. Burkett, 78 Cal. 316, 12 Am. St. Rep. 58, 20 Pac. 715.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 686, 715, 716; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 1980-2000, §§ 63-68.

§ 24. —— To Impeach or Deny Own Title.

[a] Mortgagor, having mortgaged land as his own property, is estopped, as are his privies in estate, from saying it is public land.—Haffley v. Maier, 13 Cal. 13.

[b] A mortgagor who mortgages in fee is estopped from denying that the estate mortgaged was other or less than an estate in fee simple.—Vallejo Land Assn. v. Viera, 48 Cal. 572.

[c] Where court finds that plaintiff became a purchaser by a deed from defendants and others, and entered into possession, without proof of a subsequently acquired title from a paramount source, defendants are estopped from denying that they were the owners when deed to plaintiff was executed.—Belcher Consol. Gold Min. Co. v. Deferrari, 62 Cal. 160.

[d] Under the facts held that, as it was the intention of the first grantor to convey a perfect title to the specific tract, he was estopped to impeach it.—Emeric v. Alvarado, 90 Cal. 444, 27 Pac. 356.

[e] Grantor of land is estopped by his deed of grant, bargain, and sale to the grantee, purporting to convey an absolute title to the land, from denying that before and at the time of that deed he had such absolute title, and by that deed conveyed it to the grantee; and, if any title is thereafter acquired by the grantor through a tax deed, such title inures to the benefit of the grantee alone.—De Frieze v. Quint, 94 Cal. 653, 28 Am. St. Rep. 151, 30 Pac. 1.

§ 25. —— To Set Up Title in Another.

§ 26. Grantees.

[a] Where the owner of realty executed conveyances to his children, and remained in possession until his death, the children, by accepting confirmation deeds, were not estopped from claiming title under the former conveyances.—Tully v. Tully, 137 Cal. 60, 69 Pac. 700.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 686-716; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2000-2010, §§ 69-74.

§ 27. —— To Deny Grantor's Title.

[a] Where the plaintiff and defendant both derive title to land from the same person, the plaintiff is estopped, by his purchase, from denying the title of the common grantor for the purpose of establishing a title in himself by virtue of location of the land under school land warrants.—Ellis v. Jeans, 7 Cal. 409.

[b] A vendee may deny the title of his vendor. Parties with clear titles may buy out settlers and trespassers rather than incur the expense and delay of establishing their rights by litigation; and where, in such case, they are made parties to a suit to foreclose a mortgage executed by their grantor previously to the conveyance to them, they are not estopped from denying the title of the mortgagor, and from claiming that their rights under their previous titles are superior to those of the mortgagee.—San Francisco v. Lawton, 18 Cal. 465, 79 Am. Dec. 187.

[c] A grantee of land in fee may deny that he received any estate by the conveyance. With the execution of the conveyance the transaction between the parties is closed. Thenceforth the grantee holds the property for himself, and is neither bound to surrender possession to his grantor or to maintain the validity of his title.—San Francisco v. Lawton, 18 Cal. 465, 79 Am. Dec. 187.

[d] The doctrine that grantees are estopped to deny the title of their grantors does not apply where the only title derived by the grantee from the grantor is a real or pretended claim to the premises set up by the grantor and bought in by the grantee to quiet his title. The purchase of the grantor's adversary title, if it does not strengthen the grantee's title, does not impair it.—(Cal. 1869) Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535, 95 Am. Dec. 205.

[e] When two or more persons separately purchase distinct parcels of land from a common grantor, who possesses the same under an invalid title, and one of them afterward acquires the true title to the whole, he is not estopped from denying, in ejectment against the others, that the purchase from the holder of the invalid title was void. Collins v. Bartlett, 44 Cal. 371.

§ 28. —— To Show That Deed is Mortgage.

[a] Grantee is estopped as against innocent purchaser from showing deed a mortgage.—Jackson v. Lodge, 36 Cal. 43.

§ 29. —— To Deny Own Title.

[a] Where after marriage husband purchased with common funds and took a deed of lands which he had occupied without title before marriage, in action for the division of common property after divorce he is estopped to deny, as far as his wife is concerned, that he acquired a good title by the purchase.—Johnson v. Johnson, 11 Cal. 200, 70 Am. Dec. 774.

§ 30. Matters Precluded.

[a] One contracting to sell whole land without fraud or mistake is estopped from averring that he sold an undivided interest.—Marshall v. Caldwell, 41 Cal. 611.

[b] Party giving a release of damages for negligence is estopped to deny the negligence, or that money was paid in satisfaction therefor.—Tompkins v. Clay St. R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 164, 4 Pac. 1165.

[c] Where one gave a trust deed to a bank, he was estopped to deny its power to take it.—Camp v. Land, 122 Cal. 167, 54 Pac. 839.

[d] Person selling another a strip of land for right of way is estopped from denying, as against his grantee, that it is a highway.—Hartley v. Vermillion, 141 Cal. 349, 74 Pac. 987.

[e] Plaintiff, having written the contract, may not question the plain and obvious meaning of its terms.—Boyd v. Liefer, 144 Cal. 336, 77 Pac. 953.

[f] In an action to quiet title to the east half of a tract of land, it appeared that defendant, being the owner of the entire tract, conveyed to plaintiff the undivided half interest therein; that afterward, but before plaintiff's deed was recorded, defendant conveyed to another the west half of the tract in fee. Held, that the fact that defendant thus undertook to convey the entire interest in the west half of the tract did not estop it to claim its undivided interest in the east half.—Gordon v. City of San Diego, 32 Pac. 885.

[g] A delivered deed is conclusive as to the intent of the grantor to convey the property described.—Mascarel v. Mascarel's Exrs. (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 617.

§ 32. Application of Rule in General.

[a] Under the Spanish law, an after-acquired title cannot by estoppel inure to the benefit of a former grantee.—(Cal. 1881) Bixby v. Bent, 59 Cal. 522.

§ 33. Instruments Operating on Title Subsequently Acquired—Deeds.

[a] A subsequently acquired title inures by way of estoppel to the benefit of a grantee in a deed, where it distinctly appears upon the face of the instrument, by recital or otherwise, that the intent of the parties was to convey and receive reciprocally a certain estate.—Clark v. Baker, 14 Cal. 612, 76 Am. Dec. 449.

[b] Since the act of conveyances (section 33) gives to deeds an operation equivalent to covenant of warranty, as to subsequently acquired interest by the grantor, where an owner conveyed by bargain and sale, and afterward purchased the land on foreclosure of a mortgage executed before his conveyance, the title acquired at such purchase inures by estoppel to the benefit of the grantee.—Green v. Clark, 31 Cal. 592.

[c] A quitclaim deed will not estop the grantor from setting up an after-acquired title.—(Cal. 1867) Cadiz v. Majors, 33 Cal. 288.

[d] An execution sale and sheriff's deed does not estop the execution debtor from asserting a subsequently acquired interest or right of possession to the land sold, as against the right of possession and interest sold and transferred by the sheriff's deed.—Emerson v. Sansome, 41 Cal. 552.

[e] One's quitclaim is rendered ineffectual by his after-acquired title.—Tabler v. Peverill (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 994.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 692-694; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2021-2051, §§ 91-109.

§ 34. —— Dedication.

[a] Owner without title at time of dedication and his grantee are estopped to question dedication and after-acquired title feeds estoppel.—Napa v. Howland, 87 Cal. 86, 25 Cal. 247.

§ 35. —— Conveyances with Covenants.

[a] Covenant of nonclaim is confined to the estate granted, and where that is "the right, title, and interest" of the grantor, instead of the land itself, the covenant does not estop him from setting up an after-acquired interest.—Gee v. Moore, 14 Cal. 472.

[b] A warranty against all encumbrances, claims, or demands created, made, or suffered by, through, or under the grantor, and against none other, in a deed conveying the grantor's interest in land, attaches itself to the interest conveyed, and not to the land, and does not preclude the grantor from setting up an after-acquired title, nor does it cause such after-acquired title to inure to the benefit of the grantee.—Kimball v. Semple, 25 Cal. 440.

§ 37. Title Acquired by Adverse Possession as Against Grantee.

[a] Where a grantor holds lands adversely to his grantee for the statutory period, the title vests in him, and a subsequent conveyance to him of an outstanding title inures to his benefit, and not that of his grantee.—Garabaldi v. Shattuck, 70 Cal. 511, 11 Pac. 778.

§ 38. Nature of Doctrine in General.

[a] "If one is silent when he should speak, justice will compel him to silence when he would speak."—Bryan v. Ramirez, 8 Cal. 467.

[b] At common law a purely equitable estoppel, or purely equitable title, could not be entertained even if it were represented upon the record.—Clarke v. Huber, 25 Cal. 593.

[c] Whenever an act is done or statement made by a party which cannot be contravened or contradicted by him without fraud on his part and injury to others, whose conduct, without fault on their part, has been influenced by the act done or statement made, the character of estoppel will attach to what would otherwise be mere matter of evidence.—Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 23.

[d] Doctrine of estoppel which may be said to be founded upon the adage that "the truth is not to be spoken at all times" is a harsh one, and is never to be applied except where to allow the truth to be told would consummate a wrong to the one party or enable the other to secure an unfair advantage.—Franklin v. Merida, 35 Cal. 558, 95 Am. Dec. 129.

[e] Equitable estoppels are founded solely on theory that to permit the party to maintain the right which he asserts would operate as a legal fraud upon his adversary.—Farish v. Coon, 40 Cal. 33.

[f] Estoppel can only be invoked to preclude party making false statement from denying its truth as against party ignorant of its falsity. (McKee, dissenting.)—Hand v. Hand, 68 Cal. 141, 58 Am. Rep. 5, 8 Pac. 705.

[g] Estoppel in pais is where defendant has been induced by act, declarations or conduct of plaintiff.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 266, 10 Pac. 674.

[h] Estoppel in pais is a defense at law and equity.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 266, 10 Pac. 674.

[i] Where person, by word or conduct, induces another to act on belief in the existence of a certain state of facts, he will be estopped as against him to allege a different state of facts.—Dolbeer v. Livingston, 100 Cal. 617, 35 Pac. 328.

[ij] An estoppel in pais addresses itself to equity, and it is to be distinguished from ratification, which is a question of legal cognizance; and it is only where the acts fall short of a legal ratification that the necessity exists of invoking the doctrine of estoppel.—Blood v. La Serena L. & W. Co., 113 Cal. 221, 41 Pac. 1017, 45 Pac. 252.

[j] One who is silent when in conscience he ought to speak will not be allowed to speak when conscience requires him to be silent.—Cummings v. Kearney, 141 Cal. 160, 74 Pac. 759.

See 16 Cyc. 719-726; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2062-2069, §§ 121-125; cols. 2073, 2074, § 127.

§ 39. Essentials and Elementary Facts Creating Estoppel.

[a] Before a party can urge an estoppel against another he must be misled by the conduct of the other as to facts known to the latter.—Burritt v. Dickson, 8 Cal. 113.

[b] To constitute an estoppel in pais as to the title to land, it must appear that the party making the admission by his declarations or conduct was apprised of the true state of his own title, that he intended to deceive or was culpably negligent in the nonassertion of his rights, that the other party had no knowledge or means of acquiring knowledge of the true state of the title, and that he relied upon such admission to his injury.—Boggs v. Merced Min. Co., 14 Cal. 279.

[c] An estoppel in pais rests upon the principle that the party has misled another to his prejudice, under such circumstances that it would be a fraud for him to assert what may be the truth. Hence to raise an estoppel from former admissions by a party to prevent him from setting up his title to property, the facts must show (1) that when making the admission relied upon he was apprised of the true state of his own title; (2) that he made the admission with the express intention to deceive, or with such careless or culpable negligence as to amount to constructive fraud; (3) that the other party had neither knowledge of the true state of the title nor convenient means of acquiring such knowledge by the use of ordinary diligence; and (4) that he relied directly upon such admission, and will be injured by allowing it truth to be disproved.—Martin v. Zellerbach, 38 Cal. 300, 99 Am. Dec. 365.

[e] There must be some element of wrong in action of party creating equitable estoppel. He must know or have reason to believe that other party will be injured in consequence of his act or statement.—Wheaton v. North British etc. Co., 76 Cal. 432, 9 Am. St. Rep. 216-n, 18 Pac. 758; Dean v. Parker, 88 Cal. 288, 26 Pac. 91.

[g] The vital principle of equitable estoppel is, that he who by his language or conduct leads another to do what he would not otherwise have done, shall not subject such person to loss or injury by disappointing the expectations upon which he acted; and when a person tacitly encourages an act to be done, he cannot afterward exercise his legal right in opposition to such consent, if his conduct or acts of encouragement induced the party to change his position, so that he will be pecuniarily prejudiced by the assertion of an adverse claim.—Carpy v. Dowdell, 115 Cal. 677, 47 Pac. 695.

[a] Without element of deceit there can be no estoppel.—Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 526, 24 Pac. 172, 25 Pac. 64.

§ 41. Intent.

[a] Where the owner of property represents that certain property in his possession belongs to a third party, and a creditor of such third party, hearing of the fact, attaches it, the particular intent with which the declaration was made is not material on the question of estoppel.—Mitchell v. Reed, 9 Cal. 204, 70 Am. Dec. 647.

[b] Party making admissions or declarations must know true state of his own title to be estopped by them, and they must have been made with intent to deceive the party or with culpable negligence claiming an estoppel.—Boggs v. Merced M. Co., 14 Cal. 280.

[c] Statement must be made with express intention to deceive or such negligence as to amount to constructive fraud.—Montgomery v. Keppel, 75 Cal. 133, 16 Pac. 705.

[d] Declaration must be made or act done with intent to deceive or culpable negligence amounting to constructive fraud.—Griffeth v. Brown, 76 Cal. 262, 18 Pac. 372.

[e] Declaration not made to deceive and not appearing to have deceived or induced any action will not estop.—Morgan v. Lones, 78 Cal. 61, 20 Pac. 248.

[f] In a sheriff's interpleader action, a finding that plaintiff in the execution was estopped from setting up a previous assignment to him was not a necessary inference from a further finding that the execution was levied by the sheriff under instructions from the execution plaintiff, where the execution defendant was not misled thereby, but successfully resisted the execution proceedings, and it was not shown that the execution plaintiff's action was the result of intentional deceit or negligence.—Lackmann v. Kearney, 142 Cal. 112, 75 Pac. 668.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 726-728; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2070-2073, § 126.

§ 42. Knowledge of Facts.

[a] Mere disclaimer of ownership will not amount to an estoppel where the person making it at the time was ignorant of the true state of his title.—Boggs v. Merced Min. Co., 14 Cal. 280.

[b] Party claiming an estoppel need not be destitute of all possible means of knowledge if he has no convenient means.—Miller & Board of Education of Sacramento City, 44 Cal. 166.

[c] There can be no estoppel where the facts are not known.—Wheaton v. North British etc. Co., 76 Cal. 429, 9 Am. St. Rep. 216-n, 18 Pac. 758.

[d] The fact that the owner of the lot on the east side of the former street, under a mistaken belief of right, took possession of all the land between his premises and the east line of the new street, does not waive his claim to just compensation before he can be deprived of his easement in the former street, nor estop him by conduct, acquiescence, or election from contesting the closing of the former street.—Bigelow v. Ballerino, 111 Cal. 559, 44 Pac. 307.

[e] Delivery of property, by mistake of fact, or law, does not estop party delivering it from recovering it or its value.—Davis v. Winona Wagon Co., 120 Cal. 249, 52 Pac. 487.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Forgetfulness or mistake as a defense to a claim of estoppel: 38 Am. Rep. 315, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 730-734; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2074-2084, §§ 128-135.

§ 43. —— Mistake of Law.

[a] Corporation acting in disposal of its property, under a full knowledge of the facts, cannot plead ignorance of the law, and its contract being binding on it, is also binding upon the parties purchasing.—Holland v. San Francisco, 7 Cal. 361.

[b] Where a partnership crop, amounting to less than nineteen tons, was sold under attachment against one of the partners and purchased by the attaching creditor, although the other partner, through mistake of law, notified the officer at the time of the attachment that he owned one-half the crop, "less nineteen tons belonging to" the lessor, he was not estopped to recover his share from the purchaser.—Leedom v. Ham (Cal.), 48 Pac. 222.

§ 44. Reliance on Adverse Party.

[a] The fact that the plaintiff in ejectment stood by and saw the defendant erect improvements on the land cannot be pleaded as an estoppel by a trespasser, where the fact of title is open and notorious, or can be easily ascertained, as by reference to the recorder's office.—Ferris v. Chapman, 10 Cal. 589.

[b] Acts or declarations must have influenced conduct of party to his injury.—Wheaton v. North British etc. Co., 76 Cal. 432, 9 Am. St. Rep. 216-n, 18 Pac. 758.

[c] Person claiming benefit of estoppel must show that he was misled by conduct of other party.—Washington v. Black, 83 Cal. 294, 23 Pac. 300.

[d] Party claiming estoppel must have relied on conduct of other and have been induced by it to do something which he would not otherwise have done.—McCormick v. Orient Ins. Co., 86 Cal. 263, 24 Pac. 1005.

[e] One of the necessary elements of an estoppel is that the party setting it up was induced to act by the conduct or directions of the party sought to be estopped.—Barnhart v. Fulkerth, 93 Cal. 497, 29 Pac. 50.

[f] It is an essential element of estoppel by conduct that the party claiming the estoppel should have relied upon the conduct of the other, and was induced by it to do something which he otherwise would not have done.—First Nat Bank of Los Angeles v. Maxwell, 123 Cal. 360, 55 Pac. 980.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 734-741; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2084-2093, §§ 136-141.

§ 45. Prejudice to Party Setting up Estoppel.

[a] To constitute an act an estoppel in pais, or to operate as an equitable estoppel, it must be of such a character that the repudiation of it by one party would work an injury to another.—Boggs v. Merced Min. Co., 14 Cal. 279.

[b] Party invoking an estoppel must show some act or omission by which he was misled to his injury.—Kelly v. Taylor, 23 Cal. 15, 207.

[c] To constitute an estoppel in pais there must be some act or admission or neglect to act on the part of the party estopped upon which the other party has acted or relied, and in consequence thereof, and through the fault of the party estopped, has placed himself in some respect in a worse position than he otherwise would have been.—Bowman v. Cudworth, 31 Cal. 148.

[d] H., who had no title to a parcel of land, brought an action to recover it of C., who was in possession. During the pendency of the action, G., who owned the title, conveyed it to B. Before the trial, B. surrendered his deed to G., and it was canceled, and G. gave a deed of the same land to H. C. recovered a judgment for the land by stipulation with H. Afterward H. gave up his deed from G. to be destroyed, which was done, and G. again conveyed to B. C. was not acquainted with these transactions. Only the last deed was recorded. Held, in an action by B. against C. for the land, that there was no estoppel in pais to prevent B. from setting up his title to the land, since B. did not mislead C. to place him in a less advantageous position.—Bowman v. Cudworth, 31 Cal. 148.

[e] Where person tacitly encourages act to be done, he cannot afterward exercise his legal right in opposition to such consent, if his conduct or acts of encouragement induced the other party to change his position so that he will be pecuniarily prejudiced by the assertion of such adverse claim.—Scott v. Jackson, 89 Cal. 258, 26 Pac. 898.

[f] Acts by or on account of which no prejudicial change in the position of the parties is effected do not work an estoppel.—Conway v. Supreme Council, Catholic Knights of America, 137 Cal. 384, 70 Pac. 223.

[g] An estoppel in pais cannot be claimed by a corporation as to transactions with its agent, where nothing said or done therein misled the agent to the injury of the corporation.—Gates v. Quong (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 662.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 744; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2099-2106, §§ 144, 145.

§ 46. —— Substantial Character of Prejudice Suffered.

[a] An expenditure to support an estoppel should not be trivial in amount.—McCarthy v. Mutual Relief Assn., 81 Cal. 584, 22 Pac. 933.

§ 47. Estoppel to Take Advantage of One's Own Fault or Wrong.

[a] If action be properly commenced, the party bringing it having obtained the benefit cannot avoid the responsibility he may have thus incurred by pleading his own misfeasance.—Turner v. Billagram, 2 Cal. 520.

§ 48. Applicability to Criminal Proceedings.

[a] Principle of equitable estoppel applies to criminal prosecutions.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 235, 236, 10 Pac. 502.

§ 49. Wrongful or Illegal Acts or Transactions.

[a] Transaction, imbued with fatal infirmity of being in violation of law, cannot be purged of its infirmity by means of an estoppel.—Martin v. Zellerbach, 38 Cal. 300, 99 Am. Dec. 365.

§ 50. Effect of Registry Acts.

[a] Estoppels in pais are not within the registry act.—Bryan v. Ramirez, 8 Cal. 467.

§ 51. Effect of Laches or Delay in Claiming Estoppel.

[a] In an action to recover possession of land held by an innocent purchaser who deraigns title through a forged deed, which has been of record five years with knowledge of the plaintiff, the delay of the plaintiff to attack the forged deed is not material if it be not relied upon as extinguishing the plaintiff's title by the operation of the statute of limitations; and such delay does not estop the plaintiff to say that the alleged deed is not his deed.—Meley v. Collins, 41 Cal. 663, 10 Am. Rep. 279.

§ 52. Operation and Effect of Estoppel.

[a] Estoppel in pais has no more force in binding parties than contract including same subject matter would have.—Thompson v. Doaksum, 68 Cal. 599, 10 Pac. 199.

§ 53. Estoppel Against Public.

[a] Doctrine of estoppel can be invoked against municipal corporations, if at all, only in cases of informality, irregularity, etc., on the part of an authorized agent.—Sutro v. Pettit, 74 Cal. 336, 5 Am. St. Rep. 442, 16 Pac. 7.

[b] The principle of estoppel in pais may be applied against the public in exceptional cases where justice and right require it.—City of Los Angeles v. Cohn, 101 Cal. 373, 35 Pac. 1002.

[c] It is only in exceptional cases that doctrine of equitable estoppel may be invoked against a city.—Sacramento v. Clunie, 120 Cal. 31, 52 Pac. 44.

§ 54. Inconsistent Acts, Claims or Conduct.

[a] When a partnership induced plaintiff to believe in and act upon a partnership liability, they are estopped from denying it.—Burritt v. Dickson, 8 Cal. 113.

[b] Where one having a grant of an unlocated lot of public lands, in good faith, but without authority, makes a survey, and claims thereunder, he is not estopped thereby, as against one who enters upon and occupies adjoining land, upon claiming such land after it has been set off and patented to him under an official survey in the place of part of the land which he claimed.—Boggs v. Merced Min. Co., 14 Cal. 279.

[e] Party is estopped to enforce payment of debt by verbal agreement to forbear.—McDonald v. Huff, 77 Cal. 283, 19 Pac. 499.

[f] Land owner may, by acts or conduct, be estopped from questioning acts of reputed owner.—Santa Cruz etc. Co. v. Lyons, 117 Cal. 213, 59 Am. St. Rep. 174, 48 Pac. 1097.

[h] An assignment of a lease by a deceased to his widow had never been delivered or accepted, but she continued to occupy the premises and pay the rent reserved in the lease, though she never told the lessors that she was holding under the lease. Held, that the payment of rent did not estop her from claiming that she did not hold under the assignment.—Canale v. Copello, 137 Cal. 22, 69 Pac. 698.

[i] The fact that the mayor of a city, as a member of the state board of tide land commissioners, participated in a survey by which certain lands were excluded from the city, and that the city by ordinances approved the survey and maps in accordance therewith—all such acts being prior to a confirmation of the city's title to the land—did not estop the city from claiming the land.—United Land Assn. v. Pacific Imp. Co., 139 Cal. 370, 69 Pac. 1064.

[j] Where defendant's principal accepted papers tendered by plaintiff as an assignment of its claims against another, and possession of property securing plaintiff's lien for such claims, as a sufficient transfer within the requirements of an agreement therefor and the conditions of bonds executed by defendant to secure the payment of plaintiff's claims, both the principal and defendant, having induced plaintiff to abandon its claim on the faith of such bonds, are estopped to assert that the transfer was ineffectual.—Davis, Belau & Co. v. National Surety Co., 139 Cal. 223, 72 Pac. 1001.

[k] An election to disaffirm a contract induced by fraud, and an effort to obtain a rescission, will not, if resisted, and especially if rendered impossible or of doubtful advantage by the act of the guilty party, bar an action on a subsequent affirmance.—Montgomery v. McLaury, 143 Cal. 83, 76 Pac. 964.

[l] The assignee of a note secured by a deed of trust, who purchases the property at a sale under the deed of trust, cannot deny that the payee of the note, his assignor, accepted the deed of trust as security for such note.—Herbert Craft Co. v. Bryan, 68 Pac. 1020.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 784, 785.

§ 55. Inconsistent Claim or Position in Legal Proceeding.

[a] Parties are estopped from assuming inconsistent positions in legal proceedings.—Turner v. Billagram, 2 Cal. 520.

[b] In an action to try the right to a mining claim, counsel cannot claim that there was a bill of sale to the opposite party, for the purpose of excluding evidence of a verbal sale, and at the same time insist that the bill of sale is void.—Patterson v. Keystone Min. Co., 30 Cal. 360; Dyer v. Scalmanini, 69 Cal. 641, 11 Pac. 327; Trick v. Sinon, 75 Cal. 340, 17 Pac. 439; Winter v. McMillan, 87 Cal. 263, 22 Am. St. Rep. 243, 25 Pac. 407.

[f] In an action to recover a balance due for services as president of a corporation, plaintiff is not estopped by reason of having signed, with other directors, an application to the superior court to dissolve the corporation, which stated that all claims of the corporation had been discharged, which was made several months after the corporation had disposed of its property to defendant, who agreed to assume all its indebtedness, and signed by plaintiff under the belief that the assumption of the debts by defendant discharged such debts.—Bushnell v. Simpson, 119 Cal. 658, 51 Pac. 1080.

[g] The fact that, before the trial of claim and delivery for chattels attached to the creditors of plaintiff's vendor, the property was purchased by plaintiff at a sale under the judgment in the attachment suit, did not estop him from asserting that the property was wrongfully attached.—Williams v. Borgwardt, 119 Cal. 80, 51 Pac. 15.

[h] Litigant cannot change his legal position as the wind changes.—Davis v. Winona Wagon Co., 120 Cal. 248, 52 Pac. 487.

[i] A party is not precluded from a claim because inconsistent with some claim previously asserted by him, but not successfully maintained.—Lackmann v. Kearney, 142 Cal. 112, 75 Pac. 668.

[j] The fact that on appeal counsel for plaintiff erroneously claimed before the supreme court that the action was brought only for the foreclosure of plaintiff's lien on a certain piece of land did not estop him from thereafter claiming, in accordance with the opinion of the supreme court on appeal, the right in the same action and on the original complaint to foreclose a lien not only on such tract, but on another.—Kent v. Williams, 146 Cal. 3, 79 Pac. 527.

§ 56. —— Election of Remedies and What Constitutes Election.

[a] Party having inconsistent remedies having clearly elected to proceed upon one, is barred from invoking the other.—Hines v. Ward, 121 Cal. 120, 53 Pac. 427.

[b] Mere fact that plaintiff proceeds on erroneous theory as to relief he is entitled to is not such election as precludes him from amending complaint so as to entitle him to relief which facts warrant.—Hines v. Ward, 121 Cal. 119, 53 Pac. 427.

§ 57. Disavowal or Renunciation of Title or Right.

[a] A disclaimer of title to land made by one who has no claim or right thereto cannot operate as an estoppel unless the person to whom it is made is directly influenced to act on it, and does act on it, so that it would be a fraud on him to permit the disclaimer to be retracted.—Carpentier v. Thirston, 24 Cal. 268.

[ab] In ejectment, where the owner of land innocently and without gross negligence had disclaimed all title to a piece of it, in reply to a question by defendant, who had some knowledge of the true condition of the title, and who subsequently bought it of a third person, it was not error to refuse to instruct that one claiming to own land is bound to know the state of his own title.—Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 23, 85 Am. Dec. 157.

[ac] A party who disclaims all interest in land to one whom he knows is about to purchase it, and who relies on such disclaimer in consummating his purchase, is not estopped to set up a title to the land, if he made the disclaimer in ignorance of his title, and not with intent to deceive, or with gross carelessness.—Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 23, 85 Am. Dec. 157.

[b] In an action of replevin against a sheriff, the defendant justified under an execution against a third person, and pleaded that, before levying on the goods in plaintiff's possession, plaintiff stated to him in answer to his inquiries, that the goods belonged to the execution debtor, and that plaintiff held possession as pledgee. The answer further stated "that the levy was made in sole reliance upon the statement of the plaintiff." Held, that the answer sufficiently pleaded an estoppel, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1962, subdivision 3, which provides that, "whenever a party has deliberately led another to believe a particular thing true, and to act upon such belief, he cannot be permitted to falsify it."—Barnhart v. Fulkerth, 90 Cal. 157, 27 Pac. 71.

[c] A party holding a two thousand dollar mortgage on land, who, when nursery stock valued at twelve thousand dollars was placed thereon, and afterward when portions of it were sold, expressly disclaimed all interest therein, and after foreclosure, and before execution of the sheriff's deed, promised "that he would not claim those trees when he got his sheriff's deed," was estopped to claim them after the time for redemption had expired.—Wallace v. Dodd, 136 Cal. 210, 68 Pac. 693.

§ 58. Clothing Another with Apparent Title or Property.

[a] Owner of certain premises held estopped to deny the execution of a lease on her behalf by her agent.—Niles v. Gonzales, 1 Cal. App. 324, 82 Pac. 212.

[b] In an action to recover rent, facts held to estop plaintiff from claiming that he executed the lease in his own behalf.—Niles v. Gonzales, 1 Cal. App. 324, 82 Pac. 212.

[c] The fact alone that one as the attorney in fact for another executes to a third person a deed of land does not constitute an equitable estoppel, so as to prevent him from afterward setting up a title to the property acquired by him from the person for whom he acted as attorney in fact, before he executed the deed. Smith v. Penny, 44 Cal. 161.

[d] Where the legal title to land is in a trustee, the land having been paid for with funds of the cestui que trust, the latter is not estopped, as against the trustee's creditors, from asserting his title, where he simply allowed the title to stand on record as that of the trustee, but did no act to induce creditors to believe the land belonged to him, and did not know that he was getting credit on the faith of his ownership of the land.—Breeze v. Brooks, 71 Cal. 169, 9 Pac. 670, 11 Pac. 885.

[e] S., the owner of an undivided half interest in a mine, as shown by the records, though witnessing an agreement of V., the owner of the other half, to sell the property, and though present at the mine when it was visited by plaintiff after receiving a deed of the entire property from V., and then wishing plaintiff success, is not estopped to assert his title; he not having known that the deed purported to convey the entire property, and not having made any representations to plaintiff respecting the character of his title.—Faubel v. McFarland, 144 Cal. 717, 78 Pac. 261.

[f] In an action against C. and her son for conversion of farming implements on a ranch, it appeared that C. and her husband sold the ranch, and all farming implements on it, to H., who afterward sold all the personal property to plaintiff; that, before the sale to H., the son bought all the implements on the ranch. H.'s foreman and the agent of C. and husband making an inventory thereof; that the son did not point them out: that before the transfer of the personal property the son told H.'s agent that the implements were his, and the agent knew he was using them; and that, at the time, defendants were living on the ranch, the son being a tenant of H. There was no claim that the son had misled H. as to the ownership of the implements. Held, that he was not estopped from asserting his ownership as against H. or plaintiff.—Warren v. Connor (Cal.), 47 Pac. 43.

[g] Where the vendee in an unrecorded deed, acting as attorney in fact for the vendor, procures a mortgage for the latter on the property, and represents that the vendor is the owner, he is estopped thereafter to set up title to the land except in subordination to the mortgage.—Filippini v. Trobock, 62 Pac. 1066.

[h] Where an attorney in fact borrows money from another on a representation that the money is for his principal, and that the mortgage to secure the same is on land owned by such principal, in whose name the title stands on the record, such attorney and his successor in interest are estopped from afterward claiming title, except subject to the mortgage, under a deed from such principal, executed before the mortgage, which was then unrecorded, but of which the grantee had knowledge. Order (1900) 62 Pac. 1066, reversed.—Filippini v. Trobock, 134 Cal. 441, 66 Pac. 587.

§ 59. —— Relying and Acting on Apparent Title or Authority.

[a] An attaching creditor of the bailee, levying on the money in the hands of a stakeholder with whom it had been deposited by the bailee, cannot claim that the bailor is estopped by having allowed the bailee to use the money in his own name, when the specific money was in question and could be distinguished. The creditor had not been misled by acts or declarations of the bailor, nor had he given credit to the bailor by reason thereof. Hardy v. Hunt, 11 Cal. 343, 70 Am. Dec. 781.

[b] One of the defendants, having borrowed money from plaintiff, obtained a further personal loan by giving him a deed to certain property executed by third persons, representing to plaintiff that he was its real owner. He did not own the property, and obtained the deed by falsely representing to the third persons that plaintiff would loan the money to them. The additional loan was repaid later, but the other borrowed money was not repaid. Held, that, though of two innocent persons the one whose negligence causes the loss must suffer, plaintiff was not entitled to claim the property as against the third persons, as he sustained no loss, the consideration being a mere pre-existing debt, and the additional money secured having been repaid.—Macdonald v. Cool, 134 Cal. 502, 66 Pac. 727.

[c] Where a husband pastures his wife's cattle in return for their use for dairy purposes, she reserving the increase, such use by the husband, accompanied by a representation on his part that they were his, cannot, in the absence of any such representation on her part, or any act tending to mislead one holding a judgment against her husband as to the ownership of the stock, estop the wife from setting up ownership to defeat an execution levied on the stock under such judgment.—Paden v. Goldbaum, 37 Pac. 759.

§ 60. Dealing with Person Asserting Title or Exercising Authority.

[a] An offer to buy out a hostile claim will not estop the party making such offer from asserting title by adverse possession previously acquired.—Frick v. Sinon, 75 Cal. 337, 7 Am. St. Rep. 177, 17 Pac. 439.

[b] The fact that a city purchased a part of a tract of land lying in a street is not sufficient to show that the city recognized a right to the street in the person in possession of the land.—Mills v. City of Los Angeles, 90 Cal. 522, 27 Pac. 354.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 61. —— Officers.

[a] Petitioners for a writ of prohibition to restrain the court from taking any further proceedings with respect to a receiver are not estopped from denying the jurisdiction of the court to appoint said receiver by reason of the fact that they, in an action against them by the receiver to determine their claims to a certain fund, answered, setting up their judgment against the corporation; nor because, in an action by them against the corporation, the receiver was substituted as defendant therein; nor by the fact that in said action a deposition was taken wherein the deponent described himself as the receiver of said corporation; nor because the petitioners did not move the court to desist from taking any further proceedings under the appointment until the receiver refused to satisfy their judgment against the corporation out of the funds in his hands—the petitioners not having been parties to nor having any knowledge of the pleadings in the action wherein said receiver was appointed.—Yore v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 108 Cal. 431, 41 Pac. 477.

§ 62. —— Recognition of Title.

[a] One who enters recognizing another's title, and continues to recognize such title, is estopped from afterward disputing it.—Downer v. Ford, 16 Cal. 345.

§ 63. Contracts and Conveyances not Operating as Deeds.

[a] Where A and B own adjoining lots, and B mortgages his to a third person, describing it by metes and bounds, B is not estopped in pais to assert as against A that the dividing line between the lots is different from that inserted in the mortgage; it not being inserted to influence A in the conduct of his own affairs, and he not being in fact influenced thereby.—Franklin v. Dorland, 28 Cal. 175, 87 Am. Dec. 111.

[ab] Statement of fact in contract cannot be contradicted by obligor to evade payment. Eaton v. Richeri, 83 Cal. 186, 23 Pac. 286.

[b] In a suit to restrain defendants from diverting the waters of a stream which plaintiff claims by adverse user, where there was put in evidence a written agreement between plaintiff and defendants that the latter should pay him for the use of the water during seasons, when there is not enough for all parties, held, that plaintiff was not estopped from claiming the water by a recital in the agreement that defendants are "the owners of the surplus waters."—McLear v. Hapgood, 85 Cal. 555, 557, 24 Pac. 788.

[c] Where, after plaintiff and defendant had executed a written agreement, they entered into a second one, which was designated as supplemental to and explanatory of the first, the fact that it was so designated did not estop defendant from showing that the supplemental agreement was not a part of the original, and that it was without consideration.—Main St. etc. R. Co. v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 129 Cal. 301, 61 Pac. 937.

[d] County contractors held estopped to show that their verified claim for part payment on a heating system contract was not a payment on that contract, but was chargeable to a contract for a ventilating plant. Russell-Vail Engineering Co. v. Kirby (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1078.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 719-721; 19 Cent. Dig., cols 2193-2204, §§ 204-210.

§ 64. —— Recognition of Rights.

[a] A party to a charter-party, which acknowledges the property in a vessel to be in another party to it, is estopped to deny this to one who has given credit to the latter on the faith of it.—Hostler v. Hays, 3 Cal. 302.

§ 65. —— Agreements Collateral to Conveyances.

[a] One who accepts a deed on the express condition that it is in lieu of a former deed is estopped, in equity, from asserting title under the former deed.—Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529, 2 Pac. 418.

[a] A county auditor, as required by the County Government Act (section 115), settled the accounts of a tax collector, certified to the treasurer the amount payable into the county treasury, and, on the presentation and filing of the treasurer's receipt therefor, discharged the collector, and charged the treasurer with the amount. The county treasurer gave his receipt to the collector, and charged himself with the amount in his official books; and in making his monthly settlements with the auditor, as required by section 80, he made a sworn statement that he had received such amount from the collector, and that it was then on hand. Held, that the treasurer was estopped by his receipt and his statement under oath to deny the receipt of such amount from the collector.—San Luis Obispo County v. Pettit, 100 Cal. 442, 34 Pac. 1082.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 67. Stipulations and Consents in Judicial Proceedings.

[a] One who has sui juris, and stipulated that an executor of an estate in which he owns an interest may permit the proceeds of a sale thereof by leave of court to be expended to his advantage in the payment of claims against a trust estate in which he had an interest, cannot afterward call upon the executor to account for his interest in the proceeds of the sale, which he induced him to expend in payment of the trust obligations.—Kennedy's Estate, In re, 120 Cal. 458, 52 Pac. 820.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 798; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2204-2207, §§ 211-213.

§ 68. Representations.

[a] In a suit on a note, plaintiff held estopped as against one of the signers to claim that it did not evidence a firm debt.—Kellam v. Brode, 1 Cal. App. 315, 82 Pac. 213.

[b] The maker of the following instrument: "Due M. the sum of $5,591, in settlement of land purchased in S. county, the payment of which to be mutually arranged,"—stated, to one about to purchase the same, that it was valid and binding, and had been delivered in the ordinary course of business, and would be paid. Held, that he was not estopped from denying that the instrument had matured.—McAfee v. Fisher, 64 Cal. 246, 30 Pac. 811.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Estoppel arising from admissions or representations: 38 Am. Dec. 631, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 749-757; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2216-2278, §§ 218-234.

§ 69. —— Relying and Acting on Representations.

[a] When an estoppel in pais is set up against a vendee, arising from the declarations of his vendor, the party setting it up must show that such declarations were the main inducement to their act in obtaining the right in controversy.—Duell v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 5 Cal. 84.

[b] To estop party from claiming goods as against creditor of third party it must appear that he stated to the creditor himself that he had sold the articles to the third party, and that the creditor parted with some right or advantage on the faith of the information.—Goodale v. Scannell, 8 Cal. 27.

[c] Where declarations of grantor controlled conduct of grantee in the purchase of land, the grantor, and those subsequently claiming under him, are estopped from the assertion of any interest in the land in opposition to the title of such grantee.—Stanley v. Green, 12 Cal. 148.

[d] The statements in an affidavit filed with an application for a deed under the townsite act that affiant's wife was the owner of the property, not being made to her, nor with intent to deceive her, or to induce her to take any action whatever, and no such results appearing to flow from them, do not estop the husband from denying that the transaction was a gift to the wife.—Morgan v. Lones, 78 Cal. 58, 20 Pac. 248.

[e] One who calls a physician to attend a person whom he represents to be his wife is estopped to deny that fact in an action for services rendered on the faith of such representation.—Gerlach v. Turner, 89 Cal. 446, 26 Pac. 870.

[f] In an action to subject certain lands owned by defendant's brother to the payment of an account due plaintiffs from defendant, it appeared that the lands were in defendant's name, and in his possession, and that plaintiffs relied on defendant's statement that he was the owner of the land, in giving him credit, but there was no finding that defendant's brother had any knowledge that defendant was obtaining credit with plaintiffs on the faith of his apparent ownership of the land. Held, that a judgment refusing to subject the land to the payment of plaintiffs' claim was justified.—Breeze v. Brooks, 97 Cal. 72, 31 Pac. 742, 22 L. R. A. 257.

[g] Representations as to the ownership of property, not communicated to defendant, cannot be relied upon by it to raise an estoppel against plaintiff.—Bashore v. Parker, 146 Cal. 525, 80 Pac. 707.

§ 70. Possession or Acts of Ownership Under Claim of Title.

[a] The fact that intestate was in possession of land, claiming to hold under the owner, but never having paid any consideration or received a deed, does not estop his widow from securing a deed from the owner, having the claim confirmed by the United States courts, and acquiring the title for herself instead of for his estate.—McDonald v. McCoy, 121 Cal. 55, 53 Pac. 421.

§ 71. Requests.

[a] A residuary legatee is estopped from objecting to an allowance for money advanced by a mortgagee of property belonging to the estate, at her request, in payment of an assessment against mortgaged property, although the assessment was invalid.—Weinreich v. Hensley, 121 Cal. 647, 54 Pac. 254.

[a] Statement made in answer to question of law does not operate as estoppel.—Chim Kem You v. Ah Joan, 75 Cal. 133, 16 Pac. 705.

§ 73. Admissions and Receipts.

[a] Admission made to third party does not operate as estoppel.—Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 173, 15 Pac. 670.

[b] Receipt by a principal of accounts and proceeds of fruit sold by a factor will not, as a matter of law, bar a suit against the factor for failure to secure the best price.—Pugh v. Porter Bros. Co., 118 Cal. 628, 50 Pac. 772.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Estoppel arising from admissions or representations: 38 Am. Dec. 631, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 755-757; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2278-2284, §§ 235-240.

§ 74. Acquiescence.

[a] Where defendant enters on a lot which had been owned and occupied by plaintiff and her deceased husband, and plaintiff afterward assented to his appointment as administrator of her husband's estate, she was not estopped to set up the illegality of his possession.—Taylor v. Woodward, 10 Cal. 90.

[b] The failure of a proprietor to object to the diversion by an adjacent proprietor of a disproportionate share of the water from a stream for irrigation purposes, during a season when there is an abundance of water for all claimants, will not estop him from making such objection thereafter, on the supply of water becoming from natural causes insufficient.—Anaheim Water Co. v. Semitropic Water Co., 64 Cal. 185, 30 Pac. 623.

[c] Where defendant saw work done from day to day and made no objection to mode in which it was done, and paid part of contract price, he is estopped to defend against whole contract price on ground that work was not properly done.—Katz v. Bedford, 77 Cal. 322, 19 Pac. 523.

[d] Acquiescence is where a person who knows that he is entitled to impeach a transaction or enforce a right neglects to do so for such a length of time that, under the circumstances of the case, the other party may fairly infer that he has waived or abandoned his right.—Scott v. Jackson, 89 Cal. 258, 26 Pac. 898.

[e] In an action for the diversion of water by the building and maintenance of a dam by defendants, where it appears that plaintiff assisted in maintaining the dam and diverting the water, he cannot recover.—Churchill v. Baumann, 95 Cal. 541, 30 Pac. 770.

[f] Where the directors of a bank permit its cashier to transfer accounts from a bank which it succeeded, and render statements showing accounts to have been transferred, and lead depositors to believe their accounts to have been transferred, such bank is estopped from denying its liability on such accounts.—Nicholson v. Randall Banking Co., 130 Cal. 533, 62 Pac. 930.

[g] Plaintiff transferred land to a corporation, taking a mortgage for part of the price. The corporation neglected to pass a resolution authorizing the transaction, but took possession and handled the property as its own for two years, when it surrendered possession to plaintiff in lieu of paying interest, and asked for extension of time. Liability under the mortgage was not disputed until suit to foreclose was brought, five years after the purchase. These facts were known to the directors and stockholders. Held, that the corporation was estopped to deny the execution of the note and mortgage.—Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 134 Cal. 361, 66 Pac. 317.

erty delivered for shipment thereunder.—Carpy v. Dowdell, 115 Cal. 677, 47 Pac. 695.

[c] In an action to recover a balance due for services as president of a corporation, plaintiff is not estopped by his knowledge of entries in the corporation's books showing the expense account charged with a less amount each month as his salary than he claims, when he testifies to an agreement with the principal stockholder to draw a less amount than his full salary on account of the financial condition of the corporation.—Bushnell v. Simpson, 119 Cal. 658, 51 Pac. 1080.

§ 76. —— Acceptance of Benefits.

[a] On a bill for specific performance defendant alleged fraud in the contract sued upon, but admitted payment of the consideration money under protest affirming the fraud. Held, that the receipt of payment was no waiver of the defense, and that defendant was not estopped from showing the fraud, and that it was error in the court not so to instruct the jury when requested.—Russell v. Amador, 3 Cal. 400.

[b] Party notified of an assignment and receiving money under it, is estopped to deny that contract was assignable.—Cal. Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 261.

[c] The defendant having received the benefit of a bond is estopped from denying its legality.—Baker v. Bartol, 7 Cal. 551.

[d] An assignee of a judgment, in an action against him to recover the consideration of the assignment, cannot object that it is void, if it has been received in payment of his purchase of the judgment debtor's land at a sale on execution.—Brown v. Scott, 25 Cal. 189.

[e] Party is estopped to hold land and deny trust on ground that his title is defective.—Broder v. Conklin, 77 Cal. 339, 19 Pac. 513.

[f] Party receiving profits arising from contract is estopped to claim that it was void.—Coward v. Clanton, 79 Cal. 27, 21 Pac. 359.

[g] Principal accepting benefits from verbal agency to sell land is estopped to deny agency.—Bogart v. Crosby & Van Haren, 80 Cal. 198, 22 Pac. 84.

[h] Parties entering into, and accepting benefits of, contract in name not their own, are estopped to impeach it on that ground.—Karns v. Olney, 80 Cal. 100, 13 Am. St. Rep. 101, 22 Pac. 57.

[i] Parties who have realized on a note cannot be allowed to withhold the proceeds by pleading its non-negotiability.—Kelly v. Matlock, 85 Cal. 130, 24 Pac. 642.

[j] Party cannot adopt benefits of transaction and reject its burdens.—Peers v. McLaughlin, 88 Cal. 299, 22 Am. St. Rep. 306, 26 Pac. 119.

[k] By receiving damages for opening a road a person is not estopped to consider the road as located the true public road, and to establish his fence accordingly, and hold the land inside it.—Patterson v. Munyan, 93 Cal. 128, 29 Pac. 250.

[l] Party is estopped to object that contract is not performed according to its terms after accepting performance in different manner.—Ryer v. Oesting, 119 Cal. 568, 51 Pac. 857.

[m] Civil Code, section 1589, enacts that a voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a transaction is equivalent to a consent to all obligations arising from it. Held, that where a widow, after the death of her husband, continued to occupy premises leased to him, an assignment of the lease to her by her husband never having been delivered or accepted, she was not liable for the rent for the term under section 1589; the statute only applying to those who are parties to a transaction.—Canale v. Copello, 137 Cal. 22, 69 Pac. 698.

§ 77. —— Permitting Improvements or Expenditures.

[a] One who knowingly and silently permits another to spend money upon land, under a mistaken impression that he has title, will not be permitted to set up his right.—Godeffroy v. Caldwell, 2 Cal. 489, 56 Am. Dec. 360; Bryan v. Ramirez, 8 Cal. 461; McGarrity v. Byington, 12 Cal. 426.

[b] When prior claimant silently stands by and sees a ditch owner appropriate water at great expense, he and his vendees are estopped.—Parke v. Kilham, 8 Cal. 78, 68 Am. Dec. 310.

[c] Mortgagee who silently allows a bona fide purchaser without notice to expend large sums of money, cannot enforce the mortgage without reimbursement.—Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 37.

[d] The facts that a person has constructed a canal at large expense through another's land, and has maintained and used it, together with a strip of land on each side of it, for irrigation, for more than five years, with the knowledge of the land owner, and that the latter has never objected to nor opposed it, are not sufficient to estop the land owner to question the other's title to the canal and land in question.—Stockman v. Riverside Land etc. Co., 64 Cal. 57, 28 Pac. 116.

[e] Where a creditor of the seller of chattels, after the sale, recognized the purchaser's title, and he, on the faith thereof, took the property, and made large expenditures in its care, which otherwise he would not have done, the creditor is estopped to question the validity of the sale on the ground that it was not accompanied by an immediate delivery and continued change of possession.—Escolle v. Franks, 67 Cal. 137, 7 Pac. 425.

[f] Construction of ditches with plaintiff's knowledge and without objection will not estop him from objecting to diversion of water through them.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 266, 10 Pac. 674.

[g] Acquiescence in erection of valuable improvements on land after agreement as to division line will estop party from alleging mistake in line so as to deprive builder of his improvements.—Helm v. Wilson, 76 Cal. 486, 18 Pac. 604.

[h] Where a creditor recognized a sale of her debtor's personal property, so that the buyer expended money thereon which he would not otherwise have done, she and those claiming under her are estopped to question its validity because unaccompanied by an immediate delivery, followed by an immediate and continued change of possession, as demanded by Civil Code, section 3440, to rebut a conclusive presumption that it was fraudulent and void as to creditors and their successors in interest.—Sullivan v. Johnson, 127 Cal. 230, 59 Pac. 583.

[i] Evidence that a subsequent purchaser of real estate acquired the legal title with knowledge of the claim of a prior purchaser, who had not obtained the legal title, but who acquired his interest in the lands from the same source of title, and that the prior purchaser had made improvements on the land, and that the subsequent purchaser allowed him to continue making such improvements, and to use the land for a period of eight or nine years, without notifying defendant of any claim to the land or warning her not to improve the same, is sufficient to estop the subsequent purchaser from recovering the property.—Pacific Imp. Co. v. Carriger, 136 Cal. xix, 68 Pac. 315.

[j] Owners of land and of shares of stock in an irrigation company, who stand by and permit the company to extend its canal through their land, and, though they have full knowledge of the progress of the work, make no objection thereto, and who, after the completion of the canal, sell, with their lands, certain of their shares of stock as part of the same transaction, are, together with their grantees, estopped to assert any right to destroy or injure the canal.—Crescent Canal Co. v. Montgomery, 143 Cal. 248, 76 Pac. 1032, 65 L. R. A. 940.

[k] One who executes a voluntary deed to her husband, which she does not deliver, but he steals from her possession, is estopped to assert title against an innocent purchaser from him, she being informed of the abstraction and conveyance within ten days thereof, and giving no notice to the purchaser, though it had commenced improvements, which continued to be made for six months thereafter and aggregated five hundred dollars.—Baillarge v. Clark, 145 Cal. 589, 79 Pac. 268.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 78. —— —— Knowledge of Facts by Person Estopped.

[a] It is not the making of improvements or expending of money on another's property which entitles the person so expending to hold the property as against the owner or even the improvements; but it is the fraud of the owner who silently, or otherwise, encourages the expenditure. But this fraud only exists, at the very most, where the owner knows that the other person is making the expenditures, and also knows that he makes them under the bona fide reasonable belief that he is the owner of the property.—McGarrity v. Byington, 12 Cal. 426.

§ 79. —— Failure to Assert Title.

[a] The owner of property, who stands by and sees a third person selling it under claim of title, without asserting his own title or giving the purchaser any notice thereof, is estopped, as against such purchaser, from afterward asserting his title.—Godeffroy v. Caldwell, 2 Cal. 489, 56 Am. Dec. 360; Snodgrass v. Ricketts, 13 Cal. 359.

[b] Where the mortgagee, on the nonfulfillment of the condition of a mortgage, entered into possession of the lands and conveyed them to a purchaser, and the mortgagor, after the said sale, sold his right and interest to another purchaser pendente lite, and he conveyed to a third person, it was held, if the evidence had shown that the mortgagor stood by and saw the mortgagee sell the property without interposing, and a knowledge of this could be brought home to the mortgagor's subvendees, he and those claiming under him would be estopped from asserting title on the ground of fraud.—Ferguson v. Miller, 4 Cal. 97.

[c] Fact that plaintiff stood by and permitted defendant to settle on land will not warrant an instruction that the plaintiff is thereby estopped from asserting his title.—Gunn v. Bates, 6 Cal. 263.

[d] The holder of the legal title, standing by and suffering the public sale of a title of the invalidity of which he has legal notice, is estopped to dispute its validity.—Bryan v. Ramirez, 8 Cal. 461, 68 Am. Dec. 340.

[e] The owner of real property is under no obligations to attack a forged deed of his property; and the fact that he knew of the existence of such a deed, and knew that through a series of conveyances the property had been purchased by an innocent purchaser for value without remonstrance on his part, gives such purchaser no title to the land.—

Meley v. Collins, 41 Cal. 663, 10 Am. Rep. 279.

[f] Defendant having a lease of certain land, as representative of the owner, placed the land in the hands of brokers for sale, through whom plaintiff purchased, and also delivered to the latter the deed, and received the purchase money, without at any time disclosing to plaintiff any interest in the land under his unrecorded lease. Held, that defendant was estopped from claiming any interest in the land.—Garber v. Gianella, 98 Cal. 527, 33 Pac. 458.

§ 80. Silence.

[a] The mere nonmention of a claim for a partial breach of a contract, at the time of settlement between the parties to the contract for work done, will not estop the party from setting up such claim.—Winans v. Sierra Lumber Co., 66 Cal. 61, 4 Pac. 952.

[b] Mere silence will not create estoppel.—Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 279, 10 Pac. 674.

[c] The mere fact that defendant knew that a physician was treating a third person, at the request of another, on defendant's account, and relied for compensation on defendant, and that it made no objection, does not estop it to deny its liability.—Deane v. Gray Bros. Artificial Stone Paving Co., 109 Cal. 433, 42 Pac. 443.

[d] A statement made by the assistant counsel in the argument to the jury, in support of the contest of a will, that the contestant would pay all the attorneys' fees in the case, did not call for the expression of any dissent, and could not create an estoppel by silence of the contestant, to dispute the obligation to pay the fees of the assistant counsel.—Porter v. Elizalde, 125 Cal. 204, 57 Pac. 899.

[e] An equitable estoppel to plead to setoff of a note in an action on an account against defendant, which had been assigned to plaintiff by the maker of the note, did not arise out of the assignor's direction to defendant, after the assignment, to pay the amount of the account to plaintiff, and defendant's silence as to his possession of said note; it not appearing that plaintiff had knowledge of such request.—Randol v. Rowe, 44 Pac. 1068.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 681-759; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2407-2413, §§ 285-287.

[a] Where ignorance of fact is due to party's negligence, he is estopped to deny knowledge.—Karns v. Olney, 80 Cal. 100, 13 Am. St. Rep. 101, 22 Pac. 57.

[b] Defendant agreed with A to sell him certain land, part cash, and balance secured by mortgage. Defendant went with A to a notary's office, where a deed was executed. While the mortgage was being prepared, A said, "Let me see that deed," and took it from the table, and went, without defendant's knowledge, to plaintiff, to whom he gave a mortgage on the property, to secure a loan. Held, that defendant's negligence in allowing the deed to be removed from the room was not such as would justify an estoppel against a plea of nondelivery of the deed. Gould v. Wise, 97 Cal. 532, 32 Pac. 576.

[c] A party employed an agent to obtain a loan for a certain sum, and left with him to deliver a note and mortgage therefor, with the amounts written in lead pencil. The agent erased the amounts, and substituted larger ones, and kept the difference. Neither borrower nor lender knew of the alterations until a year afterward. Held, that the borrower was not so negligent as to be estopped from setting up the fraud.—Walsh v. Hunt, 120 Cal. 46, 52 Pac. 115, 39 L. R. A. 697.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 772-777; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2413-2416, § 288.

C. PERSONS AFFECTED BY ESTOPPEL.

§ 82. Persons to Whom Estoppel is Available.

[a] Where an express declaration to a third party is not confidential, but general, and this is afterward acted upon by others, the party making the declaration should be estopped.—Mitchell v. Reed, 9 Cal. 204, 70 Am. Dec. 647.

[b] Where a party has purchased land of the government under the pre-emption law, and the government has recognized his claim by taking and receipting for the purchase money, the objection that such land was not subject to pre-emption cannot be raised by one not in privity with the government.—Mahoney v. Van Winkle, 33 Cal. 448.

[c] One who has a certificate of purchase from the state for a sixteenth section is not estopped from claiming that the state owned the land, as against one who is a mere trespasser and has no privity with the title of the United States, by the fact that the state had, before issuing the certificate, selected other land in its place and sold the same, and the purchaser had received therefor a patent from the United States.—Figg v. Handley, 52 Cal. 244.

[d] One using the property of another without his consent can invoke the doctrine of estoppel.—Southside Improvement Co. v. Burson, 147 Cal. 372, 81 Pac. 1107.

§ 83. Persons Estopped.

[a] If one makes a bargain with another for land, the latter claiming the title and the right to sell it, in the presence of a third party who has the title, the third is estopped from setting up the title as against the purchaser, and all persons in privity with such third person are likewise estopped, unless they are purchasers for valuable consideration without notice.—Snodgrass v. Ricketts, 13 Cal. 359.

[b] Where a married woman represents that she is a widow, and, for a valuable consideration, executes a deed of land as a single woman, and after her husband's death, without consideration, deeds the land to her daughter, who has actual notice of the prior deed, the daughter is estopped from denying that her mother was a widow when the prior deed was executed.—Ramboz v. Stowell, 103 Cal. 588, 37 Pac. 519.

[c] The validity of an agreement reciting that defendant furnished as a gift the purchase money for land conveyed to his mother, and that his mother agreed that the land should not be reconveyed without his consent, could be attacked by defendant's sister, though she signed the same.—Prey v. Stanley, 110 Cal. 423, 42 Pac. 908.

[d] A plaintiff who purchased the title of an owner and who is estopped to claim title as against the defendant, with knowledge of the facts upon which the estoppel is based, is in no better situation than his grantor, and is bound by the estoppel.—Ions v. Harbison, 112 Cal. 260, 44 Pac. 572.

[e] A delivery of property by an assignee of an insolvent company to defendant on his demand therefor, the title to which for the benefit of creditors was in the company, does not estop the assignee from recovering the property or suing for its value; and the question whether the delivery was made by a mistake of law or of fact, or with full knowledge, is immaterial.—Davis v. Winona Wagon Co., 120 Cal. 244, 52 Pac. 487.

[f] Persons claiming under decedent estopped during her lifetime are subject to same estoppel.—McKeag's Estate, 141 Cal. 410, 99 Am. St. Rep. 80, 74 Pac. 1039.

[g] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1848, declarations of plaintiff's wife and stepson held not available to estop plaintiff to claim property as belonging to the community.—Bashore v. Parker, 146 Cal. 525, 80 Pac. 707.

[h] Where the vendee in an unrecorded deed, acting as attorney in fact for the vendor, procures a mortgage on the latter's property, and represents that the vendor is its owner, one succeeding to his interest as a mere volunteer is equally estopped to set up title except in subordination to the mortgage.—Filippini v. Trobock, 62 Pac. 1066.

D. MATTERS PRECLUDED AND EFFECT OF ESTOPPEL.

§ 84. Extent of Estoppel in General.

[a] Where six persons held in common the legal title, one of whom was present and remained silent when the holder of the equity purchased, under the opinion that he was obtaining the title, held, that the one-sixth of the legal title, in the hands of the subsequent purchasers, was subject to that equity coupled with possession prior to their purchase.—Bryan v. Ramirez, 8 Cal. 461, 68 Am. Dec. 340.

[b] Where plaintiffs sue as heirs and as grantees of a remaining heir of an intestate to recover certain real estate, claiming two-thirds of the land described in the complaint as heirs and one-third under the deed, the fact that they may be estopped by their conduct from claiming under the deed does not render the complaint insufficient to support their claim as heirs at law of the decedent for the other two-thirds of the land described therein.—Alcorn v. Brandeman, 145 Cal. 62, 78 Pac. 343; Alcorn v. Howard, 145 Cal. 62, 78 Pac. 343; Alcorn v. Gieseke, 145 Cal. 62, 78 Pac. 343.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 782; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2432, 2433, § 291.

§ 85. Title or Claim to Property.

[a] Rule that party, by failing, under certain circumstances, to assert his title to property is thereby estopped from saying that he had title, does not extend so far as to debar him from asserting an after-acquired title.—Gluckauf v. Reed, 22 Cal. 468.

[b] A party is not estopped, by matters in pais, to assert title unless, at the time when it is claimed the estoppel was worked, he held the title.—Marquart v. Bradford, 43 Cal. 526.

[c] The grantee in fee who owes no duty to his grantor is not estopped from disputing the title of such grantor.—Wenzel v. Schultz, 100 Cal. 250, 34 Pac. 696.

[d] The vendee or grantee of land is not estopped from disputing the validity of the title under which he entered, and he may show another and independent title in himself.—Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675, 34 Pac. 120.

[e] Execution of a deed of trust by a husband and wife after conveyance of the property by the wife to her husband held not to operate as a reconveyance, nor estop the husband from denying that she was the owner of the property.—Tyler v. Currier, 147 Cal. 31, 81 Pac. 319.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 783.

§ 86. Effect of Estoppel.

[a] Void acts cannot be cured by aid of doctrine of estoppel.—Raish v. San Francisco, 80 Cal. 6, 22 Pac. 22.

§ 87. Pleading—Necessity.

[a] An estoppel in pais which is relied upon as a defense must be pleaded.—Clarke v. Huber, 25 Cal. 593.

[ab] An estoppel which is of equitable cognizance must be pleaded or it will not be considered on the trial.—Etcheborne v. Auzerais, 45 Cal. 122.

[b] Estoppel in pais must be pleaded as defense.—Dyer v. Scalmanini, 69 Cal. 642, 11 Pac. 327.

[c] Under the circumstances estoppel in pais could be proved without pleading it.—Dyer v. Scalmanini, 69 Cal. 642, 11 Pac. 327.

[d] An estoppel in pais may be shown, without pleading, by way of equitable rebuttal to defendant's proof of want of authority to execute the note and mortgage sued upon, after plaintiff has established a prima facie case, by proof that they bear the corporate seal; and it is only when a plaintiff must rely upon an estoppel in pais in order to maintain his action against the defendant at all, that it must be pleaded. Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 113 Cal. 221, 41 Pac. 1017, 45 Pac. 252.

[e] Where an alleged servant, suing the master for personal injuries, is met by the defense at the trial that another than defendant was independently conducting the work on his own account, plaintiff can prove an ostensible agency between defendant and such other person, without having pleaded it, since he did not know that his demand would ultimately rest on it.—Donnelly v. San Francisco Bridge Co., 117 Cal. 417, 49 Pac. 559.

[f] Plaintiff brought an action to foreclose a mortgage, making a judgment creditor of the mortgagor a codefendant, and judgment was rendered for defendant on demurrer because action was not brought within the period of limitations. Such creditor subsequently bought the mortgaged land at execution sale, and plaintiff thereafter brought another action to foreclose, alleging an acknowledgment of the debt before the expiration of the original period of limitations. Held, that a defense that plaintiff was estopped from asserting his mortgage lien against the creditor's rights because of plaintiff's failure to set out the fact of acknowledgment in the prior action or to amend on demurrer must be specially pleaded. Judgment, 64 Pac. 250, reversed.—Newhall v. Hatch, 134 Cal. 269, 66 Pac. 266, 55 L. R. A. 673.

[g] An estoppel in pais, in order to be available, must be pleaded and proven. Judgment on rehearing (1900) 60 Pac. 974, affirmed.—Chapman v. Hughes, 134 Cal. 641, 66 Pac. 982.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 809; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2441-2444, § 300.

§ 88. —— Sufficiency.

[a] Where an equitable estoppel in pais is not properly pleaded, but, on the trial, evidence is introduced without objection in the same manner as if it had been properly pleaded, and a verdict is rendered upon the evidence without objection, the objection to the pleading will be deemed waived, and the case will be considered as though the estoppel had been properly pleaded.—Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 23, 85 Am. Dec. 157.

[b] An estoppel by matters in pais is sufficiently pleaded by pleading the facts constituting it.—Carpy v. Dowdell, 115 Cal. 677, 47 Pac. 695.

[c] Answer held to sufficiently allege an estoppel against plaintiff to claim, as community property, property levied on as belonging to his wife.—Bashore v. Parker, 146 Cal. 525, 80 Pac. 707.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 816; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2444-2447, § 302.

§ 89. —— Effect of Pleading Facts upon Which Estoppel is Based.

[a] Pleading fully the facts constituting an estoppel, is no waiver of the estoppel.—San Francisco v. Spring Valley Waterworks, 39 Cal. 481.

§ 90. Demurrer Raising Defense.

[a] The question whether plaintiffs, suing to recover lands as heirs at law of a decedent, are estopped to impeach a decree making a partial distribution of the estate by which they were given certain other lands, while those in controversy were distributed to defendant's predecessor in title, cannot arise on the face of the complaint, so as to be presented for consideration by a demurrer, where the proceedings for distribution and decree are set out merely to show the source of defendant's claim, and the complaint does not show that plaintiffs took under the decree, but alleges its invalidity, and that it was made without their consent or knowledge.—Alcorn v. Brandeman, 145 Cal. 62, 78 Pac. 343; Alcorn v. Howard, 145 Cal. 62, 78 Pac. 343; Alcorn v. Gieseke, 145 Cal. 62, 78 Pac. 343.

§ 91. Issues, Proof and Variance.

[a] It is error for the court to assume in the progress of the trial, for the purpose of deciding on admissibility of the testimony, that an estoppel would be found by the jury; but the facts of the estoppel must be found or given before any of its consequences can be claimed.—Lackman v. Wood, 25 Cal. 147.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 811; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2448, 2449, § 305.

§ 92. Admissibility of Evidence.

[a] Evidence is admissible to show that party claiming benefit of estoppel placed no reliance on declarations when they were made.—Mitchell v. Amador etc. Min. Co., 75 Cal. 478, 17 Pac. 246.

[b] Plaintiff claimed certain wheat in his possession which was attached by defendant as sheriff, and sold on an execution of M. against one D. Plaintiff, in reply to a question by M.'s attorney just before the attachment issued, said that the wheat belonged to D., and he (plaintiff) had a lien on it. Defendant claimed that plaintiff was estopped by such declaration from denying that the wheat belonged to D., and at the trial asked M.'s attorney whether, in instructing the sheriff to levy, he relied solely upon the declaration of plaintiff and the belief that that declaration was true. Held, that the question was competent.—Barnhart v. Fulkerth, 93 Cal. 497, 29 Pac. 50.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 812; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2450-2452, § 307.

§ 93. —— Weight and Sufficiency.

[a] Evidence of estoppel in pais should be strong and decisive.—Bryan v. Ramirez, 8 Cal. 468.

[b] Parol evidence of declarations and admissions of persons made long anterior to the trial, upon which an estoppel in pais is sought to be founded, should be carefully scrutinized by courts and juries, as it is a dangerous species of evidence, and liable to abuse. Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 24.

[c] A party will not be held to be estopped by inference, when the estoppel is not clearly made to appear.—Greer v. Tripp, 56 Cal. 212.

[d] Estoppels are not favored and must be clearly proved.—Wheaton v. North British etc. Co., 76 Cal. 429, 9 Am. St. Rep. 216-n., 18 Pac. 758.

[e] Party relying on expenditure on faith of license as estoppel must clearly show facts constituting estoppel and expenditure should not be trivial.—McCarthy v. Mutual Relief Assn., 81 Cal. 588, 22 Pac. 933.

[f] Estoppel cannot be based upon mere conjecture even if proper foundation is laid in other respects.—Janin v. London etc. Bank, 92 Cal. 14, 27 Pac. 1100.

[g] In an action for services under a contract of employment against a partnership composed of one B. (with whom plaintiff lived under the assumed relation of wife) and others, it was shown that, at the inception of the partnership, B. represented that plaintiff was his wife. The other partners testified that he agreed to furnish her services gratuitously, but B. denied it. Held, that plaintiff was not estopped, as against B.'s partners, from showing that she was not B's wife; it not appearing that she had any knowledge of B.'s representations in that regard, or that B.'s partners relied on such representations, or that such representations operated to their damage.—Grosse-Becker v. Becker, 102 Cal. 226, 36 Pac. 433.

§ 94. Questions for Jury.

[a] Estoppels from standing by and permitting another to settle on the land proceed upon the ground of fraud or culpable silence, which are facts for the jury and not matters of legal construction by the court.—Gunn v. Bates, 6 Cal. 263.

[b] Whether one is estopped by his conduct is a question of fact to be determined from the evidence.—Di Nola v. Allison, 143 Cal. 106, 76 Pac. 976, 65 L. R. A. 419.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 813; 19 Cent. Dig., cols. 2459-2461, § 309.

§ 95. Instructions.

[a] In an action for trespass on a mining claim, in which the title to the locus in quo was the main issue, the court instructed that if the jury believed, from the evidence, that plaintiffs, more than five years before the commencement of the suit, in good faith and under a claim of right, entered into possession of the disputed tract and continued in possession, expending labor thereon with defendants' knowledge, they making no objection, and that defendants had not forbidden plaintiffs possession so acquired, then plaintiffs are entitled to a verdict. Held, that such instruction, failing as an abstract proposition to state the essential elements of an estoppel in pais, was improperly given. Maine Boys' Tunnel Co. v. Boston Tunnel Co., 37 Cal. 40.

[b] A charge that if defendant made certain misrepresentations concerning his claim to the property in dispute, which misled plaintiffs, he is estopped to set up any claim to such property, but which fails to state that such representations must have been made with the express intention to deceive, or with such culpable negligence as to amount to constructive fraud, is erroneous, and is not cured by another distinct charge, which states the rule more accurately.—Griffeth v. Brown, 76 Cal. 260, 18 Pac. 372.

[c] Instruction on estoppel against a husband arising out of the use of his property by his wife held defective, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1962, subdivision 3. Bashore v. Parker, 146 Cal. 525, 80 Pac. 707.

§ 1. Matters of Common Knowledge.

[a] The court will take judicial notice of the fact that a "fence pole" is a heavy club.—Baker v. Hope, 49 Cal. 598.

[b] Court will take judicial notice of evils preceding legislation against adulteration and mischiefs intended to be prevented thereby etc.—Kohler, Ex parte, 74 Cal. 42, 15 Pac. 436.

[c] No testimony is required upon matters which are presumably within the knowledge or observation of all men of common intelligence.—Storrs v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 134 Cal. 91, 66 Pac. 72.

[d] In a suit by the state board of railway commissioners, in whom such power was vested, to compel a railroad corporation to restore an alleged lower rate between two points in the state than the established rate with an unlimited ticket, the court will take judicial notice that comparatively few of the traveling public exercise or claim any of the privilege of unlimited tickets, such as transfer, stopover, and liability for loss of baggage in excess of one hundred dollars in value, which were denied by the limited tickets.—Edson v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 144 Cal. 182, 77 Pac. 894.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 852; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 35, 36, § 4.

§ 2. Course and Laws of Nature.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1875, subdivision 8, authorizing courts to take judicial notice of the laws of nature, the court judicially knows the rules of mensuration by which the cubic contents of an irregular prismoidal body are ascertained. Scanlan v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 55 Pac. 694.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 854; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 36, 37, § 5.

§ 3. Time for Gathering and Harvesting Crops.

[a] Courts will take judicial notice of the time of harvest in the counties where they preside.—Mahoney v. Aurrecochea, 51 Cal. 429.

[b] Court takes notice of time for gathering fruit crop.—Brown v. Anderson, 77 Cal. 239, 19 Pac. 487.

[c] Court will take judicial notice of the time for the harvesting of grain.—Haines v. Snedigar, 110 Cal. 18, 23, 42 Pac. 462.

§ 4. Nature and Growth of Particular Industries.

[a] Court takes judicial notice of nature and growth of wine growing interests of this state.—Kohler, Ex parte, 74 Cal. 42, 15 Pac. 436.

§ 5. Geographical Facts.

[a] Judicial notice cannot be taken that conditions as to climate, soil, topography, and rainfall are the same in two counties of the same state.—City of Santa Cruz v. Enright, 95 Cal. 105, 30 Pac. 197.

[b] A court will not take judicial notice that a certain tract of land is or is not included within the boundaries of a particular patent.—Goodwin v. Scheerer, 106 Cal. 600, 40 Pac. 18.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
Judicial notice of boundaries and localities: 82 Am. St. Rep. 439, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 858-863; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 39-47, §§ 9-14.

§ 6. —— Source, Outlet and Location of Rivers.

[a] Judicial notice will be taken of the location and course of a river frequently mentioned in the public statutes of the state. De Baker v. Southern Cal. Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257, 46 Am. St. Rep. 237, 39 Pac. 610.

[b] Court takes judicial notice of the source and outlet of a river flowing through the state.—People v. Truckee Lumber Co., 116 Cal. 401, 58 Am. St. Rep. 183, 48 Pac. 374.

§ 7. —— Distances Between Places.

[a] Courts in California will take judicial notice of the legal distances from place to place in the state of California, as established by the Political Code in sections 150 to 202, inclusive, for the purpose of computing the time within which notice of intention to move for a new trial must be served. Hegard v. California Ins. Co., 11 Pac. 594.

§ 8. Existence, Location and Boundaries of States, Counties, Cities and Towns.

[a] Courts will take judicial notice of territorial extent of jurisdiction and sovereignty, exercised de facto by their own government, and of the local divisions of the country into states, counties, cities, towns, etc.—People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9.

[b] San Francisco having been constituted, by a public, political act of the formen government, a pueblo, courts will take judicial notice of its existence, powers, and rights, and among these last its general boundary and jurisdiction.—Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 220.

[c] Court will take judicial notice that "Potrero" in the year 1850, was separated from city of San Francisco, as it then was, by Mission creek, and that it is now a portion of the city of San Francisco, divided in lots, blocks and streets.—Brumagim v. Bradshaw, 39 Cal. 24.

[d] Court takes judicial notice that there is but one San Diego County in California. Graham v. Stewart, 68 Cal. 380, 9 Pac. 555.

[e] Courts take judicial notice of counties in California.—Humboldt County v. Dinsmore, 75 Cal. 606, 17 Pac. 710.

[f] Court will take judicial notice of county boundaries.—Campbell v. West, 86 Cal. 200, 24 Pac. 1000.

[g] Court will take judicial notice that a certain city or town is in a certain county. Cole v. Segraves, 88 Cal. 103, 25 Pac. 1109.

[h] The courts will take judicial notice of the incorporation of a city.—City of Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604.

[i] Court will take judicial notice of the actual possession by a city of part of its public lands, and of its constructive possession of the remainder.—Labory v. Los Angeles Orphan Asylum, 97 Cal. 270, 32 Pac. 231.

[j] The courts must take judicial notice of the boundaries and extent of the counties of the state.—Rogers v. Cady, 104 Cal. 288, 43 Am. St. Rep. 100, 38 Pac. 81.

[k] A court may take judicial notice of the boundaries of an incorporated city.—De Baker v. Southern Cal. Ry. Co., 106 Cal. 257, 46 Am. St. Rep. 237, 39 Pac. 610.

[l] Judicial notice will be taken that Eureka and San Francisco are incorporated cities in the state of California.—Matter of Chope, 112 Cal. 630, 44 Pac. 1066.

[m] Under Political Code, sections 3918, 3919, held that it was the duty of the court, in an action against a county to recover taxes paid to it on the ground that the land taxed was in another county, to take judicial notice as to which county the land was in.—Merritt v. Trinity County (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 675.

[n] The courts will take judicial notice that the city of Los Angeles is a municipal corporation, by virtue of the several statutes organizing it into such corporation and extending its limits, and adding to and changing the powers of its officers.—Bituminous Lime-Rock Pav. etc. Co. v. Fulton, 33 Pac. 1117.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 16 Cyc. 907-910; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 72-75, §§ 31-33.

§ 9. —— Location of Streets.

[a] The courts will take judicial notice of the streets of San Francisco as designated on the official map of the city approved by Statutes of 1858, pages 52-56.—Whiting v. Quackenbush, 54 Cal. 306.

[b] The courts take judicial notice of the streets of San Francisco and of their relation to each other, and of the directions in which they run. Therefore, in an action upon a street assessment, the absence of an arrow or scroll in the diagram is immaterial.—Brady v. Page, 59 Cal. 52.

[c] Court takes judicial notice of public streets.—Barton v. McDonald, 81 Cal. 267, 22 Pac. 855.

[d] Courts will take judicial notice of the streets of San Francisco, of their relation to each other and their location, and that a crossing where an improvement was located necessarily forms a part of the public street. Williams v. Savings and Loan Society, 97 Cal. 122, 31 Pac. 908.

[e] Statutes of 1858, page 56, making the Van Ness map the official map of San Francisco, does not enable the court to take judicial notice of the correct location on the ground of the streets therein platted.—Diggins v. Hartshorne, 108 Cal. 154, 41 Pac. 283.

Digitized by Google

[f] The courts will take judicial notice of streets established by act of the legislature, and of their relation to each other, and of the directions in which they run; but they do not take judicial notice of the existence and location of streets established by dedication, or opened or adopted by a municipal ordinance. The dedication or the passage of the ordinance is a question of fact to be determined upon the sufficiency of evidence.—Diggins v. Hartshorne, 108 Cal. 154, 41 Pac. 283.

§ 10. —— Classification of Counties.

[a] The court will take judicial knowledge whether any county in the state has a population which places it in a specified class, and what number of counties belong to a particular class.—Welsh v. Bramlet, 98 Cal. 219, 33 Pac. 66.

[b] The courts will take judicial notice of the fact that a particular county is of a certain class under the statutory classification.—Alameda County v. Dalton (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 1050.

§ 11. —— Incorporation of Cities Under Particular Law.

[a] Courts are bound to take judicial notice of the fact that no city was ever organized under the code.—Los Angeles v. Teed, 112 Cal. 319, 44 Pac. 580.

§ 12. Personal Status.

[a] The court will not take judicial notice that a defendant is a resident of Austria because he affixes to his name a title of nobility. De Tolna v. De Tolna, 135 Cal. 575, 67 Pac. 1045.

[a] Court cannot take judicial notice of character of land.—Leviston v. Ryan, 75 Cal. 297, 17 Pac. 293.

[b] Court takes judicial notice of geological formation of state.—Katz v. Walkinshaw, 141 Cal. 125, 99 Am. St. Rep. 33, 70 Pac. 663, 74 Pac. 766.

§ 14. Fluctuating Value of Ore Veins and Mountain Streams.

[a] Court takes judicial notice of fluctuating volume of mountain streams, and fact that prior appropriators allow unused water to pass down stream to advantage of subsequent ones.—Wixon v. Devine, 80 Cal. 387, 22 Pac. 224.

[b] Courts judicially know that veins of ore rich at one point are often barren a few yards distant.—Richards v. Dower, 81 Cal. 47, 22 Pac. 304.

§ 15. Quantity of Water Used by City or Town.

[a] Court cannot judicially notice that population of town at one time used less water than greater population did at later time.—San Luis Water Co. v. Estrada, 117 Cal. 180, 48 Pac. 1075.

§ 16. Political and Social Condition of Country.

[a] Courts are bound to take notice of political and social condition of country which they judicially rule.—Irwin v. Phillips, 5 Cal. 140.

§ 17. —— Public Sentiment.

[a] Court will take judicial notice of condition of public mind.—Ross v. Austill, 2 Cal. 192.

§ 18. Historical Facts.

[a] Courts take judicial notice of matters of public history.—Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 220.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 864-870; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 47-52, §§ 15, 16.

§ 19. —— Nature and Value of Circulating Medium.

[a] Court cannot say judicially that one kind of money, made a legal tender, is of greater or less value than another; nor can evidence be received that a dollar of one kind is of greater or less value than another.—Carpentier v. Atherton, 25 Cal. 564.

[b] Courts will take judicial notice of market value of legal tender notes as part of history of the time.—Belloe v. Davis, 38 Cal. 257.

[c] Courts take judicial notice that coin was always treated as the standard of value in this state.—In re Sanderson, 74 Cal. 214, 15 Pac. 753.

§ 20. —— Irrigation District Bonds.

[a] Court can take judicial knowledge of the financial history of irrigation district bonds.—Hughson v. Crane, 115 Cal. 404, 47 Pac. 120.

§ 21. Statistical Facts.

[a] The courts will take judicial notice of the results of the United States census, as shown by the returns.—People v. Williams, 64 Cal. 87, 27 Pac. 939.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 870, 871; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 52, 53, § 17.

§ 22. Language, Words, Phrases and Abbreviations.

[a] Courts cannot judicially know that names intended to represent monuments in describing land are not such.—Tredinnick v. Red Cloud etc. Co., 72 Cal. 81.

[b] Court takes judicial notice of meaning of words and phrases and may resort for aid to appropriate books of reference.—Grennan v. McGregor, 78 Cal. 262, 20 Pac. 559.

[c] Defendants published the following: "Venality. It is understood that the Electric Improvement Company will put a large sum of money into the fight to-day to corrupt voters. . . . It is also reported that E. is to have charge of the sack." Held that, in an action for publishing such article, the court would take notice of the meaning the word "sack" has acquired in newspaper literature, when used in connection with election corruption funds, and it was unnecessary for plaintiff to allege or prove such meaning or how it was intended to be understood.—Edwards v. San Jose Printing etc. Soc., 99 Cal. 431, 37 Am. St. Rep. 70, 34 Pac. 128.

[d] Courts take judicial notice of the true meaning of all legal expressions, including all the terms used in constitution or in acts of the legislature.—Sheehy v. Shinn, 103 Cal. 325, 37 Pac. 393.

[e] The court will take judicial notice of the significance of the word "kindergarten." Sinnott v. Colombet, 107 Cal. 187, 40 Pac. 329.

[f] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1875, providing that courts will take judicial notice of "the true significance of all English words and phrases and of all legal expressions," courts will take notice that the terms "shafts, tunnels, levels, chutes, stopes, uprises, crosscuts, and inclines," as applied to mines, are instrumentalities by which mines are opened, developed, prospected, improved and worked.—Hines v. Miller, 122 Cal. 517, 55 Pac. 401; Reader v. Miller, 122 Cal. 517, 55 Pac. 401.

[g] Courts will take judicial notice of the meaning of customary abbreviations of common words, including all conventional expressions or arbitrary signs that have passed into common use.—Estate of Lakemeyer, 135 Cal. 28, 87 Am. St. Rep. 96, 66 Pac. 961.

[h] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1875, enacting that the court will take judicial notice of the true signification of all English words and phrases, the courts have common and current knowledge relating to automobiles.—Berry, Ex parte, 147 Cal. 523. 82 Pac. 44.

See 16 Cyc. 875; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 54-56, § 20.

§ 23. Time, Days, and Dates.

[a] It cannot be objected that an almanac was put in evidence for the purpose of showing, upon a trial, when the sun rose on a certain day, as the court in any event would take judicial notice of that.—People v. Chee Kee, 61 Cal. 404.

[b] Court takes judicial notice of days of week and month.—Campbell v. West, 86 Cal. 202, 24 Pac. 1000.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 856; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 56, 57, § 21.

§ 24. Management and Conduct of Occupations.

[a] The courts will take judicial notice of the political and social condition of the country which they rule, in order that legislation may be made properly applicable to protect the rights of miners in their selected locality, and the rights of those who by prior appropriation have taken waters from their natural bed and by costly works have conducted them to other localities to supply the necessities of gold miners.—Irwin v. Phillips, 5 Cal. 140, 63 Am. Dec. 113.

[b] The court will not take judicial notice of rules of a board of brokers with reference to which a contract was made, where such rules do not amount to usages or customs of the trade in general.—Goldsmith v. Sawyer, 46 Cal. 209.

[c] It seems that court may take judicial notice of usual course or mode of transactions in mining stocks.—Graves v. Mono Lake Hydraulic Min. Co., 81 Cal. 325, 22 Pac. 665.

[d] Judicial notice does not extend to necessity for employment of certain class of agent. Harris v. San Diego etc. Co., 87 Cal. 529, 25 Pac. 758.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 854-876; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 59-61, § 24.

§ 25. Matters Relating to Government and Its Administration—In General.

[a] Judicial notice cannot be taken that title to land is in the public.—Schwerdtle v. Placer County, 108 Cal. 589, 41 Pac. 448.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 899-919; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 68-75, §§ 29-34.

§ 26. —— Public Surveys.

[a] Courts take judicial notice of the fact that, under the United States system of surveys of public lands, a quarter section is intended to be just forty chains square; and that a quarter section contains a greater area must be proven by affirmative evidence. Quinn v. Windmiller, 67 Cal. 461, 8 Pac. 14.

[b] Court takes judicial notice of location of lands described by government subdivisions, as township, range and section, but not of lands designated simply by name or reference to private survey.—Campbell v. West, 86 Cal. 200, 24 Pac. 1000.

[c] The courts will take judicial notice of the government surveys and the legal subdi-

IN GENERAL, § 27.
PRIVATE STATUTES, § 28.
—— MUNICIPAL ORDINANCES, § 29.
LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES, § 30.
LAWS OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES, § 31.

§ 27. In General.

[a] A legislative act by which a city is incorporated is a public act of which courts are bound to take judicial notice.—People v. Potter, 35 Cal. 110.

[b] Under section 1875 of the Code of Civil Procedure the court will take judicial notice of "public and private official acts" of the legislature.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

[c] Courts take judicial notice of the revenue laws, and, if a tax recites the performance of the acts required by those laws, the burden of proving a noncompliance is cast upon those who attack the regularity of the essential facts.—Carpenter v. Shinners, 108 Cal. 359, 41 Pac. 473.

[d] Judicial notice is taken by courts of the statutes of the state.—Schwerdtle v. Placer County, 108 Cal. 589, 41 Pac. 448.

[de] Where a complaint alleges that plaintiff, at the special instance and request of defendant state, rendered certain services as its agent, and seeks to recover the agreed compensation therefor, the objection that the alleged employment was illegal may be raised by demurrer, since the court will take cognizance of the fact that there could be no valid contract without legislative authority, and by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1875, subdivisions 2, 3, is charged with knowledge of all public and private acts.—Mullan v. State, 114 Cal. 578, 46 Pac. 670, 34 L. R. A. 262.

[e] In determining a demurrer to a complaint, the court may take judicial notice of a legislative land grant, though the allegations of such complaint are directly contrary to such grant.—People v. Oakland Waterfront Co., 118 Cal. 234, 50 Pac. 305.

[f] Court must take judicial notice of all state laws whether they establish general rules of conduct or facts and status of particular places and things.—People v. Oakland W. F. Co., 118 Cal. 245, 50 Pac. 305.

[g] Court takes judicial notice of appropriations made by state legislature.—Meloin v. State, 121 Cal. 21, 53 Pac. 416.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 896; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 81, 82, § 38.

§ 28. Private Statutes.

[a] Courts will not take judicial notice of a private act.—Ellis v. Eastman, 32 Cal. 447.

[b] The act of March 25, 1858, confirming sales previously made by the commissioners of the sinking fund of San Francisco, held to be a private, and not a public, act, and a party founding his title on such act must offer it in evidence.—Ellis v. Eastman, 32 Cal. 447.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 896; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 81, 82, § 38.

§ 29. —— Municipal Ordinances.

[a] Ordinances and by-laws must be proven, and will not be judicially noticed.—Lucas v. San Francisco, 7 Cal. 474.

[b] Courts do not take judicial notice of the ordinances of municipal corporations authorizing tax proceedings, or of the time when, if passed, they take effect, and such an ordinance must be proved as a prerequisite to a tax deed becoming prima facie evidence of a compliance with such proceedings.—Carpenter v. Shinners, 108 Cal. 359, 41 Pac. 473.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 898; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 87, 88, § 42.

§ 30. Laws of the United States.

[a] The court will take judicial notice that according to act of Congress of March 3, 1851, every person claiming lands in California by virtue of any right or title derived from the Spanish or Mexican government should present his petition for confirmation of title to the board of land commissioners, and that such proceedings must be had thereon before said board or the district or supreme court of the United States, that a final decree confirming the title must be entered before the patent could issue.—Semple v. Hagar, 27 Cal. 163.

[b] The state courts take judicial notice of acts of Congress.—Schwerdtle v. Placer County, 108 Cal. 589, 41 Pac. 448.

[c] Courts take judicial notice of description of government township contained in public laws of United States.—Miller v. Grunsky, 141 Cal. 441, 66 Pac. 558, 75 Pac. 48.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 889; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 92, 93, §§ 49, 50.

§ 31. Laws of Foreign Countries.

[a] Courts are bound to know the Mexican civil law applicable to a case.—Holliday v. West, 6 Cal. 526.

[b] The court is bound to take judicial notice of the general laws in force in this

—— JUSTICES OF THE PEACE, § 34.
—— COURT OFFICERS, § 35.
—— JUDICIAL DISTRICTS, § 36.
RULES AND PROCEDURE OF COURTS, § 37.
JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS AND RECORDS, § 38.
—— PROCEEDINGS IN OTHER COURTS, § 39.

§ 32. Existence, Organization and Terms of Court.

[a] Appellate courts take judicial notice of the terms of the circuit or district courts.—Ross v. Austill, 2 Cal. 183; (1871) Talbert v. Hopper, 42 Cal. 397.

[b] Court does not take judicial notice of time and place of holding courts, if not certain to public knowledge.—Ross v. Austill, 2 Cal. 190.

[c] Court will take judicial notice of the regular terms of the several district courts, as prescribed by statute, and of the contiguity of the several counties composing the judicial districts, but not of the distances and facilities for communication between the county seats of the counties composing such district.—Boggs v. Clark, 37 Cal. 236.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 911-919; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 102-107, §§ 56-60.

§ 33. —— Judges.

[a] In an action by a county to recover possession of rooms in its courthouse, the court will not take judicial notice that defendants are judges of the superior court of the county.—San Joaquin County v. Budd, 96 Cal. 47, 30 Pac. 967.

[b] Where an order fixing the day for the execution of a certain judgment of death was made by another than the judge who pronounced the original judgment, the court, on appeal from such order, will take judicial notice of the fact that he had ceased to be such judge before such order was made.—People v. Ebanks, 120 Cal. 626, 52 Pac. 1078.

[a] Courts take judicial notice of the official character of justices of the peace in their own states. And an affidavit in which the official character of the justice before whom it is taken does not appear is good.—Ede v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 53.

§ 35. —— Court Officers.

[a] Where the law provides for the appointment of a deputy clerk of court, the courts will judicially recognize such deputy. Himmelmann v. Hoadley, 44 Cal. 213.

[b] The court will take judicial notice that the county clerk is ex officio clerk of the superior court, so that, though he indorses a complaint filed in the superior court as "county clerk," it will be deemed to have been filed with the proper officer.—Campbell v. West, 86 Cal. 197, 24 Pac. 1000.

§ 36. —— Judicial Districts.

[a] The supreme court will take judicial notice that the fourth judicial district is a district within and for the county of San Francisco.—People v. Robinson, 17 Cal. 363.

§ 37. Rules and Procedure of Courts.

[a] The supreme court does not take judicial notice of the rules of the district courts. Cutter v. Caruthers, 48 Cal. 178; Sweeney v. Stanford, 60 Cal. 362.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

4 L. R. A. 34, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 915-919; 20 Cent. Dig., col. 107, § 61.

[a] Court cannot take judicial notice of record in another case.—People v. De La Guerra, 24 Cal. 78.

[b] If two corporations each commence proceedings against the same person in the same court for the condemnation of the same lands, the court cannot, of its own motion, in one action, take judicial notice of the pendency of the other, and refuse to take any action in the matter on the ground of the pendency of the other action.—Lake Merced Water Co. v. Cowles, 31 Cal. 215.

[c] Court takes judicial notice of proceedings in action pending before it.—Ah Men, Ex parte, 77 Cal. 200, 11 Am. St. Rep. 263, 19 Pac. 380.

[d] The court cannot, in one case, take judicial notice of its records in another and different case.—Stanley v. McElrath, 86 Cal. 449, 22 Pac. 673, 25 Pac. 16, 10 L. R. A. 545, 26 Pac. 800; (1893) Ralphs v. Hensler, 97 Cal. 296, 32 Pac. 243.

[e] Courts will take judicial notice of their records and officers, and when necessary for the administration of justice in a given case, will take such notice of all previous and undisputed proceedings therein appearing of record, certified or authenticated as required by law, and required by law to be on file or of record in the cause.—Hollenbach v. Schnabel, 101 Cal. 312, 40 Am. St. Rep. 57, 35 Pac. 872.

[ef] The court takes judicial notice, without averment and proof, of how long after a certain event an action pending before it was commenced, the date of such event being averred and admitted in the action.—Altoona Quicksilver Min. Co. v. Integral Quicksilver Min. Co., 114 Cal. 100, 45 Pac. 1047.

[eg] Where record in case judicially before the court it takes judicial notice thereof. Harron v. Harron, 128 Cal. 303, 60 Pac. 932.

[f] On appeal from an order granting a wife alimony pending appeal from a judgment granting her husband a divorce, the supreme court will, in determining whether the appeal was taken in good faith, take judicial notice of mandamus proceedings before it by appellant to compel the trial judge to settle a bill of exceptions.—Gay v. Gay, 146 Cal. 237, 79 Pac. 885.

[g] On appeal from an order sustaining a demurrer to bill to set aside a judgment, judicial notice could not be taken of the record on a prior appeal from an order denying a motion to set aside such judgment.—Estudillo v. Security Loan etc. Co., 86 Pac. 19.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 915-920; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 107-112, §§ 62-65.

§ 39. —— Proceedings in Other Courts.

[a] In the trial of one case, the court cannot take judicial notice of the record in another case in the same court, without its formal introduction in evidence; much less can it take such notice of a case in a different court without proof.—People v. De La Guerra, 24 Cal. 73.

[b] Neither the supreme court nor district court will take judicial notice of proceedings pending in federal courts for confirmation of a pueblo title, unless it is stated in the pleadings.—Vassault v. Seitz, 31 Cal. 225.

[c] The court in which an action is pending cannot take judicial notice of proceedings in bankruptcy subsequently commenced, however seriously they may affect the rights of the parties to the suit. It is the duty of the court to proceed to a decree, as between the parties before it, until by some proper pleading in the case it is informed of the changed relations of any of those parties to the subject matter of the suit.—Amador Canal etc. Co. v. Mitchell, 59 Cal. 168.

[d] All other courts are bound to take judicial notice of the decisions of the supreme court of the United States, and that it is the ultimate tribunal for interpreting and determining the effect of an act of Congress, and that its decision thereupon is binding upon all other courts.—Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Painter, 113 Cal. 247, 45 Pac. 320.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1875, subdivision 3, which permits courts to take judicial notice of the acts of the judicial department of the state, the supreme court will judicially notice the vacation by a federal court of a decree confirming a Mexican grant.—Ohm v. City and County of San Francisco, 25 Pac. 155.

§ 45. Nature and Scope—In General.

[a] Presumptions are only indulged to supply absence of facts. There can be no presumption against ascertained and established facts.—Nieto v. Carpenter, 21 Cal. 455.

[b] The fact that "Blotter B," so called, in the possession of the recorder of San Francisco, shows a certain number of lots granted by the alcalde in a particular year, does not raise the presumption that he did not grant other lots during the same year.—Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

[c] Prima facie evidence is that which suffices until overcome by other evidence. Moore v. Hopkins, 83 Cal. 272, 17 Am. St. Rep. 248, 23 Pac. 318; Vaca Valley etc. R. R. v. Mansfield, 84 Cal. 566, 24 Pac. 145.

[e] Slight proofs make out prima facie case where negative is to be proved,—Hussell v. McDowell, 83 Cal. 81, 23 Pac. 183.

[f] The rule of evidence prescribed in the Political Code declaring the effect of deed of the officer, and making it prima facie or presumptive evidence of other facts is not in conflict with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to evidence, and it is not a ground of objection to the effect of such deed as prima facie evidence that the provision making it such is not found in the Code of Civil Procedure.—Clarke v. Presumptions in support of a second marriage: 89 Am. St. Rep. 198, note. See, also, 20 Cent. Dig., col. 130, § 76.

§ 48. Nature and Condition of Property or Other Subject Matter.

[a] In a controversy respecting the use of the waters of a spring, where there was nothing to show that it was supplied by any defined flowing stream, held, that it must be presumed to be formed by the ordinary percolations of water in the soil.—Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303, 10 Am. Rep. 299.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 130-132, §§ 77, 78.

§ 49. Innocence.

[a] The presumption in favor of innocence holds in all civil suits in which it comes collaterally in question.—Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 598.

[b] Law presumes that conduct of men is lawful and in accordance with rules of morality.—White v. White, 82 Cal. 433, 23 Pac. 276.

§ 50. Knowledge of Law.

[a] It is presumed that every man knows the law.—Taaffe v. Josephson, 7 Cal. 355; Murphy v. Clayton, 113 Cal. 153, 45 Pac. 267.

[b] In cases involving questions of confirmation a party is not necessarily presumed to know the law. This is a fact to be established, and, even admitting the presumption to arise, it is not conclusive as against facts which go to establish ignorance of the law. Holland v. San Francisco, 7 Cal. 361.

[c] The stockholders of a corporation organized in one state to do business in another must be presumed to have known the latter's laws, particularly where they were resident therein.—Keystone Driller Co. v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 138 Cal. 738, 72 Pac. 398.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1083; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 136, 137, § 85.

§ 51. Knowledge of Vacancy in Public Office.

[a] While all voters are presumed to know the law and the time when the full terms of office expire, they are not presumed to know the fact that an officer has resigned or died. Tillson v. Ford, 53 Cal. 701.

§ 52. Intent.

[a] Every man is presumed to intend the legitimate consequences of his acts.—Taaffe v. Josephson, 7 Cal. 356.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 135, 136, § 84.

§ 53. Ownership of Property from Possession.

[a] Law presumes ownership from possession of property.—Mayo v. Madden, 4 Cal. 27; Goodwin v. Garr, 8 Cal. 615; De Noon v. Morrison, 83 Cal. 166, 23 Pac. 374; Schneider v. Brown, 85 Cal. 207, 208, 24 Pac. 715; Eby v. Board of Trustees, 87 Cal. 171, 25 Pac. 240.

[b] Party in possession of public land, claiming title to it, must be presumed to be the owner of it.—Houseman v. Chase, 12 Cal. 390.

[c] The fact that a man is in possession of one acre of land does not raise any presumption that he has title to an unlimited tract in the same neighborhood.—Havens v. Dale, 18 Cal. 359.

[d] Possession of personal property by a person engaged in business on his own account is only prima facie evidence of ownership, and does not prevail against the true owner, except as to negotiable instruments, and whatever comes under the general denomination of currency.—Wright v. Solomon, 19 Cal. 64, 76 Am. Dec. 196.

[e] Thirty years' possession of premises raises presumption of ownership.—Williamson v. Tobey, 86 Cal. 498, 25 Pac. 65.

[f] Possession is presumed rightful until contrary appears.—Oglesby v. Santa Barbara, 119 Cal. 116, 51 Pac. 181.

§ 54. Continuance of Fact or Condition.

[a] Office once created is presumed to be continuing, unless the contrary appears.—People v. Addison, 10 Cal. 1.

[b] Condition of things, or status once shown to exist, is presumed to continue.—People v. Addison, 10 Cal. 1; White v. White, 82 Cal. 438, 23 Pac. 276.

[c] When it is shown that certain property belongs to a particular person, the law presumes that the ownership remains unchanged until the contrary appears.—Kidder v. Stevens, 60 Cal. 414.

[d] There is no presumption that fact once shown to exist continues regardless of nature of fact.—Scott v. Hood, 81 Cal. 404, 405, 22 Pac. 871.

[e] Illicit intercourse is presumed to continue until evidence shows that intercourse of parties has become matrimonial.—White v. White, 82 Cal. 434, 437, 23 Pac. 276.

[f] Where minds of parties have met as to what is to be done when time comes to act, law presumes that they remained in same condition until act was done.—Ward v. Waterman, 85 Cal. 502, 24 Pac. 930.

[fg] The presumption that a thing once proven to exist continues as long as usual with things of that nature is not applicable to a balance in one's favor in a bank, and there is no presumption that a small balance in bank, on open account, continues to exist. High v. Bank of Commerce, 103 Cal. 525, 37 Pac. 508.

[g] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, subdivision 32, providing that a thing once proven to exist will be presumed to continue to exist as long as usual with things of that nature, the title to land, having once been shown to have been vested in a grantor at a certain time prior to the execution of a deed by him, will be presumed to have continued to remain in him until the time of the execution of such deed, in the absence of any proof to the contrary.—Hohenshell v. South Riverside Land etc. Co., 128 Cal. 627, 61 Pac. 371.

[h] Acceptance of mortgage held to amount to admission by mortgagee that bank mentioned in mortgage was at the time of its execution a corporation, and that condition, having once been shown, was presumed to continue until contrary was shown.—Anglo-Californian Bank v. Field, 146 Cal. 644, 80 Pac. 1080.

[i] Where a witness was shown to have been absent when her deposition was taken, it would be presumed, in the absence of proof by the party objecting to the introduction of her deposition, that her absence continued. Dolbeer's Estate, In re, 86 Pac. 695; Schander v. Gray, 86 Pac. 695.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Presumption of continuance: 50 Am. Rep. 297, note; 35 L. R. A. 117, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 1052, 1053; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 138-143, §§ 87, 88; cols. 178, 179, § 103.

§ 55. Existence of Fact or Condition Prior to Time Shown.

[a] The law presumes a fact continuous in its nature and character, when once established by proof, to continue, and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, legally infers therefrom its subsequent existence; but such a presumption never runs backward, and the law never presumes, from proof of the existence of present facts, that the same facts existed many years previously.—Windhaus v. Bootz, 92 Cal. 617, 28 Pac. 557.

[b] Proof of the insanity of a person carries no presumption of its past existence.—Dolbeer's Estate, In re, 86 Pac. 695; Schander v. Gray, 86 Pac. 695.

§ 56. Health and Possession of Faculties.

[a] It will be presumed that a man strong and healthy is in full possession of his faculties, though he is comparatively advanced in years.—Green v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Cal. 563, 55 Pac. 577.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 57. Making and Genuineness of Writings.

[a] Where an appeal is taken and a bond or undertaking, with or by sureties, is annexed, the undertaking being executed for the benefit of the appellant, the law presumes it was executed at his request, and probably no proof of that fact is requisite in a suit by the surety against the appellant, for money paid on account of the suretyship. At all events, very slight proof of such request would be required.—Bostic v. Love, 16 Cal. 69.

[b] The genuineness of the signatures to the official documents of officers of Mexico, which are now in the custody of the surveyor general of the United States will be presumed in a case where such signatures are used for a collateral purpose, such as to enable a witness who has examined such documents to testify as to the genuineness of the signature to a paper offered in evidence from having seen such signature on such documents.—Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

[c] Conceding that the record of a deed which is introduced in evidence without objection is prima facie evidence of the genuineness, due execution, and delivery of the original, still it is only prima facie evidence of those facts, and may be rebutted.—Burroughs v. De Couts, 70 Cal. 361, 11 Pac. 734.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 145-148, § 91.

§ 57½. That Person Riding on Passenger Train is a Passenger.

[a] A person on a train used for carrying passengers is, in the absence of countervailing circumstances, presumed to be a passenger.—People v. Douglas, 87 Cal. 284, 25 Pac. 417.

[b] It is presumed that person riding on platform of mail-car is not a passenger.—People v. Douglass, 87 Cal. 284, 25 Pac. 417.

§ 58. Regularity of Course of Business or Conduct of Affairs.

[a] It cannot be presumed that agent used his own funds in relation to subject of agency.—De Mallagh v. De Mallagh, 77 Cal. 128, 19 Pac. 256.

[b] It is presumed that bank keeps proper records of its transactions.—Robinson v. Nevada Bank, 81 Cal. 109, 22 Pac. 487.

[c] It is presumed that private transactions have been fair and regular.—Lattin v. Hazard, 85 Cal. 61, 24 Pac. 611.

[d] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1959, defining a presumption as a deduction which the law directs to be made from particular facts, and section 1963, subdivision 19, providing that private transactions are prima facie presumed to have been fair and regular, where an attorney redeemed land of his client from a sale made in the proceedings in which he represented such client, the mere relationship of attorney and client, and the fact that the redemption was made shortly before the expiration of the time allowed therefor, and for a consideration coinciding closely with the amount necessary to redeem, were not sufficient to raise any presumption that the land was redeemed by the attorney, with his client's money, with intent to defraud the client's creditors; but the presumption was rather that the transaction was fair and regular.—Fisher v. McInerney, 17 Cal. 28, 69 Pac. 622, 907.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1072; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 143-145, § 80.

§ 59. Testacy or Intestacy of Decedent.

§ 60. Existence of Heirs.

[a] It is presumed that every intestate has left someone on earth entitled to claim as his heir, however remote.—People v. Roach, 76 Cal. 296, 18 Pac. 407.

§ 61. Mailing and Delivery of Mail Matter.

[a] Evidence that a letter was duly posted raises the presumption that it was received.—Stockton Combined Harvester etc. Works v. Houser, 109 Cal. 1, 51 Pac. 809.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, subdivision 24, where a husband had previously kept his insane wife at a hospital, and had corresponded with the officials with regard to her, it will be presumed that a letter directed to him by the hospital authorities was received by him, he not denying its receipt.—St. Vincent's Inst. for the Insane v. Davis, 129 Cal. 20, 61 Pac. 477.

§ 61½. Delivery and Receipt of Telegrams.

[a] When a telegram has been sent, it is a presumption of fact that it was received by the person to whom it was sent, and the fact that it was sent is admissible evidence tending to show that it was received; but its receipt may be disproved.—Eppinger v. Scott, 112 Cal. 369, 53 Am. St. Rep. 220, 42 Pac. 301, 44 Pac. 723.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1065-1070; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 148-152, § 92.

§ 62. Intercourse from Cohabitation.

[a] Law presumes intercourse from cohabitation and illicit intercourse from illicit cohabitation.—White v. White, 82 Cal. 438, 23 Pac. 276.

§ 63. Evidence Withheld or Falsified.

[a] Object of rule of law which requires production of best evidence of which the facts sought to be established are susceptible is the prevention of fraud; for if a party is in possession of this evidence, and withholds it, and seeks to substitute inferior evidence in its place, the presumption naturally arises that the better evidence is withheld for fraudulent purposes which its production would expose and defeat.—Bagley v. Administrator of McMickle, 9 Cal. 430.

[b] On a hearing upon affidavits, a copy of a deed, annexed to one of the affidavits, is entitled to no weight as evidence, where the original is under the control of the affiant, and he refuses to produce it, and assigns no reason for such refusal.—Leese v. Clark, 29 Cal. 664.

[c] If a party testifying fails to testify to a fact favorable to himself, it is presumable that such fact does not exist.—Tompkins v. Mahony, 32 Cal. 234.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

14 L. R. A. 470, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 1058-1064; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 154-172, §§ 95-100.

§ 64. —— Suppression or Spoliation of Evidence.

[a] Willful suppression of testimony raises a presumption that it would be adverse.—Bagley v. McMickle, 9 Cal. 430.

[b] On the trial of an action involving the question whether a drug store sold by R. was sold to J., the plaintiff, or to M., the court refused to instruct the jury that if they believed that J. tore up the note given for the price after the commencement of the suit, he knowing at the time that the note would be important evidence in it, then they would be warranted in presuming that it was a note of which J. was the indorser and M. the maker. Held, that this refusal was error. It was the destruction by the plaintiff of a piece of evidence of much importance in determining whether he was the purchaser of the drug store or not, for the fact that the purchase money was furnished by M. would outweigh the circumstance that the bill of sale had been taken in the name of J.—Johnson v. White, 46 Cal. 328.

[c] The doctrine that everything will be presumed against a spoliator does not apply to an action by a stockholder of a mining company against a milling company for improperly extracting the bullion, so as to leave a large quantity in the ore to be afterward worked over by defendant, because, in the process of milling, the identity of the ore was destroyed.—Fox v. Hale & Norcross Silver Min. Co., 108 Cal. 369, 41 Pac. 308.

[d] The fact that a witness for a party refused to produce books does not render such party a spoliator of testimony, no demand having been made for the production of the books.—Fox v. Hale & Norcross Silver Min. Co., 108 Cal. 369, 41 Pac. 308.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 65. Laws of Other States.

[a] Where one, under a foreign assignment, gained possession of property which he brought to California, a claimant there cannot refer to a local statute, and claim as a presumption of law that the foreign law is like it, and hence that the possessor's title is void.—Forbes v. Scannell, 13 Cal. 242.

[b] In the absence of proof as to the law of those states in which the common law is not presumed to prevail, the law will be presumed to correspond with that of the state in which the cause is tried.—Norris v. Harris, 15 Cal. 226.

[c] In the absence of proof it is presumed that laws of another state are the same as the laws of the forum.—Hickman v. Alpaugh, 15 Cal. 226; Hill v. Grigsby, 32 Cal. 55; Brown v. San Francisco Gaslight Co., 58 Cal. 426; Marsters v. Lash, 61 Cal. 622; Mortimer v. Marder, 93 Cal. 172, 28 Pac. 814; Palmer v. Atchison etc. Co., 101 Cal. 187, 35 Pac. 630; Pierce v. Southern Pacific Co., 120 Cal. 158, 47 Pac. 874, 52 Pac. 302; Harrington's Estate, In re, 140 Cal. 244, 73 Pac. 1000; Harrington v. Union Trust Co., 140 Cal. 244, 73 Pac. 1000; rehearing denied, 140 Cal. 294, 74 Pac. 136; Dunphy's Estate, In re, 147 Cal. 95, 81 Pac. 315; Flood v. Dunphy, 147 Cal. 95, 81 Pac. 315.

[d] When plaintiff, suing on a note as the assignee, relied on an assignment executed by an executrix in Missouri, and there was no evidence that such assignment was authorized by any court having jurisdiction of the estate, and no evidence as to the laws of Missouri, there could be no recovery, since the Missouri law would be presumed to be the same as Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1517, 1524, declaring that a chose in action belonging to an estate may not be sold save under order of the superior court.—Bovard v. Dickenson, 131 Cal. 162, 63 Pac. 162.

[e] Where, on an issue of marriage, it is claimed to have taken place in another state, but the laws of such state are not shown, such laws will be presumed to be the same as in the state where the action is tried, and proof of facts sufficient to establish a marriage in the latter state will support a finding that the marriage was valid.—Richards' Estate, In re, 133 Cal. 524, 65 Pac. 1034.

[f] Where the second marriage took place in another state, under the law of which it is claimed to be absolutely void, if the law of such state is not proved as a fact, it must be presumed to be the same as the law of this state.—Estate of Harrington, 140 Cal. 244, 98 Am. St. Rep. 51, 73 Pac. 1000.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Presumption that the common law prevails in other jurisdictions: 37 Am. Rep. 584, note; 21 L. R. A. 467, 67 L. R. A. 33, notes. See, also, 16 Cyc. 1084; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 172-177, § 101.

§ 66. Foreign Laws.

[a] It will be presumed that law of foreign country is same as law of this state.—Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 30, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707; Cavallaro v. Texas etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 348, 42 Pac. 918.

[b] In the absence of any showing to the contrary, an English judgment will be presumed to have drawn interest at seven per cent, the same as a domestic judgment.—Murphy v. Murphy, 145 Cal. 482, 78 Pac. 1053.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1084; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 177, 178, § 102.

§ 67. Territorial Acts.

[a] Acts of a legislative body are susceptible of proof either by records or parol proof, and cannot be presumed.—Vanderslice v. Hanks, 3 Cal. 47.

§ 68. Judicial Proceedings.

[a] When lost petition is proved by secondary evidence, it will be presumed after eight years that it averred jurisdictional facts shown to have existed.—Warfield's Will, 22 Cal. 51, 83 Am. Dec. 49.

[b] Everything is to be presumed in favor of the regularity of the proceedings of a court of justice.—Talbert v. Hopper, 42 Cal. 397.

[c] Presumption that court of general jurisdiction will not admit irrelevant evidence will prevail over doubt as to its admissibility under law of another state.—Meredith v. Santa Clara Min. Assn., 56 Cal. 178.

[d] Where there is but one defendant in an action, and the record states that the answer is verified, the inference is that it was verified by the defendant.—Roberts v. Eldred, 73 Cal. 394, 15 Pac. 16.

[e] Judge of one county holding court in another is presumed to be acting at request of governor or one of judges of latter county. Meuman, In re, 75 Cal. 220, 7 Am. St. Rep. 146, 16 Pac. 887.

§ 69. Official Proceedings and Acts.

[a] Officers are presumed to have performed their duties faithfully and regularly without excess of power.—Vanderslice v. Hanks, 3 Cal. 28; Egery v. Buchanan, 5 Cal. 53; Guy v. Washburn, 23 Cal. 111; Rice v. Cunningham, 29 Cal. 492; Weaver v. Fairchild, 50 Cal. 360; Oakland Bank v. Murfey, 68 Cal. 463, 9 Pac. 843; Watkins v. Lynch, 71 Cal. 24, 11 Pac. 808; Pico v. Warner, 73 Cal. 20, 14 Pac. 377; Reclamation Dist. v. Wilcox, 75 Cal. 451, 17 Pac. 241; Doland v. Mooney, 79 Cal. 138, 21 Pac. 436; Bode v. Trimmer, 82 Cal. 516, 23 Pac. 187; McGuire v. Drew, 83 Cal. 231, 23 Pac. 312; Los Angeles v. Lankershim, 100 Cal. 525, 35 Pac. 153; Williams v. Bergin, 116 Cal. 60, 47 Pac. 877; Powers v. Hitchcock, 129 Cal. 325, 61 Pac. 1076; Ellis v. Workman, 144 Cal. 113, 77 Pac. 822.

[b] The acts of the officer making the assessment must be presumed to be in conformity with law.—Palmer v. Boling, 8 Cal. 384.

[c] It will be presumed for the purposes of justice that the authority exercised by the officers of a municipal corporation was properly delegated to them, and that contracts made by them, without authority, have been ratified.—San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453.

[d] Presumption that officers have complied with law does not apply to statutory divestiture of title.—Keane v. Canovan, 21 Cal. 291, 82 Am. Dec. 738.

[e] Presumption that officer does his duty is a rule of evidence and not of pleading.—California etc. Co. v. Schafer, 57 Cal. 396.

[f] Surveyor general is presumed to have regularly performed official duties.—Eads v. Clarke, 68 Cal. 484, 9 Pac. 666.

[g] Officers are presumed regularly appointed.—People v. Otto, 77 Cal. 47, 18 Pac. 869.

[h] Official duty of supervisors is presumed regularly performed.—Spaulding v. North S. F. etc. Assn., 87 Cal. 48, 24 Pac. 600, 25 Pac. 249.

[i] Assessment of a railroad franchise within state properly susceptible of valuation by state board of equalization must be presumed, in absence of any other evidence than assessment itself, to have been assessed upon property within jurisdiction of board, rather than upon property which it had no power to include in assessment.—People v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 105 Cal. 576, 38 Pac. 905.

[ij] Where a right of action depends upon an official act to be performed by a public officer, there is no presumption that any delay in the performance was unreasonable.—Williams v. Bergin, 116 Cal. 56, 47 Pac. 877.

[j] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, subdivision 15, establishing a rebuttable presumption that an official duty was regularly performed, a finding that "an order of sale was duly issued" raises a presumption that, if the signature of the clerk of the court was essential to its validity, it had been subscribed.—Spaulding v. Howard, 121 Cal. 194, 53 Pac. 563.

[k] Courts are bound to presume that legislature did not intend to exceed its authority. Burns v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 7, 8, 73 Pac. 597.

[l] Presumption that official duty has been performed applies to acts of acting mayor.—City Street Imp. Co. v. Rontet, 140 Cal. 56, 73 Pac. 729.

[lm] Where a police officer is authorized to make an arrest only where he has a warrant for the offender, or the offense was committed in his presence, under an allegation that plaintiff was arrested by a police officer it will be presumed that he had a warrant, or that the offense was committed in his presence.—Davis v. Pacific Telephone etc. Co., 57 Pac. 764.

[m] Under Statutes of 1895, page 269, chapter 207, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, subdivisions 15 and 17, providing that it will be presumed that official duty has been performed, and that a judicial record, when not conclusive, still correctly determines or sets forth the rights of the parties, it will be presumed that failure to file the remittitur for four months after it was sent down was because the fee for filing had not been paid or tendered, or for some other sufficient reason.—Mabb v. Stewart, 143 Cal. xviii, 77 Pac. 402.

[n] In a suit to quiet title to land claimed by defendant under a certificate of purchase which had been annulled, held, under the issues, that it would be presumed that the judgment of annullment had been filed in the office of the registrar as required by Political Code, section 3550.—Shepard v. Mace (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 1046; Winnek v. Mace (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 1046.

[o] The performance of official acts of notaries public are presumed to have been regular as provided by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, subdivision 15.—Pardee v. Schanzlin, 86 Pac. 812.

§ 70. —— Acts of Officers of Foreign Government.

[a] The general rule is that when the acts of the officers of a foreign government are brought in question in our courts, the acts performed by them will be presumed to have been within the scope of their lawful authority, unless the contrary appears.—Mott v. Reyes, 45 Cal. 379.

[b] The presumption is that public officers in charge of official documents have done their duty in preventing forged papers from being placed among them, and this presumption applies equally to the public functionaries of Mexico, as to those of the United States.—Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

§ 71. Executors and Administrators.

[a] It must be presumed, in absence of allegations and evidence to contrary, that administratrix has obeyed the law and performed her official duty, and that all the property and money of the estate for which she was accountable at the time of her death has passed into the possession of her successor.—Gray v. Farmers' Exchange Bank, 105 Cal. 60, 38 Pac. 519.

§ 72. Corporate Acts.

[a] Corporate officers are presumed not to have exceeded their authority.—Schallard v. Eel River etc. Co., 70 Cal. 146, 11 Pac. 590.

[b] Presumption that official duty has been regularly performed cannot be availed of by directors of corporation who have not performed their duty.—Schenck v. Bandmann, 81 Cal. 235, 22 Pac. 654.

§ 73. Boundaries Established by Federal Government.

[a] Boundaries established and approved by federal government are presumed correct.—People v. Brown, 74 Cal. 306, 16 Pac. 1.

[b] In the absence of evidence to the contrary, there is a presumption that a meander line forming the boundary of land bordering the ocean was run along the beach, so as to enable the surveyor to locate the line of ordinary high tide.—Kimball v. McKee, 86 Pac. 1089.

§ 74. Operation and Effect.

[a] Wherever the law declares that certain facts are conclusive evidence of fraud, a verdict against such evidence should be set aside; but, where such facts are declared to be only presumptive evidence of fraud, the jury may decide against such presumption. Billings v. Billings, 2 Cal. 107, 56 Am. Dec. 319.

[b] Presumption of law that is disputable when not changed by evidence becomes to the court a rule indisputable for the case, and the court is bound to apply it.—Kidder v. Stevens, 60 Cal. 414.

[c] Where law makes certain fact a conclusive presumption, evidence cannot be received to contrary.—Mills' Estate, 137 Cal. 303, 70 Pac. 91.

See 16 Cyc. 1087; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 192-195, §§ 107-109.

[a] Presumption of identity of person from identity of name is disputable.—People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 100, 16 Pac. 844.

[b] The certificate of acknowledgment or proof of a receipt and release from liability for breach of promise of marriage, taken before a notary public, is, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1948, only prima facie evidence of the execution of the writing; and plaintiff, in an action for such breach, may by her own testimony controvert the facts therein contained under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1961, providing that "a presumption, unless declared by law to be conclusive, may be controverted by other evidence, direct or indirect."—Moore v. Hopkins, 83 Cal. 270, 17 Am. St. Rep. 248, 23 Pac. 318.

[c] The presumption of consideration attaching to a written instrument is a disputable presumption, which may be overcome by evidence of facts showing a want of consideration.—Estate of Kennedy, 129 Cal. 384, 62 Pac. 64.

[d] The presumptions which under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, are declared to be disputable are in effect only inferences, which in the absence of any controverting evidence the jury is required to make, and, in civil cases, to accept as established evidence, creating a preponderance of the evidence.—People v. Wong Sang Lung (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 843.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1087; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 192-195, § 109.

§ 76. Conflicting Presumptions of Fact.

[a] The possession of agricultural land is prima facie proof of title against a trespasser; but where it is shown that the party goes on mineral land to mine, there is no presumption that he is a trespasser; and the statutory presumption that it is public land, in the absence of proof of title in the person claiming it as agricultural land, applies.—Burdge v. Smith, 14 Cal. 380.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1087; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 195, 196, § 110.

§ 77. Rebuttal of Presumptions of Fact.

[a] Presumption of sale from delivery of warehouse receipt is not rebutted by showing that party delivering receipt was agent for another.—Horr v. Barker, 8 Cal. 610.

[b] From proof of legal title right of possession will be presumed, but presumption may be rebutted by proof of an equitable title in another of a character to carry the right of possession.—Willis v. Wozencraft, 22 Cal. 607.

[c] Prima facie evidence may be contradicted and overcome by other evidence.—Davidson v. Cucamonga F. & L. Co., 78 Cal. 8, 20 Pac. 152.

[d] Prima facie evidence may always be overcome by other sufficient proof.—Godfrey v. Miller, 80 Cal. 424, 22 Pac. 590.

[de] Presumptions not declared by law to be conclusive may be controverted by other evidence, direct or indirect.—Moore v. Hopkins, 83 Cal. 272, 17 Am. St. Rep. 248, 23 Pac. 318.

[e] The presumptions that every man knows the condition of his own business, and that every man intends the consequences of his acts, are disputable, and an inference of the fact of fraudulent intent from a deed of gift by an insolvent debtor to his wife, which might rest upon those presumptions, is overcome by a finding that he was ignorant of the fact of his insolvency.—Bull v. Bray, 89 Cal. 286, 26 Pac. 873.

[f] The disputable presumptions that an obligation delivered up to a debtor has been paid, and that the ordinary course of business has been followed, do not raise a conflict in the evidence, where the fact is proven contrary to the presumptions by evidence without conflict, but in such case the presumption is simply overcome and dispelled; and such presumptions are allowed to stand as evidence, not against the facts they represent, but in lieu of proof of them.—Savings and Loan Soc. v. Burnett, 106 Cal. 514, 39 Pac. 922.

[g] In an action to recover taxes paid by plaintiff under protest, findings that plaintiff forwarded its statement of taxes to the assessor by mail, properly addressed, but that the assessor never received the statement so forwarded, show that plaintiff "neglected" to furnish to the assessor the statement of property subject to taxation, under Political Code, section 3629, providing for an arbitrary assessment where taxpayer "neglects or refuses" to furnish such statement; the presumption that a letter mailed was received, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, being overcome by direct evidence of the assessor that he never received it.—Grade v. Mariposa County, 132 Cal. 75, 64 Pac. 117.

[h] The presumption created by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, subdivision 15, that official duty has been performed, is expressly made rebuttable, and proof that payment for supplies furnished to a library board by plaintiff and his assignor had never been made, and that no order, demand, warrant, or draft had been delivered to them, or to anyone for their use, sufficiently showed that they could not have indorsed, or authorized the indorsement of, warrants issued in payment therefor, and rebutted any presumption that the indorsements on the warrants were genuine, though the warrants themselves had been drawn and stamped "Paid" by the city treasurer.—Robertson v. Board of Library Trustees of Alameda Free Public Library and Reading Rooms, 136 Cal. 403, 69 Pac. 88.

III. BURDEN OF PROOF.

EXTENT OF BURDEN IN GENERAL, § 78.
—— EFFECT OF PRESUMPTIONS OR PRIMA FACIE CASE, § 79.
MATTERS OF DEFENSE, § 80.
FAILURE TO SUSTAIN BURDEN, § 81.

In criminal cases. See Criminal Law, §§ 78-90.
Burden to show abandonment. See Abandonment, § 19.
Burden of showing error—In civil cases. See Appeal and Error, § 1118.
—— In criminal cases. See Criminal Law, § 747.
Burden of proving damages. See Damages, § 109.
Burden of proving self-defense in actions for wrongful death. See Death, § 25.
Burden of proving dedication. See Dedication, § 55.
Burden of proving forfeiture. See Forfeitures, § 5.
In homicide cases. See Homicide, VI, A.

§ 78. Extent of Burden in General.

[a] The burden rests upon either party to establish his own right; and the fact that the complaint anticipates the case of the defendant by negative averments as to his qualifications and right to purchase does not alter the rule or shift the burden.—Lane v. Pferdner, 56 Cal. 122.

[b] Burden rests on party having affirmative of issue.—Harmon v. Ashmead, 68 Cal. 323, 9 Pac. 183.

[c] Party having affirmative of issue is bound to produce preponderance of evidence. Robinson v. Nevada Bank, 81 Cal. 109, 22 Pac. 487.

[d] Burden of proof may be burden of making or meeting prima facie case or burden of producing preponderance of evidence. Scott v. Wood, 81 Cal. 400, 401, 22 Pac. 871.

[e] Burden of making or meeting prima facie case may shift in course of trial.—Scott v. Wood, 81 Cal. 401, 22 Pac. 871.

[f] Burden of producing preponderance of evidence is on party having affirmative of issue and never shifts.—Scott v. Wood, 81 Cal. 401, 402, 22 Pac. 871.

[g] In ascertaining who has affirmative of issue substance controls form; fact that traverse is affirmative instead of negative is immaterial.—Scott v. Wood, 81 Cal. 403, 404, 22 Pac. 871.

[h] One desiring benefit of statute conferring rights on particular class must show himself belonging to class designated.—Bode v. Trimmer, 82 Cal. 517, 23 Pac. 187.

[i] The burden of proof of a negative averment in a pleading depends upon the circumstances of the case. A negative averment in a complaint requires proof by the party pleading it only where it is an essential part of the original substantive cause of action upon which the plaintiff relies. In other cases, generally, though a negative averment may be necessary, it need not be proved, but the burden of proof rests upon the other party, whose rights depend upon proof of the affirmative.—Dirks v. California Safe Deposit etc. Co., 136 Cal. 84, 68 Pac. 487.

[j] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1869, provides that evidence need not be given in support of a negative allegation except when such allegation is an essential part of the right or the statement on which the cause of action or defense is founded. In a suit to enforce the lien of a street assessment, plaintiff alleged that plans and specifications and estimates of cost had not been required, etc. Held, that affirmative evidence in support of such allegation was not necessary.—Petaluma Pav. Co. v. Singley, 136 Cal. 616, 69 Pac. 426.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 932-934; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 204-209, §§ 116, 117.

§ 79. —— Effect of Presumptions or Prima Facie Case.

in his favor, or otherwise makes out a prima facie case, the burden of proof is cast on the opposite party.—Thompson v. Lee, 8 Cal. 275; Ficken v. Jones, 28 Cal. 618.

[b] Burden shifts when party having affirmative of issue establishes it prima facie. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 298-414, 10 Pac. 674.

[c] Presumption is against party having burden of proof.—Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 510, 23 Pac. 700.

[d] While the presumption is not conclusive, the burden of proof rests upon the party affirming the fact to be to the contrary, and such fact must be established by clear and convincing evidence.—Dimmick v. Dimmick, 95 Cal. 323, 30 Pac. 547.

[e] The admission of the defendants, in the contract of indemnity given to the street railway company, of the execution of the note by it, are sufficient evidence, prima facie, to sustain a finding that the note of the corporation was duly executed, and to throw the burden upon the defendants to show want of authority on the part of the officers of the corporation to execute it.—Temple Street Cable Ry. v. Hellman, 103 Cal. 634, 37 Pac. 530.

[f] The identity of the person of the deceased declarant, whose declarations were admitted in evidence, with the brother of the deceased testator named in the will, is presumed from the identity of name; and the will itself is sufficient evidence that the brother named in the will was a member of the family of the deceased testator. The presumption arising from the identity of name is rebuttable, but is sufficient to shift the burden of proof of the contrary upon the other side.—Estate of Williams, 128 Cal. 552, 79 Am. St. Rep. 67, 61 Pac. 670.

§ 80. Matters of Defense.

[a] Pleas setting up affirmative defenses impose the burden of proof as to such defenses on defendant.—Finn v. Wharf Co., 7 Cal. 253.

[b] Burden of proof is on defendant to prove defense that plaintiff is not the real party in interest.—Wilkins v. Stidger, 22 Cal. 231.

[c] Under the statute the affirmative allegations of an answer stand controverted by the plaintiff, and the burden is on the defendant to prove the truth of such allegations.—Bryan v. Maume, 28 Cal. 238.

[d] Where there is evidence tending to show that the defendants were not entirely innocent in their dealings with the employee of the plaintiffs who embezzled the tin bought by the defendants, the burden is thrown upon the defendants to show that the tin thus purchased was not a portion of that for which the plaintiffs proved that they found a shortage in their warehouse, and settled with their bailors.—Bode v. Lee, 102 Cal. 583, 36 Pac. 936.

[e] Affirmative defenses must be established by preponderance of evidence.—Fisk v. Casey, 119 Cal. 644, 51 Pac. 1077.

[f] Where, in a suit to recover land, the complaint alleged that the premises were not agricultural land, and the answer denied it, the land being a little over an acre in a city and having a dwelling-house on it, the burden of showing that it was agricultural land, within the meaning of the code, was on defendant, Code of Civil Procedure, section 1869, providing that every party must prove his own affirmative allegations, and that evidence need not be given in support of a negative allegation.—Holmes v. Warren, 145 Cal. 457, 78 Pac. 954.

[g] Plaintiff asked that an agreement made by her to convey land to defendant for stock in an iron and steel company be canceled, alleging that defendant induced her to make the contract by representing that a new method had been discovered for the cheaper manufacture, at a great profit, of a superior quality of fine steel and iron, for which invention a caveat had been filed, and that this company had been formed for the manufacture of steel under this process, which representations plaintiff alleged to be false, and known by defendant so to be. Held that, as these were negative allegations, but little was necessary to shift the burden of proof to the party having the best opportunities for knowledge of the facts, and that testimony of an expert that the process, as given in the caveat, would not produce steel, was sufficient to place on defendant the burden of proving the truth of the representations made by him.—Kelley v. Owens, 30 Pac. 596, 31 Pac. 14.

[h] A party alleging an affirmative defense has the burden of proving it.—Prince v. Kennedy (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 859.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 934; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 210-213, §§ 119-121.

§ 81. Failure to Sustain Burden.

[a] Where there is no evidence introduced on an issue, the finding must be against the party on whom the burden of proof rests.—Dieterle v. Bekin, 143 Cal. 683, 77 Pac. 664.

[b] When a party alleges a material fact and offers no evidence in support of it, the court is authorized, if denied, to find its nonexistence.—Miller v. Donovan (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 159.

§ 82. In General.

[a] Evidence of any circumstance which, with other circumstances, tends to prove a fact in issue, is admissible.—Henry v. Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 184.

[b] Meaning of word "relevant," as applied to testimony, is that it directly touches upon the issue which the parties have made by their pleadings, so as to assist in getting at the truth of it.—Moran v. Abbey, 58 Cal. 163.

[c] Evidence should be confined to issues made by pleadings.—Gould v. Stafford, 77 Cal. 68, 18 Pac. 879.

[d] Evidence of an independent promise by a vendor, made without consideration, to advance money to a purchaser to enable him to comply with the conditions of his contract of purchase, may properly be excluded as immaterial and irrelevant.—Wallace v. Maples, 79 Cal. 433, 21 Pac. 860.

[e] In determining whether plaintiffs' ancestor executed a deed claimed to have been forged, the jury may properly consider the subsequent conduct of the ancestor, and whether he ever made any claim to the property, or its possession, paid taxes and assessments, or made any other assertion of ownership.—Haight v. Vallet, 89 Cal. 245, 23 Am. St. Rep. 465, 26 Pac. 897.

[f] Evidence to show the alteration by the plaintiff of a letter written by her son, under whom the defendant claims, to a sister not a party to the action, and the contents of which do not relate to the alleged promise and agreement of the plaintiff to give the property in controversy to the son, nor touch the plaintiff's credibility as a witness, and could not affect the result of the controversy, is properly excluded by the trial court.—Shirley v. Shirley, 92 Cal. 44, 27 Pac. 1097.

[g] Testimony is irrelevant when it does not fit the case or is not proper under issues framed.—Davey v. Southern Pacific Co., 116 Cal. 332, 48 Pac. 117.

[h] Where the complaint charges a single violation of the statute on a day specified, evidence of subsequent purchases of tickets and exclusions of admission, and ejectment from the premises, is wholly without the pleadings, and inadmissible.—Greenberg v. Western Turf. Assn., 140 Cal. 357, 73 Pac. 1050.

[i] Evidence of the request of the defendant, who was carrying an accident insurance policy to indemnify it against accidents to its employees, to the accident insurance company to defend an action brought against it by the plaintiff, is irrelevant, and inadmissible for any purpose, and a general objection thereto is sufficient.—Roche v. Llewellyn Iron Works Co., 140 Cal. 563, 74 Pac. 147.

§ 83. Matters Showing Relevancy of Other Facts.

[a] S.'s clerk, Y., took an assignment of mortgage from him, foreclosed it, and took the property in his own name. S. having died, Y. contended, as against his widow, that he had bought the mortgage, and foreclosed it for himself. The widow asserted that she had bought it from her husband, and had it assigned to Y. for foreclosure. On direct examination, Mrs. S. was asked whether at the time in question Y. was her agent for collecting rents. Y.'s accounts were then put in evidence, showing large credits for rents collected for her, and charges for the notary's fee on the assignment of the mortgage, for taxes on the same, and expenses of foreclosure and sale. Held, that the question was proper as an introduction of the accounts.—Hunt v. Swyney, 33 Pac. 854.

§ 84. Matters Explanatory of Facts in Evidence or Inferences Therefrom.

[a] Testimony to show the manner in which books were kept, and that they are correct, is admissible where the books themselves are properly in evidence.—West Coast Lumber Co. v. Newkirk, 80 Cal. 275, 22 Pac. 231, 232.

Admission of part of a conversation or transaction and its effect to authorize the admission of the remainder: 82 Am. Dec. 343, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 1118, 1119; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 230-235, §§ 134, 135.

§ 85. Evidence Irrelevant Unless Preceded or Followed by Other Evidence.

[a] A power of attorney to sell "lots unsold" is admissible in evidence without first making proof that the lot in controversy was unsold when the power was given.—Gardiner v. Schmaelzle, 47 Cal. 588.

[b] Where, in an action to recover a gift as obtained from one non compos mentis, defendant seeks to show that the gift was made by her father because her brother-in-law had previously stolen a large sum of money from him, evidence that a large sum was carried to her father's house is inadmissible without proof of the time it was taken there.—Ellen v. Lewison, 88 Cal. 253, 26 Pac. 109.

§ 86. Title to and Possession of Property.

[a] In an action against a sheriff for carrying away plaintiff's property as another's, it is competent for plaintiff to introduce evidence showing acts of ownership on his part, and tending to prove his possession of the property.—Fitch v. Brockmon, 3 Cal. 348.

[b] In ejectment for mining land, the plaintiffs, who were a joint stock company, claimed by transfer from the original members of the company, and offered as evidence of such transfer assignments of what, according to the practice of the company, had been issued as certificates of stock, which certificates constituted the only evidence of membership recognized by the company. Held, that these certificates were competent upon the question of possession.—Pennsylvania Min. Co. v. Owens, 15 Cal. 135.

[c] Where the principal issue was as to the existence of an agency of one defendant for the plaintiff in certain mining ground, evidence tending to show the nature of plaintiff's interest or claim in the property was relevant and competent, although it did not tend to establish title to the property in plaintiff.—Hardenbergh v. Bacon, 33 Cal. 356.

[d] Evidence that person acquired possession of and leased land to another tends to show that he is the owner of it.—Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485.

[e] Evidence that certain persons controlled or superintended real estate is admissible for the purpose of showing that such persons in equity own it, although the legal title stands in another.—Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 487.

[f] In an action of ejectment to recover the possession of quartz mining claims, where the answer avers that the premises described in plaintiffs' complaint are public mineral lands of the United States, and the evidence shows that no part of the land in dispute was within section 35 of the government survey, an offer in evidence by the defendants of a patent from the government to the Central Pacific Railroad Company for the whole of section 35, upon which one-third of plaintiffs' claims were located, for the purpose of showing an outstanding title thereto, is not relevant to any material issue, and the defendants could not be injured by its exclusion.—Mills v. Fletcher, 100 Cal. 142, 34 Pac. 637.

§ 87. —— Evidence Showing Payment.

[a] Where the plaintiff claimed that he had acquired an interest in certain company mining claims by purchase, which admission was not withdrawn, evidence that he had acted as a member of the company, that he had paid assessments on his interest, and that he had been received as member of the company, was held incompetent and irrelevant to prove title to such interest.—King v. Randlett, 33 Cal. 318.

§ 88. Evidence of Collateral Transactions and Transactions Between Third Persons.

[a] A question relating to no issue in the case, and tending to prejudice plaintiff by showing his willingness to commit a crime, is incompetent.—Swan v. Thompson, 124 Cal. 193, 56 Pac. 878.

[b] Where plaintiff in ejectment did not claim that a certain judgment affected defendant's title, and the judgment was not introduced in evidence, it was not error to exclude a satisfaction of the judgment, since there was no necessity of showing that the judgment was satisfied.—Baum v. Roper, 132 Cal. 42, 64 Pac. 128.

[c] Drafts and invoices for other carloads drawn after they had been shipped out of the state, and a letter from one bank to another accompanying one of the drafts—all bearing date long subsequent to the delivery of the two carloads sued for (the invoice of which shows a delivery to the purchasers' agent on the day of its date)—are inadmissible and irrelevant to the issue before the court.—J. K. Armsby Co. v. Blum, 137 Cal. 552, 70 Pac. 669.

[d] In an action for the death of a servant by the fall of a derrick, it was the theory of defendant that the fall was occasioned by a latent defect in the pivot, which had been found broken after the accident; but it was the theory of plaintiff that the fall was occasioned because the ties supporting the rails to which the derrick was clamped were decayed. Held, that evidence that no repairs had been made on the platform for more than five years prior to the accident, about which time a hand derrick had fallen over, pulling the rail with it, was not open to objection of being to a collateral matter.—Dyas v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 Cal. 296, 73 Pac. 972.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1868, 1870, 1958, 1960, it is within the discretion of the court to permit inquiry into a collateral fact connected with the fact in dispute, and unless the evidence is without any weight in determining the fact in dispute, the action of the court in receiving it will not be reversed.—Moody v. Peirano (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 380.

§ 89. Identity of Property.

[a] The question was as to the identity of certain lands mentioned in a patent. The map incorporated into the patent showed that there were two streams emptying into Bear river within the calls of the patent, each of which was called "Dry creek," and that below one and above the other the premises in controversy were situated. The description in the patent commenced at an oak tree at the mouth of the lower Dry creek. An inquiry of a witness as to whether the lands occupied by the defendant lay below Dry creek was held improper, unless the question should be first made definite in its application by limiting it to the Dry creek at which the oak tree stood.—Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1130; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 279-282, §§ 155, 156.

§ 90. Nature, Condition and Qualities of Property.

[a] In an action for damages caused by the breaking of defendant's dam, which was built of wood, and which the evidence tended to show broke away by reason of decayed timbers, testimony of a witness as to his familiarity with earth dams, and as to how earth dams might break, was properly excluded.—Wiedekind v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 83 Cal. 198, 23 Pac. 311.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 267-279, §§ 144-154.

§ 91. —— Reputation of Compound as Dangerous.

[a] The issue being whether E. powder was a reasonably safe powder, and whether the defendant exercised due care in ascertaining its safety, a witness was allowed to be asked, "What was the reputation of E. powder as a safe or dangerous compound?" Held error; it not appearing that the reputation asked for ever came to the knowledge of defendant, or that it existed at any place where defendant was bound to inquire.—Sowden v. Idaho Quartz Min. Co., 55 Cal. 443.

§ 92. Character or Reputation.

[a] Evidence of reputation pertinent to an issue directly tendered is admissible.—Sowden v. Idaho Quartz Min. Co., 55 Cal. 450.

[b] The general rule is that in civil actions evidence of the good character of the defendant is not admissible, and the exceptions consist mostly of cases where the character of some person is the very issue involved; but an action for assault and battery is not one of the exceptions.—Vance v. Richardson, 110 Cal. 414, 42 Pac. 909.

[c] Evidence of the character of the inmates and frequenters of a house is admissible to show that it was being used for prostitution and assignation.—Demartini v. Anderson, 127 Cal. 33, 59 Pac. 207.

Evidence of character in civil actions, when admissible: 53 Am. Dec. 133, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 1263-1287; 19 Cyc. 365; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 297-304, §§ 177-187.

§ 93. —— Reputation for Care and Prudence.

[a] In an action to recover damages done to a person by cattle which the defendant by his servants was driving through a street in a city, evidence is admissible in his favor to show that such servants were safe and prudent men in driving and conducting cattle through the city.—Ficken v. Jones, 28 Cal. 618.

§ 94. Pecuniary Condition.

[a] Evidence of pecuniary condition of plaintiff is inadmissible in suit for breach of entire contract.—Cox v. McLaughlin, 63 Cal. 196.

§ 95. —— To Show Acquisition and Ownership of Property.

[a] Evidence as to the pecuniary standing and ability of the claimant of land was competent on the issue as to whether he was in equity the owner of the property, the title of which was taken in his name.—Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485.

§ 96. Motive and Intent in Making Contract in General.

[a] Evidence tending to prove motive for making of deed is admissible under the issue as to whether there was a delivery.—Kidder v. Stevens, 60 Cal. 414.

[b] The testimony of plaintiff in an action for land promised by him to his daughter, as to whether he intended, in his conversations with the daughter, to give more than a life estate, was properly rejected, as it could not be heard to vary the legal effect of the transaction.—Burlingame v. Rowland, 77 Cal. 315, 19 Pac. 526, 1 L. R. A. 829.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 1184-1188; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 314-324, §§ 202-212.

§ 97. —— In Failing to Perform Contract.

[a] In an action for damages for breach of contract to convey real estate, it was shown that after the contract was made the defendant persuaded plaintiff to accept other land in lieu of that covered by the contract by representing that he had made a prior contract to convey the land to another. Held, that defendant's knowledge that a railroad was to be located near the land described in the original contract was a circumstance tending to show fraud, as furnishing a motive for defendant's attempting to relieve himself of the contract, though he was under no obligation to disclose the fact to the plaintiff.—Marriner v. Dennison, 78 Cal. 202, 20 Pac. 386.

§ 98. —— Evidence as to Good Faith.

§ 99. Knowledge—In General.

[a] That the party's grantor asked permission of another to erect a building on the premises is evidence of notice to the grantor of that other's claim.—Kneeland v. Wilson, 12 Cal. 241.

[b] In an action to have a party declared a trustee, and to compel him, as such, to convey land alleged to have been acquired by him from a third party as trustee of the party complaining, testimony on behalf of the latter party as to whether he knew that the other was about to make the purchase is irrelevant.—Branson v. Caruthers, 49 Cal. 374.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 1176, 1177; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 324-349, §§ 213-246.

§ 100. —— Of Title to Property.

[a] In an action to establish a trust in lands, a witness testified that after the purchase of the land by defendant the latter said he had paid a certain sum to bind the sale, and asked witness if he and a friend did not wish to take a part in it; that the next day, at plaintiff's room, they heard that plaintiff claimed that the purchase was made for him, and gave up the idea of taking an interest. Held, that it was not error to exclude evidence by such witness that he and his friend went to plaintiff's room on the assumption that he had an interest in the land.—Tuffree v. Brock, 31 Pac. 1134.

§ 101. Statements and Conduct of Parties.

[a] Acts in pais, tending to show adoption of an illegitimate child, at a time when the statute required a written acknowledgment, are admissible, not only to show the purpose and object of the father's subsequent treatment at a time when the statute no longer required the acknowledgment to be formal or in writing, but also because the whole treatment of the child, being continuous in its nature, must be considered in determining whether or not there was an adoption under the later statutes.—Jessup, In re, 81 Cal. 408, 21 Pac. 976, 6 L. R. A. 594.

[b] A paper executed by defendant, authorizing his agent to take possession of certain premises, is admissible to prove defendant's attempt to take possession thereof.—Whitmore v. Ainsworth, 38 Pac. 196.

§ 102. —— To Show Mental Condition.

[a] Where a witness has testified to a business transaction with the testator, a question as to how he conducted the transaction is relevant and material to show his mental condition.—Estate of Wax, 106 Cal. 343, 39 Pac. 624.

§ 103. —— Statements as to Ownership of Property.

[a] Testimony that the defendant had admitted that he held the property in trust is properly received, as tending to show that he did not pay a valuable consideration for it.—Duff v. Duff, 101 Cal. 1, 35 Pac. 437.

§ 104. Customs and Usages of Business.

[a] Authority of superintendent or secretary of mining partnership to execute notes or contracts may be established by proof of general usage.—Jones v. Clark, 42 Cal. 192, 367.

[b] As tending to show that a particular business was conducted by a deceased person ostensibly for himself and in his name, and not for or in the name of another, evidence that the goods used in the business were sold to him in his own name and charged to him individually is admissible.—Kelly v. Murphy, 70 Cal. 560, 12 Pac. 467.

[c] On the trial of an action by an architect on a quantum meruit, plaintiff's evidence of the customary charges of architects for similar services is not made incompetent by defendant's showing that the customary charges made by architects originated in and conform to a rule established by an association of architects. (McFarland, J., dissenting.)—Laver v. Hotaling, 115 Cal. 613, 47 Pac. 593.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See Cent. Dig., cols. 350-356, §§ 247-253.

§ 105. —— Of Police Department.

[a] To prove defendant's knowledge of custom of police to take property from persons arrested, previous arrest of defendant is admissible, but not a subsequent arrest.—Levy v. Brannan, 39 Cal. 485.

§ 106. Value of Services.

[a] In an action by a suregon for the value of his service in attending on persons wounded in a railroad collision and placed in a private hospital, evidence for defendant of the customary charge in this state for all necessary medical and other attendance on patients in hospitals, received for treatment for wounds, is irrelevant.—Trenor v. Central Pac. R. Co., 50 Cal. 222.

[b] Testimony as to the length of time spent by an architect on certain plans and specifications is admissible on the question of the value of his services in preparing the same, the jury not being limited to a consideration of the expert testimony on that question.—Ehlers v. Wannack, 118 Cal. 310, 50 Pac. 433.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 1144; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 356-361, §§ 254-258.

§ 107. Value or Market Price of Property.

[a] Contract with third party, though not valid under statute of frauds, may be considered in estimating damage for nondelivery of goods sold, which have no market value.—McKay v. Riley, 65 Cal. 623, 4 Pac. 667.

[b] In determining the real value of the land sold the jury are not confined to evidence of what it would have brought at a forced sale for cash, at public auction, and the court may admit evidence showing the terms of credit upon which tracts of land in region of the land in question were usually sold, and what was its fair market value at the time of the private sale, the question before the jury being as to the difference between the amount for which it was sold and its fair market value at that time.—Montgomery v. Sayre, 100 Cal. 182, 30 Am. St. Rep. 271, 34 Pac. 646.

[c] Where materials are furnished at an agreed price, such price is prima facie evidence of their value.—Bringham v. Knox, 127 Cal. 40, 59 Pac. 198.

[d] Where defendants alleged that an absolute deed given plaintiff was a mortgage, a witness cannot testify as to the market value of property in that vicinity, or what would be a reasonable price for the land in controversy, when he was not limited to the market value at the time of the conveyance. Garwood v. Wheaton, 128 Cal. 399, 60 Pac. 961.

[e] In proceedings to condemn a right of way over oil-bearing lands, it is permissible to show, on the issue of value, a progressive decrease in productiveness of the field within which the land in question is situated.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 290, 79 Pac. 961.

[f] In proceedings to condemn a right of way over oil fields, certain expert testimony held incompetent on the issue of market value.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 290, 79 Pac. 961.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 1133-1144; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 362-403, §§ 259-296.

§ 108. —— Time and Place of Valuation.

[a] Where shares of stock were sold under an agreement that the buyer was to keep the shares until a certain date, and, if not then worth a specified sum per share, the seller to make good the difference, evidence that at a time prior to said date the shares were worth the specified sum was inadmissible in an action to recover a deficiency on said date.—Hawley v. Brumagim, 33 Cal. 394.

[b] Where, in an action for breach of contract, the complaint alleges that defendants agreed to deliver to plaintiff, at A., twelve thousand dozen eggs, as soon as they could be transported from O., and that the eggs arrived at A. on July 8th, but were not delivered to plaintiff until July 14th, evidence of the price of eggs on July 18th is inadmissible to show damage.—Ramish v. Kirschbraun, 90 Cal. 581, 27 Pac. 433.

[c] It was error, in an action for breach of a contract whereby defendants were to deliver eggs to plaintiff as soon as they could be transported, and they arrived July 8th, but were not delivered until July 14th, to permit plaintiff to testify that he had contracted to sell the eggs at 21 cents per dozen, but, on account of the failure to deliver them in time, he lost the sale, and was obliged to sell them at 16 cents, as the evidence must be confined to the market value of eggs between July 8th and 14th.—Ramish v. Kirschbraun, 90 Cal. 581, 27 Pac. 433.

[d] The value or amount of the stock in the saloon at any other time than when the sale was made is not relevant to the matter in issue, and evidence thereof is inadmissible.—Meyer v. Parsons, 129 Cal. 653, 42 Pac. 216.

§ 109. —— Corporate Stock in General.

[a] The market value of stock is not determined by the fact that operators therein were able to induce their neighbors and acquaintances to take it at low and varying rates.—Fitz v. Bynum, 55 Cal. 459.

[b] Upon the question of the value of certain mining stock as the mine was at the time of the sale of such stock, evidence of what the ore might be made to yield by the erection of certain machinery is inadmissible. Fitz v. Bynum, 55 Cal. 459.

§ 110. —— Cost of Repairing or Replacing Property.

[a] In an action to recover the value of buildings destroyed by fire through defendant's negligence, evidence of the cost of new buildings to replace those destroyed is admissible on the question of the value of the latter.—Cleland v. Thornton, 43 Cal. 437.

[b] Where farm implements have been used, the cost of replacing them with new implements furnishes no measure of their value. Slade's Estate, In re, 122 Cal. 434, 55 Pac. 158.

§ 111. —— Value of Rents and Profits as Showing Value of Property.

[a] Rental of property is not an unerring criterion of its value, even in case the title be perfect, and it is less certain if the title be doubtful. It may be considered, for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the property rented, but should not outweigh other and direct evidence to the same point.—Kisling v. Shaw, 33 Cal. 425.

[b] In a proceeding to condemn land for a public use, the fact to be ascertained is the value of the land at the time of the taking; and, to arrive at this value, testimony to prove the annual net profits derived from the land for a particular use is not admissible. Stockton etc. R. Co. v. Galgiani, 49 Cal. 139.

§ 112. —— Value of Property as Evidence of Contract Relating Thereto.

[a] Evidence that the vendee of a mining claim took out large sums of money in gold dust subsequently to the sale is inadmissible in evidence to show inadequacy in the price paid for the claim.—Henry v. Everts, 29 Cal. 610.

§ 113. —— Circumstances Adding to or Detracting from Value in General.

[a] In condemnation proceedings, a question: "For what purpose could that property be used properly?"—is properly disallowed. City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

[b] In an action for the detachment and removal of saloon fixtures, it is proper to exclude evidence of the value of the fixtures when removed from their position and considered without reference to their intended uses. Greenebaum v. Taylor, 102 Cal. 624, 36 Pac. 957.

§ 114. Facts Relevant to Particular Issues.

[a] Plaintiff, in an action for personal injuries, was asked if he had been able to earn any money since the accident. Held that, as it appeared from the testimony of plaintiff that the question referred to his injury, it was relevant and properly admitted.—Roche v. Redington, 125 Cal. 174, 57 Pac. 890.

[b] Evidence that a tenant did not think he was liable to pay for the boring of a well on the premises is not admissible against the landlord to show that he was liable therefor. Bradbury v. McHenry, 125 Cal. xix, 57 Pac. 999.

§ 115. Nature of Doctrine and Relation to Issues in General.

[a] The declaration of a third person made to, and in the presence of, parties engaged in a controversy at the time of the doing of an act by one of them which becomes the subject of an action, is admissible in evidence as a part of the res gestae.—Gillam v. Sigman, 29 Cal. 637.

[b] Declarations to be part of res gestae must be part of a transaction properly in question, and not part of an immaterial transaction.—Bernheimer v. Baldwin, 42 Cal. 34

Digitized by Google

[c] A declaration, to be admissible as part of the res gestae, must be an undesigned part or incident of the occurrence in question, and must be the natural and spontaneous outgrowth of the main occurrence. It must exclude the notion of deliberation, or calculation, or design to make evidence for future purposes; and if it be a narrative of past events, it is inadmissible hearsay, and must be excluded. The difficult task is always to apply established principles to the facts of the case in hand.—Heckle v. Southern Pac. Co., 123 Cal. 441, 56 Pac. 56.

[d] Declarations of an insured person tending to show that he contemplated suicide, not accompanying nor explanatory of any act, were not competent evidence in favor of defendant insurance company against the beneficiary and her assignee.—Jenkin v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California, 131 Cal. 121, 63 Pac. 180.

[e] A declaration to be admissible as part of the res gestae, must be an incident, or the natural and spontaneous outgrowth of the main occurrence in question, and must exclude the notion of deliberation, or calculation, or design to make evidence for future purposes.—Rulofson v. Billings, 140 Cal. 452, 74 Pac. 35.

[f] A statement held not a part of the res gestae.—Murphy v. Board of Police Pension Fund Commrs. (Cal. App.), 83 Pac. 577.

§ 116. Acts or Statements Accompanying or Connected with Transaction or Event.

[a] An entry was made in an alcalde's book of grants, on the margin of a grant, of the words "Not taken," and lines of cancellation were drawn across the grant. Held, in an action by the heirs of the grantee, that it was proper to permit the alcalde to testify as to what was said and done as to the cancellation, although the grantee was not present when the cancellation was made.—Rice v. Cunningham, 29 Cal. 492.

[ab] The statements of a warehouseman as to the ownership of wheat removed from the warehouse and loaded by him upon a barge, identifying the wheat removed, and made at the time of its removal, are admissible in evidence as part of the res gestae.—Garoutte v. Williamson, 108 Cal. 135, 41 Pac. 35, 413.

[b] On the issue of the death of the insured in an action on a life policy, where the evidence showed that the insured took passage on a steamer plying between certain ports, and was seen by the officers during the voyage as late as half-past 9 o'clock in the evening, and the evidence tended to show that he was not seen again, and was not seen leaving the steamer at any of the ports, a letter written by the insured, addressed to the captain, indicating an intention to commit suicide by drowning, and found in his room on the steamer, was admissible as a part of the res gestae.—Rogers v. Manhattan Life Ins. Co., 138 Cal. 285, 71 Pac. 348.

[c] In an action on certain notes acquired by plaintiff's intestate against the payee and indorser, evidence of intestate's declarations at the time he obtained the notes are admissible.—Bradley v. Bush (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 560.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 415-503, §§ 307-368.

§ 117. —— Writings.

[a] Upon trial of a case involving the extent of a water privilege claimed by copartners under an alleged appropriation, their notice of location, shown to have been prepared with the knowledge of some of them, and seen by them as a posted notice, and to have been so posted that it "must have been seen" by the others, was held admissible in evidence, as part of the res gestae.—McKinney v. Smith, 21 Cal. 374.

§ 118. —— Motive and Intent in General.

[a] In order to show work done on a mining claim by a prior locator, declarations made by such locator to others as to his object in beginning work at a point some fifty or one hundred feet from the lode in question, showing that such work was done to drain a tunnel to be constructed into the lode, is admissible as part of the res gestae.—Draper v. Douglass, 23 Cal. 347.

[b] The declarations of a party while engaged in the performance of an act, and illustrating the object and intent of its performance, are admissible in evidence.—Tait v. Hall, 71 Cal. 149, 12 Pac. 391.

[c] The declarations of deceased at or about the time he gave an order to his wife on a bank authorizing it to pay his deposit to her, which was done, is admissible, on the question of his intention to make a gift, in an action for the money between his and her executors.—Sprague v. Walton, 145 Cal. 228, 78 Pac. 645.

§ 119. —— Existence or Nature of Contract and Relation of Parties.

[a] In connection with acts showing a change of ownership, and in explanation of them, the declarations of the parties showing the nature of their agreement were admissible in evidence.—Clark v. Rush, 19 Cal. 393.

[b] In an action to quiet title to lands which are claimed as part of the estate of a decedent, and to cancel a deed thereof made by him to his father just before his death, where the issue arises whether or not the son acquired the land by a previous conveyance from his father without consideration, and as his trustee to reconvey the same when requested to do so, evidence is admissible of statements made by the son as to the nature of the transaction, and the consideration therefor.—Harris v. Harris, 67 Cal. 455, 8 Pac. 8.

[c] Where limitation is set up, and issue joined thereon, plaintiff relying on a writing signed by defendant waiving the benefit of the statute, parol evidence of the circumstances under which such writing was executed is admissible as part of the res gestae. Cross v. Zellerbach, 8 Pac. 714.

§ 120. —— Statements Accompanying Sale or Conveyance.

[a] Where, to explain what a grantor intended to grant by a deed, it was attempted to introduce declarations of the grantor made at uncertain times before and after the conveyance, held, that the declarations, not being part of the res gestae, were not admissible. Aguirre v. Alexander, 58 Cal. 21.

[b] In an action to quiet title to land, which plaintiff's wife conveyed without consideration to defendant—the contention of plaintiff being that, though D. had procured conveyance to plaintiff's wife, and paid for it, and afterward built houses thereon, it became the community property of plaintiff and his wife, and not her separate property, for the reason that D. was acting as their agent, and used their money, in such purchase and building—declarations of D., made when he purchased the land and constructed the houses, as to the character in which he made the purchase, and the terms and conditions on which he was building, though made in the absence of plaintiff's wife, are admissible as part of the res gestae.—Lewis v. Burns, 106 Cal. 381, 39 Pac. 778.

[c] Where the vendor of personal property is present when the property is moved by his vendees, the declarations of the vendor as to his object in moving the property made before the removal is complete, are admissible in evidence as part of the res gestae, and for the purpose of throwing light upon the character of the transaction, and enable the jury to determine whether the sale was bona fide, or with the express intent to defraud his creditors.—Eppinger v. Scott, 112 Cal. 369, 53 Am. St. Rep. 220, 42 Pac. 301, 44 Pac. 723.

§ 121. —— Validity of Transfer.

[a] In a suit by the creditor of the husband to set aside a deed of gift made by a third person to the wife, on the ground that the land was purchased with the husband's money and that the deed to the wife was a fraud, held, that evidence of conversations at the time of the sale, between the grantor and one who negotiated the sale, was admissible as part of the res gestae.—Tevis v. Hicks, 41 Cal. 123.

§ 122. —— Statements as to Personal Injuries.

[a] In an action against a railroad company for personal injuries sustained by one of its laborers, owing to the fall of an overhanging embankment, an exclamation by defendant's foreman when the accident happened, "My God! I expected that," is admissible as part of the res gestae.—Elledge v. National City etc. Ry. Co., 100 Cal. 282, 38 Am. St. Rep. 290, 34 Pac. 720, 852.

[b] Declarations of a person caught under the wheels of a car, as to the cause of the accident, shortly after the accident, and before he was extricated, are admissible as part of the res gestae.—Heckle v. Southern Pac. Co., 123 Cal. 441, 56 Pac. 56.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Res gestae, statement of injured persons, when constitutes parts of: 34 Am. Rep. 479, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 200; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 504-527, §§ 369-387.

§ 123. —— Fraud and Duress.

[a] In an action for the conversion of personal property, the defense was that the plaintiff's claim was based on a judgment confessed by J. for the purpose of fraud. On the trial, evidence was admitted of J.'s declarations before sale, while on his way to see one with whom he had made arrangements that he should buy the property. Held, that the declarations were admissible, being a part of the fraudulent transaction.—Davis v. Drew, 58 Cal. 152.

§ 124. —— Acts of Others in Same Dangerous Situation.

[a] Evidence of what other persons in same dangerous situation did is admissible as part of res gestae to show what they deemed prudent conduct.—Mitchell v. Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 87 Cal. 75, 25 Pac. 245.

§ 125. Acts or Statements Before Transaction or Event.

[a] Where there is a question as to whether or not plaintiff transferred his property in contemplation of immediate death, a question calling for the conversation had by the witness with plaintiff just prior to and at the time plaintiff made the conveyance is relevant and material as a part of the res gestae. Kyle v. Craig, 125 Cal. 107, 57 Pac. 791.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 472-484, §§ 339-350.

§ 126. Acts or Statements After Transaction or Event.

[a] The declarations of an agent, when but the bare narration of an act which had already taken place and was fully ended, do not form a part of the res gestae, and are inadmissible in evidence against his principal. Innis v. The Steamer Senator, 1 Cal. 459.

[b] Declarations of vendor in possession after sale are admissible as part of res gestae, provided clear and unequivocal possession is shown.—Visher v. Webster, 13 Cal. 58; 25 Cal. 202.

[c] In an action for goods sold, when the issue made is whether the credit was given to the defendant who obtained the goods, or to another person, the declarations of the vendor, made to such other person after the transaction has been completed and some time has elapsed, are not a part of the res gestae, and are not admissible in evidence on behalf of the plaintiff.—Whitney v. Durkin, 48 Cal. 462.

[d] The declaration of an agent of the bank made subsequently to transfer of stock in which he spoke of the transaction as a "purchase" cannot be used as evidence to determine the nature of the transfer.—Borland v. Nevada Bank of San Francisco, 99 Cal. 89, 37 Am. St. Rep. 32, 33 Pac. 737.

[e] Statement of what occurred made after accident is not part of res gestae.—Lissak v. Crocker Estate Co., 119 Cal. 444, 51 Pac. 688.

[ef] The declarations of the captain of the vessel when examining the broken rope after the accident that "that looks pretty bad" is not admissible as part of the res gestae.—Silveira v. Iversen, 128 Cal. 187, 60 Pac. 687.

[f] Declarations of a deceased person, bound by a contract of adoption, providing that on his death he should give his property to the adopted child, made after the execution of the contract and in the absence of the child, to the effect that the deceased was only guardian of the child, were not a part of the res gestae, but merely self-serving.—Rulofson v. Billings, 140 Cal. 452, 74 Pac. 35.

[g] A statement by defendant's foreman the day after the burning of plaintiff's field by fire from sparks from defendant's harvesting engine is not a part of the res gestae and inadmissible.—Quint v. Dimond, 147 Cal. 707, 82 Pac. 310.

[h] In an action for ejection of a passenger from a freight train, evidence of statements by the conductor on the succeeding day are inadmissible.—Wieland v. Southern Pac. Co. (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 226.

[i] In an action against a ship owner for negligent stowage of pelts, a letter written by defendant's agents to plaintiff, purporting to state the manner of stowage, etc., is inadmissible.—Herman Waldeck & Co. v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co. (Cal. App.), 83 Pac. 158.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 484-503, §§ 351-368.

§ 127. —— Statements as to Cause of Accident.

[a] Declarations of a passenger that he was to blame for an accident occurring to him were properly received in evidence, though made some time after the injury.—Gulzoni v. Tyler, 64 Cal. 334, 30 Pac. 981.

[b] Declarations of engineer in explanation of accident about five minutes thereafter are not part of res gestae.—Durkee v. Central etc. R. R., 69 Cal. 535, 536, 58 Am. Rep. 562, 11 Pac. 130.

[c] In an action to recover damages for injuries caused by a collision, the declarations of the employees of the defendant, made soon after the injury, and not as part of the res gestae, but by way of narrative, and of explanation and accounting for the injury, so as to throw blame upon the defendant for not having furnished proper appliances, is not admissible, and the admission thereof is prejudicial error.—Williams v. Southern Pacific Co., 133 Cal. 550, 65 Pac. 1100.

[d] In an action for injuries sustained by a street-car passenger while attempting to alight, statements of the conductor after he had gone from where the car stopped to where plaintiff lay on the ground, almost half a block away, and back again to the car, formed no part of the res gestae.—Boone v. Oakland Transit Co., 139 Cal. 490, 73 Pac. 243.

[e] Declaration made by the brakeman who operated the machinery, and by the mining superintendent, which were no part of the res gestae, but were made after the accident had occurred, as to the cause, were not admissible against the defendant corporation.—Luman v. Golden Ancient Channel Min. Co., 140 Cal. 700, 74 Pac. 307.

[f] In an action of damages for injuries to a child by a railroad train, the declarations of the engineer concerning the accident, made from three to five minutes after the casualty happened are admissible against the principal as part of the res gestae.—Durkee v. Central Pac. R. Co., 9 Pac. 99.

§ 128. —— Expressions of Pain or Suffering.

[a] Involuntary declarations and exclamations of a person's present pain are evidence of his physical condition, though declarations amounting only to statements of his past condition are hearsay.—Green v. Pacific Lumber Co., 130 Cal. 435, 62 Pac. 747.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 514-522, §§ 377-382.

§ 129. —— Statements to Physicians.

[a] Where no one was present when an insured person received a mortal wound, his subsequent statements to the physician and others as to the manner in which he was wounded were properly stricken out on motion of defendant insurance company.—Jenkin v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California, 131 Cal. 121, 63 Pac. 180.

SHOWING VALUE BY SALES OF OTHER PROPERTY, § 141.
—— DISCRETION OF COURT, § 142.

§ 130. Relation to Issues.

[a] In an action for breach of a contract to furnish water for irrigation, whereby a large number of grape cuttings planted by plaintiff died, testimony of a witness for defendants that he (witness) procured fifteen thousand cuttings from the lot from which plaintiff procured his, planted them on similar and yet nearly all of them died, though it land, and watered and cared for them well, relates to a collateral matter, is relevant, as tending to prove a fact from which it could be inferred that the loss of plaintiff's vines was not caused by defendant's failure to furnish water.—Remy v. Olds, 34 Pac. 216.

[b] Evidence as to the number of boxes witness could pack in a given time is not admissible to show how many defendant could pack.—People v. Miller, 145 Cal. xviii, 78 Pac. 227.

[c] Where a land owner sued to abate certain structures erected in a right of way in which he had an easement, held not error to exclude certain testimony in relation to the occupancy by other persons of the right of way in question.—McLean v. Llewellyn Iron Works (Cal. App.), 83 Pac. 1082.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 274; 20 Cent. Dig. cols. 527-553, §§ 388-398.

§ 131. —— Remoteness.

[a] The issue being as to fraud in a sale, evidence of a previous sale between the same parties, of other property, was held to be incompetent; it not being shown that such first sale was fraudulent.—Cohen v. Mulford, 15 Cal. 50.

§ 132. —— Associated or Explanatory Transactions.

[a] In an action for a breach of the purchaser's contract to accept grapes when delivered, a contract between plaintiff and a third person, specifying the weight of the boxes and the grapes to be made in packing, to which reference is made by the contract in suit, is admissible in evidence.—Hewes v. Germain Fruit Co., 106 Cal. 441, 39 Pac. 853.

§ 133. Representations.

[a] Upon evidence of fraudulent combination of defendants with a third person to procure goods replevied, proof of similar means to defraud others is admissible.—Bancroft v. Heringhi, 54 Cal. 120.

§ 134. —— Similar Wrongful Acts.

[a] In trespass against a sheriff for levying on plaintiff's goods, where the defense is fraud in the purchase by the plaintiff, the rule allowing distinct frauds to be proven in such cases is limited to frauds which are contemporaneous, or nearly so, and does not embrace dealings at a remote time.—Cohen v. Mulford, 15 Cal. 50.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 284, 288, 289; 20 Cent. Dig. cols. 553-556, §§ 399-402.

§ 135. —— Similar Transactions.

[a] Where, in an action upon the official bond of a wharfinger, the books kept by the secretary of the board of a state harbor commissioners are introduced to prove that certain sums of money received by him had not been paid to the board, it is error to exclude evidence that the secretary had received large amounts from other persons in payment of harbor dues, which were not accounted for in the books, to impeach the accuracy of the books, although Code of Civil Procedure, section 1920, makes official books or records "prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein."—People v. Fairfield, 90 Cal. 186, 27 Pac. 199.

[b] On an issue as to whether plaintiff had bought a note from defendant, where there was evidence that plaintiff bought at a great discount, evidence that at about the same time defendant had sold other notes at a great discount was admissible.—Turner v. Luning, 105 Cal. 124, 38 Pac. 687.

[c] In an action to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by reason of the negligent operation of a passenger elevator, questions as to the conditions surrounding the elevator on days other than that on which the accident occurred, and the customary manner of operating other elevators, are immaterial.—Muller v. Hale, 138 Cal. 163, 71 Pac. 81.

[d] On an issue as to whether defendant had paid to the maker the note sued on, by paying plaintiff's expenses on a European trip, or whether defendant invited plaintiff to accompany her as her guest on the trip and would pay the expenses, evidence that prior to the European trip plaintiff had been the guest of defendant at various times, and that defendant had paid all the expenses, was admissible.—Zane v. De Onativia, 139 Cal. 328, 73 Pac. 856.

[e] In a suit to restrain maintenance of an irrigation ditch over plaintiff's land, evidence in respect to the construction of defendant's ditch over other lands is held immaterial.—Vestal v. Young, 147 Cal. 721, 82 Pac. 383.

§ 136. —— —— Proof of Express Contract.

[a] Plaintiff alleged an agreement entered into between him and defendant, whereby plaintiff was to furnish certain laborers at a certain price, etc., and produced a written contract of defendant, reciting that plaintiff had contracted with a third person to supply laborers for certain work, referring specially to said contract, and promising, as part consideration thereof, to pay plaintiff certain costs of transportation. He also produced the contract with a third person referred to, and evidence that defendant at the same time orally promised to pay for the labor, and did in fact pay all that was paid. Held, that the third person's contract was admissible to explain defendant's contract, and was not the basis of the judgment against defendant for the balance due for the labor, the court having found as a fact that he did make the oral agreement.—Chew Farng v. Keefer, 103 Cal. 46, 36 Pac. 1032.

§ 137. Similarity of Conditions.

[a] Testimony to institute a comparison between plaintiff's crop of corn destroyed by defendant's cattle and that on adjoining land is inadmissible, in view of the difference in the land and the kinds of corn planted.—Story v. Nidiffer, 146 Cal. 549, 80 Pac. 692.

§ 137½. —— Experiments.

[a] In an action on a county treasurer's bond for conversion of funds, when the defense is that the treasurer was robbed and locked in the vault, in which he was found twelve hours after the alleged robbery, experimental evidence of the effect of kicking on the vault doors was competent in corroboration or disproof of defendant's assertion that he attempted to attract attention in this way, though neither the atmospheric conditions nor the arrangement of the building were exactly the same.—Sonoma County v. Stofen, 125 Cal. 32, 57 Pac. 681.

§ 138. Showing Intent or Motive.

[a] In cases of fraud subsequent acts are frequently resorted to for the purpose of showing antecedent fraud. Fraud being proven in reference to the transaction under question, the criminal intent is necessarily a matter of inference for the jury. The dealing with property to-day by the vendor as his property is evidence to show the fraud committed in a sale a month ago. The subsequent acts are illustrative of the intent and character of the first.—Butler v. Collins, 12 Cal. 457.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 561-567, §§ 404, 405.

§ 139. Other Injuries from Same or Similar Causes.

[a] In an action brought by the owners of a water ditch to enjoin defendants from further mining underneath the surface of the earth, across and on top of which plaintiff's ditch extended, evidence of the effect of tunneling and drifting in a similar locality is inadmissible to show its effect in interfering with the ditch.—Clark v. Willett, 35 Cal. 534.

[b] In an action for injuries sustained by plaintiff from falling down a stairway in a lodging-house, charged to have resulted from defendant's failure to properly light the same, whereby it was rendered dangerous, it was error to permit plaintiff to prove, in chief, that another had fallen and sustained injuries in the same passageway when it was in a like darkened condition.—Martinez v. Planel, 36 Cal. 578.

[c] In an action to recover loss sustained by the burning of a building alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence, evidence on his part that other buildings in the same town were soon after set on fire by incendiaries is irrelevant.—Drake v. Foster, 52 Cal. 225.

[d] Testimony that witness, subsequent to the accident in question, was injured on the same dangerous premises as plaintiff, is not prejudicial to defendant, where plaintiff knew of the danger, since it tends to show that he was guilty of contributory negligence in venturing into such a place.—McGraw v. Friend & Terry Lumber Co., 120 Cal. 574, 52 Pac. 1004.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Former accidents, whether admissible as evidence of negligence: 57 Am. Rep. 812, note.

Evidence of other accidents, when admissible: 44 Am. Rep. 694, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 288, 289; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 567-575, §§ 406-413.

§ 140. Showing Custom or Course of Business.

[a] On an issue whether cattle purchased by the superintendent of a corporation had been purchased by him individually or for the corporation, evidence that the superintendent had made a similar purchase from other persons on behalf of the corporation was admissible.—Lake Shore Cattle Co. v. Modoc Land etc. Co., 130 Cal. 669, 63 Pac. 72.

[b] In an action for breach of warranty of variety of wheat sold, evidence that the seller sold wheat to third persons and warranted it to be of the variety warranted to plaintiff held admissible as bearing on the fact in dispute.—Moody v. Peirano (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 380.

See 17 Cyc. 281; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 577, 577, §§ 415.

§ 140½. Showing Value by Value of Other Property.

[a] In estimating the prospective profits of an apple orchard, a share in which plaintiff was entitled to under his contract, evidence of the value of a similar orchard at the time of the trial, if matured as contemplated by the contract, was admissible.—Shoemaker v. Acker, 116 Cal. 239, 48 Pac. 62.

§ 141. Showing Value by Sales of Other Property.

[a] In an action to condemn land for a reservoir site, it is not proper for defendant to ask one of her witnesses on direct examination how much plaintiff paid for certain other tracts of land, or to inquire as to the amount offered, since such questions are only admissible by way of cross-examination to test the fairness of the witness' opinion in regard to the value of the property involved in the action.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. Drinkhouse, 92 Cal. 528, 28 Pac. 681.

[b] To show the market value of the land condemned, the report of commissioners appointed to assess neighborhood land, reciting the price to be paid for neighboring land and the consideration which determined such report, is irrelevant.—City of San Luis Obispo v. Brizzolara, 100 Cal. 434, 34 Pac. 1083.

§ 142. —— Discretion of Court.

[a] Evidence of value for short periods, before and after the date in question, may be allowed in the discretion of the court, where such discretion is not abused.—Montgomery v. Sayre, 100 Cal. 182, 30 Am. St. Rep. 271, 34 Pac. 696.

§ 143. In General.

[a] Evidence that railroad company allowed dry herbage to stand between track and fence, is immaterial, unless fire originates there.—Henry v. Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 176.

[b] Evidence not necessary to establish party's case is immaterial.—Marriner v. Dennison, 78 Cal. 214, 20 Pac. 386.

[c] A husband and wife conveyed by a quitclaim deed land in which they had a homestead estate to plaintiff, who conveyed his right of title and interest in such land to defendant under an agreement that the latter should protect plaintiff's title, perfect it if necessary, and sell the land for plaintiff. Thereafter defendant procured a grant, bargain, and sale deed of the land to himself from plaintiff's grantors, and then sold the land. Held that, in an action to recover the proceeds of the sale in the hands of defendant, where defendant claimed that he took nothing by the deed from plaintiff, testimony by the grantees of defendant that they relied on the deed to defendant from plaintiff's grantors was immaterial.—Faivre v. Daley, 93 Cal. 664, 29 Pac. 256.

[d] In an action involving the validity of the assessment of the particular property, evidence as to the manner and character of the assessment of other property situated within the district is immaterial.—Cooper v. Miller, 113 Cal. 238, 45 Pac. 325.

[e] Evidence of a witness for the defendant as to what work he was doing when he first went to the mill, or what machine he had been working at before he took charge of the machine upon which plaintiff was injured is immaterial.—Verdelli v. Gray's Harbor Com. Co., 115 Cal. 517, 47 Pac. 364.

[f] A question asked of one of the plaintiffs, as to why they could not sell certain mining property in controversy, as stated in a written contract, is immaterial.—Brownlee v. Reiner, 147 Cal. 641, 82 Pac. 324.

§ 144. Matters Admitted, Presumed or Already Proved.

[a] Where the court finds all relevant facts which the judgment-roll in a previous action sought to be introduced in evidence would have proved, such judgment-roll will be excluded.—Noonan v. Nunan, 76 Cal. 44, 18 Pac. 98.

[b] Evidence of facts admitted in pleadings is properly excluded.—Silcox v. Lang, 78 Cal. 125, 20 Pac. 297.

[c] In an action for conversion where defendant claims possession of the property as receiver, and a disposition thereof by order of the court, defendant may introduce the petition for a receiver, the petition for permission to sell, the order of sale, the report of the sale, and the order approving the sale, even though plaintiff admits the receivership.—Tapscott v. Lyon, 103 Cal. 297, 37 Pac. 225.

[d] Where the written authority and instructions from the vice-president and general managing agent of the corporation to a local agent to put the sign of the corporation on his place of business, and to designate himself as its agent upon such signs, are in evidence, proof of his declarations that he was putting up the signs by direction of the vice-president are of no moment.—Bergtholdt v. Porter Bros., 114 Cal. 681, 46 Pac. 738.

[e] Where the evidence clearly proves that both of the defendants assumed to pay the debts for which the plaintiff was liable in consideration of the sale to them of his interest in the saloon, evidence of any subsequent agreement or assumption of liability as between the defendants, upon a sale from one of them to the other, is immaterial, and is properly rejected.—Meyer v. Parsons, 129 Cal. 653, 42 Pac. 216.

§ 145. Tendency to Mislead or Confuse.

[a] In an action against a sheriff to recover personal property levied on in plaintiff's hands as having been fraudulently conveyed to him by a defendant in divorce proceedings to evade the payment of a judgment therein, evidence of ill-treatment and abuse of his wife, which was the ground of the divorce, is inadmissible, as irrelevant and as having a tendency to prejudice plaintiff's case.—Thomas v. Black, 84 Cal. 221, 23 Pac. 1037.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 601-604, § 429.

§ 146. Certainty.

[a] When a witness who has testified to a conversation is not positive that the person with whom he had such conversation was the party, but gives it as his opinion that she was, his testimony cannot be stricken out on the ground that he has not identified the person. Whether he has or not goes to the weight to be given to the evidence, and not to its competency or relevancy.—Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633, 22 Pac. 26.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 604-609, §§ 430-433.

§ 147. Intent or Opinion.

[a] Intention of husband in directing deed to be made to his wife is to be gathered from his acts and conduct, and a question to him as to what his intentions were was properly ruled out as immaterial.—Woods v. Whitney, 42 Cal. 358.

[b] A witness may be asked as to intent with which he did certain act, where that intent is a material thing in the action.—Barnhart v. Fulkerth, 93 Cal. 497, 29 Pac. 50.

[c] Evidence as to understanding of parties at time contract was executed is inadmissible. Swift v. Occidental etc. Co., 141 Cal. 174, 74 Pac. 700.

[d] Under Political Code, section 3344, in an action for damages for negligence setting out fires, etc., permitting a witness to testify that he had no wish or desire to have the fire extend from his hand to plaintiff's is error.—Sampson v. Hughes, 147 Cal. 62, 81 Pac. 292.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 609-616, § 434.

§ 148. Remoteness.

[a] Upon issue as to whether sale of sheep was accompanied by change of possession, evidence that grantee gave deed to a third party to land upon which sheep were driven is immaterial.—Chester v. Bower, 55 Cal. 46.

[b] The damage to an abutting lot caused by the occupation of a street by a railroad cannot be shown by proving what its value would have been if the road had been constructed along some other street, as evidence of damages must be on actual facts, and not a speculative theory.—Muller v. Southern Pac. B. Ry. Co., 83 Cal. 240, 23 Pac. 265.

[c] Where the plaintiff in an action to replevy property taken from his custody under attachment against a third person who had pledged it to the plaintiff testified in chief that it did not belong to the attachment debtor, and that he had other security for the money due to him from the attachment debtor, a question, upon cross-examination, whether such additional security was not in value twice or three times as much as the money loaned is not subject to the objection of immateriality.—Barnhart v. Fulkerth, 93 Cal. 497, 29 Pac. 50.

[d] In an action against an administrator for compensation for services performed for testator, evidence that testator had expressed himself as not wishing to go away owing any man anything is immaterial.—Watson v. Miller, 125 Cal. xix, 58 Pac. 135.

[e] Where defendants had lowered the bed of a creek where it flowed out of a river, and complainants put in a dam across the creek at its head, as they claimed, to restore the natural conditions, and the question was whether the dam was of the same height as the former bank of the river, evidence as to alleged diversions of water from the river below the head of the creek by one of the defendants was immaterial.—Wallace v. Farmers' Ditch Co., 130 Cal. 578, 62 Pac. 1078.

[f] Evidence that the bed of the river had filled up at points three miles above and a mile and a quarter below the head of the creek was properly rejected, as immaterial.—Wallace v. Farmers' Ditch Co., 130 Cal. 578, 62 Pac. 1078.

[g] In an action for the death of a servant by the fall of a derrick, it was the theory of defendant that the fall was occasioned by a latent defect in the pivot, which had been found broken after the accident; but it was the theory of plaintiff that the fall was occasioned because the ties supporting the rails to which the derrick was clamped were decayed. Held, that evidence that no repairs had been made on the platform for more than five years prior to the accident, about which time a hand derrick had fallen over, pulling the rail with it, was not open to objection of being remote.—Dyas v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 Cal. 296, 73 Pac. 972.

§ 149. Negative Testimony.

[a] One of the defendants having identified their ledger showing their account with plaintiffs, and having stated that it showed the true state of the account between them, and that the items had been entered by him at the time of the several transactions, and it being admitted by plaintiffs that the entries were original entries, it was error to exclude it though it did not contain the item sued for by plaintiffs.—Ford v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 209, 25 Pac. 403.

[b] Testimony of a city clerk that after search he was unable to find among the city records any orders for the publication of certain ordinances is admissible to show the nonexistence of those orders.—Santa Rosa City R. Co. v. Central St. Ry. Co., 38 Pac. 986.

§ 150. Source of Evidence.

[a] An original judgment-roll of another county, offered to impeach a witness, is not rendered incompetent by reason of the fact that it was illegally taken from the clerk's office of such county without an order of court allowing its removal; nor does its competency as evidence in any way depend upon the means by which it is brought to the court where it is offered in evidence.—People v. Alden, 113 Cal. 264, 45 Pac. 327.

§ 151. Evidence Admissible by Reason of Admission of Similar Evidence by Adverse Party.

[a] If plaintiff, during trial, draws out of one of his witnesses part of conversation between the plaintiff and another person, the defendant is entitled to prove by his witnesses the whole conversation.—Gillam v. Sigman, 29 Cal. 637.

[b] Admission of part of conversation does not entitle opponent to introduce remainder of entire conversation, but only such other part as explains or qualifies part introduced. Granite G. M. Co. v. Maginness, 118 Cal. 135, 50 Pac. 269.

[c] Admission of part of pleading does not entitle opponent to introduce entire pleading but only such other part as explains or qualifies part introduced.—Granite G. M. Co. v. Maginness, 118 Cal. 135, 136, 50 Pac. 269.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 638-670, §§ 445-458.

§ 152. —— Rebuttal in General.

[a] Suit on a note. The defendant offered certain receipts in support of a plea of payment. The plaintiff offered evidence to show that these payments were made on an open account. Defendant then offered to show that no such account existed, which evidence was held to have been improperly refused, and the judgment was reversed.—Lisman v. Early, 15 Cal. 199.

[b] In an action to recover land, where there is a dispute between adjoining proprietors as to the true boundary line, and the defendant, having placed a fence on what the plaintiff claims to be his land, has introduced evidence to show acquiescence by the plaintiff for so long a time as to estop him from questioning his right, evidence of acts and declarations of the plaintiff and his grantors is admissible to rebut any such inference of acquiescence.—Sneed v. Woodward, 30 Cal. 430.

[c] If the plaintiff introduces testimony tending to show that a company is a corporation de facto he cannot object to defendant's testimony as to the strict corporate character of the company.—Rondell v. Fay, 32 Cal. 354.

[d] Where defendant testified that he had executed a mortgage without consideration, evidence that he had executed such mortgage at the request of another mortgagor in order to enable the latter to make an exchange of that portion of his mortgaged premises, which the mortgagee released in consideration of the new mortgage, and that such release and mortgage were deposited together in escrow, and then recorded at the same time, was admissible to rebut defendant's testimony.—Security Loan etc. Co. v. Mattern, 131 Cal. 326, 63 Pac. 482.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1854, defendant may introduce plaintiff's by-laws where plaintiff introduced an agreement between its stockholders and plaintiff which stated that, "being desirous of having my oranges handled in the manner set forth in the by-laws" of plaintiff, they individually appointed plaintiff their agent.—Tustin Fruit Assn. v. Earl Fruit Co., 53 Pac. 693.

§ 153. —— Evidence of Character.

[a] In an action for personal injuries, plaintiff having adduced mortuary tables to prove his probable expectation of life, excluding evidence of his habits as to sobriety is error.—Townsend v. Briggs, 99 Cal. 481, 34 Pac. 116.

§ 154. —— Title or Ownership of Property.

[a] Where one party introduces evidence showing that a redemptioner redeemed from sheriff's sale, the other party may introduce a sheriff's deed to the redemptioner, without also showing that the papers required by the statute to entitle one to redeem were properly produced.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256.

§ 155. —— Admission of Similar Evidence When First Evidence was Inadmissible.

[a] Introduction of irrelevant evidence by one side does not justify similar evidence by the other.—People v. Dye, 75 Cal. 105, 16 Pac. 537.

[b] Where the dispute was as to whether a third person, in dealing with plaintiff, acted as principal or as broker for defendant, and plaintiff had given evidence that, in a transaction with others, the third person acted as a broker, and that he was doing a general brokerage business, evidence that in the latter transaction the third person acted as principal is admissible in rebuttal.—Comptoir D'Escompte De Paris v. Dresbach, 78 Cal. 15, 20 Pac. 28.

[c] Introduction of irrelevant evidence on one side without objection does not justify introduction of similar evidence on the other side.—San Diego etc. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 63, 20 Pac. 372; 88 Cal. 63, 25 Pac. 977.

§ 156. —— Evidence of Fraud or Other Wrongdoing.

[a] When the record of an alleged alcalde grant, containing the words "Not taken" on the margin and cross lines of cancellation, is introduced in evidence to prove the grant, by a party who claims that said words and lines were put on the record to defraud him, evidence in rebuttal is admissible, after it is shown that no grant was made, and to explain how the record came to be made and subsequently canceled; and a resolution of a city government authorizing the alcalde's grants to be transcribed and certified by the alcalde, and the book made in pursuance thereof, from which all grants were omitted which were canceled in the same manner as the grant in question, are admissible in evidence as tending to show that said marks of cancellation existed as early as the making of said book.—Rice v. Cunningham, 29 Cal. 492.

§ 157. —— Documentary Evidence.

[a] When witness reads extract of his testimony given at former trial, adverse party may introduce whole of such testimony, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1854.—Hobart v. Tyrell, 68 Cal. 13, 14, 8 Pac. 525.

[b] In ejectment, where defendant claims that plaintiff agreed to convey him the land in exchange for other land, the judgment-roll in a creditor's action against defendant to have a deed by him of his land declared void is admissible to show that defendant is unable to convey his land.—Royal v. Dennison, 38 Pac. 39.

V. BEST AND SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

A. Necessity and Admissibility of Best Evidence, §§ 158-163.

B. Transactions Evidenced by Writing and Contents of Writing, §§ 164-177.

C. Grounds for Admission of Secondary Evidence and Preliminaries to Admission, §§ 178-195.

A. NECESSITY AND ADMISSIBILITY OF BEST EVIDENCE.

IN GENERAL, § 158.
EXISTENCE OF BETTER EVIDENCE, § 159.
MATTERS NOT REQUIRED TO BE IN WRITING, § 160.
MATTERS REQUIRED TO BE IN WRITING OR RECORDED, § 161.
MATTERS MADE BEST EVIDENCE BY STATUTE, § 162.
EXCLUSION OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE AS INFERIOR TO ORAL EVIDENCE, § 163.

§ 158. In General.

[a] The highest degree of proof of which the case is susceptible must be produced, if accessible.—Norris v. Russell, 5 Cal. 249.

[b] There is no attempt by section 21 of the act of March, 1851, to dispense with the rule that the best evidence must be resorted to which the nature of the case will admit.—Macy v. Goodwin, 6 Cal. 579.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 466; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 678-708, §§ 460-470.

§ 159. Existence of Better Evidence.

[a] In an action for damages for the diversion of water from plaintiff's ditch, defendants denied the diversion, and alleged that the water used by them was used under an agreement between a certain water company and themselves, and that the water came from the reservoir of such company. After plaintiff had introduced in evidence a judgment wherein the right to the use of the water had been adjudged between him and such company, he offered to prove by parol testimony that the water used by defendants was the same water that was in controversy in that suit. Held, that such evidence was admissible, as there was no other means than by parol of establishing this fact.—Walsh v. Harris, 10 Cal. 391.

[b] A book wherein mining claims are recorded according to mining rules is admissible as evidence of compliance with the rules of the mining district, and a particular entry of a transfer is admissible to show compliance with the miners' rules requiring the recording of transfers, but not as primary evidence of the fact of such transfer.—Attwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37, 76 Am. Dec. 567.

[c] To establish an allegation that at the time a certain quartz claim was located it was a custom for persons desiring to appropriate mining claims in that district to measure off and designate the boundaries of such claims by stakes on the ground, enter upon them, and cause a record thereof to be made in the county recorder's office, and that the plaintiffs have made such entry of their claim, the contents of such book, kept in such recorder's office, consisting of the records of the numbers of such locations, one of which is that of the plaintiffs, are admissible in evidence. Such custom sought to be established by this book would make this entry the original notice, not a copy or record of an original.—Pralus v. Pacific Gold etc. Min. Co., 35 Cal. 30.

[d] Stenographer's notes of testimony of a witness taken at a former trial are not subject to the objection that they are secondary evidence.—Hicks v. Lovell, 64 Cal. 14, 49 Am. Rep. 679, 27 Pac. 942.

§ 160. Matters not Required to be in Writing.

[a] In an action against a private corporation on a contract made by a person, in its behalf, purporting to act as its agent, parol testimony is admissible to show that such person was authorized to act as its agent, where the corporation is not compelled by its charter to appoint its agents by deed or resolution.—Carey v. Philadelphia etc. Petroleum Co., 33 Cal. 694.

[b] Where there was in fact no written evidence upon the question of residence of the defendant in a judgment rendered in a justice's court, and no entry in writing upon the subject was by law required to be made, parol evidence was admissible on the subject to sustain such judgment.—Jolley v. Foltz, 34 Cal. 321.

[c] Actions of trustees of reclamation district may be proved by parol evidence, the law not requiring a record.—Reclamation Dist. No. 3 v. Goldman, 65 Cal. 639, 4 Pac. 676.

§ 161. Matters Required to be in Writing or Recorded.

[a] The acts of the board of directors of a corporation, ordered to be entered of record, but which the secretary, by neglect or mistake, does not enter, may be proved by parol testimony.—Bay View Assn. v. Williams, 50 Cal. 353.

[b] Since the naturalization of an adult alien is a judicial proceeding which must be entered of record (2 Story's Laws U. S., p. 851), an applicant for the purchase of state school land cannot prove his naturalization, by parol.—Bode v. Trimmer, 82 Cal. 513, 23 Pac. 187; Prentice v. Miller, 82 Cal. 570, 23 Pac. 189.

§ 162. Matters Made Best Evidence by Statute.

[a] By the county surveyor's act, surveys by others are excluded, unless to explain or rebut his, and this applies to a survey detailed from memory as well as to one illustrated by a diagram.—Vines v. Whitten, 4 Cal. 230.

§ 163. Exclusion of Documentary Evidence as Inferior to Oral Evidence.

[a] The certificate of a tax collector, offered to prove payment of taxes, so as to show that there was no abandonment of the possession of the premises, is not evidence, where the tax collector himself can be called as a witness.—Powell's Heirs v. Hendricks, 3 Cal. 427.

[b] Receipts executed by third party, acknowledging payment of money, are but secondary evidence, as the party executing them is a competent witness to prove the payments, or any other person who saw the payments made.—Ford v. Smith, 5 Cal. 314.

B. TRANSACTIONS EVIDENCED BY WRITING AND CONTENTS OF WRITINGS.

IN GENERAL, § 164.
PAYMENT OR RELEASE, § 165.
JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS AND RECORDS, § 166.
—— CLAIM IN INSOLVENCY PROCEEDINGS, § 166½.
OFFICIAL ACTS, PROCEEDINGS AND RECORDS, § 167.
CORPORATE ACTS, PROCEEDINGS AND RECORDS, § 168.
AFFIDAVITS, § 169.
CONVEYANCES, CONTRACTS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, § 170.
—— ASSIGNMENTS, § 171.
—— SEALED INSTRUMENTS, § 172.
—— POWER OF ATTORNEY, § 173.
BOOKS OF ACCOUNT, PRIVATE MEMORANDA AND CORRESPONDENCE, § 174.
—— TELEGRAMS, § 175.
NOTICES, § 176.
ORIGINAL WRITING AS BEST EVIDENCE, § 177.

§ 164. In General.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1855, subdivision 5, providing that "there can be no evidence of the contents of writings other than the writing itself, except .... when the original consists of numerous documents, ... and the evidence sought from them is only the general result of the whole," it would not be necessary, in order to prove the character and value of the services rendered by an attorney in an action, to produce the record.—Cahill v. Baird, 70 Pac. 1061, judgment reversed, 72 Pac. 342.

§ 165. Payment or Release.

[a] Oral evidence of the payment of taxes by an administrator is competent, especially if the loss of the tax receipts is first shown. In re Moore, 72 Cal. 335, 13 Pac. 880.

§ 166. Judicial Proceedings and Records.

[a] Records of a court are the best and only evidence to determine what orders have been made in an action.—Clark v. Crane, 57 Cal. 629.

[b] Judicial determination, being a matter of record, must be proved by record itself, and the oral statement of a witness as to what the determination was is inadmissible.—Moran v. Abbey, 63 Cal. 56.

[c] Matters of record must be proved by record itself.—Leviston v. Henninger, 77 Cal. 463, 19 Pac. 834.

[d] Best evidence of judgment is judgment itself.—Leviston v. Henninger, 77 Cal. 462, 19 Pac. 834.

[e] In an action for libel the question asked plaintiff whether he did not commence the suit the day the cause was about to outlaw was improper, the record being the best evidence, if the fact was admissible in evidence.—Graybill v. De Young, 140 Cal. 323, 73 Pac. 1067.

[f] Oral proof of time of bringing action is properly rejected.—Mullenary v. Burton (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 159.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 500-504; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 799-806, §§ 536-545.

§ 166½. —— Claim in Insolvency Proceedings.

[a] A question calling for the amount of a creditor's claim against an insolvent, in an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, held not objectionable as not the best evidence.—Nixon v. Goodwin (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 169.

§ 167. Official Acts, Proceedings and Records.

[a] Copy of Mexican grant, taken from United States surveyor general's office, is not admissible in evidence without accounting for the nonproduction of the original grant, where the party offering the copy does not rely upon a certified copy of the grant, under the act of 1857, but upon proof aliunde that the copy was correct.—Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87.

[b] The fact that a tract of land is within the limits of a city may be shown by oral testimony.—Colton Land etc. Co. v. Swartz, 99 Cal. 278, 33 Pac. 878.

[c] In a suit to foreclose a lien for street work, a certificate of a city engineer "that a record in this office of certificate No. 597" shows that the work of grading was examined, etc., was inadmissible, as not the best evidence of what the record referred to contained.—Obermeyer v. Patterson, 130 Cal. 531, 62 Pac. 926.

[d] The assessment-roll, as certified by the assessor to the board of supervisors, constitutes the sole and conclusive evidence of the date of the assessment, and parol evidence showing the date of the assessment of any particular property therein is inadmissible.—Allen v. McKay & Co., 139 Cal. 94, 72 Pac. 713.

[e] In proceedings by a county to condemn land for widening a highway, the original petition to the board of supervisors, praying for the alteration of the highway, and the report thereon, is admissible as primary evidence, within Code of Civil Procedure, section 1829.—Mendocino County v. Peters (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1122.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 497-499, 508; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 799-806, §§ 536-545.

§ 168. Corporate Acts, Proceedings and Records.

[a] A witness may be asked whether he is an officer and stockholder in a corporation for the purpose of showing his familiarity with certain facts, and the records of the corporation need not be resorted to to show his connection therewith.—Boston Tunnel Co. v. McKenzie, 67 Cal. 485, 8 Pac. 22.

[b] Where the owner of land is a corporation it is not necessary that its intention to dedicate a road over the same road to public use should be shown by the records of its proceedings, but such intention may be shown by its acts and the testimony of its directors.—People v. Eel River etc. R. Co., 98 Cal. 665, 33 Pac. 728.

[c] Where it appeared that the directors of a corporation adopted a resolution authorizing the president "to make arrangements for paying off a debt by giving a mortgage or any other means," and that at a subsequent meeting the directors ratified the action of its officers in executing such mortgage, but no entry of either resolution was made in the record book of the corporation, though minutes of the proceedings were made on slips of paper which were afterward lost, parol evidence is admissible, in an action against the corporation to foreclose the mortgage, to show the proceedings of the board authorizing and ratifying the execution of said mortgage, and it was not limited to showing merely the contents of the lost memoranda.—Boggs v. Lakeport Agricultural Park Assn., 111 Cal. 354, 43 Pac. 1106.

[d] Recitals of the minutes of a meeting of a corporate board of directors cannot be proved by parol.—Nixon v. Goodwin (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 169.

§ 169. Affidavits.

[a] Affidavits are not best evidence; they rank as hearsay.—Lacrebere v. Wise, 141 Cal. 556, 75 Pac. 185.

§ 170. Conveyances, Contracts and Other Instruments.

[a] Copy of a mortgage is not admissible as evidence, where the absence of the original is not accounted for.—Ord v. McKee, 5 Cal. 515.

[b] In an action on a contract to pay a note in consideration of a conveyance, recognized by defendant writing his name on the back of the note, parol evidence of the conveyance is admissible, if needed at all.—Palmer v. Tripp, 8 Cal. 95.

[c] In an action in which a homestead right is asserted, and in which an issue of fact as to the marriage is made, it is admissible to show the fact that an agreement by the parties to live together without marriage was made, but the contents of it cannot be shown. Poole v. Gerrard, 9 Cal. 593.

[d] It having appeared that there was agreement in writing respecting transfer of certain goods from witness to K., counsel proposed to ask witness "how K. got the goods." Held, that the question was improper, writing being the best evidence.—Towdy v. Ellis, 22 Cal. 650.

[e] Where a mining claim is conveyed by a written bill of sale, the bill of sale is the best evidence of the transfer, and parol evidence of the conveyance is inadmissible.—Crary v. Campbell, 24 Cal. 634.

[f] If sale of mining claim is made in writing, proof of sale must be made by producing the writing, or its loss must be established, after which oral testimony can be offered of the contents of the written instrument.—Patterson v. Keystone Min. Co., 30 Cal. 360.

[g] Parol evidence cannot be admitted against objection to show a written encumbrance on real estate.—Racouillat v. Requena, 36 Cal. 651.

[h] Parol evidence of a trust is inadmissible when answer pleads a written trust.—Donohue v. Mariposa L. & M. Co., 66 Cal. 328, 5 Pac. 495.

[i] Where question whether contract has been made or not comes collaterally in issue, it may be proved by parol.—Marriner v. Dennison, 78 Cal. 213, 20 Pac. 386.

[j] Where the written offer to sell was before the council at the time of the approval of the contract of which it was a part, and was shown to be in possession of the clerk, but was subsequently lost, it was proper to prove its contents by oral evidence.—Goodyear Rubber Co. v. Eureka, 135 Cal. 613, 67 Pac. 1043.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 475-489; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 808-816, §§ 548-555.

§ 171. —— Assignments.

[a] Parol proof of a written contract and assignment thereof in writing is not admissible, so as to charge the assignee, without notice to produce the original or accounting for its loss.—Grimes v. Fall, 15 Cal. 63.

[b] Written assignment is the best known evidence of what was intended to be transferred.—Ladd v. Samuels, 57 Cal. 360.

§ 172. —— Sealed Instruments.

[a] Parol evidence of the contents of a sealed instrument cannot be given, until its loss has been proved.—Poorman v. Miller, 44 Cal. 269.

§ 173. —— Power of Attorney.

[a] Power of attorney is the best evidence of agency.—Rohrbough v. Johnson, 107 Cal. 144, 40 Pac. 37.

§ 174. Books of Account, Private Memoranda and Correspondence.

[a] Upon proof being first made of the loss of the book of original entries, the ledger, containing charges for advertising made against an attorney, was held admissible, in connection with copies of the newspapers containing the advertisements, to show what items were for the benefit of the attorney personally and what were for his clients.—Caulfield v. Sanders, 17 Cal. 569.

[b] A press copy of a letter is not admissible as evidence until the loss or nonproduction of the original has been accounted for. Spottiswood v. Weir, 66 Cal. 525, 6 Pac. 381.

[c] Account-books are not only evidence as to profits of business; anyone knowing about them may be allowed to testify.—Schurtz v. Kerkow, 85 Cal. 279, 24 Pac. 609.

[d] Parol evidence of the contents of a letter, which is not produced or accounted for, is not admissible.—Byrne v. Byrne, 113 Cal. 294, 45 Pac. 536.

[e] Since parties to suit have been allowed to testify in their own behalf, private account-books are secondary evidence admissible in corroboration of oral testimony or as secondary evidence.—Bushnell v. Simpson, 119 Cal. 662, 51 Pac. 1080.

[f] The oral testimony of persons having personal knowledge of the transactions involved in the items of an account is the best evidence of such items, if they do not result from a written contract, and is primary evidence thereof, notwithstanding the existence of books of account showing them. Such books of account are only secondary and supplemental proof of the items.—Cowdery v. McChesney, 124 Cal. 363, 57 Pac. 221.

§ 175. —— Telegrams.

[a] The offer of a copy of a telegram sent by plaintiffs to persons who were in court, in the absence of a demand for the production of the original, is inadmissible as secondary evidence.—Brownlee v. Reiner, 147 Cal. 641, 82 Pac. 324.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Best and secondary evidence of telegraph messages: 39 Am. Rep. 359, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 478, 479; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 822-824, § 558.

§ 176. Notices.

[a] Copy of notice posted on mining claim to show its extent is not admissible in evidence if the notice itself be attainable. Such evidence is secondary, and is admissible only upon the terms which control its introduction in other cases.—Lombardo v. Ferguson, 15 Cal. 372.

[b] Where the location of mining grounds was established both by posting notices and by the location of trees and certain ditches, witnesses may properly testify, not only as to the contents of the notices, but as to whether the location included the ground in dispute, as the notices were not the only means by which the grounds were established.—Kelly v. Taylor, 23 Cal. 11.

[c] Parol evidence is admissible to prove the contents of a notice, and it is not necessary to notify the opposite party, on whom it was served, to produce it.—Gethin v. Walker, 59 Cal. 502.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 479; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 824-826, § 559.

§ 177. Original Writing as Best Evidence.

[a] The highest evidence of the fact is, of course, the writing itself; but, in case of its loss or destruction, the fact may be established by parol. The destruction of notes, then, only impairs the evidence of the liability of the maker.—Bagley v. Eaton, 10 Cal. 126.

[b] It must be shown that originals are not under control of party to authorize certified copies of recorded instruments to be read in evidence, unless the proof of that fact be waived by the adverse party.—Mayo v. Mazeaux, 38 Cal. 442.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 512-517; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 828-829, §§ 561-569.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 518-535; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 840-884, §§ 570-599.

§ 178. In General.

[a] Secondary evidence must always be received with caution, and then not until every means is shown to be exhausted in the effort to procure that which is superior. Norris v. Russell, 5 Cal. 249.

[b] Secondary evidence of contents of deed or grant is admissible where the possession of the original is traced to the possession of a party not in the state.—Gordon v. Searing, 8 Cal. 49; Zellerbach v. Allenberg, 99 Cal. 57, 33 Pac. 786.

[c] When the records of a corporation are excluded from evidence on the ground that the corporation was not legally organized, oral evidence is admissible to show who are the acting officers.—People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302, 39 Pac. 617.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 840-849, §§ 570-579.

§ 179. Destruction or Loss of Primary Evidence.

[a] Where the plaintiff was the assignee of a claim, the written contract upon which it is founded having been destroyed by the assignor before the assignment, held, that it was error to admit the assignor as a witness to prove the contents of the written paper thus destroyed by him.—Smith v. Truebody, 2 Cal. 341.

[b] Naked fact of voluntary destruction, without explanation, is held such presumptive evidence of fraudulent design as to preclude all secondary evidence.—Bagley v. McMickle, 9 Cal. 430.

[c] The facts and circumstances of the destruction must be shown, in the first instance, to the court, to enable it to judge of the propriety of admitting or refusing the secondary evidence. The same principle which allows the parties to prove by their own testimony the destruction must necessarily allow them to prove all such facts and circumstances as are requisite to the introduction of the secondary evidence.—Bagley v. McMickle, 9 Cal. 430.

[d] After proof of loss of written contract of sale oral evidence can be offered of its contents.—Patterson v. Keystone Min. Co., 30 Cal. 360.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 518-526; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 850-873, §§ 580-594.

§ 180. —— Instruments in General.

[a] It is not a matter of course to allow secondary evidence of the contents of an instrument in suit upon proof of its destruction. If the destruction was the result of accident, or was without the agency or consent of the owner, such evidence is generally admissible. But, if the destruction was voluntarily and deliberately made by the owner, or with his assent, the admissibility of the evidence will depend upon the cause or motive of the party in effecting or assenting to the destruction.—Bagley v. McMickle, 9 Cal. 430.

§ 181. —— Records.

[a] Where original records of mining claims of certain mining district have been destroyed by fire, and the miners, by a resolution subsequently passed, required the claims to be re-recorded in a new book, such book may be admitted in evidence in the trial of an ejectment case for a mining claim, to show that the rules of vicinage had been complied with.—McGarrity v. Byington, 12 Cal. 426.

[b] Existence and contents of record or other document to show the regularity of legal proceedings may, if the original be lost or destroyed, be shown by secondary evidence, the same as of any other lost instrument.—Matter of Will of Warfield, 22 Cal. 51, 83 Am. Dec. 49.

§ 182. Possession or Control of Primary Evidence.

[a] Where the primary evidence is in the possession, or under control, of the adverse party, who fails or refuses to produce it, secondary evidence is admissible.—(Cal. 1859) Burke v. Table etc. Water Co., 12 Cal. 403.

[b] Secondary evidence of contents of written instrument may be given when the party offering it is not entitled to the custody of the original, and the opposite party, to whose custody it rightfully belongs, upon being notified to produce it, disclaims all knowledge of it.—Jones v. Jones, 38 Cal. 584.

[c] In an action for specific performance, and to reform a deed, a witness, in his deposition before the trial, testified, without objection, to the contents of the written agreement between the parties. But at the trial defendant objected to the deposition on the ground that secondary evidence of its contents could not be introduced without proof of the loss or destruction of the original. Thereupon plaintiff showed that the contract was executed in duplicate, one copy of which was delivered to him, and the other retained by defendant, and that when the deed was executed, his copy of the contract was delivered to defendant, who destroyed it. The copy retained was not accounted for, nor did it appear that any notice had been given for its production in court. Held, that defendant had a right to have the original contract introduced in evidence, if in existence and capable of being produced; but, as defendant had the copy in his possession, and it could have been introduced, thus obviating the necessity for secondary evidence, the objection would not be entertained.—Nicholson v. Tarpey, 70 Cal. 608, 12 Pac. 778.

[d] The lease being in defendant's possession, and he having failed to produce it when called on to do so, and not claiming that he had not had reasonable notice to produce it, it was proper to admit a copy of it in evidence, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1938.—Harloe v. Lambie, 132 Cal. 133, 64 Pac. 88.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 527-535; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 873-884, §§ 595-599.

§ 183. —— Presumptions as to Possession.

[a] In absence of registry law, it will be presumed that each party keeps all muniments of title in his own control, and gives copy to purchaser of part.—Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

§ 184. Preliminaries to Admission of Secondary Evidence in General.

[a] The proof of the loss of receipts, without proof of their genuineness, is not a sufficient predicate for the admission of evidence as to their contents.—Reynolds v. Jourdan, 6 Cal. 108.

[b] To make the copy of an unrecorded deed evidence, the loss of the original being shown, the testimony of the subscribing witnesses to the deed, if such there be, should be had, at least to the fact of the execution of the paper, unless they are shown to be without the jurisdiction of the court.—Smith v. Brannan, 13 Cal. 107.

ecution might have been issued, a charge by the clerk for issuing an execution, a sale by the sheriff, and a certificate of sale purporting to have been made pursuant to an execution, and after six months from the sale the sheriff has executed a deed in which the judgment and execution are recited, these are facts sufficient to raise the presumption of the existence of an execution after the lapse of sixteen years, though none could be found among the records of the court.—Russell v. Harris, 38 Cal. 426, 99 Am. Dec. 421.

[d] An instrument purporting to be a copy of the articles of association of a company is not admissible in evidence when there is no proof that the original of such articles ever existed.—Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183, 12 Pac. 449.

[e] One of the plaintiffs having stated that he had no personal knowledge that certain communications addressed to defendants were mailed except that copies thereof appeared in plaintiffs' copy-book, and that it was a general custom of their firm to place letters in a box in the store from which they were taken to the postoffice, there was no foundation laid for the introduction of secondary evidence as to the contents.—Ford v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 209, 25 Pac. 403.

[f] Plaintiff testified that he had written certain letters to defendants; that the postage was prepaid, and the letters put in the mail box at his store; that said box was emptied daily; that it was the business of W., an employee to take the letters, and mail them in the postoffice. W. testified that he was such employee at the time in question; that it was his duty to take the mail to the office, and that he did so; that if any letter was addressed, and put in the box, he took and mailed it. Held sufficient proof of mailing to support secondary evidence of the contents of the letters.—Sanborn v. Cunningham, 33 Pac. 894.

[g] Where a ledger had been destroyed, it was proper as preliminary to proof of its contents to ask a witness who had kept it whether or not it contained an account with a certain person.—Luty v. Cresta (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 642.

See 17 Cyc. 536-564; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 884-980, §§ 600-660.

§ 185. —— Proof as to Destruction or Loss of, and Search for Primary Evidence.

[a] Preliminary proof of the loss of an instrument, in order to permit the introduction of secondary evidence as to its contents, may be made by the evidence of the party in whose possession it last was.—McCann v. Beach, 2 Cal. 25.

[b] The defendant attempted to show an ordinance of the city of Sacramento, but offered only a newspaper copy of it. In support of this, as secondary evidence, the counsel for the defendant swore to a search for the original, which he himself had made in a book of ordinances handed him by the keeper of the city archives. Held, that the evidence was properly excluded, because this was an insufficient predicate.—Norris v. Russell, 5 Cal. 249.

[c] To entitle one to introduce secondary evidence of an ordinance, the search for the original should have been made and testified to by the keeper of the records, or he should have been subpoenaed to bring into court with him the original ordinance, and then, upon his failure to find it after diligent search, the copy, if established to be correct, would have been admissible.—Norris v. Russell, 5 Cal. 249.

[d] In quo warranto the person who claimed the office held by the defendant testified that his certificate of election was lost or destroyed, and the county clerk swore that there was not in his office, or, so far as he knew, in the county, any record or written evidence of the persons who were elected to the different county offices. Sufficient foundation was laid to let in secondary evidence of the election and certificate.—People v. Clingan, 5 Cal. 389.

[e] Positive testimony by the officer having charge of the records that they were not in his office raises the legal presumption that he had searched for them, unless it should be made to appear from his testimony that such was not the case.—People v. Clingan, 5 Cal. 389, 390.

[f] Where a witness testified that he was the notary public before whom a certain deed was acknowledged, and that he had seen a power of attorney authorizing the execution of such deed, and that such power was made out in the usual form, and that it had been destroyed in a fire, parol evidence was admissible to show its contents.—Posten v. Rassette, 5 Cal. 467.

[g] The admission of secondary evidence of a paper alleged to have been lost is only allowable on proof of a bona fide, diligent search, unsuccessfully made for it in the place where it was most likely to be found, and that the party has exhausted in a reasonable degree all the sources of information and means of discovery naturally suggested by the nature of the case and accessible to the party.—Folsom v. Scott, 6 Cal. 460.

[h] Mere evidence of search for paper alleged to have been lost is not sufficient to admit secondary evidence of its contents, for the search may not have been diligent.—Folsom v. Scott, 6 Cal. 460.

[i] Evidence that the library and papers of the party were destroyed by fire, except a few papers unaccompanied by evidence of search for the particular paper among those saved, is insufficient to admit secondary evidence of its contents.—Folsom v. Scott, 6 Cal. 460.

[j] Proof of a loss of an account book of original entries, not showing who last had possession of the book, or any bona fide and diligent search for it, is insufficient to authorize secondary evidence of its contents, though, if no objection be taken on this ground, such secondary evidence may be allowed.—Caulfield v. Sanders, 17 Cal. 569.

[k] Ejectment was brought on an alcalde grant, issued in January, 1847. One of plaintiff's witnesses swore that he was alcalde in October, 1847, and that he copied the grant into the proper book of records, that he knew his predecessor's handwriting, that the signature of the grant was in such handwriting, that at the time of the issue thereof his predecessor was alcalde, and that the record was a true copy of the grant. Plaintiff's affidavit stated that he had not the original grant, and had searched everywhere where it could be expected to be found, in vain. The widow of the grantee testified that it was not among his papers. Held that, upon this showing, the record should be admitted in evidence.—Pierce v. Wallace, 18 Cal. 165.

[l] A witness for plaintiff in ejectment testified that he had once had the deed, under which plaintiff claimed, in his possession; that he had thought that the grantee now had it, but, the grantee having written to him stating the contrary, he now believed it destroyed. Held that, since the grantee's testimony was hearsay, and not sworn to, the grounds were sufficient to admit secondary evidence.—Lawrence v. Fulton, 19 Cal. 683.

[m] Where there is evidence that a written bill of sale has been in the possession of one or the other of two persons, oral testimony as to its contents is not admissible, without first proving that both of them have searched for it and been unable to find it. Patterson v. Keystone Min. Co., 30 Cal. 360.

[n] The plaintiff claimed title to certain premises by purchase, which purchase was evidenced by a bill of sale. Held, that he was bound to produce this bill of sale, or deed, to prove his title, and that evidence that the bill of sale had been left at the plaintiff's store, at the time he sold the store and contents, and that he had made an unsuccessful search in such store for it—the purchaser at the time of the trial being within the reach of the process of the court, but not called as a witness as to what had become of the instrument—was not sufficient to lay a foundation for introducing secondary evidence of its contents.—King v. Randlett, 33 Cal. 318.

[o] Before parol evidence can be introduced of the contents of a deed which is claimed to be lost, it must be shown that an unsuccessful search has been made for it in the place where it was last known to have been. Taylor v. Clark, 49 Cal. 671.

[p] Where it is necessary for a patentee to prove the loss of the original patent before introducing a certified copy in evidence, his testimony that he never received the original, and did not know what had become of it, is sufficient.—Eltzroth v. Ryan, 89 Cal. 135, 26 Pac. 647.

[q] Secondary evidence of the contents of a missing document, not in possession of the adverse party, cannot be given when the proof shows that there is a person who might probably have it, of whom no inquiry has been made, but the preliminary proof should show that inquiry has been made, without result, of every person who, according to the evidence, would be likely to have the document or to know of its whereabouts.—Alvord v. Spring Valley Gold Co., 106 Cal. 547, 40 Pac. 27.

[r] Testimony of the recipient of a letter that he had lost it, that he had looked for it a great deal, and that he thought at one time he had left it at the office of his buyer, but had looked for it there, and been unable to find it, is sufficient to allow proof of the contents.—Samonset v. Mesnager, 108 Cal. 354, 41 Pac. 337.

[s] A notary's record showing the acknowledgment before him of a deed by a husband to his wife is inadmissible as secondary evidence without showing that the deed, if delivered, had been lost.—Lewis v. Burns, 122 Cal. 358, 55 Pac. 132.

[t] Plaintiff testified that he indorsed a note and mortgage which he held against defendant "Canceled and paid," after which satisfaction of the mortgage was entered on the books of the recorder; and that he put the instruments in his pocket, intending to give them to the defendant, and thought he had done so, as he had since looked everywhere among his papers, but could not find them. Held, that his testimony as to the indorsement was properly admitted, as the balance of his testimony to the effect that he looked in all places where his papers were likely to be was sufficient to show that the instruments could not be found, though he did not testify that he had looked "in his pocket."—Woods v. Jansen, 130 Cal. 200, 62 Pac. 473.

[u] In a suit to establish a lost deed, evidence that plaintiff had searched for the deed in the last known place of its deposit, and made inquiry of the only person who had access to it, in an endeavor to find it, without success, was sufficient to raise a presumption of its loss and authorize secondary evidence of its contents.—Kenniff v. Caulfield, 140 Cal. 34, 73 Pac. 803.

§ 186. —— Proof of Possession or Control of Primary Evidence.

[a] In an action of ejectment, where the plaintiff seeks to establish the loss of a deed under which he deraigns title, in order to lay the foundation for secondary evidence, the proof of search by the agent or attorney in fact of the plaintiff, and inquiry by him of the grantor, is insufficient, as the plaintiff himself might have the possession or control of the original, and, in the absence of other evidence, his affidavit should have been offered.—Fallon v. Dougherty, 12 Cal. 104.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 959-963, §§ 638-641.

§ 187. —— Notice to Produce Primary Evidence.

[a] Where a notice to the adverse party to produce a written lease in his possession was slightly erroneous with regard to the names of the parties to the lease, and did not describe the contents of the lease, but was such as to apprise a man of ordinary intelligence as to what paper was required, the notice was sufficient, since a party cannot be expected to minutely describe a paper in the possession of an adversary.—Burke v. Table Mountain Water Co., 12 Cal. 403.

[b] Parol evidence is admissible to show the contents of a writing without proof of demand and a refusal to deliver such writing. Womble v. Wilbur (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 916.

§ 188. Character and Degrees of Secondary Evidence—In General.

[a] When records have been destroyed but judgment book preserved, parol evidence of pleading and issues is inadmissible, unless accompanied by certified copy of judgment. Nims v. Johnson, 7 Cal. 110.

[b] Where the ballots cast at an election had been destroyed before trial of an action to oust certain persons from office, evidence of the election officers that nearly all of the ballots were marked for two candidates was the best in degree that existed.—People v. Davidson (Cal. App.), 83 Pac. 161.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 565; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 980-1004, §§ 661-673.

§ 189. —— Oral Evidence.

[a] It is proper to ask county clerk if he knew who had been elected to an office in controversy, it having been shown that proper search was made for the certificate of election, and that it had been destroyed.—People v. Clingan, 5 Cal. 389.

[b] Testimony of county judge, who stated that he saw certificate of election, is admissible to prove its contents, it having been shown that a proper search was made for it, and that it had been destroyed.—People v. Clingan, 5 Cal. 389.

[c] On an issue as to whether defendant had an account with a certain bank, at a time specified, testimony of an employee of such bank that he had made an examination for such purpose, and ascertained that he had not, was competent, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1855, subdivision 5, authorizing parol proof of the general result of an examination of numerous books and accounts, where they cannot be examined in court without great loss of time. Judgment (1898) 51 Pac. 945, reversed.—People v. Dole, 122 Cal. 486, 68 Am. St. Rep. 50, 55 Pac. 581.

[d] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1855, subdivision 5, allowing secondary evidence of the contents of a writing when the original consists of numerous documents which cannot be examined in a court without a great loss of time, and the evidence sought is only the general result of the whole, the deputy clerk of a city council may testify that no resolution of intention by a city council to make a street improvement, other than that which was introduced in evidence, was passed.—Pacific Pav. Co. v. Gallett, 137 Cal. 174, 69 Pac. 985.

§ 190. —— Exclusion of Parol Evidence as Secondary to Copy or Other Documents.

[a] Where original instrument proved to be lost has been recorded, it is error to admit parol evidence of its contents, unless the failure to produce the record is accounted for. Brotherton v. Mart, 6 Cal. 488.

§ 191. Copies and Counterparts.

[a] A copy of a certified copy of a lost writing is not admissible to prove the contents of the original.—Dyer v. Hudson, 65 Cal. 372, 4 Pac. 235.

[b] Press copies of letters are best evidence next to originals and oral evidence of their contents is inadmissible.—Ford v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 210, 25 Pac. 403.

§ 192. —— Sufficiency in General.

[a] Secondary evidence being admitted, it becomes the province of the jury to judge of its credit and weight. It takes the place of the primary evidence, the absence of which has been explained to the satisfaction of the court, and is entitled to the same consideration.—Bagley v. Administrator of McMickle, 9 Cal. 430.

§ 193. —— —— Degree and Particularity of Proof Requisite.

[a] In the case of a lost instrument, where no copy has been preserved, it is not to be expected that witnesses can recite its contents, word for word. It is sufficient if intelligent witnesses, who had read the paper, understood its object, and can state it with precision.—Posten v. Rassette, 5 Cal. 467.

§ 194. —— Acts and Declarations.

[a] Though the written contract on which plaintiff sues may be lost or otherwise inaccessible to him, so that parol evidence is necessary to prove its contents, evidence of conversations between the parties pending the negotiations which resulted in the contract, which conversations were had before its execution, is incompetent.—Nicholson v. Tarpey, 89 Cal. 617, 26 Pac. 1101.

§ 195. Determination of Question of Admissibility.

[a] Preliminary proof is addressed to court, and of its sufficiency the court is the sole judge.—Bagley v. Administrator of McMickle, 9 Cal. 430.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1005-1008, §§ 674, 675.

VI. DEMONSTRATIVE EVIDENCE.

§ 196. Exhibition of Object or Person.

[a] Boxes of prunes dried by the plaintiff being a finished and separable part of the manufactured product, the character of which was in question, may be properly received in evidence for the defendants and the question whether they were fair samples or not goes only to the weight of the evidence and not to its admissibility.—Thomas Fruit Co. v. Start, 107 Cal. 206, 40 Pac. 336.

[b] In an action for injuries in operating a stamping machine, the preserved hand of plaintiff, showing a streak of ink along it, was admissible as showing that it had in fact passed under the stencil.—Anderson v. Seropian, 147 Cal. 201, 81 Pac. 521.

§ 197. Writings Submitted for Comparison.

[a] It is error to permit a party to write his signature in the presence of the jury, to enable them, by comparison of handwritings, to appreciate his nervous condition at the time of signing a release of all claims for damages for injuries received by him through the negligence of a common carrier.—Gulzoni v. Tyler, 64 Cal. 334, 30 Pac. 981.

§ 198. Nature of Admission and Subject Matter in General.

[a] Evidence of statement by defendant to witness held proper, the purpose being merely to show an admission that his cattle did the damage to plaintiff's crop.—Story v. Nidiffer, 146 Cal. 549, 80 Pac. 692.

[b] Negotiations between pledgor of water stock and officer of water company, whom the pledgee had directed not to deliver water to the pledgor, held admissible on the issue of the pledgor's conduct with respect to her obligation to repay the pledgee for assessments paid by him.—Mabb v. Stewart, 147 Cal. 413, 81 Pac. 1073.

[c] Where a contract appointing plaintiff defendant's exclusive broker was extended by a written indorsement, evidence as to a conversation between defendant and witness relating to defendant's understanding of the extension is inadmissible.—Clark v. Dakiel (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 429.

against him though not correct but proved to have been falsified.—San Pedro etc. Co. v. Reynolds, 121 Cal. 83-85, 53 Pac. 410.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 939-964; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1031-1038, §§ 699-706.

§ 200. Judicial Admissions.

[a] Facts admitted to avoid continuance become evidence, but not conclusive proof. Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 645.

[b] The record of a court in an action to recover possession of personal property when there is no judgment, the property being delivered up voluntarily, is not admissible as evidence of the plaintiff's ownership of the property in another action.—Miller v. Van Tassel, 24 Cal. 458.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 964-976; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1038-1075, §§ 707-744.

§ 201. —— By Counsel.

[a] Admissions of fact made by counsel in one suit are not admissible, to the prejudice of the party against whom they are made, in another.—Wilkins v. Stidger, 22 Cal. 231, 83 Am. Dec. 64.

[b] Admissions of attorney are irrelevant and immaterial evidence, and objections upon that ground are sufficient.—Wilson v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 53 Cal. 735.

[c] Statement by counsel that he supposed court would find against him on certain issue in view of previous rulings is not admission. Jessup, In re, 81 Cal. 416, 22 Pac. 742.

[d] In an action for malicious prosecution for perjury, where it appears that the attorney for defendant advised him that there was "probable cause" for believing that plaintiff had perjured himself in a certain suit, defendant's attorney cannot testify as to what plaintiff's attorney said in such suit without showing that plaintiff was present or assented.—Dawson v. Schloss, 93 Cal. 194, 29 Pac. 31.

§ 202. —— Pleadings.

[a] Express admission in an answer, whether material or not, is evidence of fact admitted.—Powell v. Oullahan, 14 Cal. 115.

[ab] The plaintiff in ejectment claimed under the deed of one M. The defendants set up that M's title had been devested by a sale for taxes, and offered in evidence a complaint filed by M. against his agent, in which he alleged that, through the neglect of his agent, the premises had been sold, no redemption had been made. the sale had become absolute, and he had suffered damages, etc. Held, that these statements did not amount to an admission of title in the purchaser at the tax sale, and, even if they did, the admission could not operate to transfer such title.—Keane v. Cannovan, 21 Cal. 291.

[b] Admissions in a pleading are admissible against the party making them in a subsequent action between the same parties. Greer v. Tripp, 56 Cal. 209.

[c] Pleading verified by attorney in fact is admissible against his principal to show fact that action was brought and its nature. Kamm v. Bank of California, 74 Cal. 197, 198, 15 Pac. 765.

[d] An admission or averment in a verified answer, in a separate and distinct defense, as to the fact that the defendant was a consolidated corporation, is not evidence against the defendant upon issues tendered in other defenses contained in the same answer, consisting of denials only.—McDonald v. Southern C. Ry. Co., 101 Cal. 206, 35 Pac. 643, 646.

[e] In ejectment, tried to the court, portions of the answer, averring the execution of deeds conveying the legal title in the premises to plaintiff, were admitted in his behalf, and at defendant's request the whole answer was then read, which showed legal and equitable title in defendant. Held, that only those allegations explaining or qualifying the averments admitted as evidence for plaintiff were admissible in behalf of defendant, and that while it might have been proper to allow the entire answer to be read, to determine whether it contained such qualifying statements, such entire answer did not thereby become conclusive evidence. Granite Gold Min. Co. v. Maginness, 118 Cal. 131, 50 Pac. 269.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 967-971; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1046-1062, §§ 713-725.

§ 203. —— —— Pleadings Superseded.

[a] Where there are several answers, an admission made in one is not available in proof of issues raised by others.—Nudd v. Thompson, 34 Cal. 39.

[b] If an answer has been superseded by an amended answer the answer thus superseded is not admissible in evidence as an admission on the trial.—Mecham v. McKay, 37 Cal. 154.

[c] Pleadings superseded by amendment are not admissible as evidence.—Mecham v. McKay, 37 Cal. 154.

[d] Material allegations of complaint in former suit must be taken as admissions of the truth of the matters alleged in a subsequent action, for the same cause of action, and will be binding and conclusive upon pleader in the absence of any evidence tending to establish that such allegations were made by mistake or under a misapprehension of the real facts.—Geary v. Simmons, 39 Cal. 224.

Digitized by Google

[e] Where an original pleading has been superseded by an amended pleading, the allegations of the former are not admissible as evidence in the same action.—Ponce v. McElvy, 51 Cal. 222; Wheeler v. West, 71 Cal. 126, 11 Pac. 871; Stern v. Loewenthal, 77 Cal. 340, 19 Pac. 579.

[f] If an amended complaint is filed, the original ceases to be a pleading, and its averments cannot be used to disprove those of the amended pleading. But when a plaintiff is a witness at the trial, the averments of the original complaint, inconsistent with his testimony, may be introduced upon cross-examination, for the purpose of impeachment. Johnson v. Powers, 65 Cal. 179.

[g] Original complaint is admissible to show offer to pay money into court, embodied in it, though superseded by amendment.—Pfister v. Wade, 69 Cal. 139, 10 Pac. 369.

[h] Pleading filed in another action although superseded by amendment is admissible as an admission.—Coward v. Clanton, 79 Cal. 28, 29, 21 Pac. 359.

[hi] An amended pleading supersedes the original, and admissions made in the original pleading cannot thereafter properly be introduced in evidence against the party who made them.—Miles v. Woodward, 115 Cal. 308, 46 Pac. 1076, 47 Pac. 360.

[i] Admissions contained in a pleading, which has been superseded by another in amended form, may nevertheless be used for impeachment purposes when relevant.—O'Connor's Estate, In re, 118 Cal. 69, 50 Pac. 4.

[j] A withdrawn cross-complaint is not admissible in evidence.—Ruddock Co. v. Johnson, 135 Cal. xix, 67 Pac. 680.

[k] A superseded claim filed by plaintiffs against the estate of defendant's testator held admissible against plaintiffs as an admission against interest.—Pollitz v. Wickersham (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 911.

§ 204. —— Petitions and Applications.

[a] A statement in a petition for letters of administration, to the effect that certain real property therein particularly described belonged to the deceased, cannot be received in evidence against the petitioner as an admission by him of such fact, unless the petition was signed by him personally, or by an attorney who acted within the scope of his authority in making the statement.—Duff v. Duff, 71 Cal. 513, 12 Pac. 570.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 974-976; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1064-1070, §§ 729-737.

§ 205. —— Affidavits.

[a] Affidavit in a former suit acknowledging the debt sued upon is admissible.—Whitney v. Buckman, 13 Cal. 536.

[b] The affidavit of the defendant, made in a former action in which he was plaintiff, as to the value of the premises during a certain time, is evidence against him as to the value of the premises during a subsequent time, provided it be connected with evidence that the value of the premises was the same during the two periods.—Shafter v. Richards, 14 Cal. 125.

§ 206. —— Testimony.

[a] The testimony of a party to an action, given on a former trial, may be introduced against him on a second trial, though he is present in court, and may be called as a witness.—Lorenzana v. Camarillo, 45 Cal. 125.

[b] The testimony of a party to the suit, proved by the evidence of a stenographer testifying to a transcript from his notes, is admissible to show an admission made by such party in the testimony thus proved.—Macomber v. Bigelow, 126 Cal. 19, 58 Pac. 312.

[c] Where the declarations made by a party to the suit examined by the opposite party were proved by the stenographer who took his deposition, which was not introduced, declarations were not testimony, but merely declarations against interest.—Arnold's Estate, In re, 147 Cal. 583, 82 Pac. 252.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 976; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1071-1075, §§ 738-744.

§ 207. By Parties of Record or Others Interested in Event.

[a] Statements, made by a defendant to a third party, about having executed a deed of the premises in dispute to P., are admissible to show that the deed under which the plaintiff claims (from defendant to H.) was in fact executed by him, and that he was mistaken as to the name of the grantee, in connection with the proof that P. acted for the grantee in regard to the conveyance.—Wright v. Carillo, 22 Cal. 595.

[b] A witness who had stated that plaintiff, on several occasions, said that decedent owed no debts was properly allowed to state that in those conversations plaintiff made no exception in favor of himself.—Robinson v. Dugan, 35 Pac. 902.

[c] Evidence that plaintiff had told a witness that he had given the property in controversy to his daughter, though the statement was not made in her presence, was competent, as showing an admission of the gift by plaintiff.—Burlingame v. Rowland, 77 Cal. 315, 19 Pac. 526, 1 L. R. A. 829.

[d] Admission after former trial resulting in large verdict that verdict was just and right is competent against defendant at subsequent trial.—White v. Merrill, 82 Cal. 17, 18, 22 Pac. 1129.

[e] Where a complaint in intervention alleged that plaintiff's assignors were indebted to the defendant corporation for an assessment levied on the stock, and the only evidence to sustain the same was the admissions in defendant's answer, which were verified by one of the assignors, a finding that such assignors were so indebted, and a conclusion of law that plaintiff take nothing by his suit, cannot be sustained, since the admissions of the answer were not evidence against the plaintiff.—Shively v. Eureka T. G. M. Co., 129 Cal. 293, 61 Pac. 939.

§ 208. —— Coparties.

[a] A joint answer of two defendants, signed by their attorney, and verified by only one of them, is not admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the allegations therein contained, in an action brought against the defendant who did not sign or verify.—McDermott v. Mitchell, 47 Cal. 249.

[b] Admissions of a party named defendant in the complaint, but not served, are inadmissible against the other defendants.—Derby v. Rounds, 53 Cal. 659.

[c] Evidence as to the declarations of one defendant are not admissible against a codefendant, where they are not joint defendants in a sense which would make the declarations of one binding upon the other.—Dean v. Ross, 105 Cal. 227, 38 Pac. 912.

§ 209. —— Interest in Suit of Persons not Parties.

[a] The declarations of third persons, not parties to the record, cannot be admitted in evidence, except in those cases where they have a joint interest with the plaintiff or defendant, or where some legal relation exists. They may be admissible if made at a time after the joint interest existed, and not admissible if made before.—Kilburn v. Ritchie, 2 Cal. 145, 56 Am. Dec. 326.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 984; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1162-1165, §§ 813, 814.

§ 210. Offers of Compromise or Settlement.

[a] In an action for damages for breach of a contract, where a counterclaim for a breach of the same contract is set up, evidence of an attempt to arbitrate and settle the matters at issue is not admissible.—Dennis v. Belt, 30 Cal. 247.

[b] Where a party admits a particular fact, meaning to make the admission as being true, it is admissible as evidence against him, though the object was to compromise an existing controversy. Hence, in an action for divorce, the paper signed by defendant, offering to divide the property, and describing it as community property, was admissible on the issue as to the character of the property.—Rose v. Rose, 112 Cal. 341, 44 Pac. 568.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 946-952; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1075-1090, §§ 745-753.

§ 211. —— What Constitutes Offer.

[a] The statement of a party against whom a claim is made that he is willing to settle the claim, when not connected with an offer of compromise, may be proved as an admission against interest. The rule which excludes offers of compromise does not apply to statements made by a party which are in no wise connected with any attempt at a compromise, whether made to a stranger or to a codefendant.—Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279, 30 Pac. 529.

§ 212. Statements in Writing in General.

[a] In an action on a contract made by a party to pay all sums advanced to a third person, a written statement, signed by the defendant, of the advances made to such person, is admissible in evidence against him, but he may introduce evidence to show error in the statement.—Gradwohl v. Harris, 29 Cal. 150.

[b] Statements from assessor's office not signed by the party against whom they are offered, nor shown to have been made under his direction, or with his knowledge, are not competent evidence against him or parties claiming under him.—Feliz v. Feliz, 105 Cal. 1, 38 Pac. 521.

[c] In an action to recover royalties upon machines manufactured and sold by the defendant, a statement of sales made by the corporation defendant to the plaintiff, to which was added a statement of dates taken from the books of the defendant, in the presence and with the consent of its secretary, was properly admitted in evidence against the corporation.—Keith v. Electrical Engineering Co., 136 Cal. 178, 68 Pac. 598.

[d] The report of an accident to an employee, made by the employer to an insurance company insuring the employer against accidents to its employees, was admissible in an action against the employer for the injuries sustained, so far as it contained admissions of the employer as to matters material and relevant to the controversy.—Roche v. Llewellyn Ironworks Co., 140 Cal. 563, 74 Pac. 147.

tween the time of the alleged breach and the commencement of the action, tending to show that nothing was then claimed by him as due from defendant, are relevant and admissible. Moore v. Campbell, 72 Cal. 251, 13 Pac. 689.

§ 214. —— Valuation of Property for Purposes of Taxation.

[a] Written statements describing property for the purpose of assessment for taxation (Pol. Code, secs. 3629-3633), signed by the owner, but in which the value is fixed by the assessor's clerk, are inadmissible on the question of value in condemnation proceedings.—San Jose etc. R. Co. v. Mayne, 83 Cal. 566, 23 Pac. 522.

§ 215. Acts or Conduct.

[a] In an action against S. for goods sold and delivered, and used in a stable business conducted by I., it was competent, upon the issue whether the goods had been sold to I. or S., to give in evidence an assessment list, prepared by I., of the personal property used in the business, and to show that S. had appeared before the board of equalization to procure its reduction.—Arnold v. Skaggs, 35 Cal. 684.

§ 216. Acquiescence or Silence.

[a] When an agent's letters have been adopted or acted upon by the principal, they are admissible against him.—Neely v. Naglee, 23 Cal. 152.

[b] Where defendants claim that, because of representations made by plaintiff's predecessor as to his right to use certain waters, plaintiff is estopped to claim the right to such use, testimony that prior thereto, in a conversation with plaintiff's predecessor concerning such water rights, defendants made no such claim, is competent.—Williams v. Harter, 121 Cal. 47, 53 Pac. 405.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 956-962; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1112-1132, §§ 771-785.

§ 217. —— Failure to Deny Oral Statements Made in Court.

[a] A party to a suit is not bound by, or held to admit as true, every statement made by his witnesses during the trial, because he does not deny or contradict them at the time; and statements of a plaintiff's witness, that plaintiff owed him a certain sum, which was an element of the damages claimed in the suit, although not denied at the time, can be controverted in a suit by the witness to recover said sum.—Wilkins v. Stidger, 22 Cal. 231, 83 Am. Dec. 64.

STATEMENTS MADE AFTER CONVEYANCE OR TRANSFER OF TITLE, § 221.
—— STATEMENTS MADE AFTER CONVEYANCE BUT BEFORE TRANSFER OF POSSESSION, § 222.
—— SHOWING FRAUD, § 223.
STATEMENTS AS TO NATURE OR VALIDITY OF CONVEYANCE, § 224.
STATEMENTS OF PERSONS SINCE DECEASED, § 225.

§ 218. In General.

[a] Section 1849, Code of Civil Procedure, does not enlarge class of cases in which declarations, acts or omissions of holder of legal title were admissible against himself at common law.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 315, 11 Pac. 820.

§ 219. Statements Made Before Conveyance or Transfer.

[a] Declarations of vendor while in possession are admissible against those claiming under him.—Landecker v. Houghtaling, 7 Cal. 391.

[b] The declarations and acts of a vendor before sale are competent testimony to show a fraudulent intent on his part, in a suit to impeach the sale on the ground of fraud.—Visher v. Webster, 8 Cal. 109.

[c] Declarations or admissions by an owner, affecting his rights, have the same effect on the rights of his subsequent grantees.—Stanley v. Green, 12 Cal. 148.

[cd] Statement by alleged grantor to notary who certified to acknowledgment that the signature is his is good evidence of the execution, and may be proved by the officer.—Jansen v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 563, 83 Am. Dec. 84.

[d] Admissions made by the grantor of the plaintiff in her lifetime, while living on the demanded premises, that it belonged to, or was in possession of, the defendant, held admissible in evidence against the plaintiff on the trial of the issue of title.—Bollo v. Navarro, 33 Cal. 459.

[e] Upon an issue that plaintiff's grantor had taken title for the joint benefit of himself and defendants, and that plaintiff took title from him with notice of defendants' rights, it is competent to show the circumstances of the purchase by such grantor, and his declarations at that time, as tending to show defendants' interest.—Lord v. Thomas, 36 Pac. 372.

[f] Declarations of a party are always admissible against himself, or those claiming under him by conveyance made subsequent to the declarations, without reference to the time when or place where they were made.—McFadden v. Wallace, 38 Cal. 51.

[g] When one derives title to land from another, the declarations of the grantor in relation to his right, made while holding the title which he transferred, are admissible in evidence against the grantee.—McFadden v. Ellmaker, 52 Cal. 348.

[gh] Declarations of grantor while holding title may be introduced against his grantee. Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 315, 316, 11 Pac. 820.

[gi] Acts and declarations of grantor are competent to show that vendee took land under parol agreement to convey when paid for and that price was paid.—Bryan v. Tormey, 84 Cal. 130, 24 Pac. 319.

[h] Evidence of the declarations and acts of plaintiff's grantor in relation to the land in controversy before he conveyed to the plaintiff is admissible against the plaintiff.—Seegelken v. Corey, 93 Cal. 92, 28 Pac. 849.

[i] Declarations of grantor are admissible against him and those claiming under him, if their purport is to restrict his premises or lessen his title.—Williams v. Harter, 121 Cal. 52, 53 Pac. 405.

[j] In an action to quiet title to the right to use the waters of a ditch, where defendant claimed through her husband as grantor, and plaintiffs conceded that defendant's husband had used water from the ditch up to a certain time, when they claimed that he abandoned the right to the ditch and water, evidence that he made a verbal sale to one of the plaintiffs of all his interest in the ditch, and that thereafter he made frequent declarations that he had no interest in the water or ditch, all occurring long before he conveyed to defendant, such declarations continuing up to the time of his death, is admissible to prove the abandonment claimed.—Griseza v. Terwilliger, 144 Cal. 456, 77 Pac. 1034.

[k] In an action against the grantee of the owner to abate a nuisance, declarations of the owner of the land, while in possession, and at the time he was having the survey made, to the effect that the same was being made merely for convenience of reference in making conveyances, were admissible.—Smith v. Glenn, 129 Cal. xviii, 62 Pac. 180.

§ 220. —— Statements as to Boundaries.

[a] Declarations by the owner of land to a purchaser, at the time he sold, as to the boundary lines claimed by him, are admissible against one claiming title from such purchaser.—Austin v. Andrews, 71 Cal. 98, 16 Pac. 546.

§ 221. Statements Made After Conveyance or Transfer of Title.

[a] Declarations of vendor after sale are admissible against vendee, if evidence shows collusion.—Howe v. Scannell, 8 Cal. 325.

[ab] The declarations of vendor made after the sale of the wheat are not admissible for the purpose of proving that the sale was not bona fide.—Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483.

[b] The declarations of a vendor, made after the sale, that it was colorable only, and that he was still interested, are inadmissible. Visher v. Webster, 13 Cal. 58.

[c] The declarations of a person who has parted with property under a bill of sale are not admissible, as against the title of the buyer, as part of the res gestae, such property being claimed by another under an attachment, where a clear and unequivocal possession of the property by the seller is not shown.—Visher v. Webster, 13 Cal. 58.

[d] Where property levied on under an attachment is claimed by another as his property under a prior sale, admissions of the seller made after the time of such sale are not admissible as against claimant.—Visher v. Webster, 13 Cal. 58.

[e] Declarations of vendor after sale are inadmissible against vendee.—Cohn v. Mulford, 15 Cal. 50.

[f] The acknowledgment of the payment of purchase money by a grantor in a subsequent deed is no evidence of the fact of payment as against those holding under a prior deed, and is not admissible to defeat their rights under their prior deed.—Colton v. Seavey, 22 Cal. 496.

[g] Declarations of the vendor of personal property made after the sale are not admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing a fraudulent intent on his part in making the sale. Such declarations made before the sale are admissible.—Jones v. Morse, 36 Cal. 205.

[gh] The declarations of the grantor, in a conveyance charged to be fraudulent, made subsequent to its execution, and while the grantee was in the possession of the property conveyed and out of his presence, is not admissible in evidence to establish fraud on the part of the grantee or his vendee.—Spanagel v. Dellinger, 38 Cal. 278.

[h] Intent of parties to a sale of goods to defraud the creditors of the seller cannot be proved by declarations of the seller made after the transaction, nor by declarations of an agent of the buyer whose agency was limited to the care and custody of the goods after they were delivered to the buyer.—Hutchings v. Castle, 48 Cal. 152.

[i] Under the provisions of section 1849 of the Code of Civil Procedure, permitting the declarations of a former owner to be given in evidence against one claiming under h a deed of such former owner of a large tract of land, excepting from its provisions the demanded premises, with the declaration therein that such demanded premises had been previously sold to a third party, cannot be received in evidence in ejectment to show the title of such third party. The declarations, to be receivable in evidence, must be made concerning the property conveyed, and while the declarant still owned it.—Tompkins v. Crane, 50 Cal. 478.

[j] The declarations of a vendor, made after the sale, are not admissible in evidence against his vendee.—Briswalter v. Palomares, 66 Cal. 259, 5 Pac. 226; Taylor v. Central Pac. R. Co., 67 Cal. 615, 8 Pac. 436; Thomas v. Black, 84 Cal. 225, 23 Pac. 1037; Packard v. Johnson, 4 Pac. 632; Packard v. Moss, 4 Pac. 638.

[k] In an action against a sheriff, for wrongfully taking cattle donated to plaintiff by his father, a statement alleged to have been made by the father after he had parted with the possession of the cattle is inadmissible, either to prove the fraudulent character of the gift or for any other purpose.—Walden v. Purvis, 73 Cal. 518, 15 Pac. 91.

[l] In an action against the maker by a bank that had discounted a note drawn for accommodation, it was error to allow evidence of a conversation between the maker and payee, after it had been acquired by the bank, and in the absence of the bank's representative.—First Nat. Bank v. Wolff, 79 Cal. 69, 21 Pac. 551, 748.

[m] Rights of mortgagee cannot be prejudicially affected by ex parte statements or admissions of mortgagor made after execution of mortgage.—Silva v. Serpa, 86 Cal. 245, 24 Pac. 1013.

[n] Declarations of a grantor in his own favor, made after he had parted with his interest in land, are inadmissible to affect the title of the grantee.—Ord v. Ord, 99 Cal. 523, 34 Pac. 83.

[o] Statements tending to prove that the conveyance was made to hinder, delay and defraud creditors, made by the debtor after he has parted with the title to the property, are not admissible in evidence to impeach the title of his grantee.—Ross v. Wellman, 102 Cal. 1, 36 Pac. 402.

[p] After the execution of a deed in form absolute, the grantor's declarations are inadmissible to show it a mortgage.—Hyde v. Buckner, 108 Cal. 522, 41 Pac. 416.

[pq] Declarations of grantor cannot be received to impeach his title conveyed two years before.—Cook v. Cockins, 117 Cal. 156, 48 Pac. 1025.

[q] Declarations of a seller concerning the sale are inadmissible against the buyer, where made after the sale, when not in possession of the property, and when the buyer was not present.—Henderson v. Hart, 122 Cal. 332, 54 Pac. 1110.

[r] In a suit for specific performance of a land contract, involving the reformation of the description in a lost deed, its contents cannot be shown by declarations of the grantor made after execution, as to what land he had conveyed.—Nicholson v. Tarpey, 124 Cal. 442, 57 Pac. 457.

[s] Declarations of an owner of land in disparagement of his title are admissible in evidence against him and his grantees while the legal title remains in him, but are inadmissible where made after he has parted with his title.—Frink v. Roe, 7 Pac. 481.

§ 222. —— Statements Made After Conveyance but Before Transfer of Possession.

[a] Declarations of a vendor concerning the transaction after the sale was made and the property delivered so as to pass the title is, as a general rule, inadmissible, and is never to be received, unless it appears that the vendor's declarations were made while in possession of the property with the knowledge or consent, express or implied, of the vendee.—Cahoon v. Marshall, 25 Cal. 197.

[b] Declarations of a grantor of land, being admissible against the grantee only when made "while holding the title" (Code Civ. Proc., sec. 1849), are not admissible when made after the grant, though the grantor be still in possession of the property.—Emmons v. Barton, 109 Cal. 662, 42 Pac. 303.

§ 223. —— —— Showing Fraud.

[a] Where, in an action between a creditor and the purchaser of property alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed, it appeared that there was no immediate delivery after the sale, statements of the vendor both before and after the sale were competent to show his fraud.—Gallagher v. Williamson, 23 Cal. 331, 83 Am. Dec. 114.

[b] In an action by a creditor of the grantor in a secret, unrecorded deed, conveying realty to the grantor's wife, to set aside such deed as fraudulent, evidence tending to show that the grantor was allowed to retain possession of such property, and of his acts and declarations as to the character of such possession, made after the execution of such deed, but while still in possession of such property, is admissible, as to the res gestae of the fraud may be considered to be in progress so long as the grantor retains such possession.—Bush & Mallett Co. v. Helbing, 134 Cal. 676, 66 Pac. 967.

§ 224. Statements as to Nature or Validity of Conveyance.

[a] Evidence of declarations of a seller that he had made the sale to protect his property against creditors is not admissible against the buyer.—Banning v. Marleau, 121 Cal. 240, 53 Pac. 692.

§ 225. Statements of Persons Since Deceased.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1853, providing that the declarations of a decedent, having sufficient knowledge of the subject, against his pecuniary interest, are also admissible against his successor in interest, declarations of a deceased father to the effect that a conveyance made to him by one of his sons was intended as security are admissible against the father's administrator.—Harp v. Harp, 136 Cal. 421, 69 Pac. 28.

[b] In an action against the estate of a deceased person to enforce specific performance of a contract made by the decedent in his lifetime, to adopt the son of another person, and to accept him as sole heir of his property, the declarations of the decedent against his interest are admissible in favor of the plaintiff in support of the alleged contract.—Rulofson v. Billings, 140 Cal. 452, 74 Pac. 35.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1853, certain declarations by decedent, made against his interest, held admissible against his administratrix.—Stoddard v. Newhall, 1 Cal. App. 111, 81 Pac. 666.

§ 226. Statements by Third Persons in General.

[a] Declarations of third persons are inadmissible unless they have a joint interest with the parties or some legal relation exists between them.—Kilburn v. Ritchie, 2 Cal. 145, 56 Am. Dec. 326.

[b] Where a note is sent by an indorsee to a bank for collection, statements by another bank, to which the note was sent by the first bank are inadmissible against the indorsee to defeat his title.—Bank of California v. J. L. Mott Iron Works, 113 Cal. 409, 45 Pac. 674.

[c] On the issue of an alleged fraudulent motive for the order of the board of harbor commissioners for the removal of a vessel from a certain wharf, it was error to admit testimony that one K. represented to plaintiff's officers that for two thousand dollars he could obtain from the board a rescission of the order of removal; it not appearing that K. was in any way connected with the board, or that any one of them authorized or knew of his proposal.—Union Transp. Co. v. Bassett, 118 Cal. 604, 50 Pac. 754.

§ 226½. By Adjoining Land Owners as to Boundaries.

[a] Evidence of the declarations of adjoining owners made long prior to the commencement of the action, some of which were made by deceased persons, for the purpose of showing that it was understood between the adjoining owners that a fence between them was not upon the true partition line is admissible, although it is a just caution addressed to the trial court that there is danger of relying upon the declarations of deceased persons when it becomes impossible of contradiction; but the credibility of such evidence is for the consideration of the judge of the court who saw and heard the witnesses.—Peters v. Gracia, 110 Cal. 89, 42 Pac. 455.

§ 227. Competency of Admissions of Agents or Employees in General.

[a] Admissions of an agent, to bind the principal, must constitute part of the res gestae.—Garfield v. Knight's Ferry Water Co., 14 Cal. 35.

[b] Declarations of an agent, while engaged in performing an act within the scope of his authority are evidence against his principal.—Neely v. Naglee, 23 Cal. 152; Ward v. Preston, 23 Cal. 468.

[bc] The declarations of any agent are not admissible in evidence against his principal until the fact of his agency is first proven. Grigsby v. Clear Lake Water Co., 40 Cal. 396.

[c] Where an agent is not acting within the scope of his apparent authority his declarations, or any agreement which he assumes to make for his own benefit, are not admissible in evidence against his principal. Hubback v. Ross, 96 Cal. 426, 31 Pac. 353.

[d] Although the declarations of an agent are not admissible to prove the fact of agency, or the extent of his authority, yet his declarations, at the time of employment of the services of counsel, are admissible to show that counsel were employed on behalf of the principal, and not for himself in his individual capacity.—Swinnerton v. Argo-

§ 228. —— Authority in Particular Instances.

[a] In an action against an innkeeper to recover for the loss of a valuable package, declarations of the barkeeper of the inn are not admissible, as against defendant, where such declarations are not made in any way in the discharge of his duties as barkeeper.—Mateer v. Brown, 1 Cal. 221, 52 Am. Dec. 303.

[b] Admission of master binds steamer with same effect as those of owner, when record of vessel discloses no other owner.—Bailey v. The New World, 2 Cal. 370.

[c] The declarations of the master of a steamboat, whilst running the river, respecting fire communicating from the chimneys of the boat to the crops of grain on the banks of the river, by which the crop was consumed, are admissible to establish the liability of the owners, in an action against them to recover damages for the destruction of the crops.—Gerke v. California Steam Nav. Co., 9 Cal. 251, 70 Am. Dec. 650.

[d] Declarations of agent whose agency is limited to custody of goods not admissible as to rights of parties.—Hutchings v. Castle, 48 Cal. 153.

[e] In an action for slander for charging plaintiff with being associated with one S. in the theft of cattle, held, that testimony as to conversations between plaintiff's driver and S. were admissible, it appearing that plaintiff had told S. he would report to him through the driver.—Barkly v. Copeland, 74 Cal. 1, 5 Am. St. Rep. 413, 15 Pac. 307.

[f] Evidence of what an agent of plaintiff said to the wife of his copartner, on being sent to have the latter sign a notice of dissolution, was inadmissible to contradict plaintiff.—Jepsen v. Beck, 78 Cal. 540, 21 Pac. 184.

[g] Where a lessee agrees to pay the same rent as an adjoining lessee, and the lease of the latter provides for a rent of three hundred dollars per month, but there is a contemporaneous agreement for a rebate, statements made by the lessors' agent on leasing the adjoining store, as to his reason for drawing the lease for three hundred dollars per month, are competent evidence against the lessors.—Corson v. Berson, 86 Cal. 433, 25 Pac. 7.

[h] In an action by a contractor to recover for putting an elevator in defendant's building, in which defendant claimed damages for improper construction of certain pipes, it is error to permit plaintiff to testify that defendant's architect admitted that he gave "instructions to put up the pipes in that manner," where it did not appear that such architect was defendant's agent when the admission was made, nor that it related to a transaction then depending.—Birch v. Hale, 99 Cal. 299, 33 Pac. 1088.

[i] Where, at the instance of the insurer, a member of the board of underwriters, a telegram is sent to the board's agent at the port where an insured cargo was sold, such agent's letter to the board in answer thereto, in regard to the loss and sale, is admissible against the insurer, though it is not entirely responsive to the telegram; it being in the nature of a report to his principal by an agent, and therefore equivalent to admissions by the principal.—Meyer v. Great Western Ins. Co., 104 Cal. 381, 38 Pac. 82.

[j] A letter written by the general agent of a life insurance company to its home office, announcing the death of insured, referring to failure of insured to pay a premium, and stating, "In response to three visits of our collector, he promised to pay the renewal in a few days," is admissible in an action on the policy as a declaration of the general agent in the line of duty.—Knarston v. Manhattan Life Ins. Co., 140 Cal. 57, 73 Pac. 740.

[k] Under Civil Code, section 2295, defining an agent as one who represents another in dealing with third persons, the superintendent of a prune ranch, whose duties are to prepare the prunes for market and to manage the ranch generally, but who is neither the actual nor ostensible agent in the matter of sales, cannot bind his employer by admissions as to the condition of goods sold, notwithstanding Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 5, providing that after proof of agency the act or declaration of the agent within the scope of his agency may be given in evidence.—Peterson Bros. v. Mineral King Fruit Co., 140 Cal. 624, 74 Pac. 162.

[l] Where the president of a bank who was also a director acted as its agent in discounting certain notes, declarations by him as to the application of certain payments held admissible as against the bank.—National Bank of Commerce of San Diego v. Schirm (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 981.

unconnected with any act of agency, are inadmissible as evidence against the principal. Innis v. The Senator, 1 Cal. 459, 54 Am. Dec. 305.

[b] In an action by a servant against his master for injury caused by the negligence of a fellow-servant, a declaration by defendant's foreman, made after the alleged injury, to the effect that the culpable servant "was a careless man before that, and they knew it, and that the company ought not to have kept him as long as it did," is not admissible to prove defendant's negligence.—Beasley v. San Jose Fruit-Packing Co., 92 Cal. 388, 28 Pac. 485.

[c] Admissions by an alleged agent, relating to a past transaction, are inadmissible in evidence as against the principal, in the absence of any showing of authority in the agent to make them.—Hewes v. Germain Fruit Co., 106 Cal. 441, 39 Pac. 853.

[d] Where plaintiff was injured by the breaking of a rope on defendant's schooner, a statement made by the captain, directly after the accident, to the effect that the rope "looked pretty bad," was not admissible as a remark made by a servant or agent within the scope of his employment, since the servant had no authority to make an admission of culpability for such owners after such event.—Silveira v. Iversen, 128 Cal. 187, 60 Pac. 687.

[e] Statements made by a mining superintendent, and also by the fellow-servant of an injured miner, several minutes after the occurrence of the accident, and in response to the injured man's inquiry as to its cause, in which it is attributed to defective machinery, cannot be received as admissions to bind the defendant company.—Luman v. Golden Ancient Channel Min. Co., 140 Cal. 700, 74 Pac. 307.

[f] Where the defense in an action for cutting wood was that plaintiff agreed to pile it for measurement, but failed to do so, and defendant's foreman testified that the wood was not in condition to be measured, it was error to permit a witness called in rebuttal to testify that he had a conversation with said foreman after the suit had commenced, and that said foreman told the witness that the wood could be easily measured, since the declaration of an agent under such circumstances cannot bind his principal.—Mutter v. I. X. L. Lime Co., 42 Pac. 1068.

§ 230. —— —— To Show Existence or Terms of Contract.

[a] In an action for the specific performance of a parol contract made by an agent on behalf of his principal, declarations of such agent, a year or two afterward, with respect to its terms, are inadmissible against his principal.—Clunie v. Sacramento Lumber Co., 67 Cal. 313, 7 Pac. 708.

§ 231. Admissions by Corporate Officers or Agents.

[a] The declarations of the president of a corporation may be received in evidence to show that at the time the corporation purchased land it had actual notice of a mortgage on the same.—Christy v. Dana, 42 Cal. 174.

[b] Where the president of a mining corporation is selected on behalf of his company to point out the mining ground claimed by it, and in pointing it out states that certain ground in view is not claimed by the corporation, his declarations may be offered in evidence against the corporation.—Green v. Ophir Copper etc. Min. Co., 45 Cal. 522.

[c] Where all business relative to the lease and sale of lands is left to the secretary of a corporation, the lessor, his statements to a lessee respecting the lease and the option to buy are admissible in an action by the lessee to compel a conveyance according to the terms of the option.—Abbott v. Seventy-six Land etc. Water Co., 87 Cal. 323, 25 Pac. 693; Tyner v. Seventy-six Land etc. Co., 25 Pac. 694; Shipe v. Seventy-six Land etc. Co., 25 Pac. 694; Abbott v. Seventy-six Land etc. Co., 25 Pac. 694.

[d] In an action by a bank against a corporation for money loaned, the acts and admissions of the latter's financial managers are admissible against it, though such persons are also officers of the bank.—Pauly v. Pauly, 107 Cal. 8, 48 Am. St. Rep. 98, 40 Pac. 29.

[e] In a suit for foreclosure of a mortgage, which purported to have been given by a certain person and a corporation, statements of such person to the plaintiff, designed to convince the latter that the mortgage was regularly executed by the corporation, and would bind it, are not competent, as against the corporation, to estop it from denying the validity of the mortgage, where there was no evidence that the party making the representations was the sole owner of all the stock of the corporation, as alleged in the complaint.—Relley v. Campbell, 134 Cal. 175, 66 Pac. 220.

[f] Where, in an action against a corporation for services in selling land rendered under a written contract, the corporation's president testifies that there was no contract, and it is alleged that the president had no authority to make such contract, letters by such president to plaintiff long after the contract is alleged to have been made are admissible to rebut the president's testimony and to disprove the allegation.—Pettibone v. Lake View Town Co., 134 Cal. 227, 66 Pac. 218.

[g] Declarations of agents of corporations made in line of duty as such, to principal, are always admissible whether part of res gestae or not.—Knarston v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 140 Cal. 68, 73 Pac. 740.

§ 232. Attorneys.

[a] A depositary under code, section 1838, is not bound by the admissions of his attorney as to how the loss of the deposit occurred.—Wilson v. Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 53 Cal. 735.

[b] Defendant's attorney, to whom defendant had previously directed plaintiff, made a proposition to plaintiff regarding defendant's making a certain contract, which contract was afterward made between plaintiff and defendant. Held, that evidence as to the conversation had between plaintiff and the attorney was not objectionable on the ground that it tended to show a contract made by the attorney for defendant without latter's authority, since the proposition made in the conversation was merely preliminary to making the contract.—Woods v. Jansen, 130 Cal. 200, 62 Pac. 473.

§ 233. Husband or Wife.

[a] In an action for a homestead, the declarations of the alleged wife are competent to prove that the plaintiffs are not married. Poole v. Gerrard, 9 Cal. 593.

[b] In an action against a husband and wife, where issue is joined on the question of an abandonment of a homestead by the defendants, declarations of the husband in regard to an abandonment are admissible, as part of the res gestae, and as showing an intent to abandon.—Brennan v. Wallace, 25 Cal. 108.

[c] The admissions of a wife made in the presence of her husband, and not denied by him in a conversation relating to her separate property, are competent evidence in an action by the devisees of the husband involving her title to the property.—Ingersoll v. Truebody, 40 Cal. 603.

[d] Declarations of husband after deed of gift are admissible against wife.—Wormouth v. Johnson, 58 Cal. 621.

[e] What the wife says about the ownership of realty, in the absence of her husband, does not bind him in a suit by another to quiet title to the property.—Svetinich v. Sheean, 124 Cal. 216, 71 Am. St. Rep. 50, 56 Pac. 1028.

[f] Declarations of a wife made during her husband's life impeaching his title held not admissible against her claim to title based on his having had title.—Hoyt v. Zumwalt (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 600.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1028; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1351-1365, §§ 953-964.

§ 234. —— Statements Made After Transaction or Event.

[a] Where a husband bought land and caused a deed of gift to be made by vendor to his wife, held that his declarations, made after the execution of the deed, to the effect that the title was held for the benefit of a third person, who furnished the purchase money, were admissible.—Wormouth v. Johnson, 58 Cal. 621.

§ 235. Partners.

[a] A sued a sheriff for attaching goods claimed by him as his own, and the sheriff defended by alleging a conveyance of these goods from the defendant in the attachment to A, which was fraudulent and void as to creditors. Held, that the declarations, and acts of one M, appearing by the plaintiff's admissions to be a general partner of A, and proved to have been a party to this transfer, could be given in evidence to prove the character of the transaction.—Mamlock v. White, 20 Cal. 598.

[b] On an issue in an action against a firm as to whether an intervener owned the proceeds of a note and mortgage attached as the property of a defendant, who denied that he was a member, and which note and mortgage she claimed he had assigned to her, declarations made by the other defendants as to the partnership affairs, who composed the firm, the amount of the investments of each in the business, and the object of the member in question in disposing of the note and mortgage to intervener, were admissible. Dennis v. Kolm, 131 Cal. 91, 63 Pac. 141.

[c] After a prima facie case as to partnership is made, the admissions and conduct of the several partners, in the course of the partnership business are admissible against the others.—Dennis v. Kolm, 131 Cal. 91, 63 Pac. 141.

[d] Declarations made by one of firm of plaintiffs are admissible against the firm.—Peterson Bros. v. Mineral King Fruit Co., 140 Cal. 624, 74 Pac. 162.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 5, certain evidence as to transactions of one of the members of a firm held admissible as against the heirs of the other.—Dondero v. O'Hara (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 985.

§ 236½. Tenants in Common.

[a] Declaration of a tenant in common is admissible to show a claim of title and to rebut abandonment.—Lick v. Diaz, 37 Cal. 445.

[b] The acts and declarations of one cotenant in the presence and hearing of the other, as to their relative rights, is competent evidence against the one claiming under the other.—Estate of Bauer, 79 Cal. 304, 21 Pac. 833.

§ 237. Conspirators and Persons Acting Together.

[a] After competent evidence of conspiracy, declaration of one conspirator accompanying act in furtherance of common design, while conspiracy is rife, is competent against confederate.—Barkly v. Copeland, 86 Cal. 492, 25 Pac. 1.

[b] In action for malicious prosecution, where it appears that plaintiff was not only a member of the association of jumpers, but was actively participating in what was being done, the admission of testimony showing the acts and declarations of members and employees of the association, of the intention of the association to take possession of the land in which defendant was interested, is proper, although the declarations were made without the plaintiff's hearing.—Lacey v. Porter, 103 Cal. 597, 37 Pac. 635.

[c] Where there has been a colorable transfer of personal property, with no visible change of possession, and there is satisfactory proof of a conspiracy to defraud the creditors of the vendor, his declarations, both antecedent and subsequent to the transfer, are competent to establish the fraud.—Banning v. Marleau, 133 Cal. 485, 65 Pac. 964.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1025-1028; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1396-1407, §§ 994-1002.

§ 238. —— Necessity that Statement be Made in Pursuance of and During Pendency of Conspiracy.

[a] In an action for slander in charging plaintiff with associating with another in a theft of certain cattle, declarations made by such other after the alleged transaction was completed are inadmissible to show that plaintiff was associated with him.—Barkly v. Copeland, 25 Pac. 405, reversing (1890) 86 Cal. 483, 25 Pac. 1.

§ 239. —— Fraudulent Conveyances.

[a] Where evidence is introduced showing a collusion between vendor and purchaser to defraud the creditors of the former, the declarations of the vendor are admissible, and a fortiori his sworn statement.—Howe v. Scannell, 8 Cal. 325.

§ 240. Guardians.

[a] Where in a suit to terminate a trust created by will the defendants were minors and appeared by guardian, the minors were not bound by admissions of their guardian to their prejudice.—Kidwell v. Ketler, 146 Cal. 12, 79 Pac. 514.

—— WEIGHT AND CREDIBILITY, § 251.

§ 241. Preliminary Evidence in General.

[a] Before the declarations of an agent are admissible to bind his principal the fact of the agency must be established. Evidence of the declarations of the person claimed to be such agent are inadmissible to establish the agency.—Smith v. L. & L. & G. Ins. Co., 107 Cal. 432, 40 Pac. 540.

[b] Evidence held to establish a prima facie case of the existence of a partnership warranting admission of declarations of one of the partners as such.—Dennis v. Kolm, 131 Cal. 91, 63 Pac. 141.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1037; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1408-1422, §§ 1003-1012.

§ 242. Determination of Question of Admissibility.

[a] Whether a prima facie case as to partnership has been made, so as to justify admission of the declarations of partners, is for the court to determine in a trial before a jury.—Dennis v. Kolm, 131 Cal. 91, 63 Pac. 141.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1422-1424, §§ 1013-1018.

§ 243. Mode and Requisites of Proof of Admissions.

[a] An admission of the defendant, made in his testimony given at the preliminary examination of the plaintiffs after their arrest by him, may be proved by the evidence of anyone who heard the testimony, and need not be proved by the shorthand notes of the examination.—Williams v. Casebeer, 126 Cal. 77, 58 Pac. 380.

[b] In an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, a witness testified that he was a stenographer, and that the writing handed him was a transcript from his shorthand notes, which he took at a certain date, of defendant's testimony, and that it was correct, to the best of his recollection. The declarations of defendant contained in said transcript were then offered in evidence "as an admission in the case." Held, that the evidence, being offered, not as a deposition, but as an admission of a party to the suit, was admissible.—Macomber v. Bigelow, 126 Cal. 9, 58 Pac. 312.

[c] Where in a will contest a witness testified to a conversation between himself and testatrix, it was error to refuse to allow him to give the statements made by him, and to confine him to what was said by testatrix.—Arnold's Estate, In re, 147 Cal. 583, 82 Pac. 252.

[d] Where the stenographer who took a deposition was called to testify to deponent's statements, it was error to refuse to allow her to testify to the questions in answer to which the statements of deponent were made. Arnold's Estate, In re, 147 Cal. 583, 82 Pac. 252.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1037; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1424-1426, §§ 1019-1021.

§ 244. Explanation or Limitation.

[a] Whole conversation must be taken together, but the jury are not bound to give the same weight to all parts of it; where the declarations of a party in a conversation are given in evidence they are at liberty to consider how much, under the circumstances, is entitled to credit.—Thrall v. Smiley, 9 Cal. 529.

[b] A defendant in an action on a promissory note, the genuineness of which is denied, may testify concerning a conversation about the note between himself and another person, though no representative of the payee was present, if such person has testified about the same conversation as a witness for the payee, the plaintiff in the action.—First Nat. Bank v. Wolff, 79 Cal. 69, 21 Pac. 551, 748.

[c] Entire admission must be taken together.—Granite G. M. Co. v. Maginniss, 118 Cal. 134, 50 Pac. 269.

[d] One's plea of guilty on a prosecution for assault and battery can be received in a civil action therefor only as an admission; and, the justice of the peace before whom the prosecution was had having testified thereto for plaintiff, though as he had written it down in his docket, defendant may cross-examine him to prove the entire statement made in connection therewith, to show that it was not an unqualified admission.—Risdon v. Yates, 145 Cal. 210, 78 Pac. 641.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1426-1446, §§ 1022-1027.

§ 245. —— Pleadings.

[a] On plaintiff's cross-examination as to the value of certain mining stock, a paragraph of a complaint verified by him in another suit was admitted, because it contained an averment as to such value, and plaintiff was allowed to explain fully what he meant by the averment. On redirect examination, plaintiff's counsel offered the entire complaint, which offer was refused, though the court consented to receive any other portion of the complaint which would explain or modify the part admitted. Held no error.—Loftus v. Fischer, 113 Cal. 131, 45 Pac. 1058.

§ 246. Construction, Conclusiveness and Effect in General.

[a] The admission of the genuineness and due execution of a contract, a copy of which is annexed to an answer, by a failure to file an affidavit denying it, is an admission that the contract is what it purports on its face to be, and that the matters recited in it are true, and that it was executed and delivered by the parties who signed it, and in the capacity in which they appear to have acted. Sloan v. Diggins, 49 Cal. 38.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1042; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1447-1450, § 1028.

§ 247. —— Admissions as to Value.

[a] Where a party in an action for the use of property has made admissions as to the value of the use for which recovery is sought, such admissions will be conclusive against him unless satisfactorily explained.—Harrison v. Peabody, 34 Cal. 178.

[b] Evidence of admissions by deceased that in a settlement with one who owned property jointly with him he had allowed such person a certain sum to be paid plaintiff for services rendered by him in trying to effect a sale of the property, is insufficient to establish the value of services rendered by plaintiff for decedent himself.—Lichtenberg v. McGlynn, 105 Cal. 45, 38 Pac. 541.

§ 248. —— Judicial Admissions.

[a] A fact admitted on the hearing, and acted on by the court, cannot thereafter be denied.—Hearne v. De Young, 111 Cal. 373, 43 Pac. 1108.

§ 249. —— Affidavits.

[a] The declaration of a deceased grantor in an affidavit in an action against him by a third person, that a deed was not sham or without consideration or in fraud of creditors, was not conclusive in an action by the grantor's heir to set aside the deed because fraudulently obtained by the grantees, where the affidavit was made in the presence of the grantees, and alluded to contemporaneous writing executed by them, of which they said nothing in their testimony.—Donnelly v. Rees, 141 Cal. 56, 74 Pac. 433.

§ 250. —— Admissions Made Through Ignorance or Mistake.

[a] In an action for personal injuries resulting from the overturning of defendant's stage-coach, defendant put in evidence a writing signed by plaintiff after the accident, in which she stated that she did not blame defendant or his driver for the injury. Plaintiff testified that the paper was signed at a time when she was unable to comprehend its meaning. Held, that the statement was admissible to enable the jury to weigh plaintiff's evidence, and determine her credibility, and not in mitigation of damages.—Bush v. Barnett, 96 Cal. 202, 31 Pac. 2.

§ 251. —— Weight and Credibility.

[a] Where plaintiff's case depends entirely on oral testimony as to transactions with his deceased principal, defendant's intestate, and the testimony is such as to make direct contradictions impossible, a proper occasion does not exist for charging that plaintiff's oral admissions inconsistent with his cause of action should be received with caution by the jury, within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, subdivision 4, requiring this charge to be given on "proper occasions."—Mattingly v. Pennie, 105 Cal. 514, 45 Am. St. Rep. 87, 39 Pac. 200.

[b] Written admissions of a party before any controversy, as to what a contract was, outweigh his oral testimony in contradiction thereof, given after the controversy arose.—Moore v. Grayson, 132 Cal. 602, 64 Pac. 1074.

[c] Under the express provisions of Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, evidence of oral admissions of a party is to be viewed with caution.—Humphrey v. Pope (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 223.

§ 252. Nature and Grounds for Admission—In General.

[a] B made a deed of land to the defendant, but misdescribed the premises, and his grantee went into possession. Afterward his heirs conveyed the same land to the plaintiff. Held, that evidence of B's declaration and conduct was admissible to show the mistake alleged by the defendant.—Lestrade v. Barth, 19 Cal. 660.

[b] Identity of person making declarations, must appear to make them admissible.—White v. Moses, 21 Cal. 43.

[c] Declarations made by one not proved to be plaintiff's agent and made out of plaintiff's presence are not admissible.—Bell v. Staacke, 141 Cal. 202, 203, 74 Pac. 774.

[d] In an action for rent, conversations between plaintiff and the person who had formerly rented the premises to defendant, and between them and third persons, relative to rental thereof, are not admissible against defendant, who was not present at such conversations, and knew nothing about them.—Ambrose v. Hyde, 145 Cal. 555, 79 Pac. 64.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1146; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1482-1490, §§ 1051-1060.

§ 253. Statements Showing Intent, Motive or Nature of Act.

[a] Where plaintiff sought to enjoin the enforcement of a deficiency judgment entered by default, alleging that he had been assured by the mortgagee that no deficiency judgment would be taken, a conversation between plaintiff and another was admissible, though the mortgagee was not present, as it explained the plaintiff's failure to appear.—Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55, 65 Pac. 139.

[b] Conversations, in the absence of plaintiff, between defendant and others, as to the purpose of a deed of plaintiff's land to defendant, were incompetent. Judgment (1902) 70 Pac. 472, reversed on rehearing. Bell. v. Staacke, 141 Cal. 186, 74 Pac. 774.

of money, which came into the possession of the administrator, or of which he had knowledge, which he failed to include in his inventory, evidence of declarations made by the deceased in respect to the value of his estate, and that he had a large sum of money in his house, is not admissible against the administrator, to prove the ownership, or possession of the money.—Estate of Welch, 110 Cal. 605, 42 Pac. 1089.

§ 255. Self-serving Declarations in General.

[a] In an action by a railroad superintendent against the company to recover the value of his services as superintendent, where the company claimed that plaintiff's salary had been fixed at a stated sum, a conversation between plaintiff and directors of the company is admissible to show that he dissented from the amount of salary proposed by the directors, and did not consider his salary as fixed at such sum.—Bee v. San Francisco etc. R. Co., 46 Cal. 248.

[b] Declarations of a party to an action, in his own behalf, made in the absence of the other party, and forming no part of the res gestae, are not admissible.—Nicholson v. Tarpey, 70 Cal. 608, 12 Pac. 778.

[c] Declarations of party cannot be used in his own favor.—Hausman v. Hausling, 78 Cal. 286, 20 Pac. 570.

[d] On an issue as to the amount of wages to be paid for services rendered, testimony of a partner of defendant as to what was told him by defendant as to the amount of wages paid is inadmissible, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1832.—Gardner v. Dennison, 106 Cal. 190, 39 Pac. 526.

[e] On an issue as to whether a tenant sued in unlawful detainer gave oral notice of his intention to renew the term for another year, as provided in the lease, a communication, written by him to the lessor after the end of the first term, stating that the lessor is thereby notified, "as you have been informed," of the lessee's intention to remain is inadmissible, as being a declaration of the lessee in his own interest.—Shamp v. White, 106 Cal. 220, 39 Pac. 537.

[f] The statements of a party, made without the hearing or knowledge of his adversary, are not competent evidence in his own behalf to prove the facts stated.—Rogers v. Schulenberg, 111 Cal. 281, 43 Pac. 899.

[g] Where the issue in an action on a note is as to the execution of, and consideration for, the note, and it is shown that defendant took the money and walked away without saying anything, a statement made at the time by plaintiff, and in the presence of defendant, that he was loaning defendant the money which he was counting out to him, is admissible, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, which provides that evidence may be given of an act or declaration of another in the presence and within the observation of a party, and the conduct of the party in relation thereto.—Tibbet v. Sue, 125 Cal. 544, 58 Pac. 160.

[h] A private letter, of which plaintiff had no knowledge, was inadmissible in evidence against him as to the purpose of a deed of his land. Judgment (1902) 70 Pac. 472, reversed on rehearing.—Bell v. Staacke, 141 Cal. 186, 74 Pac. 774.

[i] The statement of a wife that land was hers was inadmissible in evidence in an action by her husband against her administrator to quiet title to the land, the declaration not being against her interest.—Bollinger v. Wright, 143 Cal. 292, 76 Pac. 1108.

[j] In an action by the first mortgagee of crops to recover the amount of his lien from a second mortgagee, who has sold them, a statement by plaintiff that it was understood that the crops should be sent to defendant subject to plaintiff's lien is competent to rebut an allegation that plaintiff has surrendered his lien.—Fette v. Lane, 37 Pac. 914.

[jk] In an action by the assignee of a note given by a corporation to its president, declarations of the president as to the amount due at the time of the transfer are no admissible against the corporation.—Love v. Anchor Raisin Vineyard Co., 45 Pac. 1044.

[k] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1845, provides that a witness can testify to those facts only which he knows of his own knowledge. Held that, in an action for breach of marriage promise, the admission of plaintiff's declarations to third parties, who were not invited to attend the wedding, and before any wedding day had been set, that plaintiff and defendant intended to marry, constituted prejudicial error.—Liebbrandt v. Sorg, 65 Pac. 318.

[l] In an action against a corporation for salary as secretary, defended on the ground that the claim therefor had been waived by special agreement, a statement prepared by a bookkeeper of defendant at plaintiff's request containing entries of amounts of salary due on the debit side of the ledger in favor of plaintiff was a self-serving declaration, whose admission was prejudicial error. Ryan v. Pacific Axle Co., 136 Cal. xx, 68 Pac. 498.

to him by the defendant in the absence of the plaintiffs. Such declarations are self-serving and inadmissible.—Williams v. Casebeer, 126 Cal. 77, 58 Pac. 380.

§ 258. —— Statements as to Intent, Motive or Nature of Act.

[a] In an action to compel defendant to convey to plaintiff an interest in a mining claim which defendant had bought under foreclosure of his lien on said claim, plaintiff's evidence was that defendant had agreed to buy an interest in the claim, and a deed of such interest had been given by plaintiff to defendant, and that the latter had tried to borrow money on it. Defendant testified that the deed was given as a further security for a debt due him, and the court found that the deed was made to enable defendant to borrow money on the mine. Letters from defendant to a third person were introduced to explain why he attempted to mortgage the claim. Held, that their admission was prejudicial error, as, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 2, a party cannot strengthen his case by his own declarations. They may be used against him, but not for him.—Hausman v. Hauslin, 78 Cal. 283, 20 Pac. 570.

[b] Where defendants authorized plaintiff to sell certain real estate for them at any time within a year, and agreed, for a valuable consideration, to pay a commission if the sale should be effected in any way during that time, testimony as to conversations between defendants as to their intentions in regard to erasing that part of the contract referring to commissions being paid if the land was sold in any way is incompetent, as hearsay, it not being shown that plaintiff was present at the time of the conversations.—Crane v. McCormick, 92 Cal. 176, 28 Pac. 222.

§ 259. —— By Third Persons in General.

[a] In an action on a contract whereby defendant agreed to take charge of plaintiff's sheep, and plaintiff was to furnish herders, who were under defendant's supervision, the declarations of one of the herders was inadmissible in defendant's favor, on account of the declarant being his servant.—Dennis v. Belt, 30 Cal. 247.

§ 260. —— By Persons Since Deceased.

[a] The declarations of a claimant of land which is in the possession of an adverse holder, made to a third party in his own favor, are inadmissible in an action brought by his heirs to recover the land.—Rice v. Cunningham, 29 Cal. 492.

[b] Declarations of one, since deceased, not against, but in support of his own interest, are not admissible in favor of those claiming rights which the declarations would maintain. Poorman v. Miller, 44 Cal. 269.

[c] The administrator of an estate, who brings an action against one claiming land adversely to the estate, to quiet the title thereto, and to obtain a conveyance thereof to the estate, cannot introduce in evidence the declarations of his intestate, made during his lifetime, to strengthen his own claim of title.—Fischer v. Bergson, 49 Cal. 294.

[d] In an action to cancel a release of mortgage, executed by plaintiff's intestate, on the ground of fraud and mistake, evidence of declarations made by such intestate after the execution of such release is inadmissible. Stephenson v. Hawkins, 67 Cal. 106, 7 Pac. 198.

[e] The self-serving declarations by the decedent, made outside of the presence of the plaintiff, that he was only the guardian of the plaintiff, are not admissible as evidence for the defendants.—Rulofson v. Billings, 140 Cal. 452, 74 Pac. 35.

[f] Declarations of decedent, not against interest, relative to a transaction with defendant, are not, in an action by her administrator, admissible in his favor.—Bedell v. Scoggins, 40 Pac. 954.

[g] In an action against an administrator to recover money alleged to have been deposited with the intestate it is incompetent to prove by intestate's clerk the contents of a lost book in which witness entered, at intestate's dictation, memoranda of amounts lost by the latter to plaintiff at poker; such memoranda being declarations in intestate's interest, the effect of which would be to avoid the debt.—Frank v. Pennie, 117 Cal. 254, 49 Pac. 208.

§ 261. Declarations Against Interest.

[a] Declaration of grantor, against interest, is admissible.—Byrne v. Reed, 75 Cal. 281, 17 Pac. 201; Burlingame v. Rowland, 77 Cal. 318, 19 Pac. 526.

[b] Though an absolute deed, intended as such, cannot be changed into a mortgage by the subsequent oral declarations of the grantee, his subsequent declarations are admissible to show that at the time the deed was made it was intended merely as security.—Harp v. Harp, 136 Cal. 421, 69 Pac. 28.

[c] In a suit to cancel a land contract, evidence that the vendee stated that he gave his assignee a duplicate of the contract when he assigned his interests therein, held inadmissible as a declaration against interest under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870. Womble v. Wilbur (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 916.

[b] In an action to enforce a trust, declarations of the alleged trustee as to the character in which she held the property are admissible in corroboration of the testimony of plaintiff's witnesses.—Hayne v. Hermann, 97 Cal. 259, 32 Pac. 171.

[c] Upon the issue of whether money deposited by a deceased married woman in her own name is separate or community property, declarations made in her will without the knowledge of her husband are not admissible. Rowe v. Hibernia Savings etc. Soc., 134 Cal. 403, 66 Pac. 569.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1166-1174; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1551-1579, §§ 1108-1120.

§ 263. —— Real Property.

[a] In ejectment, acts and declarations of defendants, claiming by adverse possession, respecting his claim, at any time while in possession, before commencement of the action, whether within or after five years after the commencement of his possession, are admissible, as tending to show the character in which he claimed during the whole time. Cannon v. Stockmon, 36 Cal. 535, 95 Am. Dec. 205.

[b] The declarations of a party while in possession of land, stating the nature, character, or extent of the possession which he claims, and the person under whom he holds, may be given in evidence as a part of the res gestae, accompanying the act of possession and explanatory of it.—Phelps v. McGloan, 42 Cal. 298.

[c] On the trial of an action to have certain premises declared a public street the relator offered to prove certain declarations by predecessors in title of the defendant (before any conveyance by them) to the effect that the premises in controversy were a public street, but the evidence was excluded by the court. Held, the evidence was admissible.—People ex rel. Harris v. Blake, 60 Cal. 497.

[d] Declarations of one in actual possession of land, showing that he claims to be sole owner, are admissible on an issue of adverse possession, as tending to show the character of the possession.—Stockton Sav. Bank v. Staples, 98 Cal. 189, 32 Pac. 936.

[e] Where, in an action to recover real estate between parties claiming under different deeds from a common source, plaintiff claimed that defendants' claim was, in legal effect, a mere mortgage to secure a debt, declarations made by the grantor of such deed at the time of the transaction and subsequent thereto were admissible on such issue. Bell v. Pleasant, 145 Cal. 410, 78 Pac. 957.

§ 264. Declarations as to Boundaries.

[a] Evidence of the declarations of an owner of land, not in possession, is not admissible to prove its boundary line.—Sneed v. Osborn, 25 Cal. 619.

[b] In ejectment, involving the boundary of lands of coterminus owners, it is error to exclude the declarations of the common grantor, made while the owner of both tracts, as to the location of the line between them. Sharp v. Blankenship, 79 Cal. 411, 21 Pac. 842.

[c] Declarations of a grantor as to the boundaries of the land are not admissible in favor of the grantee as against persons not claiming under the grantor.—Taylor v. McConigle, 120 Cal. 123, 52 Pac. 159.

[d] Declarations made by a party to a boundary agreement, subsequent thereto, that the location was subject to future correction, were not against his interest, and, not being shown to have been uttered in the presence of the other party or his successors in title, were properly excluded in an action concerning the boundary.—Thaxter v. Inglis, 121 Cal. 593, 54 Pac. 86.

[e] Statements of a former owner of land, and his acts in putting in stakes on an alleged boundary line, are unavailing to establish the boundary, where the adjoining owner was not present, nor had any knowledge of such acts.—Borchard v. Eastwood, 133 Cal. xix, 65 Pac. 1047.

[f] In an action between a lessee and the owner of adjoining land, involving boundary, declarations of the lessor in his own favor are not admissible for the lessee.—Western Union Oil Co. v. Newlove, 145 Cal. 772, 79 Pac. 542.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Proof of boundaries by declarations and other hearsay testimony: 60 Am. Rep. 589, note.

Declarations admissible to prove boundaries: 36 Am. Rep. 749, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 1172, 1236; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1580-1595, §§ 1121-1134.

§ 265. —— By Persons Since Deceased.

[a] Hearsay from qualified and disinterested persons since deceased is admissible upon questions of ancient boundary, public or private.—Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 279; Comwell v. Culver, 16 Cal. 423.

[b] The rule that hearsay evidence as to questions of ancient boundaries is admissible applied, so as to render admissible in one action the deposition of a deceased surveyor who surveyed the land and made a map thereof, which deposition was taken in another action, and contained the surveyor's declarations as to the boundaries of the land. Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 275.

§ 266. Pedigree and Relationship—In General.

[a] A case where age is the issue is not a case of pedigree within Code of Civil Procedure, part 4, section 13, allowing entries in family Bibles as evidence of pedigree. People v. Mayne, 118 Cal. 516, 62 Am. St. Rep. 256, 50 Pac. 654.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1852, providing that the declaration of a member of a family who is a decedent is admissible as evidence of common reputation in cases where, on questions of pedigree, such reputation is admissible, where it was shown that a child was a member of a decedent's family, the declarations of the decedent were admissible to show that he was the father of such child.—Heaton's Estate, In re, 135 Cal. 385, 67 Pac. 321.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 11, providing that common reputation existing previous to the controversy is admissible in cases of pedigree, construed in connection with section 1852, providing that the declaration, act, or omissions of a member of a family who is dead or out of the jurisdiction is admissible as evidence of common reputation in cases where, on questions of pedigree, such reputation is admissible, does not broaden the common-law rule upon the admissibility of common reputation in matters of pedigree, and hence makes admissible only the common reputation in the family of the party whose pedigree is in controversy. Heaton's Estate, In re, 135 Cal. 385, 67 Pac. 321.

[d] Declarations of a deceased person, bound by a contract of adoption providing that on his death he should give his property to the adopted child, made after the execution of the contract, to the effect that deceased was merely the guardian of the child, are not admissible as tending to prove relationship between the deceased and the child. Rulofson v. Billings, 140 Cal. 452, 74 Pac. 35.

§ 266½. Age.

[a] A person may testify to his age, though his knowledge is derived from statements of his parents or from family reputation.—People v. Ratz, 115 Cal. 132, 46 Pac. 915.

§ 267. Entry in Family Bible as Evidence of Age.

[a] The family Bible record is admissible in evidence to show a child's age, when it is proved that the book is the family Bible and the handwriting or authorship of the entries need not be proved.—People v. Ratz, 115 Cal. 132, 46 Pac. 915.

[ab] An entry in a family Bible, made by a mother, is not competent evidence to prove the age of her child, when the mother is living, in view of Code of Civil Procedure, part 4, section 4, making the written declaration of a deceased person admissible to prove the date of birth.—People v. Mayne, 118 Cal. 516, 62 Am. St. Rep. 256, 50 Pac. 654.

[b] On the question of age, record in family Bible is admissible.—People v. Slater, 119 Cal. 620, 51 Pac. 957.

§ 268. Mode and Form of Declaration.

[a] Declarations made by the testator in his will are competent evidence, after his death, tending to prove his marriage and the legitimacy of his children, where the wife and children are devisees, and, in the absence of contradictory evidence, prove such marriage and legitimacy.—Pearson v. Pearson, 46 Cal. 609.

[b] Testator's will was competent evidence to show his family relationship.—Russell v. Langford, 135 Cal. 356, 67 Pac. 331.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cyc. 1234; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1616, 1617, § 1154.

§ 269. Public Boundaries.

[a] The location of the boundary line between two counties, being a matter of common interest, may be proved by hearsay evidence.—People v. Velarde, 59 Cal. 457.

§ 270. —— General Reputation.

[a] The boundary line of a county cannot be proved by evidence showing where it was reputed to run by persons living near, unless it is an ancient boundary, or cannot be proved except by parol.—Lay v. Neville, 25 Cal. 545.

§ 271. —— Knowledge as to Subject Matter and Interest of Declarant Therein.

[a] Where a question of boundaries is involved, the declarations of a person deceased, who was in a situation to be acquainted with the matter and was free from interest therein, are admissible, whether the boundary was of general or public interest, or one between the estates of private proprietors.—Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 275.

[b] A party offering in evidence reputation to prove an ancient boundary line of a county must confine his proof to declarations of persons having competent knowledge thereof, and who are since deceased.—Lay v. Neville, 25 Cal. 545.

C. PROOF AND EFFECT.

§ 272. In General.

[a] A party calling a witness cannot get the naked declarations of the witness before the jury as independent evidence.—Kennedy, Estate of, 104 Cal. 429, 38 Pac. 93.

[b] The marriage certificate and the record of the baptism of her two sons were sufficient evidence of the relationship between testator and plaintiff's husband to admit in evidence the declarations of the latter that he was the brother of the testator.—Woolsey v. Williams, 128 Cal. 552, 61 Pac. 670.

[c] Where, in an action to quiet title to Monterey pueblo lands conveyed by trustees of the city under a deed dated February 8, 1859, two of the trustees were dead and the third was mentally and physically incapacitated, evidence that the persons who signed the deed as such trustees were commonly reputed to be the trustees of the city at the time was admissible.—City of Monterey v. Jacks, 139 Cal. 542, 73 Pac. 436.

§ 273. Evidence Preliminary to Admission.

[a] The party offering the declarations of third persons must show their admissibility, by showing the time and circumstances under which they were made; and unless this appears in the record the appellate court will presume they were properly excluded.—Kilburn v. Ritchie, 2 Cal. 145, 56 Am. Dec. 326.

[b] A party must be proved to have been in possession before his declarations made at the time are admissible as part of the res gestae, and as explanatory of the possession. Ellis v. Janes, 10 Cal. 456.

§ 274. In General.

[a] Hearsay evidence is incompetent.—Morris v. Lachman, 68 Cal. 112, 8 Pac. 799.

[b] Hearsay evidence is properly stricken out.—Morris v. Lachman, 68 Cal. 112, 8 Pac. 799.

[c] No weaker kind of testimony can be produced than the unsupported testimony of a single person, as to a conversation between himself and a deceased person.—Mattingly v. Pennie, 105 Cal. 514, 45 Am. St. Rep. 87, 39 Pac. 200.

§ 275. What Constitutes Hearsay.

[a] In an action for an undivided interest in land alleged to have been purchased on joint account of plaintiff and defendant, and partly with money borrowed by plaintiff's wife and handed to her by defendant, the statements of plaintiff's wife to a third person to the effect that she was borrowing money to pay defendant were mere hearsay. Bornheimer v. Baldwin, 42 Cal. 27.

[b] On the trial of an action in which the plaintiff sues two defendants as partners, and one of them denies the partnership, the plaintiff cannot, for the purpose of proving the partnership, introduce in evidence affidavits of the defendant who admits the partnership, and of other persons made for the purpose of dissolving an attachment in another action between the two defendants, it not appearing but what the persons who made the affidavits were living and within the jurisdiction of the court, and competent witnesses.—Etchemende v. Stearns, 44 Cal. 582.

[b] Declarations made to a witness by a third person, which tend to discredit the testimony of an adverse witness, are hearsay and inadmissible.—Spottiswood v. Weir, 66 Cal. 525, 6 Pac. 381.

[c] What witness heard that defendant said is hearsay.—Morris v. Lachman, 68 Cal. 112, 8 Pac. 799.

[d] In an action by a wife against a judgment creditor of her husband to obtain a judgment decreeing her to be the owner of land bid in by the judgment creditor at sheriff's sale, evidence of a witness as to declarations made to him by the wife as to her ownership of such land was properly refused, where it was not offered for the purpose of showing defendant's knowledge of such declarations.—Riley v. Martinelli, 97 Cal. 575, 33 Am. St. Rep. 209, 32 Pac. 579, 21 L. R. A. 33.

[e] In an action upon a policy of insurance, brought by the beneficiaries, after the death of the insured person, any declarations of the deceased, not made at the time of procuring the policy, or as part of the res gestae, are hearsay and incompetent evidence.—Yore v. Booth, 110 Cal. 238, 52 Am. St. Rep. 81, 42 Pac. 808.

[f] Testimony that a third person would not have purchased certain lands unless plaintiff's predecessor made certain representations as to his right to waters thereon is hearsay and inadmissible.—Williams v. Harter, 121 Cal. 47, 53 Pac. 405.

[g] Evidence of statements as to whether a deed to a wife was intended as her separate property, made out of the presence of the husband, is inadmissible against him.—Lewis v. Burns, 122 Cal. 358, 55 Pac. 132.

[h] Where a witness, asked to state how a conversation between himself and one F. began, and who spoke first, etc., answered that he could not say who spoke first, but the matter came up while they were discussing circumstances attending a request by F.'s father to pay a certain sum to plaintiff's intestate, at which the witness was not present, and that he then incidentally asked her if she had paid such sum, the granting of a motion to strike out evidence of the event narrated, as hearsay, was proper.—Cauhape v. Security Sav. Bank, 127 Cal. 197, 59 Pac. 589.

[i] In a proceeding for the probate of a will by which testatrix left all her property to her attending physician, evidence as to an order a witness stated she knew such physician had left regarding admission of visitors to see testatrix was properly stricken out as hearsay, where she testified that she could not say positively that she heard the physician give any orders on the subject, and did not remember receiving any orders concerning testatrix from anyone.—Wickes' Estate, In re, 139 Cal. 195, 72 Pac. 902.

[j] Where plaintiff's testator sold a certain mining claim sued for, and the vendee assigned his contract to the defendant, a mining corporation, its evidence that during the negotiations the vendee reported to the corporation representations made by testator's agent to him, touching the character of the mine, was inadmissible as hearsay.—Williams v. Long, 139 Cal. 186, 72 Pac. 911.

[jk] The report of a grand jury as to the unsafe condition of a theater is hearsay, and not admissible in an action to rescind a lease of the theater.—Oppenheimer v. Clunie, 142 Cal. 313, 75 Pac. 899.

[k] In an action by the pledgor of water stock to recover damages caused by the act of the pledgee in directing the water company to turn off the water, evidence of certain threats made against plaintiff, not brought home to defendant, held incompetent.—Mabb v. Stewart, 147 Cal. 413, 81 Pac. 1073.

[l] Declarations of maker to indorser of note are hearsay and inadmissible in action on note.—Meyer v. Foster, 147 Cal. 166, 81 Pac. 402.

[m] Conversation between mortgagor and purchaser, in the absence of mortgagee, held not competent evidence against the mortgagee.—Mabb v. Stewart, 147 Cal. 413, 81 Pac. 1073.

[n] Plaintiff's testimony that, in answer to his inquiry at the bank for a check which he wished to use as evidence, the cashier told him that he did not think plaintiff could get it, was not hearsay.—Sanborn v. Cunningham, 33 Pac. 894.

[o] In an action for alienation of affections, certain testimony held hearsay.—Humphrey v. Pope (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 223.

[p] On an issue of insanity, a statement made by witness to her daughter held inadmissible as hearsay.—Dolbeer's Estate (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695; Schander v. Gray (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695.

§ 276. —— Statements Through Interpreters.

[a] Statements made by either party to an interview through an interpreter are not objectionable as hearsay.—Kelly v. Ning Yung Benev. Assn. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 321.

§ 277. —— Writings.

[a] Where a deed was given of a tract of land, reserving a certain portion which had been conveyed to a third party, evidence of the declaration of the grantor and grantee of such portion that a second deed given by the grantor to the grantee of the same premises, but subsequent to the conveyance of a tract, was given in lieu of the first deed, was inadmissible, as being mere hearsay, the declarants not being parties in interest.—Poorman v. Miller, 44 Cal. 269.

[b] In an action by a married woman to recover property as belonging to her, the assessment roll of the county, showing that no separate property has been assessed to her, and that part of the property described in the complaint was assessed to her husband as his own, is inadmissible to prove property in her husband, unless it is shown that she gave in the property as that of her husband, or had some knowledge that it was so assessed.—Shumway v. Leakey, 67 Cal. 458, 8 Pac. 12.

[c] Letter of recommendation is inadmissible to prove good character.—Jones v. Duchow, 87 Cal. 113, 23 Pac. 371, 25 Pac. 256.

[f] Where fact sought to be established is, that certain words were spoken, without reference to the truth or falsity of the words, whether by a party to the action as an admission of fact, or to him as a notice, or under such circumstances as to require action or reply from him, the testimony of any person who heard the statement is original evidence, and not hearsay.—Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279, 30 Pac. 529.

[g] In an action by an attorney to recover fees, conversations between defendant and another attorney, who was associated with plaintiff in the case in which the services were rendered, are inadmissible against plaintiff, such conversations having taken place in the absence of and without the knowledge of plaintiff.—Chapman v. Neary, 115 Cal. 79, 46 Pac. 867.

[h] Declarations of a witness out of court, contradicting his testimony, are admissible only for the purpose of impeachment, and not to prove the truth of the facts stated in said declarations.—Thiele v. Newman, 116 Cal. 571, 48 Pac. 713.

[i] The verdict of the coroner's jury is not admissible to prove that the death of the plaintiff's testator was caused by the negligence of the defendant. The verdict could not bind the defendant, who was not a party to it, and upon the question of negligence the opinion of the coroner's jury was inadmissible hearsay.—Rowe v. Such, 134 Cal. 573, 66 Pac. 862, 67 Pac. 760.

§ 279. Evidence Founded on Hearsay.

[a] The court properly ruled out the following question: "Do you know what the general belief was with reference to those mines, as to whether they were abandoned or not?"—Phenix etc. Co. v. Lawrence, 55 Cal. 143.

[b] On the question of the insanity of the testator a witness was asked as to whether the testator was ever treated for softening of the brain, and replied: "I have no means of knowing; he had every indication, so others said." Held, that the part of the answer as to what others said should have been stricken out as hearsay.—Sexton v. Sexton, 56 Cal. 426.

[c] The testimony of a witness as to her age is admissible, though her knowledge is derived from statements by her family, being considered as declarations of members of the family.—Morrell v. Morgan, 65 Cal. 575, 4 Pac. 580.

[d] A person who can neither read nor write cannot testify to the contents of a lost instrument, as his evidence is necessarily hearsay.—Russell v. Brosseau, 65 Cal. 605, 4 Pac. 643.

[e] Where witness sent another person on an errand, statements by such person to witness as to the result of such errand are hearsay and inadmissible.—More's Estate, In re, 121 Cal. 609, 54 Pac. 97.

[f] Where, in partition, a witness for defendant is not a party to the suit, and it is not claimed that there was any lien of record in his favor, his testimony that the conveyance to defendant was intended as a mortgage from his grantor to witness is hearsay and inadmissible.—Harrington v. Goldsmith, 136 Cal. 168, 68 Pac. 594.

[g] Where a witness testified that the death of the insured made quite a sensation, owing to the question whether it was murder or suicide, such evidence was hearsay, and incompetent.—Jenkin v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California, 131 Cal. 121, 63 Pac. 180.

[h] Any recital of contents of medical books is inadmissible as hearsay.—Baily v. Kreutzmann, 141 Cal. 522, 75 Pac. 104.

[i] Testimony as to the market price of fruit is not incompetent because witness has derived his knowledge from the information of others.—Betts v. Southern California Fruit Exch., 144 Cal. 402, 77 Pac. 993.

See 16 Cyc. 1213; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1690-1711, §§ 1201-1229.

§ 280. —— As to Reputation.

[a] Hearsay evidence as to the general reputation of a person for sobriety is not admissible.—Stevens v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 35 Pac. 165.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1692-1700, §§ 1203-1213.

§ 281. Value Shown by Offers to Purchase.

[a] In an action to recover damages for land taken by a railroad company under the right of eminent domain, evidence as to offers made for the purchase of the land is admissible to prove its value; the weight of such evidence, and the bona fides of the offers being for the jury.—Muller v. Southern Pac. B. Ry. Co., 83 Cal. 240, 23 Pac. 265.

[b] Evidence of an offer made for land is inadmissible to show its value.—City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1700-1703, §§ 1214-1217.

§ 282. Repute as to Facts.

[a] Ownership cannot be proved by reputation.—Berniaud v. Beecher, 76 Cal. 394, 18 Pac. 398.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 5 Cyc. 956, 957; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1704-1711, §§ 1218-1229.

§ 283. Laws in General.

[a] The volume of statutes continued in force, published by the code commissioners, has not received the legislative sanction, and is not, therefore, authority.—Needham v. Thresher, 49 Cal. 392.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 298; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1714-1724, §§ 1232-1236.

§ 284. Judicial Acts and Records.

[a] A paper which purports to be the opinion of the judge in a former action between the same parties, but is not signed by the judge, or authenticated in any way, is not admissible in evidence in connection with the judgment-roll in that action.—Wixson v. Devine, 67 Cal. 341, 7 Pac. 776.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Stenographers' notes as evidence, and the right to read them to the jury: 81 Am. St. Rep. 358, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 299-305; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1724-1738, §§ 1237-1246.

§ 285. —— Matters Included in Record in General.

[a] When all the necessary papers to constitute the judgment-roll in a foreclosure action existed, but were never attached together in the form of a roll, held, that they were admissible in evidence in support of a title to property acquired under a sale thereof as directed by the judgment therein.—Sharp v. Lumley, 34 Cal. 611.

[b] Judgment-roll is admissible to prove status of parties established by it.—Lucas v. Richardson, 68 Cal. 621, 622, 10 Pac. 183.

[c] Where a judgment-roll offered in evidence contains two judgments, the last in point of time will be treated as the true and final judgment, and the prior judgment will not be considered as forming part of the roll so as to affect its admissibility.—Colton Land etc. Co. v. Swartz, 99 Cal. 278, 33 Pac. 878.

[d] Judgment-book is judicial record and competent evidence of matters considered and passed upon by court.—Simmons v. Threshour, 118 Cal. 101, 50 Pac. 312.

[e] Entry in judgment-book of a judgment reciting facts showing that the court had jurisdiction is admissible in evidence, though the judgment-roll cannot be found.—Simmons v. Threshour, 118 Cal. 100, 50 Pac. 312.

[f] Defendant was liable for a part of the necessary expenses of maintaining and keeping an irrigation canal in repair. Plaintiff was tenant in possession, and as part of the expenses charged the expense of defending suits brought to restrain him from making changes in the canal. Held, that the judgment-rolls in these suits were admissible to show whether or not their defense was necessary, since the matter in issue could not be determined by the complaint alone.—Rogers v. Riverside Land etc. Co., 132 Cal. 9, 64 Pac. 95.

§ 286. —— Pleadings.

[a] After amendment original pleading is no longer admissible in evidence.—Osment v. McElrath, 68 Cal. 470, 58 Am. Rep. 17, 9 Pac. 731; Pfister v. Wade, 69 Cal. 138, 139, 10 Pac. 369.

[ab] Date of filing original pleading may be proved by it, though superseded by amendment.—Pfister v. Wade, 69 Cal. 139, 10 Pac. 369.

[b] Whether pleading signed by attorney is admissible without first proving authority of attorney is not clearly decided.—Coward v. Clanton, 79 Cal. 29, 21 Pac. 359.

[c] Statements of fact contained in superseded pleading are admissible the same as statements in any other document.—O'Connor's Estate, 118 Cal. 71, 50 Pac. 4.

§ 287. —— Records of Justices of the Peace.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 911, 912, a justice's docket containing a minute of a judgment is sufficient proof of the judgment to justify the action of the constable in taking property under execution thereon, where such docket is introduced in an action on the constable's bond for damages for the seizure.—Beardsley v. Frame, 85 Cal. 134, 24 Pac. 721.

§ 288. —— Records in Probate Proceedings.

[a] The record of a probate court admitting a will to probate is admissible as evidence to show the death of the testator, if it contains all the necessary recitals to show that the court acquired jurisdiction, but not if it shows that there were minor heirs living in the county, who were not served with citations to appear, for then the court does not acquire jurisdiction.—Randolph v. Baywe, 44 Cal. 366.

§ 289. Official Records and Reports.

[a] Under act of 1880, providing that counties may dispense with duplicate assessment-rolls, the statute which makes duplicate rolls prima facie evidence applies to the original rolls, and makes them admissible as such.—Lake Co. v. Sulphur Bank Quicksilver Co., 66 Cal. 17, 4 Pac. 876.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Inquests and the evidence given thereat, admissibility of as evidence: 95 Am. St. Rep. 763, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 306-316; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1738-1864, §§ 1247-1265.

§ 290. —— Official Maps.

[a] Map made by county surveyor, with protractions by his deputy, is admissible when both officers testify to correctness of protractions.—Gates v. Kieff, 7 Cal. 124.

§ 291. —— Municipal Records.

[a] Records of municipal board may be proved though not officially signed. Signatures only make records evidence without further proof.—People v. Eureka Lake etc. Canal Co., 48 Cal. 143.

§ 292. —— Records not Required by Law to be Kept.

[a] Book of accounts kept in office of alcalde is admissible in evidence as a register of the acts of that officer belonging to the office, though the law does not require such a record to be kept.—Kyburg v. Perkins, 6 Cal. 674.

[b] To entitle book to character of official register, it is not necessary that it be required by an express statute to be kept, nor that the nature of the office should render the book indispensable. It is sufficient that it is directed by the proper officer to be kept.—Kyburg v. Perkins, 6 Cal. 674.

[c] Entries in a book kept by the sheriff in the usual course of his business, though not required by law, of a memorandum of his acts with reference to the levy of an attachment, of facts outside the information contained in the writs and returns, were admissible as entries in books of original entry.—Hesser v. Rowley, 139 Cal. 410, 73 Pac. 156.

§ 293. —— Form and Authenticity.

[a] The statute requiring the chairman and clerk of a board of supervisors to sign the record of its proceedings does not invalidate such record as proof of the action of the board, if the clerk and chairman fail to sign, but has the effect merely of putting the party who desires to prove the official action of the board to some additional trouble in establishing the handwriting of the entries, their contemporaneous character, and the official custody from which the book was produced.—People v. Eureka Lake & Y. Canal Co., 48 Cal. 143.

§ 294. Grants and Patents for Land and Proceedings in Land Office.

[a] A patent from a state of lands sold as swamp or overflowed lands is not prima facie evidence, as against a claimant under the government, that such lands are swamp and overflowed.—Keeran v. Allen, 33 Cal. 542.

[b] A patent of the United States for the lands of a pueblo, confirmed under the act to settle private land claims in California, is issued in pursuance of authority conferred by said act, and is admissible in evidence.—Canfield v. Thompson, 49 Cal. 210.

[c] A patent for land, issued by the United States, may be proved by producing from the recorder's office the book in which it is recorded, without proof of loss of the original. Vance v. Kohlberg, 50 Cal. 346.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 313; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1772-1782, §§ 1273-1278.

§ 295. —— Surveys and Maps.

[a] On trial of an issue between a person claiming under the state as a grantee of swamp lands, and one claiming the same lands by pre-emption, the plat of the survey by the United States is admissible in evidence to show the line of the legal subdivision, but not to show that the lands in question are swamp and overflowed.—Richardson v. Forrest, 29 Cal. 317.

[b] In a suit of ejectment between a plaintiff claiming the land as swamp and overflowed, purchased by him from the state, and a defendant claiming it under the United States as dry land, the township plats from the land office are admissible in evidence on behalf of the plaintiff, as tending to prove that the land had been surveyed, and that the title had vested in the state under act of Congress of July 23, 1866.—Thompson v. Thornton, 50 Cal. 142.

§ 296. —— Authority of Surveyor.

[a] Survey or map of United States surveyor of grant is inadmissible as evidence to establish boundaries, without proof of the orders or authority under which he acted.—Rose v. Davis, 11 Cal. 133.

§ 297. —— Certificates of Officers.

[a] A certificate issued by a register of the land office, which was unauthorized by statute or by regulation of the land department, is inadmissible in an action involving title to land.—Hastings v. Devlin, 40 Cal. 358.

[b] In a suit to recover possession of certain land, to prove that it had been listed to the state, the plaintiff introduced the certificate of the register of the United States land office showing that as a fact. Held that, as there was no such certificate known to the law, it was improperly admitted.—Murphy v. Sumner, 74 Cal. 316, 16 Pac. 3.

§ 298. Records of Conveyances and Other Private Writings.

[a] Wherever acts of public officers are authenticated by their records the records are evidence of the acts.—Gregory v. McPherson, 13 Cal. 562.

[b] Records of Mexican government are original evidence of the grant, and exemplifications of such records are admissible.—Gregory v. McPherson, 13 Cal. 562.

[c] Book A of original grants, in custody of recorder of San Francisco, is admissible in evidence when introduced to prove that other grants were made than those found in "Blotter B."—Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

[d] Records are not admissible to prove execution and contents of instruments unless absence of originals is explained and accounted for.—Brown v. Griffith, 70 Cal. 16, 11 Pac. 500.

[e] Entries in great register of county are inadmissible for any purpose.—Crozier, In re, 74 Cal. 182, 15 Pac. 618.

[f] In a suit to abate an obstruction on an alleged public road, a paper relating to the laying out of the road, and addressed to the supervisors, is inadmissible in evidence, where it does not appear to be a public record, but merely a written statement not under oath, and does not show that defendant was one of the parties living on such proposed road. Shepherd v. Turner, 129 Cal. 530, 62 Pac. 106.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 314-316; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1782-1787, §§ 1279-1282.

§ 299. —— Instruments Improperly Admitted to Record.

[a] A power of attorney not affecting real estate is not to be recorded, and therefore the record of it is no proof of its execution. Stevens v. Irwin, 12 Cal. 306.

[b] No law authorizes a recorder or clerk of a county to record a copy of a deed in the Spanish language so as to make it evidence, without further proof.—Wilson v. Corbier, 13 Cal. 166.

§ 301. —— Sufficiency and Admissibility of Original.

[a] A duly certified copy of a Mexican grant from the United States surveyor general's office is admissible in evidence, against the objection that the absence of the original is not accounted for, but is admissible only when the original itself would be.—Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544.

§ 302. Official Documents and Records in General.

[a] Where reliance is placed not upon production of certified copy of grant under the statute of 1857, but on proof aliunde of the copy; and where the original, as a document in the custody of a public officer, cannot be taken from his office, proof of that fact must be made preliminary to the introduction of the copy.—Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87.

[b] Under the act of 1857 a copy of a Mexican grant certified by the United States surveyor general to be a true and accurate copy of the grant on file in his office, is admissible in evidence "with the like effect as the original," without proof that the original could not be produced.—Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87.

[c] Such certified copies are admissible in evidence whenever the originals, if produced, would be admissible, the object of the statute being to remove objections to the copies on the ground that they are secondary evidence.—Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87.

[d] Where it is proven that the signatures of the governor and secretary of the department of California to a grant, at the time of its date, are genuine, then a copy duly certified under the act of 1857 is admissible in evidence.—Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87.

[e] Copy of letter from register of state land office to the county recorder, written in pursuance of section 46 of the act of March 28, 1868, and certified by the county recorder, is admissible in evidence.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

[f] Copy of petition for formation of swamp land district, certified by the clerk of the board of supervisors, and a copy of the by-laws, certified by the county recorder, are admissible in evidence.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

[g] A copy of the United States census returns, or any part thereof, certified to by the superintendent of the census, is admissible in evidence to show the results of the census.—People v. Williams, 64 Cal. 87, 27 Pac. 939.

[h] Under section 18 of the act of April 4, 1864, the records of a street assessment kept by the marshal of the city of Oakland, and signed by him, have the same force and effect as other public records, and copies therefrom duly certified are admissible in evidence with the same effect as the originals.—Alameda Macadamizing Co. v. Williams, 70 Cal. 534, 12 Pac. 530.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 357-359; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1795-1815, §§ 1289-1301.

§ 303. —— Military Records.

[a] A copy of a copy of a muster-roll of United States soldiers is not admissible in evidence to prove a man to be a soldier.—People ex rel. Orman v. Riley, 15 Cal. 48.

§ 304. —— Probate Court Records.

[a] A certified copy of a record of the probate court, consisting of a copy of a will, testimony of the subscribing witnesses, petition for admission to probate, notice, and order of hearing, and admission to probate, is admissible in evidence to prove the will, though letters may not have issued or executor been duly qualified.—Larco v. Casanueva, 30 Cal. 560.

§ 305. Public Grants and Records of Land Office.

[a] A certified copy of the affidavit and claim under the possessory act of this state is admissible in evidence upon proof by the party offering it that he never had the original in his possession, but has made search for it and is unable to find it.—Roberts v. Unger, 30 Cal. 676.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 330; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1816-1832, §§ 1302-1314.

§ 306. —— Certificates.

[a] Certified copies of grants made by surveyor general of United States are inadmissible in evidence, unless the absence of the originals is accounted for.—Hensley v. Tarpey, 7 Cal. 288.

§ 307. —— Maps and Surveys.

[a] A copy of a map on file in the office of the register of the land office, and certified by him, is admissible.—Goodwin v. McCabe, 75 Cal. 584, 17 Pac. 705.

§ 308. —— Necessity and Sufficiency of Certificate and Attestation.

[a] The surveyor general's certificate that a copy of a decree of confirmation by the United States board of land commissioners is a correct copy thereof, "as the same is on file," etc., is sufficient to admit the copy in evidence in a suit in ejectment.—Young v. Emerson, 18 Cal. 416.

§ 309. Records of Conveyances and Other Private Writings.

[a] Act of March, 1851, section 21, concerning county recorders, applies as much to

copies of record of alcaldes as of records made under Act of 1851, and renders certified copies of alcaldes' records admissible in all cases where certified copies of the recorder's own records would be admissible, upon proof of inability to produce the original.—Touchard v. Keyes, 21 Cal. 202.

[b] A copy of a woman's recorded declaration as a sole trader, certified by the recorder, is inadmissible as primary evidence of either the existence or contents of an original, although perhaps admissible for the purpose of showing that a declaration had been recorded.—Reading v. Mullen, 31 Cal. 104.

[c] Under act of 1851 (Stats. 1851, p. 204), providing for the admission in evidence of transcripts from the books of the recorder's offices, certified copies of instruments found in the books of records of deeds, etc., kept by alcaldes, and which have been transferred to the custody of county recorders, are admissible in evidence under the same circumstances as are certified copies of records made by the recorders themselves.—Garwood v. Hastings, 38 Cal. 216.

[cd] Section 1951, Code of Civil Procedure, determines under what circumstances and upon what proof certified copy of record of private writing, affecting land, is admissible. Brown v. Griffith, 70 Cal. 16, 11 Pac. 500.

[d] Under sections 1919 and 1951 of the Code of Civil Procedure it is not necessary to prove the loss of an original patent before an exemplified copy thereof can be produced in evidence.—Eltzroth v. Ryan, 89 Cal. 135, 26 Pac. 647.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1951, allowing the introduction of original records of instruments affecting real property without further proof, official county records of a release may be received in evidence without accounting for the original.—Adams v. Hopkins, 144 Cal. 19, 77 Pac. 712.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 330-336, 357, 358; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1832-1861, §§ 1315-1330.

§ 310. —— Deeds and Contracts of Sale in General.

[a] Copies of recorded deeds are not admissible in evidence without first accounting for the absence of the originals.—Macy v. Goodwin, 6 Cal. 579; Mayo v. Mazeaux, 38 Cal. 442; Marriner v. Dennison, 78 Cal. 202, 20 Pac. 386.

[b] Affidavit by party to suit, that original deed "is not in his possession, or under his control," is sufficient to admit in evidence a certified copy from the recorder's office, the deed having been properly acknowledged and recorded, and the grantee being a third person.—Skinker v. Flohr, 13 Cal. 638.

[c] A certified copy of the record of a deed is admissible in evidence, where the party offering it proves that he never had control of the original deed, and that it was not then in his power or control.—Hurlbutt v. Butenop, 27 Cal. 50.

[d] Copies of the records of deeds, certified by the recorder, are admissible in evidence without accounting for the absence of the originals.—Canfield v. Thompson, 49 Cal. 211; Gethin v. Walker, 59 Cal. 502.

[e] The record of a deed could not properly be received in an action tried in 1888 without the preliminary proof then required by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1951, which provided that a certified copy of the record of an instrument affecting real estate, duly acknowledged, may be read in evidence with like effect, as the original, on proof by affidavit or otherwise that the original is not in the possession or under the control of the party producing the certified copy; the preliminary proof having been dispensed with by an amendment of section 1951 in 1889.—Grant v. Oliver, 91 Cal. 158, 27 Pac. 596, 861.

[f] Since a provision for the assumption of the mortgage debt by the vendees is entitled to record with the rest of the deed, a certified copy of the record is evidence of such assumption.—Weaver v. McKay, 108 Cal. 546, 41 Pac. 450.

§ 311. —— Powers of Attorney.

[a] A certified copy of the record of a power of attorney, entitled to be recorded, is admissible in evidence to establish the same.—Jones v. Marks, 47 Cal. 242.

§ 312. —— Articles of Incorporation.

[a] Certified copies from the office of the Secretary of State of the articles consolidating two or more railroads are admissible in evidence to prove such consolidation. It is not necessary to produce the original articles which are filed in the office of the Secretary of State.—Vance v. Kohlberg, 50 Cal. 346.

§ 313. —— Sufficiency of Instrument in General.

[a] A certified copy of a deed which has been copied into a book of records, but has not been legally recorded, because the certificate of its acknowledgment was made by an officer not authorized by law to take acknowledgments, and was in form and substance insufficient, is admissible in evidence, provided that the existence and execution of the original deed are first proved.—McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 238.

[b] A certified copy from the recorder's office of a power of attorney purporting to have been executed by four persons, but acknowledged by one only, is admissible in evidence.—Spect v. Gregg, 51 Cal. 198.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1951, provides that instruments affecting real property, acknowledged as provided by law, may, together with the certificate of acknowledgment, be read in evidence, and that a certified copy of the record thus acknowledged is admissible with like effect as the original, on proof that the original is not in possession or under control of the party producing the copy. Plaintiff sued on a contract in writing purporting to be a lien on the land of defendant, and alleged that the instrument had been duly acknowledged and recorded. Held, that plaintiff having produced an instrument purporting to be the one sued on, and which had not been acknowledged, the record of such instrument, with the acknowledgment added, was inadmissible, without accounting for the original.—Fresno Canal etc. Co. v. Dunbar, 80 Cal. 530, 22 Pac. 275.

§ 314. —— Sufficiency of Record.

[a] By a certified copy of a deed from the record, it appeared that the notarial acknowledgment concluded thus, "In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal," and that in the margin of the record occurred the words, "No seal." Held, that these words were a mere note of the recorder as to the place of the notarial seal, and that the copy was admissible in evidence.—Jones v. Martin, 16 Cal. 165.

§ 315. Requisites of Exemplification or Certificate of Official Records in General.

[a] Certificate of surveyor general, that the paper "is a true and accurate copy of a document" on file in his office, is sufficient against the objection that the copy is not duly authenticated, it being conceded that such document was the original grant.—Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544.

[b] Where a certificate to a copy of a document recites the official character of the officer as the legal custodian of it, his authority to certify a copy of it is proved, prima facie, by the certificate itself.—Galvin v. Palmer, 113 Cal. 46, 45 Pac. 172.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1918, providing that official acts and documents may be proved by certified copies, a certificate by the Secretary of State stating that articles of incorporation were filed in his office on a certain date, and "that a certificate of incorporation thereof was issued on said date," is inadmissible to prove the issuance of the certificate of incorporation.—Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27, 62 Pac. 386.

See 17 Cyc. 337-345; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1861-1901, §§ 1331-1360.

§ 316. —— Judicial Records.

[a] A certificate, officially signed and sealed by A B, stating that he is surrogate, and acting clerk of the surrogate's court; that he has compared the transcripts, etc.; and that his certificate is in due form of law.—is sufficient.—Low v. Burrows, 12 Cal. 181.

[b] To establish a discharge in insolvency, a certified copy of the decree and of each of the papers composing the record was offered. Held, that properly these should all have been joined, and the whole certified as one record, but that their separate certification would not authorize their rejection.—Goldstone v. Davidson, 18 Cal. 41.

§ 317. Judicial Proceedings of Other States.

[a] A certificate of exemplification of a judgment rendered in another state, when attested by the clerk under the seal of the court, and when the presiding judge of the court certifies that the attestation is in due form of law, is sufficient under the act of Congress of May 26, 1790, to sustain an action upon the judgment in another state.—Thompson v. Manrow, 1 Cal. 428.

[b] The record of a judgment of another state, if certified in conformity with the act of Congress, is admissible in evidence in this state.—Parke v. Williams, 7 Cal. 247.

[c] Under act of Congress respecting authentication of record of a court of one state to be used in another it is only necessary that the certificate should state the main facts which are made necessary by the act when the offices of judge and clerk are both vested in one person.—Low v. Burrows, 12 Cal. 181.

[d] Certificate of clerk and presiding justice to foreign judgment is sufficient to authorize its introduction under section 1905, Code of Civil Procedure.—Bean v. Loryea, 81 Cal. 152, 153, 22 Pac. 513.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 347-359; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1901-1942, §§ 1361-1383.

§ 318. Official Records of Foreign Countries.

[a] The expediente, consisting of the petition, plat, reference, report, act of concession, approval, grant, etc., filed in the archives of the Mexican government, is as much an original document as the grant delivered to the grantee. (Baldwin, J.)—Gregory v. McPherson, 13 Cal. 562.

[b] A translation of the expediente of a Mexican grant of land, unaccompanied by the original or a certified copy of the same, is not admissible in evidence.—Bixby v. Beat, 51 Cal. 590.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 360-363; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1942-1950, §§ 1384-1387.

§ 319. —— Judicial Proceedings.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1906, providing that a judicial record of a foreign country may be proved by the attestation of the clerk, with the seal of the court, and certain other certificates, authorizes a copy of such record to be so proven.—Wickersham v. Johnston, 104 Cal. 407, 43 Am. St. Rep. 118, 38 Pac. 89.

§ 320. —— Probate of Wills.

[a] To prove the probate of a will and administration granted in a foreign country, as to the procedure in which there is no evidence, a transcript of an order of the foreign court to the effect that on a certain day the will was proved and registered and administration granted is not sufficient, it being necessary to introduce the proceedings leading up to the order, and which gave the court jurisdiction.—Wickersham v. Johnston, 104 Cal. 407, 43 Am. St. Rep. 118, 38 Pac. 89.

§ 321. Unofficial Writings and Records in General.

[a] A nurse's record of the events transpiring at the sick bed of the decedent while she was present may be consulted to refresh her memory as a witness, but cannot be admitted in evidence independently.—Flint, In re, 100 Cal. 391, 34 Pac. 863.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 363; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1950-1959, §§ 1388-1397.

§ 322. Corporate Records and Proceedings.

[a] A resolution of the board of directors of a private corporation reciting that the president's salary was fixed at a certain amount during the preceding year is competent evidence of the fact.—Smith v. Woodville Consol. Silver Min. Co., 66 Cal. 398, 5 Pac. 688.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 401-405; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1959-1969, §§ 1398-1403.

§ 323. —— Form and Authenticity.

[a] An instrument, in form a certified copy of resolution by the board of directors of a corporation, duly attested, ratifying the execution of a mortgage, is presumably the act of the corporation, and admissible in evidence, without proof of the loss of the record of such resolution.—Purser v. Eagle Lake Land etc. Co., 111 Cal. 139, 43 Pac. 523.

[b] Extracts from the minutes of the board of directors of a corporataion held not properly certified to authorize their admission in evidence, as required by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1918, subds. 6, 7.—Nixon v. Goodwin (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 169.

§ 324. Conveyances, Contracts and Other Instruments.

[a] A deed or patent cannot be excluded because the other party shows a better title.—Yates v. Smith, 40 Cal. 662, 669.

[b] Deed under which party claims title is admissible unless it is void on its face, or it appears therefrom that it does not relate to the lands in controversy.—Yates v. Smith, 40 Cal. 662.

[c] When a bill of sale of a lot of land contains no description of the land sold, but is written on the back of the copy of the grant of the lot, made by an alcalde while California was a part of Mexico, and refers to this copy for a description of the lot the copy may be received in evidence for the purpose of identifying the lot sold, and such copy constitutes a part of the bill of sale.—Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

[d] Deed excepting part previously conveyed is admissible without first proving that premises in controversy had not been before conveyed.—Hogar v. Spect, 48 Cal. 406.

[e] Recitals in deed of corporation do not prove its existence against one claiming under another source of title.—Sonoma County Water Co. v. Lynch, 50 Cal. 503.

[f] Contract merged in another is admissible to show what was done under it, and as explanatory of transactions.—Heinlein v. Martin, 53 Cal. 340.

[g] In ejectment, plaintiff (who claims under a deed from defendant, payment of the consideration of which deed is denied by defendant) may, if his deed is regularly executed, read it in evidence, without being first required to allege or prove the consideration or payment thereof.—Martin v. Splivalo, 69 Cal. 611, 11 Pac. 484.

[h] The notes from the grantor to the attorney in fact, with indorsements thereon, showing a payment, coinciding with the date of the deed, are admissible in evidence in connection with testimony that the grantor owed the attorney in fact money on notes, and that the deeds were in payment.—Mowry v. Mowry, 103 Cal. 314, 37 Pac. 398.

[i] Contract between other parties, which was referred to in the contract on which the action was based, for the purpose of fixing certain of its conditions is admissible in evidence.—Hewes v. Germain Fruit Co., 106 Cal. 441, 39 Pac. 853.

[j] Where a note and mortgage were given to the plaintiff through his agent, the note and mortgage, together with a power of attorney from the plaintiff to the agent, are properly admitted in evidence.—Rohrbough v. Johnson, 107 Cal. 144, 40 Pac. 37.

[k] Where plaintiff had leased premises to defendant under a written lease, in an action to recover the possession for breach of conditions, the verified complaint having alleged the execution of the lease, and its contents, which were not denied in the answer, it was not error to admit a copy of the written lease in evidence.—Harloe v. Lambie, 132 Cal. 133, 64 Pac. 88.

[l] An agreement by the stockholders of an association which recited that, "being desirous of having my oranges handled in the manner set forth in the by-laws" of the association, they individually appointed the association their agent, may be introduced in evidence, without the by-laws referred to, in an action by the association on a contract between it and a fruit company for the sale of fruit.—Tustin Fruit Assn. v. Earl Fruit Co., 53 Pac. 693.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 363-365; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 1969-2017, §§ 1404-1431.

§ 325. —— Nature, Form and Validity of Instrument.

[a] A will is not a conveyance, within the provisions of the act concerning conveyances, which can be read in evidence on the certificate of proof by a notary.—Carpentier v. Gardiner, 29 Cal. 160.

[b] A deed properly executed is admissible in evidence, although the grantor may have previously conveyed his interest in the property to another party; such objection affecting only its legal operation after admission. Peck v. Vandenberg, 30 Cal. 11.

[c] Where a deed is offered in evidence to show title to the locus in quo, the fact that such deed was not intended to include the entire premises in dispute goes only to the effect of the deed, and not to its admissibility as evidence.—Dent v. Bird, 67 Cal. 652, 8 Pac. 504; Hall v. Hebard, 8 Pac. 507.

[d] Plaintiff introduced a certified copy of a deed, purporting to be signed by P. D. G., the defendant, and conveying land then owned by him. In the body of the deed the grantor was described as D. P. G. The subscribing witness' affidavit was that he saw D. P. G., the person described in the deed, sign the same. No objection being made to the copy, held, that enough had been shown to make it admissible, and throw on the defendant the burden of proving that he did not execute the deed.—Bennett v. Green, 74 Cal. 425, 16 Pac. 231.

[e] A vendee having entered under a bond for a deed, and a contract that if he failed to pay interest the vendor might take possession without process of law, afterward made default in the payment of interest, and notified the vendor that he claimed an adverse title, and surrendered all rights under the bond. Held, that the bond for a deed was competent evidence, especially when the vendee admitted its genuineness.—Coates v. Cleaves, 92 Cal. 427, 28 Pac. 580.

[f] A memorandum given as a bill of sale of a "4-horse Concord" wagon, executed by the debtor to plaintiff, is competent evidence on the question of the sale, by the debtor to plaintiff, of the Concord wagon in dispute.—Bunting v. Salz, 22 Pac. 1132.

§ 326. —— —— Effect of Alteration.

[a] Party offering promissory note in evidence is not obliged, before the same is admitted, to account for an erasure appearing upon the face of it, unless the erasure has been made, or appears to have been made, after the execution of the instrument, and is on a part of the note which is material to the point in dispute.—Corcoran v. Doll, 32 Cal. 82.

[b] Alteration of instrument affects credit and weight to be given to it but does not make it inadmissible.—Reclamation Dist. v. Wilcox, 75 Cal. 448, 17 Pac. 241.

§ 327. —— Execution and Proof.

[a] When the grantor of a deed signs by a different name than that recited in the instrument the identity of person should be proved before the deed is admitted in evidence.—Tustin v. Faught, 23 Cal. 237.

§ 328. —— Acknowledgment or Record.

[a] Deed defective in acknowledgment should not be rejected as evidence for that reason, but should be admitted, with instructions to the jury as to its effect in giving notice to third persons.—Hastings v. Vaughn, 5 Cal. 315.

[b] Deed may be offered to show date and character of possession, though defectively acknowledged as inoperative.—Low v. Henry, 9 Cal. 552, 553, 13 Cal. 220.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1951, provides that an instrument affecting real property, acknowledged as provided by law, may, together with the certificate of acknowledgment, be read in evidence, and that a certified copy of the record thus acknowledged is admissible with like effect as the original, on proof that the original is not in possession or under control of the party producing the copy. Plaintiff sued on a contract in writing purporting to be a lien on the land of defendant, and alleged that the instrument had been duly acknowledged and recorded. Held, that an instrument purporting to be the one sued on, or a duplicate, but which had not been acknowledged, was not admissible, though the plaintiff produced the record of the instrument with the acknowledgment added.—Fresno Canal etc. Co. v. Dunbar, 80 Cal. 530, 22 Pac. 275.

§ 329. —— Documents Insufficient or Incomplete When Standing Alone.

[a] If one deed refers to another for a description of the land conveyed, the latter is admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing such description, without any proof that the deed containing it is a valid conveyance.—Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 122, 85 Am. Dec. 103.

[b] A deed to which a deed admissible in evidence refers as containing a description of the premises conveyed is also admissible as explanatory of the other.—Satterlee v. Bliss, 36 Cal. 489.

[c] It is not a good objection to the introduction of a deed in evidence that it is not shown to include the premises in controversy. The calls of the deed are to be located after it is received in evidence. If it appears on the face of the deed that it does not include the premises in controversy, it may be objected to on that ground.—Cutter v. Caruthers, 48 Cal. 178.

§ 330. —— Void or Rescinded Instruments.

[a] Void tax deed is inadmissible.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 320, 11 Pac. 820.

[b] A rescinded instrument in writing between the plaintiff and another party may be offered in evidence as explanatory of this agreement with the defendant.—Chew Farng v. Keefer, 103 Cal. 46, 36 Pac. 1032.

§ 331. Books of Account—In General.

[a] Original account-books shown to have been properly kept are admissible.—West Coast Lumber Co. v. Newkirk, 80 Cal. 280, 22 Pac. 232.

[b] Books of bank showing original entries of transactions between itself and its customers are admissible and competent evidence.—McLennan v. Bank of California, 87 Cal. 575, 25 Pac. 760.

[c] Book accounts showing true state of account between parties entered at time of several transactions are admissible.—Ford v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 211, 25 Pac. 403.

[d] In an action by a bank against a corporation on an account, it appeared that it was customary for the manager of defendant company, when bills were presented to "O. K." them, and that they were then presented to the bank, paid by the latter in the same manner as checks, and charged on its books to defendant's account; that defendant had no passbook, but at stated periods the bank would present a statement, and surrender the paid vouchers; and that these were transcribed to defendant's ledger. Held, that the books of the bank and the statements in defendant's ledger were prima facie evidence that the account of the bank was correct, and that the vouchers were admissible to show that the sums named therein were applied to the proper use of defendant.—Pauly v. Pauly, 107 Cal. 8, 48 Am. St. Rep. 98, 40 Pac. 29.

[e] The fact that two officers of a cable company were interested in the bank does not affect the admissibility in evidence of the books of the bank; but such interest merely invites scrutiny of the accounts, and goes only to the weight of the testimony, and not to its admissibility.—Pauly v. Pauly, 107 Cal. 8, 48 Am. St. Rep. 98, 40 Pac. 29.

[ef] Poker-book kept by a cigar dealer containing entries of his losses at games played at store is not admissible as tradesman's book of original entry.—Frank v. Pennie, 117 Cal. 256, 49 Pac. 208.

[f] On an issue whether a sale of livestock on a ranch owned by the buyer was in fraud of creditors, where the seller had superintended the ranch, and at the time of the levy had a cropping contract which included a part of the land, books showing the condition of accounts between him and the buyer were properly allowed in evidence; the evidence otherwise showing that the books were kept under the direction of the seller, and that he delivered them to the buyer as showing the condition of their accounts.—Banning v. Marleau, 121 Cal. 240, 53 Pac. 692.

[g] The issue being whether goods were sold to A on B's credit, or sold to B, and by his order delivered to A, the seller's books showing they were shipped to A, and charged to B, were not competent; the bookkeeper who made the entry having no knowledge of the facts, and the one directing the form of the entry being accessible.—Butler v. Estrella Raisin Vineyard Co., 124 Cal. 239, 56 Pac. 1040.

[h] A passbook shown to be in the handwriting of a bank's cashier, and to have been issued by him in the usual course of business, is admissible in evidence in an action by the depositor's administratrix against such bank to recover sums alleged to have been deposited.—Nicholson v. Randall Banking Co., 130 Cal. 533, 62 Pac. 930.

[i] A book kept by plaintiff held admissible in evidence as a book of original entries.—Idol v. San Francisco Const. Co., 1 Cal. App. 92, 81 Pac. 665.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Account-books as evidence: 15 Am. Dec. 191, note; 52 L. R. A. 546, 833, note. See, also 17 Cyc. 365-398; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2017-2100, §§ 1432-1483.

§ 332. —— Matters Proper for Book Entries.

[a] Though account-book of tradesman, as general rule, is not admissible to prove a charge for money loaned, yet where it was shown that plaintiff had procured and paid for certain articles for defendant, and charged it as money loaned, the book is admissible.—Le Franc v. Hewitt, 7 Cal. 186.

[b] In an action on account, plaintiff's account books were admissible in evidence to prove the delivery of goods therein charged, where better evidence was not obtainable.—Severance v. Lombardo, 17 Cal. 57.

[c] A book of account is admissible in evidence to prove that a party to a suit has performed his contract, and given a credit which he has promised.—Ross v. Brusie, 70 Cal. 465, 11 Pac. 760.

§ 333. —— Form, Regularity and Sufficiency of Entries.

[a] In an action for wages, where plaintiff claimed that his contract with defendant was that his salary as master of a steamer should be in proportion to its profits, a private account of plaintiff, kept by himself, and containing only an account of money paid, is not admissible in evidence as against defendant.—Collin v. Card, 2 Cal. 421.

[b] It seems, though a tradesman's books are not admissible to prove a single item, they are to prove one charge for a lot of goods purchased on different days.—Le Franc v. Hewitt, 7 Cal. 186.

[c] Delay of three days in transferring items from slate to account-book is not such unreasonable delay as to make book inadmissible as one of original entries.—Landis v. Turner, 11 Cal. 573.

[d] The fact that charges are first made on slate and then transferred to the book does not affect the character of the book as one of original entries, the charges on the slate being mere memoranda, not intended to be permanent.—Landis v. Turner, 14 Cal. 573.

[e] Where suspicious alterations have been made in the entries in the account-book of a party to the suit, and they are explained only by the testimony of the party himself, a refusal to admit them in evidence is proper. Caldwell v. McDermit, 17 Cal. 464.

[f] Though ordinarily plaintiff would have had no right to introduce books as evidence of the settlement of partnership affairs after the dissolution of the partnership, when he had altered such books, a statement of account by an expert, made from such altered books, was admissible, where there was other evidence showing the correctness of the statement.—Butler v. Beach, 55 Cal. 28.

[g] In an action for the dissolution of a partnership and for an accounting, when the evidence showed that the books had been so improperly kept by the defendant that it was impossible to tell anything about the condition of the affairs of the partnership, the attorneys stipulated that experts should be employed by the referee to reduce the books to intelligible shape. The experts made out a set of new books from the old books. Held, that the expert books were properly admitted in evidence in connection with the report of the referee.—Roberts v. Eldred, 73 Cal. 394, 15 Pac. 16.

§ 334. —— Purposes of Proof and Admissibility for and Against Particular Persons.

[a] Books of original entry, if properly kept, are admissible as part of res gestae, to prove services or sales of goods.—Lubert v. Chauriteau, 3 Cal. 458.

[b] Book of original entries being admitted, its entries, accompanied with proof of the party's reputation in the neighborhood of keeping correct accounts, by persons who had dealt with him, were sufficient prima facie evidence of the specific services rendered and their value, and of the specific materials furnished and their price, it not appearing that any higher evidence was attainable.—Landis v. Turner, 14 Cal. 573.

[c] Books of account kept by a party are not competent evidence, in an action for goods sold and delivered, to prove a copartnership between defendant L. and the other defendants, to whom certain lumber had been sold, L. not having dealt directly with plaintiffs.—Severance v. Lombardo, 17 Cal. 57.

[d] When it is sought to be proved that a house was constructed by a certain person, as one of a chain of events to show that he owned the lot on which it was built, and evidence is given tending to show that a certain firm built the house and furnished the materials, the account-books of such firm are admissible in evidence to show that they charged the labor and materials to such person, as such entries are of contemporaneous circumstances, to show who owned the house.—Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

[e] Time-book kept by laborer is competent evidence of days upon which he has worked. Bushnell v. Simpson, 119 Cal. 662, 51 Pac. 1080.

[f] Books of account kept by the deceased, if not containing proof of the payment of plaintiff's claim, may be looked to for evidence of the negative fact of nonpayment by the deceased during his lifetime; and notwithstanding the inhibition of section 1880 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the foundation for the introduction of such account-books, if kept by plaintiff for the deceased, may be laid by the testimony of the plaintiff.—Cowdery v. McChesney, 124 Cal. 363, 57 Pac. 221.

[g] In proceedings for redemption from a mortgage, where the question at issue is whether a deed absolute in form, with an agreement for reconveyance, was intended as a mortgage or not, a book of accounts cannot be introduced in evidence by defendant to show that he credited plaintiff with the alleged purchase price of the lot in controversy, since a party cannot make evidence in his own favor.—Ross v. Brusie, 10 Pac. 121.

[h] In an action for money due on contract, where one furnishes material and another does work under an agreement to divide the profits, the original books of entry of the parties are proper evidence to show the amount of work done.—Morgans v. Adel, 18 Pac. 247.

§ 335. —— —— Books of Third Persons.

[a] Entries in account-books kept by third persons, not parties to the suit, may be received in evidence after the death of the party making the entries, when the entries are contemporaneous with the principal fact sought to be proved, and form a link in a chain of events, and are a part of the res gestae.—Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

§ 336. Private Memoranda and Statements.

[a] A memorandum of the circumstances, made by the witness at the time of the occurrence, is not admissible in evidence, although he states that it is correct.—People v. Elyea, 14 Cal. 144.

[b] A witness may be permitted to refresh his memory from a writing or memorandum made by himself at the occurrence of the facts to which it relates; but the memorandum is not competent evidence to prove the facts stated, in itself.—Baum v. Reay, 96 Cal. 462, 31 Pac. 561.

[c] Schedules presented by expert accountant in connection with his testimony that they were correct summarization of what books showed are admissible to show what books contained and what they should have contained but did not.—San Pedro etc. Co. v. Reynolds, 121 Cal. 86, 53 Pac. 410.

[d] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1946, prescribing when entries and writings of a deceased person may be used as evidence, entries on a private memorandum-book kept by deceased of money paid to plaintiff are not admissible against him, since the entries are in decedent's favor, and such a book is not admissible as a tradesman's book.—Thompson v. Orena Ruiz, 134 Cal. 26, 66 Pac. 24.

[e] In an action for the refusal to receive prunes sold, a witness who had been employed by the seller to process and box the fruit testified that he properly graded and boxed the goods, and identified a paper as a report made by him to the seller. This report showed the number of boxes of each grade. The witness did not testify that the report correctly represented the number of boxes, and the paper was not offered in aid of his memory, but was offered later while another witness was testifying. Held, that it was improperly admitted.—Peterson Bros. v. Mineral King Fruit Co., 140 Cal. 624, 74 Pac. 162.

§ 337. —— Mortality Tables.

[a] On an issue as to the value of a life estate of a person sixty years of age, tables of mortality held admissible without proof that the person in question was of sound health.—Cusick v. Boyne (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 985.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 1 Cyc. 296; 17 Cyc. 422; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2143-2144, § 1520.

§ 338. Letters and Telegrams.

[a] Letter from Secretary of Interior is admissible to show that he had granted rehearing in land case.—Stewart v. Robinson, 76 Cal. 165, 18 Pac. 157.

[b] Unsigned letter may be admitted to prove condition it was intended to create.—Goldman v. Bashore, 80 Cal. 150, 22 Pac. 82.

For Authorities from Other States:

Telegrams, when admissible: 38 Am. Rep. 5, note; 44 L. R. A. 438, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 406-412; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2114-2123, §§ 1492-1499.

§ 339. —— As Against Party Addressed.

[a] A telegraph message threatening suit if the addressee did not pay an overdue note is not admissible to show the addressee's fraud in transferring property on the day after the date of said message, in the absence of proof that the message was ever received, or at least delivered to a telegraph company for transmission.—Eppinger v. Scott, 112 Cal. 369, 53 Am. St. Rep. 220, 42 Pac. 301.

[b] Letter written to party, receipt of which is acknowledged, is admissible to charge him with notice of its contents.—Hurgren v. Union Mut. Ins. Co., 141 Cal. 592, 75 Pac. 168.

§ 340. Maps, Plats, Diagrams and Photographs.

[a] Map introduced as a diagram need not be made by county surveyor.—Provost v. Piper, 9 Cal. 553.

[b] Private survey is admissible, though not offered to rebut or explain survey of county surveyor.—Ellis v. Janes, 10 Cal. 458.

[c] A private survey is no legal evidence of facts it purports to contain, since, if it were, any man might recover the land of another by including it in his own boundaries. Rose v. Davis, 11 Cal. 133.

[d] A private survey is no evidence of the facts it contains; and therefore where a private map goes to the jury, even as a diagram, the court should be careful that the jury are not misled into treating it as evidence.—Rose v. Davis, 11 Cal. 133.

[e] A plat of a survey of lands made by a deputy surveyor which is not certified in the form prescribed by statute may be admitted as a plat of a private survey, the deputy surveyor being on the stand and testifying in relation to it.—Doherty v. Thayer, 31 Cal. 140.

[f] Since the board of state land commissioners appointed under act of May 18, 1853, which established such board, were authorized to find the red line or water front of San Francisco, as established by act of March 26, 1851, their map is competent evidence to prove the position of that line.—People v. Klumpke, 41 Cal. 263.

[g] Photographic views are original evidence respecting description of premises they reproduce.—Bliss v. Johnson, 76 Cal. 601, 16 Pac. 542, 18 Pac. 785.

[h] Motion to strike out as evidence map conceded to be genuine and admitted without objection is properly denied.—Olsen v. Rogers, 120 Cal. 227, 52 Pac. 486.

[i] In an action against a grantee of the owner to abate a nuisance consisting of a fence erected by her on a strip of land claimed to have been dedicated as a highway, it was not error to exclude the field-notes and memorandum books of the surveyor where it appeared that they were never shown to defendant's grantor and were not recorded, and the evidence showed that the map was made from the field-notes, and it did not appear that the notes if admitted would throw any additional light on the map, or the grantor's intention in having it made, and the surveyor used the field-notes in testifying, and was not restrained from stating any facts relating to the survey found in them.—Smith v. Glenn, 129 Cal. xviii, 62 Pac. 180.

[j] Where, in an action to determine a boundary line, a witness has testified to a survey, the admission in evidence of a map made by him explanatory of such survey is not error.—Pickering Light etc. Co. v. Savage, 137 Cal. xix, 69 Pac. 846.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 17 Cyc. 412; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2126-2133, §§ 1500-1508.

§ 341. —— —— Acknowledgment and Record.

[a] The map of an "addition," which is of record in the office of the county recorder, is not admissible in evidence because not acknowledged.—Colton Land etc. Co. v. Swartz, 99 Cal. 278, 33 Pac. 878.

§ 342. —— Plats Referred to in Deeds.

[a] Where a deed describes land conveyed as "lot number one in the subdivision of the tract of land lying on the new county road, and known as 'Foley's Tract,' the map of which is duly recorded in the recorder's office, reference to which is herein made," the particular tract of land referred to cannot be identified by the production in evidence of a map not recorded, but made in pencil, and pasted in between the leaves of the recorder's book.—Caldwell v. Center, 30 Cal. 539, 89 Am. Dec. 131.

[b] Where a deed refers to a map for a description of land conveyed, no other similar map will answer the description, and be admissible in evidence to identify the land. Caldwell v. Center, 30 Cal. 539, 89 Am. Dec. 131.

§ 343. —— Sketch, Drawing, or Other Picture.

[a] In an action for damages for libel against a dentist, whom defendant had publicly denounced as a disgrace to the profession, a diagram exhibiting the condition of the defendant's teeth on which the plaintiff had operated before and after they were injured by plaintiff is inadmissible, as such drawing was unnecessary to illustrate the facts asserted.—Thrall v. Smiley, 9 Cal. 529.

§ 344. Books and Other Printed Publications.

[a] An article published in a newspaper by a witness without the knowledge of either of the parties to the suit is not admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing an agreement of the parties concerning the subject matter of the suit.—Dwinelle v. Henriquez, 1 Cal. 387.

[b] On the trial of the issue whether a certain house (the Willows) was at a given date a hotel within the meaning of the chattel mortgage statute, the proprietors' advertisements of the house in the newspapers of the vicinity at and before that date were held to be competent evidence, as tending to establish its public character.—Stringer v. Davis, 35 Cal. 25.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Newspaper reports as evidence: 90 Am. Dec. 258, note.

Books and treatises admissible in evidence: 38 Am. Rep. 578, note.

Almanacs as evidence: 39 Am. Rep. 416, note; 17 L. R. A. 851, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 421-425; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2137-2144, §§ 1513-1520.

§ 345. —— Published Market Quotations.

[a] The published "reports of sales" of a stock exchange are not competent evidence of market value, without proof as to the sources from which the information therein was obtained, or whether the quotations of prices were derived from actual sales or otherwise.—Vogt v. Cope, 66 Cal. 31, 4 Pac. 915.

§ 346. —— Medical Books.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1936, makes books of science or art prima facie evidence of facts of general notoriety or interest. Held, that a standard medical work is not admissible to prove the nature of injuries, and their probable effect.—Gallagher v. Market St. Ry. Co., 67 Cal. 13, 56 Am. Rep. 713, 6 Pac. 869.

[b] Medical works are hearsay and inadmissible.—Baily v. Kreutzmann, 141 Cal. 521, 75 Pac. 104.

D. PRODUCTION, AUTHENTICATION AND EFFECT.

CONCLUSIVENESS AND EFFECT, § 368.
—— EFFECT OF INTRODUCING PART OF DOCUMENT OR RECORD, § 369.

§ 347. Public Documents, Records, Exemplifications or Other Official Copies.

[a] The alcalde's book of grants is admissible as evidence of a grant contained in it, when it is shown to be a book of the alcalde's office, in which grants were entered, that it bears the genuine signatures of the alcalde and clerk at the time of the grant for the place where the land lies, and that it belongs to the recorder's office of the county where the land lies.—Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 114.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2145-2174, §§ 1521-1539.

§ 348. —— Production of Part of Record of Judicial Proceeding.

[a] The judgment and findings in a former action are not competent evidence unless the judgment-roll be offered in connection therewith, from the inspection of which it can be seen whether the court had jurisdiction to render the judgment.—Mason v. Wolff, 40 Cal. 246.

[b] One attempting to avail himself of a decree as an adjudication of title, etc., must produce the judgment-roll, for determination whether the court had jurisdiction.—Harper v. Rowe, 53 Cal. 233.

§ 349. —— Execution Without Judgment upon Which It is Based.

[a] To admit an execution in evidence, the judgment upon which it issued must be produced.—Vassault v. Austin, 32 Cal. 597.

§ 350. —— Sheriff's Deeds.

[a] Sheriff's deed inadmissible without proof of judgment and execution.—Sullivan v. Davis, 4 Cal. 291.

[ab] A sheriff's deed cannot be given in evidence without producing the judgment and execution under which the sale was made, such documents being necessary to show that the sheriff had authority to sell.—Vassault v. Austin, 32 Cal. 597.

[b] Sheriff's deed is not admissible without proof of judgment and execution under which he acted.—Peterson v. Weissbein, 75 Cal. 178, 16 Pac. 769.

§ 351. —— Authority for Executors of Administrator's Deed.

[a] A deed made under an act of the legislature authorizing the executors of a deceased person to sell and convey lands of their testator is not admissible in evidence without first proving the testator's death and his appointment of the executors.—Kimball v. Semple, 25 Cal. 440.

§ 352. —— Tax Deeds.

[a] A tax deed properly acknowledged is admissible as evidence without further proof, but when fraudulently acknowledged it is inadmissible without further proof.—Wetherbee v. Dunn, 32 Cal. 106.

§ 353. Compelling Production by Adverse Party.

[a] Practice Act authorizes court to make order directing a party to produce books and papers in court.—Barnstead v. Empire Mining Co., 5 Cal. 299.

[b] Where it appeared from the testimony of the plaintiff, who was administratrix of the estate of her deceased husband, that there were in the possession of her attorneys writings of his relating to the purchase of the property in controversy, which the defendant, who was a brother of the deceased, claimed was purchased by the deceased and himself jointly, in equal shares, it was the duty of the court to allow the defendant to make further inquiries of the plaintiff regarding such papers, and to order them to be produced.—Morehouse v. Morehouse, 136 Cal. 332, 68 Pac. 976.

[c] Where a party was notified to produce a letter sent him, a longhand copy thereof, shown to be such, is admissible, though not a facsimile.—Grant v. Dreyfus, 52 Pac. 1074.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

15 L. R. A. 138, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 1266-2168; 17 Cyc. 457-464; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2175-2194, §§ 1540-1558.

§ 354. —— Nature of Document and Relation to Issue.

[a] Where, in an action against a street railway for personal injuries, it appeared that written statements as to the cause of the injury had been made by some of defendant's employees, and were in the hands of defendant's counsel at the trial, plaintiff's counsel was entitled on demand to receive such statements and to introduce them in evidence for the purpose of impeaching a witness.—Freel v. Market St. Cable Ry. Co., 97 Cal. 40, 31 Pac. 730.

§ 355. —— Notice in General.

[a] Sufficiency of notice to the adverse party, to produce on trial a certain paper in his possession, is a question of discretion in the court trying the case.—Burke v. Table Mountain Water Co., 12 Cal. 403.

[b] Literal accuracy cannot be expected in the description given in the notice to produce. Such description as will apprise a man of ordinary intelligence of the document desired is sufficient.—Burke v. Table Mountain Water Co., 12 Cal. 403.

§ 356. Preliminary Evidence for Authentication in General.

[a] The presumption arising from the existence of an ordinance upon the record of ordinances is sufficient to entitle it to be received in evidence without further proof, in the absence of evidence showing its invalidity.—County of San Diego v. Seifert, 97 Cal. 594, 32 Pac. 644.

[b] In an action against a defendant who is the president of a mining corporation, to enforce his personal liability for lumber sold, the minute-book of the corporation referred to in the deposition of the defendant, but not attached to the deposition nor returned with it, cannot be read in evidence without proof of its identity.—Bradford v. Woodworth, 108 Cal. 684, 41 Pac. 797.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

35 L. R. A. 321, 44 L. R. A. 142, notes. See, also, 17 Cyc. 425-442; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2195-2338, §§ 1559-1657.

§ 357. —— Proof of Execution.

[a] Where the plaintiffs in ejectment were a joint stock company, and claimed by a transfer from the original members of the company, assignments of what had been issued as certificates of stock, which constituted the only evidence of membership recognized by the company, were not admissible as evidence of the transfer until their execution had been proved.—Pennsylvania Min. Co. v. Owens, 15 Cal. 135.

[b] Patent issued by government is admissible in evidence, without any proof of its execution. The official seal sufficiently authenticates it.—Gallup v. Armstrong, 22 Cal. 480.

[c] In an action upon a contract referring to a previous contract as containing the plan by and prices for which the work sued for is to be done, the previous contract is admissible in evidence for purposes of description, whether its execution is proved or not.—Neuval v. Cowell, 36 Cal. 648.

[d] In an action on an assigned claim, it was not necessary for defendant to prove a release by the subscribing witness, or account for his absence, before relying on the similarity of signatures disclosed by the release and the assignment.—Castor v. Bernstein (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 244.

[e] In a suit on an assigned claim, defendant held entitled to introduce a release alleged to have been signed by plaintiff's assignor, without proof of such signature except by comparison with the signature on the assignment, as provided in Code of Civil Procedure, section 1944.—Castor v. Bernstein (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 244.

§ 358. —— Proof of Authority to Execute.

[a] A deed executed by an unauthorized agent may yet be admissible to show the dis-of the grantee's possession under it, and to show that the agent's possession was under, or inured to the benefit of, the grantors.—McDonald v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 13 Cal. 220.

[b] Assignment made by an agent is not admissible without proof of authority.—McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 300, 316.

[c] A deed without the corporate seal, purporting to be executed by the trustees of the corporation, is inadmissible as the deed of the corporation, without first showing the authority of the trustees to execute such deed. The recital of the authority in the deed itself would furnish no evidence whatever of its existence.—Gashwiler v. Willis, 33 Cal. 11, 91 Am. Dec. 607.

§ 359. —— Proof of Execution of Original to Authorize Introduction of Copy.

[a] Act of 1851, section 21, gives to papers properly recorded like effect as originals, but it does not dispense with proof of execution.—Powell's Heirs v. Hendricks, 3 Cal. 427.

[b] Though a duly certified copy of a Mexican grant from the United States general surveyor's office is admissible in evidence under Acts of 1857, page 317, the execution of the original must be proved if denied; but, if not denied when the copy is offered, the execution is admitted.—Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544.

[c] Certified copies of instruments duly recorded may be read in evidence without proof of the execution of the originals.—Mayo v. Mazeaux, 38 Cal. 442; Anthony v. Chapman, 65 Cal. 73, 2 Pac. 889.

§ 360. —— Proof of Delivery.

[a] The term "has executed unto," when applied to instruments of writing, imports both making and delivery.—Bagley v. Administrator of McMickle, 9 Cal. 430.

[b] No proof of delivery is necessary of a grant entered in the alcalde's book.—Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 114.

§ 361. —— Mode and Sufficiency in General.

[a] Where a subscribing witness to a bill of sale is out of the state, and the proof is that witness saw subscribing witness put his name to it, and saw grantor sign it, and recognizes the paper from hearing it read—not being able to read himself—and another witness testifies that the signature of the subscribing witness is in his handwriting, this is sufficient evidence to identify the paper and authorize it to be read in evidence.—McGarrity v. Byington, 12 Cal. 426.

[b] A subscribing witness, who is called to prove execution of instrument, who testifies that it was signed in his presence, "to the best of his recollection," is sufficient to allow it to be read in evidence.—McGarrity v. Byington, 12 Cal. 426.

§ 362. —— Best and Secondary Evidence of Execution.

[a] To admit proof of handwriting of witness to an instrument it must be shown that the witness is beyond the jurisdiction of the court, or that he could not be found after diligent search for him had been made; that his absence may be inferred.—Powell's Heirs v. Hendricks, 3 Cal. 427.

[b] A subscribing witness to a written instrument, if within the jurisdiction of the court, must be produced, or some sufficient reason given for his absence.—Stevens v. Irwin, 12 Cal. 306.

[c] A bill of sale is sufficiently proved when the handwriting of the subscribing witness, who is absent from the state, and the execution by the vendor are proven. And this, though the subscribing witness was in the state after suit instituted and near the place of trial, and plaintiff used no efforts to get the testimony of the witness before he left the state.—Jackson v. Feather River Water Co., 14 Cal. 18.

[d] The execution of an instrument which the law does not require to be attested by witnesses may be authenticated by proof of the handwriting of the grantor or obligor, if the subscribing witnesses are beyond the jurisdiction of the court.—Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 393.

[e] Where a conveyance not acknowledged is offered in evidence, and it is proved that it was executed by the grantor and witnessed by subscribing witnesses out of the state, and there is no evidence to show that the subscribing witnesses were ever in the state, a sufficient presumption is raised that the subscribing witnesses are not within the jurisdiction of the court, so as to admit secondary evidence of its execution by the grantor.—Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 393.

[f] When the subscribing witness to a deed is beyond the jurisdiction of the court, such instrument is admissible in evidence on proof of the signature of the grantor, without proving the handwriting of the subscribing witness, unless the instrument is one which the law requires to be attested by witnesses, in which case proof of the handwriting of both parties and subscribing witnesses might be necessary.—Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 393.

[g] An instrument in writing executed and attested by a subscribing witness at a place beyond the jurisdiction of the court can be proved by producing evidence of the handwriting of the party who executed it.—McMinn v. Whelan, 27 Cal. 300.

[h] It is not necessary, in order to prove the execution of a deed made in a foreign country, to produce the attesting witness, or account for his absence, or prove his handwriting.—McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 238.

§ 363. Books of Account, Memoranda and Statements.

[a] On a bill by attaching creditors to restrain proceedings against the property attached under a judgment against the debtor, alleged to have been obtained by fraud, where all the material allegations of the bill except those of fraud are admitted, the books of the judgment creditor are not admissible as evidence for the defense, to show an entry of the original transaction on which the judgment is based, where the only predicate laid is evidence that the judgment creditor was possessed of capital sufficient to have loaned the amount of the judgment to the judgment debtor.—Heyneman v. Dannenberg, 6 Cal. 376, 65 Am. Dec. 519.

[b] Plaintiff testified that he kept no clerk, and had no books except the one produced; that the one produced was his book of original entries in which he kept his accounts; and that the entries were made at their dates. Held, that the book was proved, and was admissible.—Landis v. Turner, 14 Cal. 573.

[c] Foundation necessary to be laid for admission of account-books, stated.—Watrous v. Cunningham, 71 Cal. 32, 33, 11 Pac. 811.

[d] Account-books of vendor showing part payment of purchase price are not admissible to establish that no further payments had been made.—Kerns v. McKean, 76 Cal. 88, 89, 18 Pac. 122; Kerns v. Dean, 77 Cal. 558, 19 Pac. 817.

[e] Tradesman's shop-book of original entries properly kept is admissible when supported by tradesman's oath.—White v. Whitney, 82 Cal. 166, 167, 22 Pac. 1138.

§ 364. —— Testimony of Party.

[a] In suit on an account for services rendered and materials furnished in the course of his trade, and for articles furnished from his farm, by plaintiff, who was a blacksmith and farmer, he is a competent witness to prove to the court his book of original entries, as preliminary to the introduction of the book in evidence.—Landis v. Turner, 14 Cal. 573.

§ 365. —— Mortality Tables.

[a] The court may admit tables of life expectancy without preliminary proof of authenticity and standard quality.—Keast v. Santa Ysabel Gold Min. Co., 136 Cal. 256, 68 Pac. 771.

§ 366. Letters.

[a] It is error to admit letters in evidence without proving that they were written by the party intended to be charged by their contents.—Sinclair v. Wood, 3 Cal. 98.

[b] Petitioner introduced evidence tending to show that she received at Buffalo a letter signed C. K. (testatrix's name), containing a railroad ticket and five dollars. It was shown that the address of C. K. was at 616½ N. street, and that at about that time she borrowed five dollars to send, as she said, to her sister at Buffalo. Held, that petitioner might introduce from the book of registered letters of the San Francisco postoffice an entry reciting the receipt of a letter from C. K., 616½ N. street, addressed to M. R. (petitioner), Buffalo, such testimony being proper, as affording some evidence that the letter came from deceased.—Kennedy's Estate, In re, 36 Pac. 1030.

[c] Where, in an action for the price of goods sold, a letter purporting to be written by defendant to plaintiff's brother, and received in due course of mail, was shown to relate directly to plaintiff's claim, an objection to it on the ground that it referred to a different account, and was addressed to one other than plaintiff, was properly overruled. Judgment (1898) 52 Pac. 1132, affirmed.—Ryland v Heney, 130 Cal. 426, 62 Pac. 616.

[d] Where, in an action for grapes sold, a letter purporting to have been written by defendant to plaintiff's brother was claimed by plaintiff to relate to the transaction involved, but objected to by defendant on the ground that it was addressed to a different person, and relating to another account, a question put to the brother, as to whether he had any account personally with defendant, was proper, in order to connect the letter with plaintiff's demand. Judgment (1898) 52 Pac. 1132, affirmed.—Ryland v. Heney, 130 Cal. 426, 62 Pac. 616.

[e] Where, in an action for goods sold, it appeared that defendant's wife at times in his absence answered his letters, and that she wrote a letter to the plaintiff relative to the transaction involved, signing her husband's name to the same, and thereafter defendant received a reply to such letter, and in answer wrote one to plaintiff, referring to the former letter as emanating from himself, but by mistake the letter was sent to plaintiff's brother, who was acting as plaintiff's agent in the transaction, and such letter was received in evidence without objection on the part of defendant, the letter written by the wife was properly admitted in evidence. Judgment (1898) 52 Pac. 1132, affirmed.—Ryland v. Heney, 130 Cal. 426, 62 Pac. 616.

§ 367. Maps and Plats.

[a] The field-notes made by the defendant's surveyor and engineer, who did not testify to their correctness, and the correctness of which was not proved by any competent evidence, were properly excluded.—Scanlan v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 128 Cal. 586, 61 Pac. 271.

§ 368. Conclusiveness and Effect.

[a] Entry of satisfaction of warrants, made under the loose provisions of the act of April 4, 1864, in relation to board of supervisors of Butte county, is entitled to no more weight than oral testimony.—Day v. Callow, 39 Cal. 593.

[b] Relative value or effect of deeds introduced in evidence by the respective parties to the action can only be determined by the court or jury to whom they are submitted for consideration.—Yates v. Smith, 40 Cal. 662.

[c] Record only proves itself as a record.—Brown v. Griffith, 70 Cal. 16, 11 Pac. 500.

[d] Record is conclusive evidence.—Dyer v. Brogan, 70 Cal. 139, 11 Pac. 589.

[e] Entries in minute-book of board of supervisors are only prima facie evidence of facts stated therein.—Reclamation Dist. v. Wilcox, 75 Cal. 448, 449, 17 Pac. 241.

[f] An indorsement by a recorder upon a notice of lien is at least prima facie evidence of its filing and the date of its recording.—Silvester v. Coe Quartz Mine Co., 80 Cal. 510, 22 Pac. 217.

[g] Certified copy of entries in justice's docket is prima facie evidence of facts stated.—Shatto v. Crocker, 83 Cal. 631, 24 Pac. 836.

[gh] The fact that goods sold are charged on the seller's books to another than the one to whom they are delivered is not conclusive evidence that such other was the real purchaser, but is open to explanation.—Lane v. Turner, 114 Cal. 396, 46 Pac. 290.

[gi] Where an account of one party is put in evidence by the adverse party, the latter must call for any required explanation of an item of the account, and the item will not be disallowed because it does not indicate what it was for.—Bank of British Columbia v. Frese, 116 Cal. 9, 47 Pac. 783.

[h] A tax deed is evidence that the assessor had prepared a delinquent list for the year for which the land assessed was sold for taxes. A copy of the delinquent list, duly verified and filed, as required by section 3769 of the Political Code, establishes the original in the absence of evidence to the contrary; and the loss of the original cannot affect the rights of the purchaser at the tax sale.—Davis v. Pacific Imp. Co., 137 Cal. 245, 70 Pac. 15.

[i] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, subdivision 34, authorizing the admission of ancient documents in evidence without proof of authenticity, merely creates a presumption that the documents are genuine, and does not import verity to any of their recitals.—Gwin v. Calegaris, 139 Cal. 384, 73 Pac. 851.

[j] The minutes of the meeting of the directors of a corporation are not conclusive evidence of the terms of a contract between the corporation and another, where the latter had no knowledge of such minutes.—Gabriel v. Bank of Suisun, 145 Cal. 266, 78 Pac. 736.

§ 369. —— Effect of Introducing Part of Document or Record.

[a] Defendant cannot offer in evidence an extract or single clause of a book containing the mining rules, but must offer the whole book, the book being in court and in possession of defendant, and it being necessary to a fair understanding of any one part that the whole should be inspected.—English v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 107, 76 Am. Dec. 574.

[b] If one party read a portion of a document in evidence in his behalf, the other party is entitled to the reading of the remaining portions thereof, before the intervention of other testimony.—Spanagel v. Dellinger, 38 Cal. 278.

§ 370. Judicial Records or Proceedings.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible to show a former adjudication, and all facts bearing upon it.—Walsh v. Harris, 10 Cal. 392.

[b] Parol evidence is not admissible to vary the terms of a decree of divorce, or change the rights of the parties thereunder.—Wilson v. Wilson, 45 Cal. 399.

[c] There is some conflict in the authorities upon the question whether parol evidence can ever be resorted to for the purpose of showing what matters within the issues were not submitted to the jury in a former action; but none as to the inadmissibility of such evidence to prove that matters outside of the issues were submitted and passed upon.—Meredith v. Santa Clara M. Assn., 56 Cal. 178.

[d] Parol evidence is not admissible for the purpose of showing that the judgment might have located the ditch in a different position, or that the description of said ditch in the said judgment is not absolutely accurate.—Wishon v. Superior Court of Tulare County, 138 Cal. 73, 70 Pac. 1007.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 571-581; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2365-2388, §§ 1678-1697.

§ 371. Official Records and Documents.

[a] The record of the board of supervisors of the county, under their seal, is evidence of its contents, unless impeached in direct proceedings; and it could not be shown that a matter therein recorded was not complete. People v. Bircham, 12 Cal. 50.

[ab] Official surveys cannot be impeached and invalidated by parol proof.—Chapman v. Polack, 70 Cal. 487, 11 Pac. 764.

[b] It is not competent to supply alleged deficiencies in records by parol evidence.—Bode v. Trimmer, 82 Cal. 518, 23 Pac. 187.

[c] The change from the old to the new constitution does not affect the rule that the record of the authenticated and enrolled statute in the office of the Secretary of State cannot be impeached by evidence of any fact outside of such record.—County of Yolo v. Colgan, 132 Cal. 265, 84 Am. St. Rep. 41, 64 Pac. 403.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 581-587; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2388-2405, §§ 1698-1713.

§ 372. —— Registration or Certificate Thereof.

[a] A certificate by the proper custodian of a public official document or record that a copy thereof is correct cannot be shown by parol to be false.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

[b] A statement in the certificate of a recorder that a lien was duly sworn to is conclusive evidence of that fact.—Silvester v. Coe Quartz Mine Co., 80 Cal. 510, 22 Pac. 217.

§ 373. Corporate Records and Proceedings.

[a] A corporation may introduce parol evidence to show that the minutes of a resolution of its board of trustees do not correctly express a proposition voted by the board.—Gilson Quartz Min. Co. v. Gilson, 51 Cal. 341.

[b] In a suit on an assessment, the subscriber cannot show, in contradiction of the secretary's minutes, that the directors were not elected by ballot.—San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Beecher, 101 Cal. 70, 35 Pac. 349; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Belding, 35 Pac. 353.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 588; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2406, 2407, §§ 1717, 1718.

§ 374. Deeds.

[a] Parol evidence is inadmissible to add to, vary, or change the terms of a deed not attacked on the ground of fraud or mistake.—Judson v. Malloy, 40 Cal. 299; Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 296, 11 Pac. 820.

[ab] Parol evidence is inadmissible to show intention of grantor that deed should have effect different from that apparent on its face.—Mowry v. Heney, 86 Cal. 475, 25 Pac. 17.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 1625, providing that the execution of a contract in writing supersedes all the oral negotiations or stipulations concerning its matter which preceded or accompanied the execution of the instrument, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 1856, providing that when the terms of an agreement have been reduced to writing by the parties, it is to be considered as containing all those terms, and that the term "agreement" includes deeds as well as contracts between parties, evidence of oral agreements made during negotiations leading up to the execution and delivery of deeds in exchange of land, and contradictory of such deeds, is incompetent.—Beall v. Fisher, 95 Cal. 568, 30 Pac. 773.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 375. —— Official Deed.

[a] Parol evidence is inadmissible to show that a constable's sale was made by virtue of any other judgment or execution than that recited in the deed; and it is also inadmissible to show that the constable sold the interest of a person in the land described in the deed, whose interest the deed itself does not recite upon its face to have been sold.—Donahue v. McNulty, 24 Cal. 411, 85 Am. Dec. 78.

§ 376. —— Description of Premises.

[a] Where a boundary line in a deed was described as commencing at a tree, and "thence running easterly parallel with the southern line of said Antelope ranch, according to the survey of the same made by the United States surveyor general for said state, to said Antelope creek," held, that the language was not ambiguous, and evidence aliunde was not admissible to show that a straight line following the general course of the southern boundary was intended.—Fratt v. Woodward, 32 Cal. 219, 91 Am. Dec. 573.

[b] Vendee cannot show by parol that vendor agreed in same contract to sell and convey other lands not included in the deed.—Ward v. McNaughton, 43 Cal. 159; Altschul v. San Francisco etc. Assn., 43 Cal. 171.

[c] Where the description in a deed is broad enough to include both high lands and marsh lands, but it is silent as to the quantity of land intended to be conveyed, parol evidence is not admissible to show the intention of the grantor to exclude such marsh lands. Dent v. Bird, 67 Cal. 652, 8 Pac. 504; Hall v. Hebard, 8 Pac. 507.

[d] Under a deed purporting to convey a certain number of feet along a street, commencing at a certain point, only that number of feet passed by the deed; and therefore evidence that the grantor, in measuring off the land granted, measured more than that number of feet, is incompetent to show that more than the number of feet stated passed by the deed.—Hogins v. Boggs, 34 Pac. 653.

§ 377. Patents.

[a] Patent cannot be reformed or varied by parol evidence.—Chipley v. Farris, 45 Cal. 528.

§ 378. Stipulations.

[a] Evidence is inadmissible to contradict a written stipulation.—Lord v. Sherman, 2 Cal. 498.

§ 379. Assignments.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible to show that an assignment of stock, with dividends from date fixed, did not include a dividend expected before that date.—Brewster v. Lathrop, 15 Cal. 21.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1856, limiting the rule that parol evidence is inadmissible to contradict a written agreement by the parties to the agreement and their representatives and successors in interest, parol evidence of a transfer of coyote bounty claims to plaintiff could not be objected to by the state, in an action thereon, on the ground that it tended to contradict certain powers of attorney executed to the transferees as a part of the transfer.—Bickerdike v. State, 144 Cal. 681, 78 Pac. 270.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 635; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2443-2446, §§ 1733-1835½.

§ 380. Bills of Sale.

[a] Parol evidence as to what property was covered by a certain bill of sale introduced in evidence, the property being therein described, is inadmissible.—Schroeder v. Schmidt, 74 Cal. 459, 16 Pac. 243.

[b] One who accepts a bill of sale purporting to transfer a certain number of cattle is not estopped thereby from denying that he actually received that number.—Murdock v. Clarke, 90 Cal. 427, 24 Pac. 272, 27 Pac. 275.

[c] Oral evidence is inadmissible to show that from a sale of a photograph gallery by bill of sale transferring all the material and working apparatus and all cameras and negatives in the gallery, the parties orally reserved a lens and camera, and a stated number of negatives located therein.—Hodson v. Varney, 122 Cal. 619, 55 Pac. 413.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 593, 594; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2436-2442, §§ 1729-1732.

§ 381. —— Warranty.

[a] A written agreement for the sale of personal property will be presumed to express all the terms of the agreement between the parties, and parol evidence is inadmissible to show the existence of a warranty not expressed in the contract.—Johnson v. Powers, 65 Cal. 179.

§ 382. Leases.

[a] Parol evidence to show what was said at the time of and before executing a lease, for the purpose of varying its terms, is not admissible.—Jungerman v. Bovee, 19 Cal. 354.

[b] Parol evidence of an agreement that the tenant should have the right to remove buildings erected by him is inadmissible, the written lease providing that the premises should be surrendered at the end of the term, reasonable use, etc., excepted.—Jungerman v. Bovee, 19 Cal. 354.

[c] Unexecuted oral agreement cannot alter written lease under Civil Code, section 1698. Taylor v. Soldati, 68 Cal. 28, 8 Pac. 518.

[d] Testimony as to conversation affecting written lease held inadmissible.—Johnston v. Mulcahy (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 491.

§ 383. Mortgages.

[a] Declaration in mortgage that seal affixed is seal of person signing, cannot be varied by parol evidence.—Richardson v. Scott River etc. Co., 22 Cal. 150.

[b] When an overdraft account with a bank is secured by a note and mortgages payable on or before three years, and interest as due is charged in the account, the rules against parol evidence (Civ. Code, sec. 1625; Code Civ. Proc., sec. 1856) forbid proof of an oral agreement that the debt should be due at any time within the three years, at the bank's option.—Bullion & Exchange Bank v. Spooner, 36 Pac. 121.

[c] Parol evidence is not admissible to show that a mortgage securing advances made was also to cover future advances.—Barnhart v. Edwards, 47 Pac. 251.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 626-628; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2456-2463, §§ 1746-1753.

§ 384. Contracts in General.

[a] In the absence of fraud or mistake, parol evidence is not admissible to vary or add to the terms of a written contract.—Leonard v. Vischer, 2 Cal. 37; Swain v. Grangers' Union, 69 Cal. 187, 10 Pac. 404; Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 296, 11 Pac. 820; Miller v. Butterfield, 79 Cal. 65, 21 Pac. 543; Johnson v. Bibb Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 98-101, 73 Pac. 730.

[b] Where parties enter into a written contract, their rights must be controlled thereby, and in the absence of fraud or mistake, all evidence of contemporaneous oral agreement on the same subject matter, varying, modifying, or contradicting the written agreement, is inadmissible.—Conner v. Clark, 12 Cal. 168, 73 Am. Dec. 529; Bryan v. Idaho Quartz Min. Co., 73 Cal. 249, 14 Pac. 859.

[c] Parol evidence is not admissible to show a mistake in a written contract, unless the mistake is pleaded, and a reformation asked. Pierson v. McCahill, 21 Cal. 123.

[d] Where a letter and contract are unambiguous, a witness cannot testify as to his understanding of the meaning thereof.—Donohoe v. Mariposa Land etc. Co., 66 Cal. 317, 5 Pac. 495.

[e] Where there is a written agreement to repay a loan at a stated time, the lender will not be allowed to testify as to an oral agreement to alter the terms of the written agreement, made at the time of the loan.—Booth v. Hoskins, 75 Cal. 271, 17 Pac. 225.

[f] Parol evidence is inadmissible to show negotiations antecedent to written contract. Schurtz v. Romer, 82 Cal. 478, 23 Pac. 118; Board of Education v. Grant, 118 Cal. 44, 50 Pac. 5.

[g] Deviation not varying terms of contract but merely expanding them as provided in it may be proved by parol.—White v. Soto, 82 Cal. 658, 23 Pac. 210.

[h] Parol evidence is inadmissible to prove agreements superseded by written contract.—Smith v. Taylor, 82 Cal. 546, 23 Pac. 217.

[i] Where an irrigation company contracts to furnish a certain amount of water, parol evidence that the purchaser, and others holding similar contracts, understood the same to confer the right of receiving the water in an accumulated flow, is inadmissible.—Hewitt v. San Jacinto etc. Irr. Dist., 124 Cal. 186, 56 Pac. 893.

[j] Evidence of surety's intention to give the amount of the debt to the principal held an attempt to vary a written contract by parol, in violation of Civil Code, sections 1639, 1698, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 1856.—Townsend v. Sullivan (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 435.

[k] An indorsement of a compromise on a bill is not a mere receipt, but a contract of satisfaction, which could not be varied by parol.—Jersey Island Dredging Co. v. Whitney (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 509.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 596; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2464-2492, §§ 1756-1765.

§ 385. —— Contract for Partnership.

[a] Parol evidence is inadmissible to enlarge, extend, or otherwise vary a contract entered into between plaintiff and defendant to share equally in any mine which they might find; and any subsequent contract, whether written or parol, with respect to the management or disposal of the property to be acquired, is wholly immaterial.—Miller v. Butterfield, 79 Cal. 62, 21 Pac. 543.

§ 386. —— Contracts of Employment.

[a] A written proposition for employment by defendant to plaintiff was orally accepted by plaintiff. Held that, in an action by plaintiff for wrongful discharge, oral evidence is inadmissible to change the contract, except as to matters necessarily implied in it or necessary to its performance.—Wiley v. California Hosiery Co., 32 Pac. 522.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 604; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2492-2498, §§ 1766-1771.

§ 387. —— Power of Attorney.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible to interpret power of attorney.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 307, 11 Pac. 820.

[b] Parol evidence is inadmissible to enlarge agent's powers or confer others not enumerated.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 307, 314, 11 Pac. 820.

§ 388. —— Amount of Value of Services.

[a] Where the written contract provides for a certain payment for the work to be performed, it cannot be varied by proof of a prior parol agreement for a less price.—McDonald v. Poole, 113 Cal. 437, 45 Pac. 702.

§ 389. —— Contracts for Sale of Land or Chattels.

[a] Where the written contract is that the vendee should take the land subject to a specified mortgage, evidence that, when the contract was executed, he knew of the existence of other encumbrances, and that there was a parol agreement as to how, when, and by whom they were to be paid off, is inadmissible, as Civil Code, section 1625, provides that when the parties to a contract reduce it to writing, the writing supersedes all other agreements between them on that subject.—Smith v. Taylor, 82 Cal. 533, 23 Pac. 217; Good v. Taylor, 23 Pac. 220; Carscaddon v. Taylor, 23 Pac. 220.

[b] In an action for damages for defendant's failure to deliver certain personalty, pursuant to a contract in writing, effected through the agent of plaintiff's assignor, and providing for payment on delivery, where it was averred in the answer that defendant had been induced to enter into such contract by means of a fraudulent parol promise, by such agent, that a portion of the agreed price should be paid in advance of the time of delivery, it was error to reject evidence that such promise was made without any intention that it should be performed, and was therefore one of the forms of actual fraud, as defined in Civil Code, section 1572, though, if honestly made, it was within the rule forbidding proof of a contemporaneous or prior oral agreement to detract from the terms of a contract in writing.—Langley v. Rodriguez, 122 Cal. 580, 68 Am. St. Rep. 70, 55 Pac. 406.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1856, does not authorize admission of parol evidence to show a sale to be one by sample (Civ. Code, secs. 1753, 1754).—Gardiner v. McDonogh, 147 Cal. 313, 81 Pac. 964.

[d] In an action to recover for logs sold and delivered, where there is no allegation of mistake or misunderstanding, the evidence of one who made the contract for defendant as to what he understood by certain terms therein is inadmissible.—Bullock v. Consumers' Lumber Co., 31 Pac. 367.

§ 390. —— Description of Property Included.

[a] Where a contract was for the sale and delivery of so much sound rice, without specifying any particular rice, there being no ambiguity on the face of the contract, parol evidence is inadmissible for the purpose of varying its terms by causing it to refer to a particular cargo.—Ruiz v. Norton, 4 Cal. 355, 60 Am. Dec. 618.

[b] Oral evidence is inadmissible to include other and more property in a sale than that described in the written contract.—Osborn v. Hendrickson, 7 Cal. 282.

§ 391. Bills and Notes.

[a] Absolute promise in bill or note cannot be changed by parol proof to a conditional one.—Aud v. Magruder, 10 Cal. 282.

[b] Parol evidence is not admissible, as showing a want of consideration, where it does not tend to prove that there was no such consideration as is acknowledged by the terms of the note, but that there was no such contract as that alleged.—Conner v. Clark, 12 Cal. 168, 73 Am. Dec. 529.

[c] Where a note on its face draws two and a half per cent per month interest, parol evidence is not admissible to prove that from a certain time the interest had been reduced by a verbal agreement between the parties to one and a half per cent per month. Interest beyond the statutory rate cannot be established by parol.—Adler v. Friedman, 16 Cal. 138.

[d] In an action on note, it cannot be shown that there was a contemporaneous parol agreement that the same should be payable only out of a particular fund, since to do so would be to vary by parol the terms of a written contract.—Guy v. Bibend, 41 Cal. 322.

[e] Parol evidence is not admissible to show that note was to be surrendered upon settlement of an account which it was given to secure.—San Jose Sav. Bank v. Stone, 59 Cal. 183.

[f] Provision in note to pay interest cannot be varied by proof of parol agreement.—Fisk v. Casey, 119 Cal. 645, 51 Pac. 1077.

[g] Parol evidence is inadmissible to show that note payable on certain date was not to be paid except on happening of certain event. Prouty v. Adams, 141 Cal. 307, 74 Pac. 845.

[h] Where the makers of notes resisted payment on the ground of failure of consideration, evidence to vary the terms of the notes, which in no way related to consideration, was properly excluded.—Easton Packing Co. v. Kennedy, 131 Cal. xviii, 63 Pac. 130.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 589; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2531-2551, §§ 1799-1806.

§ 392. —— Indorsement and Transfer.

[a] Where demand and notice are both waived by the indorser of a note, the former verbally and the latter in writing, parol evidence is admissible to prove the verbal waiver.—Mills v. Beard, 19 Cal. 158.

[b] The written contract of indorsement on a note cannot be changed from a contract of conditional liability, depending on proper demand and notice, to an unconditional promise, by parol evidence of statements made before and at the time of the indorsement.—Goldman v. Davis, 23 Cal. 256.

[c] Contract of indorsement cannot be varied or changed by parol evidence of verbal agreement made prior to or after it.—Citizens' Bank v. Jones, 121 Cal. 32, 53 Pac. 354.

[d] Evidence of the intention of an indorser not to waive presentation or notice, who is found on sufficient proof to have attached his signature under the stamped waiver, is not admissible, and, if admitted without objection, is irrelevant and immaterial, and cannot affect or change his liability.—Farmers' Exchange Bank v. Altura Gold Mill etc., 129 Cal. 263, 61 Pac. 1077.

§ 393. Receipts.

[a] A receipt acknowledging payment of a debt, whether in money or some other medium, may be explained or contradicted by parol.—Hawley v. Bader, 15 Cal. 44.

[b] A receipt in a broker's contract for the sale of stock acknowledging the receipt of the first payment on the margin of the contract is only prima facie evidence of the payment of the money, and may be explained by parol testimony.—Winans v. Hassey, 48 Cal. 634.

[c] Receipt is always open to explanation and purpose for which it was given may be shown.—Comptoir D. De P. v. Dresbach, 78 Cal. 27, 20 Pac. 28.

[d] Parol evidence is admissible to show that money recited in receipt to be paid for one purpose was paid for another.—Snodgrass v. Parks, 79 Cal. 60, 21 Pac. 429.

[e] A receipt given an officer to make up his record in a foreclosure suit may be explained by parol evidence showing that no money was in fact received.—Hardin v. Dickey, 123 Cal. 513, 56 Pac. 258.

[f] A receipt may always be explained by parol.—Lacrabere v. Wise, 71 Pac. 175.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 629-634; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2584-2610, §§ 1829-1842.

§ 394. Memoranda not Constituting Contract or Disposition of Property.

[a] An entry in a memorandum book is subject to explanation by the party making it, to the same extent as it would have been had the words been spoken instead of being written.—Rice v. Heath, 39 Cal. 609.

[b] Written admissions are explainable by parol.—Comptoir D. De P. v. Dresbach, 78 Cal. 28, 20 Pac. 28.

[c] The rule that parol evidence is not admissible to vary the terms of a written contract does not apply to a memorandum, signed by one of the parties, which contains no contract stipulations, and does not define the mutual obligations, and which appears on its face to be intended as an informal memorandum, to be considered in connection with oral negotiations which preceded it.—Kreuzberger v. Wingfield, 96 Cal. 251, 31 Pac. 109.

[d] A draft of a chattel mortgage prepared by the plaintiffs to be executed by the original defendant, but not executed, is not a written instrument within the rule that oral testimony is not admissible to vary its meaning; but its statements coming from the plaintiffs were merely admissions on their part which were subject to explanation, equally with like verbal admissions.—Wise v. Collins, 121 Cal. 147, 53 Pac. 640.

[e] In an action to quiet the title of the grantee of the deed absolute against the father and daughter, where the defendants offered in evidence a written memorandum showing the different items which made up the amount of the price to be paid by the daughter, including taxes for the year, under the option to repurchase, a question asking for parol proof as to who was to pay the taxes for the year was properly disallowed.—Garwood v. Wheaton, 128 Cal. 399, 60 Pac. 961.

§ 395. In General.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible when it relates to the execution or authenticity of a written contract.—Verzan v. McGregor, 23 Cal. 339.

[b] Delivery of an instrument may be shown by parol.—Verzan v. McGregor, 23 Cal. 339.

[c] Parol evidence contradicting the date of an official record is admissible.—Gately v. Irvine, 51 Cal. 172.

[d] Parol evidence should not be allowed to vary terms of writing, though admitted for another purpose.—Tyler v. Stone, 81 Cal. 238, 22 Pac. 598.

[e] While the possession of a deed by the grantee is prima facie evidence that it was delivered by the grantor with intent that it should take effect according to its terms, yet such possession is not conclusive evidence of a valid delivery; and it may be shown by parol evidence that a deed in the possession of the grantee was not delivered.—Black v. Sharkey, 104 Cal. 279, 37 Pac. 939.

[f] Parol evidence is admissible when it is entirely consistent with and in no manner changes or contradicts written instrument.—Johnson v. Bibb Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 98, 73 Pac. 730.

[g] Evidence as to the understanding of parties when a contract was executed, as to its meaning, was properly excluded. Judgment (1902) 70 Pac. 470, reversed on rehearing.—Swift v. Occidental Min. etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161, 74 Pac. 700.

§ 396. Sustaining Validity of Instrument.

[a] The general rule that parol testimony is inadmissible to vary a written contract does not exclude parol proof of mistake in its execution or terms, when a reformation of the instrument is sought.—(1862) Pierson v. McCahill, 21 Cal. 122; (1863) Pierson v. McCahill, 23 Cal. 249; Murray v. Dake, 46 Cal. 644.

§ 397. Matters for Which Writing Does not Provide.

[a] The docket of a justice is primary evidence under the statute, but its omissions may be supplied by parol evidence, when necessary.—Blair v. Hamilton, 32 Cal. 49.

[b] Parol evidence is admissible when parties have not incorporated into instrument all the terms of their agreement.—Sivers v. Sivers, 97 Cal. 521, 32 Pac. 571; Bradford Inv. Co. v. Joost, 117 Cal. 210, 48 Pac. 1083.

[c] Under Civil Code, section 226, providing that an order of adoption must be made by a judge of the county where the adopting parent resides, where an order fails to recite that fact, extrinsic evidence is admissible to show it.—Williams' Estate, In re, 102 Cal. 70, 41 Am. St. Rep. 163, 36 Pac. 407.

[d] Parol evidence is admissible when from an inspection of the writing it appears upon its face that it is not intended to be a complete contract.—Johnson v. Bibb Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 98, 73 Pac. 730.

§ 398. —— In Official Records and Proceedings.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible to prove facts omitted from the record, unless the law expressly and imperatively requires all matters to appear of record, and makes the record the only evidence.—Gordon v. San Diego, 108 Cal. 264, 41 Pac. 301.

§ 399. —— In Contracts in General.

[a] Where the sale of materials employed in the construction and alteration of a building is made by a written contract, which is silent as to the purpose for which the articles sold were intended to be used, parol evidence is admissible to show such purpose, and thereby establish a mechanic's lien for the price in favor of the seller.—Donahue v. Cromartie, 21 Cal. 80.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 1614, which declares that "a written instrument is presumptive evidence of a consideration," a real estate agent is entitled to show by parol evidence the reasonable value of his services in effecting a sale under the authority of a memorandum which does not state the commission he is to receive.—Toomey v. Dunphy, 86 Cal. 639, 25 Pac. 130.

[c] Where a written contract relates to services to be rendered by one of the parties, but is silent as to the compensation to be paid therefor, oral evidence is admissible to show the compensation agreed on, as such evidence does not tend to vary the terms of the written contract, but to establish an independent collateral agreement, not inconsistent therewith.—Guidery v. Green, 95 Cal. 630, 30 Pac. 786.

[d] In an action on a written contract for the payment of money, where no time of payment is fixed, it is competent to show by oral testimony when such contract was agreed to be performed.—Sivers v. Sivers, 97 Cal. 518, 32 Pac. 571.

§ 400. —— In Assignments.

[a] Where an assignment of a claim failed to name the assignee, parol evidence is properly admitted, on the trial of an action thereon, to show that plaintiff was the assignee, and that his name was omitted by mistake; and plaintiff's offer to have the assignment corrected by the assignor by inserting his name should be allowed by the court.—Owen v. Meade, 104 Cal. 179, 37 Pac. 923.

§ 401. —— Railroad Ticket.

[a] A railroad passenger ticket is not a contract expressing all the conditions and limitations usually contained in a written agreement, and hence parol evidence is admissible to show the limitations and conditions on which a ticket was sold.—Ames v. Southern Pac. Co., 141 Cal. 728, 75 Pac. 310.

§ 402. —— In Contracts of Partnership.

[a] When stranger to joint written contract, entered into by several persons, relies on it as evidence of a partnership between the persons who signed it, in reference to the work the parties undertook by the contract to perform, such parties may show, by parol evidence, the true relations between themselves, even though such evidence vary or contradict its terms.—Smith v. Moynihan, 44 Cal. 53.

§ 403. Writing Showing Alteration.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible to show that a contract for hay and pasture for cattle was prepared by their owner; that it provided for payment for all hay used by the cattle at a certain price; that the owner of the hay and pasture refused to sign it, insisting that all the hay should be taken, or none; that the owner of the cattle then erased from the contract the provision as to paying for the hay used, and added thereto a provision for taking all the hay, but, by an oversight, a provision of general similar import to the one erased was still retained in another part of the contract.—Lassing v. James, 107 Cal. 348, 40 Pac. 534.

§ 404. —— Explaining Alteration.

[a] In absence of circumstances of estoppel, postscript to genuine letter may be shown to have been added without knowledge or authority of writer.—Robinson v. Nevada Bank, 81 Cal. 112, 22 Pac. 478.

§ 405. Connection of Contemporaneous Writings.

§ 406. Parties to Instrument or Obligation.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible to show that the respective parties to a contract are interested in its subject matter in a different manner, capacity, or extent than is indicated on the face of the contract, or to show who are the real principals in the transactions to which the contract relates.—Ellis v. Crawford, 39 Cal. 523.

[b] In an action on a contract signed by G. as principal and H. as witness, parol evidence is admissible to show that G. had no interest in the matter further than to act as a disguise for H., and that the latter was the real party in interest.—Curran v. Holland, 141 Cal. 437, 75 Pac. 46.

§ 407. —— Affecting Rights and Liabilities of Persons not Named.

[a] One who in writing assigns a written contract to another, knowing that a third person was to be equally interested with the assignee in the rights assigned, cannot show by parol that such third person was intended to be bound by an agreement which he did not sign, executed by the assignee in consideration of the assignment.—Ferguson v. McBean, 91 Cal. 63, 27 Pac. 518, 14 L. R. A. 65.

§ 408. —— Personal or Representative Capacity.

[a] Where a bond made in connection with a mortgage to secure a debt of a corporation was signed by four persons, without description of themselves as agents, or statement that the corporation was the party intended to be bound, parol evidence is inadmissible to show such bond to be that of the corporation, or that such persons signed it in their capacity as directors.—Richardson v. Scott River W. & M. Co., 22 Cal. 150.

[b] Parol evidence may be introduced to show that a contract reciting that "A. W. Von Schmidt, president of the Von Schmidt Dredging Co., charters from the Southern Pacific Co." two barges, "to be used as pontoons to hold up the discharge pipes of the dredging company," and signed "A. W. Von Schmidt, President Von Schmidt Dredge Co.," is the contract of the company, and not of Von Schmidt individually.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Von Schmidt Dredge Co., 118 Cal. 368, 50 Pac. 650.

[c] Where a contract was made by the agent of a corporation for the corporation's benefit, parol evidence was admissible to show such fact, though the contract bore no such suggestion on its face.—Escondido Oil etc. Co. v. Glaser, 144 Cal. 494, 77 Pac. 1040.

§ 409. —— Existence of Relation Created by Writing.

[a] When beneficiary is named in a trust deed, parol evidence is inadmissible to show that trustee was intended as beneficiary.—Young America Engine Co. No. 6 v. City of Sacramento, 47 Cal. 594.

§ 410. Nature of Consideration.

[a] As to instruments under seal generally, the American rule seems to be that the consideration clause in a deed can be explained by parol proof, at least where the consideration proven is of the same species as that mentioned in the instrument.—Bennett v. Solomon, 6 Cal. 134.

[b] Parol evidence is admissible to prove some other consideration than that which is expressed, if it be consistent with that which is expressed, and does not alter the effect of the instrument.—Coles v. Soulsby, 21 Cal. 47.

[c] Parol proof is admissible to show a consideration where none is expressed in the deed, or the sum is left blank.—Merle v. Mathews, 26 Cal. 455.

[d] The clause in a deed acknowledging payment of the consideration is mere prima facie evidence, and may be controlled and rebutted by parol evidence.—Millard v. Hathaway, 27 Cal. 119; (1884) Anthony v. Chapman, 65 Cal. 73, 2 Pac. 889.

[e] Recital of money consideration may be contradicted by parol evidence to show a gift.—Peck v. Vandenberg, 30 Cal. 12.

[f] In a personal action by the grantor to recover the purchase money, not founded on the covenant to pay, defendant may show by parol that the consideration named in the deed was not to be paid at all, or was not the real consideration, and may prove what was the actual consideration.—Rhine v. Ellen, 36 Cal. 362.

[g] Conditional agreement to reconvey may be proved by parol, as part of consideration. Rhine v. Ellen, 36 Cal. 362.

[h] Where a conveyance is made to the husband, or to the wife after the death of her husband, under a contract of sale, made by him in his lifetime, it is competent for the wife, or anyone claiming under her, to show by parol that the consideration was paid out of her separate estate.—Ingersoll v. Truebody, 40 Cal. 603.

[i] If a husband, who is free from debt, purchase property with community funds and direct the conveyance to be made to his wife, with intent to make it her separate estate, the deed will take effect as a gift; and if the conveyance be on its face an ordinary deed of grant, bargain, and sale, reciting a valuable consideration, it is competent to show by parol the real facts, in order to rebut the presumption that it is common property. Woods v. Whitney, 42 Cal. 358.

[j] Parol evidence to show a deed to be a gift is admissible at law as well as in equity. Higgins v. Higgins, 46 Cal. 265.

[k] In an action to set aside a deed for inadequacy of consideration it may be shown in defense that the consideration was different in kind from that recited therein.—Carty v. Connolly, 91 Cal. 15, 27 Pac. 599.

[l] It is competent to prove other consideration than that mentioned in a deed.—Cook v. Cockins, 117 Cal. 152, 48 Pac. 1025.

[m] The evidence was not admissible on the theory that the consideration might be shown by parol owing to the confidential relation of partnership, no unfairness or suppression of knowledge being averred.—Arnold v. Arnold, 137 Cal. 291, 70 Pac. 23.

§ 411. —— Of Contract in General.

[a] Parol evidence cannot be introduced to contradict or show that the consideration of a contract was different from that expressed in the writing, when the legal operation of the writing to pass the entire interest, according to the purpose therein designated, would be defeated.—Hendrick v. Crowley, 31 Cal. 471.

[b] Plaintiff alleged that, he and defendant having been partners, plaintiff transferred his interest solely that defendant might conveniently handle the business, and the prayer was for a dissolution and accounting. The defense was that there had been a dissolution and transfer for value. Plaintiff introduced a written instrument between him and defendant reciting a dissolution and transfer for value. Held, proper not to allow plaintiff to testify that the instrument was without consideration.—Arnold v. Arnold, 137 Cal. 291, 70 Pac. 23.

§ 412. —— Of Assignments.

[a] The consideration of the assignment of a personal chattel or chose in action may be proven by parol and a different one established from that expressed in the instrument. Bennett v. Solomon, 6 Cal. 134.

[b] In case of a written assignment, verbal testimony to show the real consideration is admissible, notwithstanding the recitals, even if its actual effect is to show the object of the assignment.—Lockwood v. Canfield, 20 Cal. 126.

§ 413. —— Of Mortgages.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible to prove existence of debt for which a mortgage was given.—Shaver v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 10 Cal. 396.

§ 414. —— Of Bills and Notes.

[a] Where, in an action on a note, it appeared that said note was given in consideration of the balance due on a prior note, such prior note being collateral to and described in a written agreement on the part of plaintiff to sell defendant certain property therein, and compliance therewith to be deemed full consideration for the note therein set out, oral evidence is inadmissible to show that certain land warrants, not specified in such agreement, formed part of the consideration of the note in suit.—Langan v. Langan, 89 Cal. 186, 26 Pac. 764.

§ 415. —— Of Release.

[a] Oral evidence is admissible to show the true consideration on which a written release is executed. Such evidence does not tend to alter the terms of the release.—Stufflebeem v. Arnold, 57 Cal. 11.

§ 416. Existence of Condition or Contingency.

[a] Where the words import an unconditional promise to pay the payee so much money at a certain time, the law affixes to this unequivocal language its obvious signification. The payor is not permitted to contradict the words by showing that when he promised to pay absolutely he meant to bind himself to pay conditionally, or on some contingency, or if another did not, or if demand was made and notice given.—Aud v. Magruder, 10 Cal. 282.

[b] Parol evidence is admissible to show whether a contract was delivered absolutely or on condition.—Verzan v. McGregor, 23 Cal. 339.

[c] Parol evidence is inadmissible to show that absolute deed delivered to grantee was not to take effect except in event of grantor's death.—Mowry v. Heney, 86 Cal. 475, 476, 25 Pac. 17.

[d] In an action to foreclose a mortgage to which the son was a party, evidence is admissible to show that the mother executed to him a deed of the property prior to the mortgage, and placed it in the hands of another person as a depositary, to be delivered after her death, and that the mortgagee had notice of the execution and deposit of the deed at the time he received his mortgage; and parol evidence is admissible to show all the facts and conditions upon which the deed was deposited.—Wittenbrock v. Cass, 110 Cal. 1, 42 Pac. 300.

[e] In an action by the payee of a promissory note against the makers, where the payee had agreed in writing to indemnify the makers "in the payment" of the note, which was given in lieu of rent for certain land, title to which was in litigation, the makers could not interpose a defense inconsistent with such contract of indemnity, to the effect that they were not to be required to pay the note unless the payee's title to the land was established.—Prouty v. Adams, 141 Cal. 304, 74 Pac. 845.

[f] Parol evidence held inadmissible to add new terms to a full written escrow agreement signed by both parties.—Womble v. Wilbur (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 916.

§ 417. Existence of Custom or Usage.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 12, provides that evidence of usage may be given to explain the true character of a contract where its true character is not otherwise plain. A foreign shipper agreed to sell to defendant in San Francisco cargoes of coal at a specified price, the seller to pay cost of freight, insurance, exchange, and duty, and shipment to be made on a charter-party requiring port charges, pilotage and wharfage dues and charges to be paid for the ship as customary. The cargo was entered after a reduction of duty. Held, that evidence was not admissible of a custom among dealers in San Francisco that when coal was bought in a foreign country, and the duty was reduced, such reduction operated to the benefit of the purchaser. Judgment, 71 Pac. 697, reversed. Withers v. Moore, 140 Cal. 591, 74 Pac. 159.

[b] Evidence of a custom allowing a prospector to burn oil produced on a claim is inadmissible to show the rights of the lessee of an oil claim under a written lease. Judgment (1902) 70 Pac. 470, reversed on rehearing.—Swift v. Occidental Mining etc. Co., 141 Cal. 161, 74 Pac. 700.

§ 418. Existence or Accrual of Liability.

[a] In an action on a note, by the payee, or by one taking it with notice, the maker may, by way of defense, prove a parol contemporaneous agreement that the note having been given for the price of a stack of hay, if the value of such hay at a fixed price per ton did not amount to the face of the note, a rebate was to be made in the maker's favor of the difference between the actual value of the hay and the face of the note, and that, under such agreement, a less sum is due than that sued for.—Braly v. Henry, 71 Cal. 481, 60 Am. Rep. 543, 11 Pac. 385, 12 Pac. 623.

[ab] Plaintiff loaned money to defendant, taking as security certain mortgage bonds, under a written agreement giving power of sale, and providing that, if the security deteriorated in value, defendant should reduce the note in proportion. Held, that parol evidence that plaintiff offered to look only to the securities is inadmissible as contradicting the written agreement.—Bradford Inv. Co. v. Joost, 117 Cal. 204, 48 Pac. 1083.

[b] Contemporary oral agreement whereby order or promise contained in note is rendered null or conditional on payment made to depend upon future contingency, is inadmissible.—Leonard v. Miner, 120 Cal. 406, 407, 52 Pac. 655.

[c] Where premises were leased under a written lease, in an action to recover the possession, for failure to pay the rent after notice, it was proper to reject parol evidence that the time for the payment of the rent becoming due on the date mentioned in the lease was extended.—Harloe v. Lambie, 132 Cal. 133, 64 Pac. 88.

§ 419. Nature and Extent of Liability.

[a] When a promissory note is signed by two persons in the same manner, with nothing on the face of the note to show that one was merely a surety, he cannot set up in defense that he was such, and that the plaintiff had not sued in due time, and had given no notice of demand and protest.—Kritzer v. Mills, 9 Cal. 21.

[b] Parol evidence is inadmissible for one of the makers of a note to show a verbal agreement, contemporaneous with the note, that he should be liable only after default on the part of the other promisor as surety. Aud v. Magruder, 10 Cal. 282.

[c] One cannot contend, when sued on his note, that it was agreed that the note should stand as security only for such an amount as should be found ultimately due on an accounting.—San Jose Sav. Bank v. Stone, 59 Cal. 183.

[d] Where a note bore an indorsement that it was given "for the purpose of securing the payment of" a mortgage debt of a third person, parol evidence was not admissible to show that the maker intended to guarantee only the deficiency remaining after forecloure of the mortgage.—Adams v. Wallace, 119 Cal. 67, 51 Pac. 14.

[e] Proof of waiver of forfeiture clause of contract does not tend to vary its terms and may be established by parol.—Knarston v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 140 Cal. 63, 64, 67, 73 Pac. 740.

[f] Under Civil Code, section 2831, parol evidence is admissible to show that the maker of an instrument is a surety, except as against persons who have acted on the faith of his apparent character of principal.—National Bank of Commerce of San Diego v. Schirm (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 981.

§ 420. Effect of Writing as to Persons not Parties or Privies Thereto.

[a] The rule that parol evidence is not admissible to contradict or vary a written contract does not apply in an action between one of the parties to the contract and a stranger. Smith v. Moynihan, 44 Cal. 53; Hussman v. Wilke, 50 Cal. 250.

[b] B., who had delivered personal property to certain persons under a written agreement to give them a bill of sale when their note for the price was fully paid, assigned the contract, giving the assignee authority to complete the same and collect the money; but the assignment did not purport to transfer title to the property, and B. thereafter received from C., one of the buyers, the latter's share of the note. Plaintiff, who claimed under a bill of sale from B.'s assignee, sought to recover the property from defendants, who had purchased the same from C. Held, that evidence was admissible to show an oral agreement between B. and C. that the latter should have title to one-third of the property on payment of his share of the price, since Code of Civil Procedure, section 1856, makes parol evidence incompetent for the purpose of varying the terms of a written instrument only as between the parties thereto and their representatives or successors in interest, and plaintiff was neither. Dunn v. Price, 112 Cal. 46, 44 Pac. 354.

§ 421. In General.

[a] Parol evidence offered for the purpose of showing that what a party claims to be a record is not a record is properly admissible, and is not parol evidence for the purpose of contradicting a record.—Dyer v. Brogan, 70 Cal. 136, 11 Pac. 589.

§ 422. Insufficiency or Irregularity of Delivery.

[a] The presumption that a deed was delivered on the day given in the body of the deed is not conclusive, but the true date of delivery may be proved aliunde.—Treadwell v. Reynolds, 47 Cal. 171.

See 17 Cyc. 701; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2829-2933, §§ 1975-1980.

§ 423. Want or Failure of Consideration.

[a] In an action by a husband to compel his wife to reconvey to him certain lands conveyed to her on her oral promise to reconvey them when requested, parol evidence is admissible to contradict the consideration expressed in the deed, and to show fraud and a resulting trust.—Brison v. Brison, 75 Cal. 525, 7 Am. St. Rep. 189, 17 Pac. 689.

[b] A grantor conveying land by a deed reciting a valuable consideration, in the absence of actual or constructive fraud, accident or mistake, cannot show by parol that no consideration passed, and that the conveyance was made in trust, the grantee agreeing to reconvey on request.—Feeney v. Howard, 79 Cal. 525, 12 Am. St. Rep. 162, 21 Pac. 984, 4 L. R. A. 826.

[c] Oral evidence is admissible to show want of consideration, fraud or mistake.—Leonard v. Miner, 120 Cal. 406, 52 Pac. 655.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2833-2847, §§ 1981-1989.

§ 424. Mistake.

[a] Where no distinct proceeding has been had to reform a contract on the ground of mistake, and the complaint on the contract does not allege the existence of a mistake therein, parol evidence is inadmissible to show that a material clause in the contract was omitted by mistake.—Pierson v. McCahill, 21 Cal. 123.

[b] A mistake in a note in the recital of the rate of interest may be shown by parol evidence, but such proof should be very clear. Hathaway v. Brady, 23 Cal. 121.

[c] Parol evidence is admissible to show mistake in a written contract.—Murray v. Dake, 46 Cal. 644.

[d] Fraud or mistake always constitutes exception to general rule that parol evidence is inadmissible for the purpose of contradicting, adding to, or varying the language of a written instrument. Parol evidence is always admissible in case of mistake or fraud in actions in equity to rescind a contract or to reform an agreement so as to make it speak the real intention of the parties.—Isenhoot v. Chamberlain, 59 Cal. 630.

[e] Oral evidence as an alleged mistake was admissible in an action to reform a deed on such ground.—Capelli v. Dondero, 123 Cal. 324, 55 Pac. 1057.

[f] Parol evidence is admissible to vary the terms of a contract, which, through mutual mistake, does not express the intent of the parties.—Kee v. Davis, 137 Cal. 456, 70 Pac. 294.

[g] In an action for the price of logs sold and delivered under a written contract, defendant offered to prove that by reason of the belief of his agent, who made the contract, as to the meaning of certain terms, he agreed to pay more for the logs than he would otherwise have paid, and also offered to show from the "mill tally," the quantity of merchantable lumber obtained from the logs. Held, that this evidence was properly excluded, the price as well as the mode of ascertaining the quantity of lumber being fixed by the contract.—Bullock v. Consumers' Lumber Co., 31 Pac. 367.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 702-705; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2848-2860, §§ 1990-2004.

§ 425. Fraud.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible to defeat a conveyance upon the ground of fraud.—Coles v. Soulstry, 21 Cal. 47.

[b] Parol evidence is admissible to show that the execution of a contract was procured by fraud.—Murray v. Dake, 46 Cal. 644; Isenhoot v. Chamberlain, 59 Cal. 630.

[c] Parol evidence is admissible to show that partition deeds fraudulently omitted right of way orally agreed upon between the parties prior to their execution.—Peterson v. Lauretzen, 68 Cal. 21, 22, 8 Pac. 607.

[d] Rule as to contradicting or adding to writing by parol evidence has application in cases of actual fraud.—Brison v. Brison, 75 Cal. 528, 5 Am. St. Rep. 189, 17 Pac. 689.

[e] In a suit to set aside a deed, the action being based on a charge of fraud in procuring the deed, proof of the verbal contract under which the deed was given could not be barred on the ground that negotiations precedent to the deed were merged therein.—Hick v. Thomas, 90 Cal. 289, 27 Pac. 208.

[f] In an action to cancel a deed for a right of way for a water ditch on account of the false representations of the defendant as to its ownership of the waters of a certain source of supply, which were represented by it as being sufficient to irrigate the plaintiff's land, parol evidence of such representations, and of their falsity, and that the deed was made by reason thereof, is admissible.—Barfield v. South Side Irr. Co., 111 Cal. 118, 43 Pac. 406.

[g] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1856, excluding evidence of the terms of an agreement reduced to writing other than the contents of the writing, but expressly admitting evidence of fraud, does not exclude parol evidence as to a written application for life insurance, couched in terms not readily understood by one not versed in insurance matters, and which was prepared by an agent and solicitor of the insurer, who represented that it called for a different policy than in fact was the case, and which application was not understood by the applicant, since it thus appears to have been made under the influence of fraud.—Maxson v. Llewellyn, 122 Cal. 195, 54 Pac. 732.

[h] In a suit to set aside an exchange of property for fraud, oral misrepresentations made to induce plaintiff to enter into the contract were not inadmissible under Civil Code, section 1625, providing that a written contract supersedes previous verbal negotiations, such section being inapplicable until after the contract in writing has been executed.—Willey v. Clements, 146 Cal. 91, 79 Pac. 850.

§ 426. Illegality.

[a] The fact that a mortgage was given as security for the performance of an unlawful contract may be shown by oral testimony in an action for foreclosure, though no infirmity appears on the face of the mortgage. Benicia Agricultural Works v. Estes, 32 Pac. 938, following Buffendeau v. Brooks, 28 Cal. 641.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 427. —— Usury.

[a] In an action to foreclose a mortgage given by defendant to secure a note for money loaned to him by plaintiff, defendant may show by parol evidence that at the time of executing the note and mortgage it was agreed, as part of the same transaction, that defendant should pay all taxes levied on the money loaned, or on the mortgage, but that the agreement was purposely omitted from the mortgage, in order to evade Constitution, article 13, section 5, which provides that imposing such an obligation on a borrower shall avoid the contract, as to any interest specified therein, as such parol evidence tends to "establish illegality" of the contract, within Code of Civil Procedure, section 1856, prescribing when such evidence is admissible to affect a writing.—Daw v. Niles, 33 Pac. 1114.

C. SEPARATE OR SUBSEQUENT ORAL AGREEMENT.

§ 428. Prior and Contemporaneous Collateral Agreements.

[a] Where an oral agreement provides that the lessees, tenants from month to month, are to pay the same rent per month as the lessors should succeed in getting for an adjoining store, and the lease of the adjoining store on its face provides for a rental of three hundred dollars per month, a written agreement, contemporaneously executed, under which the lessors agreed to allow the tenants of the adjoining store a rebate of one hundred dollars per month, is admissible in an action by the lessees of the first store to recover the amount overpaid by them under the oral agreement.—Corson v. Berson, 86 Cal. 433, 25 Pac. 7.

[b] It may be proved by oral evidence that purchaser agreed to pay additional amount contingent upon some future event or transaction, such as that upon a sale by him he would pay to the vendor part or all of the proceeds that might be received in excess of the amount paid by him.—Byers v. Locke, 93 Cal. 493, 27 Am. St. Rep. 212, 29 Pac. 119.

[bc] When the plaintiff in a foreclosure suit alleges that a smaller sum was advanced to defendant than that recited in the mortgage, and asks judgment therefor, it is competent for defendant, upon a cross-complaint seeking judgment against plaintiff for the remaining part of the loan, to show a collateral parol agreement by plaintiff to pay him that amount in partial payments from time to time subsequent to the execution of the mortgage. Savings Bank of Southern California v. Ashery, 117 Cal. 96, 48 Pac. 1081.

[c] When time for performance is not fixed in written contract, proof of contemporaneous oral agreement fixing time is admissible.—Wolters v. King, 119 Cal. 176, 51 Pac. 35.

[d] It seems that parol evidence is inadmissible to show separate, oral, collateral agreement, contemporaneous with written contract.—Johnson v. Bibb Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 98, 101, 73 Pac. 730.

[e] Where the complaint in an action by one bank against another contains two counts, one on a note and the other for money loaned, both for the same debt, though defendant asserts that plaintiff bought the note, proof of the negotiations for the loan, and that defendant received its proceeds, is not incompetent as varying the written instrument, it being in support of the other count.—First Nat. Bank v. California Nat. Bank, 35 Pac. 639.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 713-721; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2890-2919, §§ 2030-2051.

§ 429. Subsequent Agreements.

[a] At the time of the execution of a mortgage, the mortgagor gave to the mortgagee a verbal lease of the land, wherein it was stipulated that the rent was to offset the interest on the note. Held, that the lease, being a separate and supplementary matter, was not in contradiction of the provisions of the note that, if the interest was not paid when due, it was to be compounded, and oral evidence of its provisions as to the payment of interest on the note was admissible.—Raynor v. Drew, 72 Cal. 307, 13 Pac. 866.

[b] Where contract is uncertain, parol evidence of subsequent agreement making it definite is admissible.—Kotz v. Bedford, 77 Cal. 323, 19 Pac. 523.

[c] A lease of a store for two years, at the monthly rental of three hundred dollars, gave the lessees the privilege of a renewal at the same rental. The lease also provided that if the lessees should hold over after the expiration of the two years, with the consent of the lessors, such holding should be construed as a tenancy from month to month. Held, that an oral agreement made after the expiration of the two year term, which had not been extended, and while the lessees were holding as tenants from month to month, under which agreement they were to pay the same rent per month as the lessors should succeed in getting for an adjoining store, did not vary the terms of the written lease, as that had already expired.—Corson v. Berson, 86 Cal. 433, 25 Pac. 7.

[d] Parol evidence offered for the purpose of showing that a subsequent written contract, which it is claimed superseded and annulled a prior written contract upon which the action is based, had been executed upon the consideration and agreement that the prior contract should be canceled, and all claims of the plaintiff against the defendant thereunder waived, is not incompetent as having the effect to vary or contradict the terms of either of the written instruments, or to add any terms thereto.—Guidery v. Green, 97 Cal. 630, 30 Pac. 786.

[e] A contract in writing may be altered by an executed oral agreement, and evidence is admissible to show such an executed agreement and the circumstances attending it.—Dunn v. Price, 112 Cal. 46, 44 Pac. 354.

[f] Where defendant executed a written contract to cure and deliver all his raisins to certain factors for sale on commission, and he delivered to them all his raisins, including a lot of dipped raisins, called "Valencias," he cannot thereafter claim that such raisins were delivered under the factors' subsequent parol contract to purchase such raisins, in the absence of evidence that the factors ever paid anything on such alleged purchase, under Civil Code, section 1698, permitting evidence of a subsequent executed parol agreement to vary a written contract, since defendant was bound by the written contract to deliver such raisins, and the subsequent oral agreement, if made, was wholly executory.—Mackenzie v. Hodgkin, 126 Cal. 591, 77 Am. St. Rep. 209, 59 Pac. 36; Hodgkin v. Williams, 126 Cal. 591, 77 Am. St. Rep. 209, 59 Pac. 36.

D. CONSTRUCTION OR APPLICATION OF LANGUAGE OF WRITTEN INSTRUMENT.

CONSTRUCTION, IN GENERAL, § 430.
—— SHOWING CONNECTION OF SEPARATE WRITINGS, § 431.
PATENT AMBIGUITY, § 432.
—— IN DESCRIPTIONS OF PROPERTY, § 433.
LATENT AMBIGUITY, § 434.
—— MEANING OF WORDS, PHRASES OR ABBREVIATIONS, § 435.
IDENTIFICATION OF PARTIES, § 436.
IDENTIFICATION OF SUBJECT MATTER, § 437.
—— BOUNDARIES, § 438.
—— LOCATION AND IDENTIFICATION OF MONUMENTS OR CALLS, § 439.
—— REFERENCE TO OTHER INSTRUMENTS, § 440.
—— OF DEBT OR OBLIGATION COLLATERAL TO SECURITY, § 441.
SHOWING INTENT OF PARTIES AS TO SUBJECT MATTER, § 442.
SHOWING PURPOSE OF WRITING, § 443.
SHOWING MODE OF PERFORMANCE OF OBLIGATION, § 444.

§ 430. Construction in General.

[a] Where a party signs a note with the addition to his name of the word "Trust," parol evidence of an agreement that he was not to be personally liable thereon, but that the note was to be paid from a fund of which he was trustee, is not admissible.—Connor v. Clark, 12 Cal. 168, 73 Am. Dec. 529.

[b] Parol evidence is admissible to show whether land covered by a patent of the state for lands sold as swamp and overflowed before they were listed to the state by the United States as such lands are dry, swamp, or overflowed.—Robinson v. Forrest, 29 Cal. 317.

[c] Parol evidence is admissible to interpret writing but not to enlarge its scope.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 307, 11 Pac. 820.

[d] Parol evidence is admissible to identify official map of town referred to in a deed.—Cadwalder v. Nash, 73 Cal. 45, 14 Pac. 385.

[e] Parol evidence is admissible to show circumstances under which contract is made and to show its object.—Renton, Holmes & Co. v. Monnier, 77 Cal. 457, 19 Pac. 820.

[f] Where the language of a contract is fairly susceptible of either one of two interpretations, without doing violence to its usual and ordinary import, or some established rule of construction, an ambiguity arises for the explanation of which extrinsic evidence may be resorted to.—Balfour v. Fresno etc. Co., 109 Cal. 221, 41 Pac. 876.

[g] For the purpose of determining what the parties intended by the language used, it is competent to show not only the circumstances under which the contract was made, but also to prove that they intended and understood the language in the sense contended for; and for that purpose the conversations between and declarations of the parties during the negotiations at and before the time of the execution of the contract may be shown.—Balfour v. Fresno etc. Co., 109 Cal. 221, 41 Pac. 876.

[h] Plaintiffs agreed in writing with N. to consign him a stock of merchandise, on his furnishing a bond with two sureties for his performance of the agreement. Defendants were the sureties on the bond furnished. The agreement to consign was to run one year, N. to take an inventory, report sales, and remit monthly, and plaintiffs to have the right to verify N.'s accounts and inventories. The bond contained substantially the same provisions, and was conditioned that N. would faithfully discharge his duties as consignee and account, and limited defendant's liability to two thousand dollars. Shipments were made to N. and remittances made by him for nearly a year, when he failed, being indebted to plaintiffs. Held, in an action on the bond, that evidence that the bond was only intended to secure the first shipment was properly rejected, since the bond and agreement were unambiguous and not susceptible of parol explanation.—Braun v. Woollacott, 129 Cal. 107, 61 Pac. 801.

[i] It is not error to receive evidence of negotiations preceding a written order for a harvester which broke down in the work for which it was purchased.—Snyder v. Holt Mfg. Co., 134 Cal. 324, 66 Pac. 311.

[j] Plaintiff sued on a writing whereby defendant acknowledged the receipt from C. of certain grain bags, the property of plaintiff, and agreed to pay for such of them as were not shipped to plaintiff by a certain date. Defendant, at the date mentioned, stored the bags in warehouses leased by C., and claimed he was authorized so to do by C. Held error not to admit evidence that C. was plaintiff's agent.—Curtin v. Ingle, 137 Cal. 95, 69 Pac. 836, 1013.

[k] Where a contract has been interpreted on an appeal to this court, such contract is not ambiguous or uncertain, and on a new trial parol evidence cannot be introduced to show the intention of the parties, under Civil Code, section 1649, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 1864, authorizing parol evidence in cases of doubtful and ambiguous contracts, for these sections do not apply when the courts are able to declare the true intent of the parties.—San Diego Flume Co. v. Chase, 32 Pac. 245.

[l] A San Francisco merchant cabled to a coal dealer in New South Wales, "Offer subject to immediate reply twenty-four shillings cost freight and insurance exchange duty paid two cargoes." The coal dealer replied, "Ultimatum twenty-four shillings and three pence. The merchant responded by letter confirming his cabled acceptance, and saying, "We beg to confirm having purchased from you [stating kind of coal and price] 'cost,' 'freight,' 'insurance,' 'exchange,' 'duty paid,'" etc. Held, that the contract of sale thus evidenced was free from ambiguity, so that extrinsic evidence of a custom of the port of San Francisco giving to the purchaser of imported goods the advantage of a reduction of customs duties was inadmissible.—Withers v. Moore, 71 Pac. 697.

[m] Where a clause in a deed was not ambiguous, parol evidence was inadmissible to show that the parties intended it to operate as a condition subsequent and clause of forfeiture.—Hawley v. Kafitz (Cal. Sup.), 83 Pac. 248.

§ 431. —— Showing Connection of Separate Writings.

[a] Parol evidence is inadmissible to show identity of map referred to in deed where reference is equally applicable to two different maps.—Cadwalder v. Nash, 73 Cal. 47, 48, 14 Pac. 385.

§ 432. Patent Ambiguity.

[a] Parol evidence is inadmissible for the purpose of explaining a patent ambiguity in written contract.—Mesick v. Sunderland, 6 Cal. 297.

[b] Where an ambiguity in an instrument of writing consists in the use of a word which has a settled meaning, but at the same time consistently admits of two interpretations, according to the subject matter in the contemplation of the contracting parties, it is not such a patent ambiguity as falls within the rule forbidding its explanation by parol testimony. It belongs to that intermediate class of cases which partake of the nature both of patent and latent ambiguities.—Jenny Lind Co. v. Bower, 11 Cal. 194.

[c] Parol evidence is inadmissible to show what the assessor intended to express by figures in the assessment-roll in the valuation column which were put down without indicating whether they represented dollars or cents, the assessment being void.—People v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 31 Cal. 132.

[d] Patent ambiguity in note cannot be helped by evidence aliunde.—Poorman v. Mills, 39 Cal. 345, 2 Am. Rep. 451.

[e] Where a charter-party provided that the charterer hired the vessel for three voyages to a certain port at a certain specified rate, it was not ambiguous, and could not be treated as a "rough memorandum," so as to authorize the admission of parol evidence of an agreement authorizing the charterer to make one trip to an intermediate port instead of the port designated.—Johnson v. D. H. Bibb Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 95, 73 Pac. 730.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 680-682; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2967-2974, §§ 2085-2092.

§ 433. —— In Descriptions of Property.

[a] A deed which shows on its face that there are two lots to which the description equally applies is void for uncertainty, and parol evidence is inadmissible to explain the ambiguity.—Brandon v. Leddy, 67 Cal. 43, 7 Pac. 33.

§ 434. Latent Ambiguity.

[a] To remove or explain a latent ambiguity, parol evidence is admissible.—Mesick v. Sunderland, 6 Cal. 312.

[b] Where meaning of written instrument is doubtful, extrinsic evidence may be resorted to for removal of doubt, but such evidence is not admissible to show that effect of instrument is different from that which its terms plainly and unequivocally denote.—Richardson v. Scott River W. & M. Co., 22 Cal. 150.

[c] A latent ambiguity in a contract or writing may be explained by parol evidence. Piper v. True, 36 Cal. 606.

[d] Where a quitclaim deed provided that the premises were to be occupied and used by the grantee to work and operate a mine, the grantee to erect and maintain necessary gates and bars for entering on such premises through the fences of the grantor, etc., and to the habendum clause were added the words, "For the uses and purposes aforesaid and on the conditions hereinbefore specified," there was sufficient uncertainty as to the intention of the parties to justify a resort to parol evidence of circumstances under which it was made in order to properly construe such deed.—Baker v. Clark, 128 Cal. 181, 60 Pac. 677.

[e] A policy of reinsurance insuring wheat in a certain warehouse held to contain a latent ambiguity which was subject to explanation by parol.—Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Aachen & M. Fire Ins. Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 253.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 676-678; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2975-2986, §§ 2093-2101.

§ 435. Meaning of Words, Phrases or Abbreviations.

[a] In an action concerning a disputed boundary between two mining claims, depending on an agreement between the parties, in which the word "north" was used, parol evidence is properly admissible to show the custom of the locality to run boundary lines by the magnetic meridian, and that such was the understanding of the parties.—Jenny Lind Co. v. Bower, 11 Cal. 194.

[b] In suit on an account, against B. & S. as a firm, a receipt to B. alone, signed by plaintiffs, "in full for acct's and demands due as at this date," was offered in evidence by B., S. having made default, together with parol proof that the receipt was intended to embrace the account sued on. Held, that the parol proof was admissible, that the term "all accounts" may be shown to cover firm as well as personal indebtedness.—Hawley v. Bader, 15 Cal. 44.

[c] Parol evidence is admissible to explain the meaning of particular expressions used in a deed, where they do not convey a definite meaning without such explanation.—Reamer v. Nesmith, 34 Cal. 624.

[d] A letter written to defendant by plaintiff, who claimed an account stated, was introduced by defendant to show that the account was not stated, and read as follows: "We would call your attention to your unsettled account. The balance due is $2,326.35. Please call and settle same, and oblige." Held, that it was not error to allow the writer to explain that he used the word "unsettled" in the sense of "unpaid," and not as opposed to an account stated or agreed upon.—Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60, 15 Pac. 371.

[e] Parol evidence is admissible to explain all technical words or phrases used in local or special sense.—Preble v. Abrahams, 88 Cal. 250, 22 Am. St. Rep. 301, 26 Pac. 99.

[f] The fact that the abbreviation "S/87" is used as descriptive of wheat to be delivered under a contract does not make the complaint in an action on the contract unintelligible and uncertain, as oral evidence may be introduced to explain the customary meaning, and need not be pleaded.—Berry v. Kowalsky, 27 Pac. 286.

[g] Parol evidence is inadmissible to explain the meaning of certain words in a written instrument, where they are free from ambiguity.—Bullock v. Consumers' Lumber Co., 31 Pac. 367.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 682-689; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 2988-3004, §§ 2104-2108.

§ 436. Identification of Parties.

[a] Where a party signs a note with the addition to his name of the word "trustee," parol evidence is inadmissible to show an agreement at the time of the execution of the note that the maker was not to be personally liable, but that it was to be paid out of a fund of which he was trustee.—Conner v. Clark, 12 Cal. 168, 73 Am. Dec. 529.

[b] The rule as to extrinsic evidence in order to determine what passes and who takes by an instrument is that every material fact that will enable the court to identify the person or thing mentioned in the instrument and place the court, whose province it is to declare the meaning of the words used, as near as may be in the situation of the parties to the instrument, is admissible.—Hancock v. Watson, 18 Cal. 137.

[c] Parol evidence admissible to show that one party to a writing is agent of the other. Pierson v. McCahill, 23 Cal. 250, 254.

[d] Who was real principal to a written contract may be shown by parol.—Ellis v. Crawford, 39 Cal. 523.

[e] Parol evidence is admissible to show that "he" and "his" used in written instrument refers to female.—Berniaud v. Beecher, 71 Cal. 42, 11 Pac. 802.

[f] Parol evidence is admissible to show who was intended to be bound by due bill signed by agent for principal.—Burgess v. Fairbanks, 83 Cal. 216, 17 Am. St. Rep. 230, 23 Pac. 292.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 711; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3004-3018, §§ 2109-2114.

§ 437. Identification of Subject Matter.

[a] Parol evidence is not admissible to add to description of property.—Osborn v. Hendrickson, 8 Cal. 31.

[b] Where a mortgage describes the property as the "interest in the quartz-mill and lode formerly owned by John H. Hancock, said interest being one-half of the mill and lode," extrinsic evidence is admissible to identify the property.—Hancock v. Watson, 18 Cal. 137.

[c] Where plaintiff claims title to a city lot under a deed describing it as "commencing at the northeast corner of Pacific street and Lone Mountain Cemetery avenue, as such corner may be established by the city hereafter, whether known as such street or not," parol evidence is admissible to show that there was an open place known as Cemetery avenue, which, if extended, would have crossed Pacific street at the southwest corner of such lot.—Altschul v. San Francisco Homestead Assn., 43 Cal. 171.

[d] Where a description of land is imperfect, but not void for uncertainty, the defect will be cured by parol evidence to identify the premises.—Walbridge v. Ellsworth, 44 Cal. 353.

[e] Where the description of the land conveyed by deed is equivocal, ambiguous, or insufficient, evidence of the subsequent acts of the parties while in interest is admissible on the question of their intention.—Truett v. Adams, 66 Cal. 218, 5 Pac. 96.

[f] Parol evidence is admissible to determine whether term "houses" in bill of sale includes a barn.—Claffey v. Hartford Ins. Co., 68 Cal. 170, 171, 18 Pac. 711.

[g] Parol evidence is admissible to aid defective description of land conveyed.—Cleveland v. Choate, 77 Cal. 78, 18 Pac. 875.

[h] Parol evidence is admissible to show that the goods sold by the pledgor and those offered for delivery by the pledgee were identical.—Habenicht v. Lissak, 77 Cal. 139, 19 Pac. 260.

[i] Parol evidence is admissible to apply description to subject matter but not to furnish a description.—Marriner v. Dennison, 78 Cal. 208, 20 Pac. 386.

[j] Parol evidence is admissible to aid description in deed.—Carter v. Bacigalupi, 83 Cal. 193, 23 Pac. 361.

[k] Parol evidence is admissible to identify subject matter of contract.—Preble v. Abrahams, 88 Cal. 250, 22 Am. St. Rep. 301, 26 Pac. 99.

[l] In an action against a corporation to recover money it appeared that plaintiff had been a stockholder in the corporation, and had made advances to it to the amount sued for; that he had transferred his stock and interest in defendant corporation to other stockholders therein by a written instrument which recited that he sold "all right, title, and interest of whatsoever nature in and to all property . . . . hitherto and now belonging to" defendant, including all "claims and advances." Held, that parol evidence was admissible to show to whom the claim for "advances" mentioned in the instrument belonged, and that they were those which formed the basis of the action.—Darby v. Arrowhead Hot Springs Hotel Co., 97 Cal. 384, 32 Pac. 454.

[m] Parol evidence is admissible to show that a tract of land described in a deed as a part of "Colton addition" lies within the limits of the city of Colton.—Colton Land etc. Co. v. Swartz, 99 Cal. 278, 33 Pac. 878.

[n] Where a written contract is to furnish peaches to be grown in "sundry orchards in" specified counties, parol evidence is admissible to identify the orchards referred to.—Ontario Deciduous Fruit-Growers' Assn. v. Cutting Fruit-Packing Co., 134 Cal. 21, 66 Pac. 28, 53 L. R. A. 681.

[o] Parol evidence that a written contract for sale of "shares of capital stock" of a corporation was for shares a certificate for which was not to be issued for five years does not contradict or vary the terms of the writing.—Williams v. Ashurst Oil Land etc. Co., 144 Cal. 619, 78 Pac. 28.

[p] Where contract for the sale of land described it as a certain ranch, parol evidence held admissible to identify it. Code Civ. Proc., sec. 1860.—Hill v. McCoy, 1 Cal. App. 159, 81 Pac. 1015.

[q] In an action on a contract held proper to admit parol evidence to identify the subject matter.—Gardiner v. McDonough, 147 Cal. 313, 81 Pac. 964.

[r] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1860, evidence as to surrounding circumstances held admissible on the issue of what premises were agreed to be conveyed by a land contract, the description in which was uncertain.—Garnier's Estate, In re, 147 Cal. 457, 82 Pac. 68.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 724; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3018-3066, §§ 2115-2128.

§ 438. —— Boundaries.

[a] Where there is a conflict between the boundaries of a grant of land as designated in the grant by parallels of latitude and as designated by a map referred to in the grant, parol evidence is admissible in explanation of the boundaries and to fix the location of the land granted.—Ferris v. Coover, Ferris v. Chapman, 10 Cal. 589.

[b] Parol evidence is admissible to explain the location of the objects mentioned in the description of a deed, and thus fix the boundary lines of the tract conveyed.—Colton v. Seavey, 22 Cal. 496.

§ 439. —— Location and Identification of Monuments or Calls.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible to locate and identify monuments and calls in a description of land.—Colton v. Seavey, 22 Cal. 496.

[b] Where mortgage on land describes the land generally by name, but does not state all the monuments bounding it on its several sides, and the complaint contains an averment as to what the monuments not given were, parol evidence may be introduced to identify the mortgaged premises as set out in the complaint.—Began v. O'Reilly, 32 Cal. 11.

[c] The true location of the land in dispute having been ascertained, parol evidence is admissible to show the proper location of all the descriptive designations and calls of the deed, to the end of determining whether or not the land in dispute passed by it, and thus give effect to the true intent of the parties.—Reamer v. Nesmith, 34 Cal. 624.

[d] In construing doubtful clauses in a deed it is important to ascertain all the attendant circumstances in order to arrive at the intention of the parties; and, whilst it is not competent to alter, enlarge, or vary the instrument by parol, oral testimony is admissible to explain its calls by applying its descriptive portions to the natural objects called for.—Altschul v. S. F. C. P. H. A., 43 Cal. 171.

[e] Extrinsic evidence is admissible to explain calls of deed, to apply them to subject matter and give effect to the deed.—Thompson v. Motor Road Co., 82 Cal. 500, 501, 23 Pac. 130.

[f] Extrinsic evidence is always admissible to explain the calls of a deed, for the purpose of applying them to the subject matter, and thus to give effect to the deed.—Thompson v. Southern California Motor Road Co., 82 Cal. 497, 23 Pac. 130.

[g] For the purpose of identifying and locating artificial monuments in a deed to plaintiff, the court admitted in evidence a written contract to convey, made by a former owner of the land in dispute, together with parol testimony showing that, in pursuance of the contract, the monuments in question were located by a surveyor, and that the descriptions in the deed to plaintiff's predecessor were made from the report of the surveyor. Evidence was also admitted, by one of the surveying party, as to the location of the monuments. Held, that all this evidence was competent.—Anderson v. Richardson, 92 Cal. 623, 28 Pac. 679.

[h] Where a deed designated certain monuments as the corners of the tract conveyed, in addition to giving the length of each side, the former description will prevail; and, in trespass, parol evidence is admissible to point out such monuments.—Stinchfield v. Gillis, 107 Cal. 84, 40 Pac. 98.

§ 440. —— Reference to Other Instruments.

[a] In an action to recover land conveyed by grant, a map referred to in the grant must be regarded, for the purpose of identifying the land, as a portion of the grant, and parol evidence is admissible to show the circumstances under which the grant was made, in order to determine what portion of the lands marked on such map should be rejected, if any.—Cornwall v. Culver, 16 Cal. 423.

[b] When a deed of a town lot refers for description of the lot to the official map of the town plat, parol evidence of the actual survey may be received to correct the boundaries of the lot as indicated by the map.—O'Farrell v. Harney, 51 Cal. 125.

[c] If a deed describes the property conveyed as a lot of land in a town "known and described on the official map of said town as block No. 6," map may be identified by parol evidence, and, when identified, constitutes a portion of the deed.—Penry v. Richards, 52 Cal. 496.

[d] A deed having described the land conveyed by reference to the plat of an addition to a town, parol evidence is competent to locate the land granted from data given in the plat, and it is not necessary as against the grantor to show that there was an actual survey of the addition.—Redd v. Murry, 95 Cal. 48, 24 Pac. 841, 30 Pac. 132.

[e] In 1837 the Mexican government granted P. and V. a tract called the "San Jose Rancho," and in 1840 regranted the same land and an additional league to P., V., and A. In 1846 partition was made, and, in proceedings thereafter for confirmation of the grants, separate patents were issued for each tract. In 1864 V. conveyed his interest in the Rancho San Jose, the description being the "rancho known as 'San Jose'" and referring for further description to the Mexican government grant, the confirmation thereof by the United States land commission and district court, and the government survey. In such grant the parties were declared owners of one league "in augmentation of the place called 'San Jose.'" In proceedings before the land commissioners the entire tract was called "San Jose"; and the deed of confirmation to V. declared that the land confirmed is a portion of the place called "San Jose." The record in the confirmation proceedings contained a map compiled from exhibits on file in the office of the United States surveyor general, purporting to give the boundaries of the Rancho San Jose, Rancho Azusa, and addition to Rancho San Jose as fixed by the United States surveyor. Held, that there was such ambiguity in the description of the land conveyed as to warrant the admission of extrinsic evidence to show what was intended to be conveyed by the words "Rancho San Jose."—Vejar v. Mound City Land etc. Assn., 97 Cal. 659, 32 Pac. 713.

§ 441. —— Of Debt or Obligation Collateral to Security.

[a] Where a written contract provides for the payment of all the "present and future" indebtedness of one of the parties, parol evidence is inadmissible to show what indebtedness was referred to by such terms, and that a certain existing debt was not intended to be included, since the meaning of the words "all indebtedness, present and future," is not a question for the jury, but for the court. Swain v. Grangers' Union, 69 Cal. 186, 10 Pac. 404.

§ 442. Showing Intent of Parties as to Subject Matter.

[a] Oral evidence is admissible to show the intention and understanding of the parties in the construction of a deed, but not to contradict or vary its terms.—Brannon v. Mesick, 10 Cal. 95.

[b] Parol evidence is admissible to show that assignment of stock with dividends from a certain date did not include dividend sooner anticipated, but delayed till after date mentioned in assignment.—Brewster v. Lathrop, 15 Cal. 21.

[c] Where a written contract recites an aggregate sum as the consideration for the transfer of several items of property, the actual consideration for each item may be shown by parol, and when that is done the transaction will stand as though it was so recited in the contract.—Field v. Austin, 131 Cal. 379, 63 Pac. 692.

[d] Where a parent purchases property in the name of a child, parol evidence is admissible to rebut the presumption that an advancement was intended.—Faylor v. Faylor, 136 Cal. 92, 68 Pac. 482.

[e] A contract between the owners of a water right and one S. recited that the owners had secured a system of water right in a certain canyon producing three inches of water, "with other springs to be developed to the amount of eight inches," and that it was agreed that S. should furnish pipe "to bring said water down to the residence" of the owners in consideration of a third of the water that would be produced from said springs "during the dry season of the year." Held, that parol evidence was admissible to show whether S. was obliged to lay pipe not only from the point of diversion, but from the various supplies, consisting of small springs in the hills, down to the main point of diversion.—Daly v. Ruddell, 137 Cal. 671, 70 Pac. 784.

[f] Under Civil Code, section 1647, parol evidence held admissible to show that a contract for the sale of goods and merchandise in the seller's storeroom was a contract for the sale of a business.—Shafer v. Sloan (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 162.

§ 443. Showing Purpose of Writing.

[a] The rule which refuses the admission of parol evidence to contradict or vary a written instrument does not exclude an inquiry into the object and purpose of the parties in the execution of such instrument.—Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116.

[b] Parol evidence is admissible to prove that a written assignment of personal property, absolute upon its face, was in fact made in trust for the benefit of others than the assignees, and to prove the character of the trust.—Lockwood v. Canfield, 20 Cal. 126.

[c] Proof of parol agreement whereby mortgagee holds mortgage in trust for himself and another does not vary terms of mortgage.—Tapia v. Demartini, 77 Cal. 388, 389, 11 Am. St. Rep. 288, 19 Pac. 641.

[d] In an action to redeem it is competent for defendant to show by parol that a conveyance by the mortgagor to the mortgagee was made, not as a forfeiture, but to consummate a sale made by the mortgagor to a a third party.—Corcoran v. Hinkel, 34 Pac. 1031.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3074-3091, §§ 2134-2139.

§ 444. Showing Mode of Performance of Obligation.

[a] Where defendant's written contract to deliver sufficient water for the irrigation of plaintiff's land failed to specify a time for performance, evidence of an oral agreement that defendant should not deliver water before March, 1893, was admissible to show when the contract was to be performed.—Richter v. Union Land etc. Co., 129 Cal. 367, 62 Pac. 39.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3091-3093, §§ 2140-2143.

RELEASE OR OTHER DISCHARGE WITHOUT PERFORMANCE, § 445.
PERFORMANCE, § 446.
PAYMENT, § 447.

§ 445. Release or Other Discharge Without Performance.

[a] Parol evidence is admissible to establish new and distinct agreement upon a new consideration, which is to be a substitute for the old written agreement; but it must appear that the old agreement is abandoned, and it is competent to show by parol the incorporation of new terms and conditions, and the new agreement must be valid in itself, and such as may be the basis of an action.—Adler v. Friedman, 16 Cal. 138.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 691; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3094-3097, § 2145.

§ 446. Performance.

[a] In an action on a note, the maker may show that it was given to secure the performance of a certain agreement, which has been performed.—Howard v. Stratton, 64 Cal. 487, 2 Pac. 263, 264.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 691; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3101-3103, § 2147.

§ 447. Payment.

[a] Where, in an action on a note against the debtor and one who signed as surety, the defense is that other notes were given by the debtor, at the same time as the one in suit, with a verbal agreement with plaintiff that the first payments made by the debtor should be applied on the note signed by the surety, until it was paid, and that payments had been made and wrongfully indorsed on the notes not signed by the surety, defendants may give such verbal agreement in evidence to show that the debtor, when he made the payments, had not changed his first intention as to how the payments were to be applied.—Clarke v. Scott, 45 Cal. 86.

§ 448. Conclusions of Fact.

[a] The opinion of a witness as to what the facts prove is not admissible. It is the province of the jury alone to draw conclusions.—Largan v. Central R. Co., 40 Cal. 272.

[b] An expert witness may properly testify that a defect is discoverable by applying certain tests specified, but he cannot be permitted to testify whether it would have been discoverable by ordinary care and precaution, that being part of the ultimate question of negligence to be determined by the jury.—Pacheco v. Manufacturing Co., 113 Cal. 541, 45 Pac. 833.

§ 449. —— Opinions and Conclusions.

[a] In an action for the value of goods deposited, a witness was asked who he understood was the depositor. Held incompetent, as requiring the opinion of the witness.—Lowrie v. Salz, 75 Cal. 349, 17 Pac. 232.

[b] In an action by a father to quiet the title to land promised by him to his daughter, and upon which she had moved and made improvements, a question asked of him, whether he had said anything to the daughter which led her to believe that she was going to obtain title, was improper, as asking for a conclusion of the witness.—Burlingame v. Rowland, 77 Cal. 315, 19 Pac. 526, 1 L. R. A. 829.

[c] Mere conclusions or opinions are inadmissible.—Schurtz v. Kerkow, 85 Cal. 279, 24 Pac. 609.

[d] The opinion of a witness may be received in connection with his statement of the facts upon which it is based, when the impressions or sensations caused by external objects are not susceptible of exact reproduction or description in words, and the judgment or opinion of the witness by whom they have been experienced is the only mode by which they can be presented to a jury.—Healy v. Visalia and Tulare R. R. Co., 101 Cal. 585, 36 Pac. 125.

[e] On an issue as to waiver of an insurance premium, testimony that insurer's agent had excused insured from paying it is a conclusion, and admissible.—Berliner v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 121 Cal. 451, 53 Pac. 922.

[f] In an action to enforce a stockholder's liability on a corporate debt for money loaned by F., and assigned to plaintiff, the evidence showed that at the instance of a stockholder plaintiff made a loan to the corporation, and gave his check therefor to the stockholder, and the latter gave his check to the corporation's manager, who indorsed it to F., and F. indorsed it to the corporation. The corporation executed its note to F., who indorsed it to plaintiff. Defendant called F., and asked him whether the corporation ever borrowed any money of him. Held, that the answer was properly excluded, as it called for a conclusion of the witness as to whether or not the transaction constituted a loan.—Spreckels v. Butler, 128 Cal. 645, 61 Pac. 378.

[g] In an action against sureties on a contractor's bond guaranteeing payment of labor and material, an objection to the question whether plaintiff relied on a "statutory bond," in agreeing to furnish labor and material, should be sustained, since it is not the province of the witness to determine whether the bond was statutory or not.—Union Sheet-Metal Works v. Dodge, 129 Cal. 390, 62 Pac. 41.

[h] Where, in a suit on an accident policy, plaintiff's evidence tended to show that decedent's death was caused by a blow on the head, the question, "Describe . . . . whether it was a light and easy blow, whether it was a strong and heavy blow, or whether it was a medium heavy blow, according to your idea, as you saw it," was proper.—Stout v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California, 130 Cal. 471, 62 Pac. 732.

[i] A question whether defendant wanted plaintiff "to do anything" at a certain time was rightly excluded as calling for a conclusion.—Whitmore v. Ainsworth, 38 Pac. 196.

§ 450. —— Facts.

[a] The issue being whether or not a sale was fraudulent as against creditors, the question put to a witness, "Did you see any difference in the appearance or management of things after the sale from that before the sale?" is not objectionable, as calling for an opinion of the witness.—Gallagher v. Williamson, 23 Cal. 331, 83 Am. Dec. 114.

[b] Testimony of person having knowledge of character of fence to keep out stock is not opinion evidence.—Silvarer v. Hansen, 77 Cal. 584, 20 Pac. 136.

[c] In an action for work done and materials furnished, where plaintiff has testified to the work which he agreed to do and the kind of materials he was to furnish, a question whether he completed the work in accordance with the contract is not objectionable, as calling for the opinion of the witness.—Kreuzberger v. Wingfield, 96 Cal. 251, 31 Pac. 109, distinguishing Connor v. Stanley (1885), 67 Cal. 315, 7 Pac. 723, and Taylor's Estate, In re (1891), 92 Cal. 564, 28 Pac. 603.

[d] Opinion asked of an architect whether he could tell which of the two adjoining buildings which used the party-wall was constructed first, is not objectionable as calling for the opinion of the witness, and when, in reply to the question, he states the facts within his knowledge and observation, it is proper to overrule the objection thereto.—Tate v. Fratt, 112 Cal. 613, 44 Pac. 1061.

[e] Evidence of another bookkeeper is admissible to show that certain books were not complicated, but a simple set of books, and that anyone of ordinary skill in bookkeeping could keep them.—Crusoe v. Clark, 127 Cal. 341, 59 Pac. 700.

[f] Where, on an issue as to the making of false representations as to the value of a mine by the vendor's agent, he had fully and specially testified concerning the same, a question asking whether he had made any false representations as to the value of the mine was not objectionable as calling for his opinion.—Williams v. Long, 139 Cal. 186, 72 Pac. 911.

[g] For the purpose of showing, in an action by a married woman on a claim for services rendered by her, that the claim was her separate estate, by agreement with her husband, as authorized by Civil Code, sections 158, 159, the husband, who has testified that he had had an understanding with her ever since their marriage as to the control and management of her earnings, may testify as to who had had the management and control thereof during such time.—Kaltschmidt v. Weber, 145 Cal. 596, 79 Pac. 272.

[h] In an action to quiet title, a question asked of a witness as to who was in possession of the property in a certain year was not objectionable as calling for the conclusion of the witness on legal possession, in the absence of anything in the form of the question or previous questions put to witnesses indicating that the word was used in its technical sense as synonymous with "seisin."—Nathan v. Dierssen, 146 Cal. 63, 79 Pac. 739.

[i] Witness who has stated facts may state his conclusion therefrom.—Sampson v. Hughes, 147 Cal. 62, 81 Pac. 292.

[j] A question as to whether the debtor, subsequent to the sale, and up to the time of the levy of the attachment, exercised any acts of ownership or control over the property, is not objectionable, as calling for opinion evidence.—Bunting v. Salz, 22 Pac. 1132.

[k] Where a witness states that he "does not consider" or "does not think," etc., such expressions are not expressions of opinion merely, as witnesses are not required to give their testimony with absolute positiveness.—Prior v. Diggs, 31 Pac. 155.

§ 451. —— Motive and Intent, or Understanding.

[a] Where a witness has testified to the performance of certain acts by another, he cannot give his impressions as to the object the other had in their performance. Such an inference is for the court.—Tait v. Hall, 71 Cal. 149, 12 Pac. 391.

[b] Questions asked, calling, not for facts, but for the conclusion of the defendant as a witness, as to what the plaintiff and a third person understood, in reference to the interest of the plaintiff in a prospecting venture, and as to whether the plaintiff expected wages from the defendant, were properly disallowed.—Crusoe v. Clark, 127 Cal. 341, 59 Pac. 700.

§ 452. —— Ability to See.

[a] In a case of collision, after the witness had testified concerning the position of the vessels and the character of the night, he was asked whether a vessel, on such a night, and in such a place, could be seen at a considerable distance from a vessel approaching the shore, and, if so, how far. Held, that the question should have been allowed. Innis v. Steamboat Senator, 4 Cal. 5, 60 Am. Dec. 577.

§ 453. —— Ability to Hear.

[a] A witness testifying to declarations made by the agent of the vendor plaintiff, in a conversation, that he had purchased the mortgage in controversy from the vendor, uttered while he was sitting in a buggy with the agent and cashier of the defendant bank, which was then about to make a loan thereupon, and while the latter was seeming to give attention to the conversation, may give his opinion that the agent of the bank was within such distance that he might have heard the conversation.—Raymond v. Glover, 122 Cal. 471, 55 Pac. 398.

§ 454. —— Mental Condition or Capacity.

[a] A question as to what was the appearance of a person, as to his being rational, is a question of fact, and not of opinion, and is competent.—People v. Lavelle, 71 Cal. 351, 12 Pac. 226.

[b] A person who appreciates the varying moods of another, and who is able to judge of his acts with full knowledge of his peculiarities, would be an "intimate acquaintance," within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 10, making competent "the opinion of an intimate acquaintance respecting the mental sanity of a person, the reason of the opinion being given."—Carpenter v. Bailey, 94 Cal. 406, 29 Pac. 1101.

[c] The objection to allowing witnesses who were not intimate acquaintances of testator to state their opinion of his sanity cannot be avoided by varying the form of the question, and asking how he appeared mentally.—

Carpenter v. Bailey, 94 Cal. 406, 29 Pac. 1101.

[d] There is no abuse of discretion in holding a witness competent as an "intimate acquaintance," within Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 10, allowing expression of opinion of an intimate acquaintance respecting the mental sanity of a person; it appearing that witness had known him for eighteen years, had until the last six years lived next door to him, and seen him every day, and had since then visited the family, where he lived, twice a week or more, and had often had conversations with him.—Wheelock v. Godfrey, 100 Cal. 578, 35 Pac. 317.

[e] In an action to set aside a deed for mental incapacity of the grantor, a nonexpert witness may be asked as to the grantor's appearance at a given time, with reference to his being rational or irrational, as the question calls for a fact, and not an opinion as to his mental condition, concerning which only experts and intimate acquaintances (Code Civ. Proc., sec. 1870, subd. 10) can express an opinion.—Holland v. Zollner, 102 Cal. 633, 36 Pac. 930, 37 Pac. 231.

[f] Where a witness has testified to a business transaction with the testator, a question as to how he conducted the transaction is relevant and material, and does not call for an opinion of the witness, but for a statement as to the conduct and appearance of the testator at the time of the transaction.—Estate of Wax, 106 Cal. 343, 39 Pac. 624.

[g] Where witnesses are shown to have been more or less intimate with a deceased testator, the court, in its discretion, may permit them to testify as to whether testator appeared to them rational or irrational.—Keithley's Estate, In re, 134 Cal. 9, 66 Pac. 5.

[h] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 10, providing that an intimate acquaintance may state his opinion respecting the mental sanity of a person, the reason for the opinion being given, it is not error to permit a witness, shown to have been an intimate acquaintance of a testator, to state his opinion as to testator's mental sanity.—Keithley's Estate, In re, 134 Cal. 9, 66 Pac. 5.

[i] Where a witness has testified that he lived in the same house with testator, occupying apartments across the hall, and had seen testator nearly every day for a year before his death, it is not an abuse of discretion to admit his opinion of testator's mental soundness.—Keegan's Estate, In re, 139 Cal. 123, 72 Pac. 828; Monihen v. Kane, 139 Cal. 123, 72 Pac. 828.

[j] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 10, permitting the opinion of an intimate acquaintance respecting the mental sanity of a person, the reason being given, to be introduced in evidence, persons who had known testatrix for upward of twenty years, who were on terms of social intimacy with her, and who had conversed with her immediately before and after the execution of the will, were competent to testify as to her mental condition.—McKenna's Estate, In re, 143 Cal. 580, 77 Pac. 461.

[k] Where certain witnesses were acquainted with a testatrix, had been associated with her, and conversed with her before and after the execution of her will, the court did not abuse its discretion in permitting them to express an opinion as to her mental soundness, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 10, subdivision 1870, permitting intimate acquaintances to give their opinion respecting the mental sanity of a person.—McKenna's Estate, In re, 143 Cal. 580, 77 Pac. 461.

[l] In a will contest, witnesses may testify, as bearing on an issue of mental capacity, to general conversations had with the testatrix, embraced within a reasonable time before and after the making of the will, where they are limited exclusively to showing the condition of testatrix's mind.—McKenna's Estate, In re, 143 Cal. 580, 77 Pac. 461.

§ 455. Conclusions of Law.

[a] In an action against an attorney for negligence in conducting a suit, evidence of another attorney is not admissible to show that, upon the facts admitted or proved, the attorney was guilty of negligence.—Gambert v. Hart, 44 Cal. 542.

[ab] Where one has testified on cross-examination as to the time when, and the circumstances under which, he signed an instrument, a further question on cross-examination, "Do you swear that you signed that instrument as a witness?" calls for a conclusion of law based on the facts stated by him. Pottkamp v. Buss, 46 Pac. 169.

[b] Evidence calling for conclusion of witness as to question of negligence is inadmissible.—Sampson v. Hughes, 147 Cal. 62, 81 Pac. 292.

§ 456. —— Title and Ownership.

[a] The opinions of a witness are inadmissible in evidence upon the question whether a title is indisputable and satisfactory.—Winter v. Stock, 29 Cal. 407, 89 Am. Dec. 57.

[b] The opinion of a witness as to the title to real property is not evidence of title.—Schroeder v. Wittram, 66 Cal. 636.

§ 457. —— Construction and Effect of Contracts or Instruments.

[a] In ejectment for land, which the evidence showed plaintiffs had agreed to convey to defendants on performance by the latter of certain conditions, a question to defendants as to whether they had performed all the conditions of the contract was properly excluded, as calling for a conclusion.—Wallace v. Maples, 79 Cal. 433, 21 Pac. 860.

[b] The issue being whether an instrument, in terms an absolute conveyance, was accepted as such, as contended by plaintiff, or as security, as contended by defendant, a question asked plaintiff, "State what you believed that document to be at the time it was delivered to you," will not be held to ask an opinion as to its legal effect.—Pottkamp v. Buss, 46 Pac. 169.

§ 458. Matters Directly in Issue.

[a] A witness cannot be permitted to give his opinion in answer to an inquiry embracing the whole merits of the case.—Connor v. Stanley, 67 Cal. 315, 7 Pac. 723.

[b] In an action to quiet title, where defendants alleged that an absolute deed given plaintiff was a mortgage, after testifying fully as to what occurred, and the reasons for executing the deed, defendant could not testify whether he was willing to deed, or considered that he was deeding, the property absolutely to plaintiff.—Garwood v. Wheaton, 128 Cal. 399, 60 Pac. 961.

[a] The opinion of a witness as to what certain land would produce, if irrigated, is competent, the witness having had experience in cultivating and irrigating the same and neighboring land.—Ellis v. Tone, 58 Cal. 289.

[b] Cases in which nonexperts may testify on account of their knowledge of facts, reviewed.—San Diego L. & T. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 77-79, 20 Pac. 372.

§ 460. Bodily Condition.

[a] In an action against a fraternal organization for the recovery of sick benefits, a question asked a witness who knew the plaintiff quite intimately and saw him frequently, and had conversations with him about his health during the period covered by his claim against the defendant, as to whether when he saw the plaintiff he was apparently well, is competent, and the fact that it involves the opinion of a nonexpert witness based upon observation of the apparent health of the plaintiff does not render it inadmissible.—Robinson v. Exempt F. Co. of S. F., 103 Cal. 1, 42 Am. St. Rep. 93, 36 Pac. 955.

§ 461. Quantity or Capacity.

[a] The capacity of a ditch to carry water does not require for its proof unusual scientific attainments or peculiar skill. It may be established, like any other fact, by competent testimony; and witnesses who have had long experience in measuring and selling water are as competent to testify to the fact as experts.—Frey v. Lowden, 70 Cal. 550, 11 Pac. 838.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3275-3277, § 2267.

§ 462. Cause and Effect.

[a] A person, though not an expert, is competent to testify to consequences immediately following upon every bodily injury, and palpable to the senses.—Bland v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 65 Cal. 626, 4 Pac. 672.

[b] In an action for the diversion of water from a mine, a witness who testifies that he knows the claims and ditches involved; that he has been over the ditches and at the mines of both plaintiff and defendant; that he has resided in the vicinity twelve or thirteen years, and is a miner by occupation, having been engaged mostly in hydraulic mining—is qualified to give his opinion as to whether it is practicable for plaintiff to run his mine if defendant continues to run his in the same way as before.—Bennett v. Morris, 37 Pac. 929.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 99; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3290-3297, §§ 2275-2282.

§ 463. Handwriting.

[a] A witness whose only knowledge of another's signature has been derived from an examination of official documents in official custody, purporting to be signed by such other, may give his opinion as to the genuineness of such person's signature to a paper offered in evidence.—Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

[b] Expert evidence of handwriting cannot be introduced without preliminary proof of qualification of expert and genuineness of writing used for comparison.—Spottiswood v. Weir, 80 Cal. 450, 22 Pac. 289.

[c] The successor of a county surveyor, having charge of the documents in the office, who testifies that he has made frequent examination of documents purporting to be in his predecessor's handwriting, is competent to testify that interlineations appearing in a survey made by his predecessor are in his handwriting.—Burdell v. Taylor, 89 Cal. 613, 26 Pac. 1094.

[d] One who was personally familiar with the handwriting of a deceased person is a competent witness as to such writing, although he was familiar with her signature only.—Marchall's Estate, In re, 126 Cal. 95, 58 Pac. 449.

§ 464. Value of Real Property.

[a] The opinions of witnesses, founded upon a knowledge of the location, productiveness, or adaptation of the land to other uses, not speculative, or of the market or selling price of the land in the vicinity, are legal evidence to prove its value; otherwise, as to the opinions of those who do not possess this knowledge.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

[b] The mere fact that one lives near certain land, and has had a reasonable opportunity to become acquainted with it, does not necessarily make him a competent witness to testify to its value.—Reed v. Drais, 67 Cal. 491, 8 Pac. 20.

[c] Opinions of witnesses who have knowledge of the land in controversy, and of sales in its immediate vicinity, are admissible as to its value, although such witnesses may not be, strictly speaking, experts.—San Diego Land etc. Co. v. Neale, 78 Cal. 63, 20 Pac. 372, 3 L. R. A. 83.

[d] A witness' opinion as to the value of land should be rejected if it is based entirely on incompetent matters.—San Diego Land etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 50, 25 Pac. 977, 11 L. R. A. 604.

[e] An owner of land is qualified to testify as to its value, without proof of expert knowledge on his part.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. Drinkhouse, 92 Cal. 528, 28 Pac. 681.

[f] Witnesses testifying as to the market value of land need not be experts in the severe sense of the term, provided they show sufficient knowledge and experience as to values of land in the neighborhood.—City of Santa Ana v. Harlin, 99 Cal. 538, 34 Pac. 224.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 115, 119, 124, 129. See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3284-3287, § 2273.

§ 465. Damages.

[a] The opinion of witnesses who have never seen the land until after the right to compensation and damages accrued should not be received.—San Diego Land etc. Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 50, 25 Pac. 977, 11 L. R. A. 604.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3297-3316, §§ 2283-2289.

3. Subjects of Opinion Evidence and Examination of Witnesses.

INFERENCES OR IMPRESSIONS, IN GENERAL, § 466.
CHARACTERISTICS, § 467.
BODILY APPEARANCE OR CONDITION, § 468.
DUE CARE AND PROPER CONDUCT, § 469.
NATURE, CONDITION AND RELATION OF OBJECTS, § 470.
QUANTITY, DISTANCE, AND RATE OF SPEED, § 471.
VALUE, § 472.
DAMAGES, § 473.
EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES, § 474.

§ 466. Inferences or Impressions in General.

[a] Speculative opinions of ordinary witnesses are inadmissible.—Innis v. The Senator, 4 Cal. 5, 60 Am. Dec. 577.

[b] Opinion of witness is inadmissible to prove whether a third party did certain act "voluntarily."—Ellen v. Lewison, 88 Cal. 261, 26 Pac. 99.

[c] When the question to be determined is the result of common experience, or is to be inferred from particular facts, the inference is to be drawn by the jury, and not by the witness. If the circumstances out of which negligence is said to arise have been or can be established by proof, the ultimate fact of negligence is to be inferred by the jury, and cannot be established by the opinions of witnesses.—Sappenfield v. Main Street etc. R. R. Co., 91 Cal. 48, 27 Pac. 590.

[d] In an action for personal injuries caused by being thrown from the forward end of a hand-car which left the track, a passenger on the car may testify whether it was possible for one, sitting in the position plaintiff was in, to stand the jars, and still retain her seat, and that he thought the car too narrow for the track.—Healy v. Visalia etc. R. Co., 101 Cal. 585, 36 Pac. 125.

[e] Where witness had described a house removed from rented premises in detail, together with its manner of construction, it was not error to sustain defendant's objection to a question as to whether the house was a substantial structure.—O. L. Shafter Estate Co. v. Alvord (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 279.

§ 467. Characteristics.

[a] In an action to enforce a marriage contract, where the defense is that defendant's intestate was unduly influenced by plaintiff by means of spirit mediums to make the contract, witnesses cannot give their opinions as to whether defendant's intestate was liable to be wholly influenced by such spirit mediums.—Conner v. Stanley, 67 Cal. 315, 7 Pac. 723.

§ 468. Bodily Appearance or Condition.

[a] In an action for personal injuries, a witness may testify as to the appearance of plaintiff immediately after the accident.—Healy v. Visalia etc. R. Co., 101 Cal. 585, 36 Pac. 125.

[b] One who acted as a nurse for plaintiff after her injury need not be an expert to testify to complaints of pain and suffering which she heard from plaintiff.—Green v. Pacific Lumber Co., 130 Cal. 435, 62 Pac. 747.

§ 469. Due Care and Proper Conduct.

[a] Where the question is whether an electric railway company was negligent in operating a car with but one man in charge, it being necessary for him to get off, at the top of a grade, to change the trolley to another wire, and all the circumstances are established by unconflicting evidence, opinion evidence is not admissible.—Redfield v. Oakland Consol. St. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 220, 43 Pac. 1117.

[b] A witness who was on the platform of the horsecar at the time of its collision with the electric-car, and who saw the situation, though not an expert, may testify to his opinion that had the driver of the horsecar been at his post, the car could have been stopped to avoid it.—Howland v. Oakland Cons. St. Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 487, 47 Pac. 255.

[c] A witness in an action against a railroad for injuries to a traveler in a collision with a train cannot testify that the engineer in charge of the train took every precaution that an engineer could take to stop the train and avoid the accident.—Johnson v. Center (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 727.

§ 470. Nature, Condition and Relation of Objects.

[a] Opinion evidence is admissible as to the grade per mile of a ditch used in conveying water for beneficial purposes, although it may be overcome if more accurate information is obtained by the other side.—Posachane Water Co. v. Standart, 97 Cal. 476, 32 Pac. 532.

[b] In an action for the death of a servant owing to the fall of a derrick mast, photographs were introduced showing a heavier counterbalance on the derrick than had been there at the time of the accident, and the jury visited the derrick and inspected it with such counterbalance on it. A witness then testified that he did not know the weight of the counterbalance, but, when asked to give an estimate of it, did so. Held, that the admission of the testimony was not erroneous.—Dyas v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 Cal. 296, 73 Pac. 972.

[c] The lines described in a patent must be located by the court according to the calls of the patent. Witnesses can testify only as to the existence and condition on the ground of what is called for in the writing; and it is error to admit their opinions, speculations, or conjectures as to the location of the lines.—Tognazzini v. Morganti, 23 Pac. 138.

§ 471. Quantity, Distance, and Rate of Speed.

[a] Witness may testify to estimate of distance.—Innis v. The Senator, 4 Cal. 5, 60 Am. Dec. 577.

[b] In an action to recover for fruit sold under guaranty, where the quantity shipped to defendant was in issue, and it appeared that defendant had packed the fruit in what were called "forty-pound boxes," the testimony of witnesses engaged in packing fruit was properly admitted to show that such boxes, if well packed, would hold more than forty pounds.—Ah Tong v. Earl Fruit Co., 112 Cal. 679, 45 Pac. 7.

[c] Persons who have been accustomed to riding on a street-car line, where it has been shown that the schedule and statutory rate of speed of the cars is the same, may testify that a car was running very fast, and at an unusual rate of speed, for the purpose of showing that it was going at a prohibited rate of speed.—Johnsen v. Oakland etc. Electric Ry. Co., 127 Cal. 608, 60 Pac. 170.

[d] The fact that witness was a passenger on a street-car, rather than a bystander, does not disqualify him to testify as to the approximate speed at which the car was running, where it is shown he had been accustomed to riding on the line, and knew what the usual rate of speed was.—Johnsen v. Oakland etc. Electric Ry. Co., 127 Cal. 608, 60 Pac. 170.

§ 472. Value.

[a] In an action against a steamboat for not transporting plaintiff within the agreed time, the opinion of a witness that plaintiff's time was worth one hundred dollars per day, based on the fact that he was a large stock speculator and frequently made more than that a day, was inadmissible.—Hastings v. The Uncle Sam, 10 Cal. 341.

[b] A witness stated that he had been employed as a ranch superintendent in the same character of work as that done by plaintiff at the K. ranch, particularizing the character, places, and times of such work; that he had seen plaintiff working on the K. ranch, and that he (witness) was familiar with that ranch; that he knew plaintiff was superintendent of the K. ranch, and looked after the stock and farming of the place; that he knew the fair and reasonable value of such services as were rendered by plaintiff on the K. ranch during the years in dispute; that he knew about what was being paid in the vicinity for such services during said years. Held, that the witness was qualified to testify as to the value of plaintiff's services.—Cowdery v. McChesney, 124 Cal. 363, 57 Pac. 221.

[c] The fact that plaintiff's witnesses, called to testify as to the value of services rendered by him, resided in another city of the same county, and admitted that they did not know the value of like services in the city where they were performed, does not render their testimony incompetent, where they were present in court, and heard plaintiff describe the nature and extent of his services, were business men of experience, and had employed persons for services similar to those performed by plaintiff, and testified that they knew the value of such services in such county.—Crusoe v. Clark, 127 Cal. 341, 59 Pac. 700.

§ 473. Damages.

[a] In trespass for driving cattle upon land, questions to a witness, "What would have been the injury to the land by turning in two hundred head of cattle, on April 12th, 13th and 14th, and letting them remain six or seven days?" Also, "What would it have been worth to pasture two hundred or three hundred cattle for six or seven days on this land?"—are not objectionable on the ground that they are an estimate of damages.—Woodbeck v. Wilders, 18 Cal. 131.

[b] Where a witness for plaintiff in an action to recover damages from the construction of a railroad testified that after the road was built plaintiff's land was worth a certain sum less than before it was built, but on cross-examination testified that this estimate might have been based partly upon the worth of the property had the road passed through the town upon some other street (which would have increased the value), defendant cannot have the testimony stricken out on the ground that the basis for the estimate was erroneous, as the objectionable evidence did not relate to the testimony given in direct examination, and was not prejudicial, where the court charged that in estimating damages the value of the land if the railroad had been constructed through some other part of the city should not be considered.—Abbott v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 109 Cal. 282, 41 Pac. 1099.

[c] In a proceeding to condemn a right of way for a public road, after a petition to the board of supervisors, a member of such board may testify as to the damages which will be sustained by the defendant.—Siskiyou County v. Gamlich, 110 Cal. 94, 42 Pac. 468.

[d] In trespass for entering plaintiff's close and diverting the waters of his well, evidence by plaintiff that his loss was four dollars per day, estimated on the loss of profits on his crop of vegetables, is incompetent, as being the conclusion of the witness, and not the facts on which an estimate could be made. Razzo v. Varni, 21 Pac. 762.

§ 474. Examination of Witnesses.

[a] In proceedings to condemn lands for public uses, witnesses giving their opinion of the value of the land taken cannot, upon direct examination, testify as to particular transactions, such as sales of adjoining lands, or how much has been offered for adjoining land or the land in question, or how much the railroad company has been compelled to pay in other and like cases, notwithstanding those transactions may constitute the source of their knowledge.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Pearson, 35 Cal. 247.

[b] Witness may testify to estimate of amount of damages without first giving reasons or grounds on which he bases his estimates.—Razzo v. Varni, 81 Cal. 292, 22 Pac. 848.

[c] In order to enable a witness to testify to the appearance of a person with reference to his being rational or irrational in his presence and under his observation, it is not necessary that he should be an intimate acquaintance of such person, or be qualified as an expert witness.—Holland v. Zollner, 102 Cal. 633, 36 Pac. 930, 37 Pac. 231.

[d] Where an attorney testified to the value of certain legal services, the question what annual income such a valuation would enable a man to make was properly excluded.—Roche v. Baldwin, 135 Cal. 522, 65 Pac. 459.

[e] Where the attorney who opposed plaintiff's assignor in the trial of a case stated to the jury all the facts on which he based the value of the assignor's legal services, but testified that he could not state their value without looking into his mind, an answer, after consideration, fixing the value, was not objectionable as based on what was in the witness' mind, and not on the evidence. Roche v. Baldwin, 135 Cal. 522, 65 Pac. 459.

[f] On the issue whether a grantor was competent to transfer property, a physician testifying as to the physical and mental condition of the grantor could not give his abstract opinion as to whether she was competent.—Langenbeck v. Louis, 140 Cal. 406, 73 Pac. 1086.

[g] In an action for personal injuries resulting from an assault, it was not prejudicial error to allow plaintiff to answer the preliminary question, "You may state whether or not you have ever received any injury caused by . . . . defendant," when there follows, without objection, a narration of how the injury was received, and what was said and done by defendant.—Townsend v. Briggs, 32 Pac. 307.

[h] On an issue of testamentary capacity, questions calling for nonexpert opinion based on what witness had "learned and observed," held objectionable.—Dolbeer's Estate, In re (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695; Schander v. Gray (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695.

[i] A nonexpert held only entitled to testify as to the insanity of an intimate acquaintance, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, on giving reasons for his opinion.—Dolbeer's Estate, In re (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695; Schander v. Gray (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695.

[j] Hypothetical questions involving facts not testified to by the witnesses themselves cannot be put to nonexperts testifying on the issue of insanity.—Dolbeer's Estate (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695; Schander v. Gray (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695.

DAMAGES, § 488.

§ 475. In General.

[a] The opinions of witnesses are generally admissible only when they relate to matters of science, or art, or to skill in some particular profession or business.—Hastings v. Steamer U. S., 10 Cal. 341.

[b] The testimony of experts is not admissible as to the sufficiency of bars and a barway to restrain cattle.—Enright v. San Francisco etc. R. R. Co., 33 Cal. 230.

[c] Court may allow expert evidence of accountants upon a number of front feet represented upon a petition.—Mulligan v. Smith, 59 Cal. 226.

[d] Qualified sawmill expert may testify that machinery was operated in the usual manner.—Sanborn v. Madera etc. Co., 70 Cal. 269, 11 Pac. 710.

[e] Where the form of questions put to an expert machinist as to the impossibility of foretelling the leakage, under assumed circumstances, called for a simple affirmative or negative answer which would have involved the conclusion of the witness upon three several questions of fact, one of which was clearly not the subject of opinion evidence, and another may not have been such subject according to what his opinion may have been as to the true cause of the break or leak, objections to the questions that they were not the proper subject of opinion evidence were properly sustained.—Kahn v. Triest-Rosenberg Cap. Co., 139 Cal. 340, 73 Pac. 164.

[f] In an action for injuries received in an accident due to a defective switch, evidence by a skilled switch-tender as to whether anything was not done that could have been done to avoid the accident is inadmissible, as invading the province of the jury.—Fogel v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 42 Pac. 565.

§ 476. Matters of Common Knowledge.

[a] In an action for injuries caused by an exposed shaft, it was error to admit the testimony of machinists as to whether the shaft would be more dangerous if it were jagged and split on the end, since the jury was capable of deciding such question without the aid of experts.—Kauffman v. Maier, 94 Cal. 269, 29 Pac. 481, 18 L. R. A. 124.

[b] In an action to abate a nuisance, it is not error to exclude an answer to the question: "Now, in your opinion as an expert, would that plastering be in the condition that you found it, had the building, since the plastering was placed there, settled six or seven inches?" since it must appear to anyone that the plaster of a building which has settled six or seven inches cannot be in the condition that it was before the building settled.—Richardson v. City of Eureka, 96 Cal. 443, 31 Pac. 458.

[c] The question as to the proper height of stakes to be used at the ends of a car loaded with ties is not a matter for expert evidence. Kerrigan v. Market St. Ry. Co., 138 Cal. 506, 71 Pac. 621.

[d] The probable effect of the unsoundness of any of the timbers in a trestle held not a matter of expert testimony.—Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 1010.

See 17 Cyc. 229, 230. See, also, 17 Cyc. 228-241; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3340-3343, § 2310.

§ 477. Physical Condition.

[a] The expert evidence of medical witnesses based only upon the inadmissible declarations of the deceased as to his physical condition and symptoms, have no basis, and are wholly inadmissible.—Estate of James, 124 Cal. 653, 57 Pac. 578, 1008.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3348, 3349, §§ 2312, 2313.

§ 478. Matters Involving Scientific or Other Special Knowledge.

[a] In an action for damages caused by the explosion of nitroglycerin in a dynamite manufactory, expert evidence that, if the manufacturing and handling of dynamite is properly carried on, an explosion will not occur, is admissible.—Judson v. Giant Powder Co., 107 Cal. 549, 48 Am. St. Rep. 146, 40 Pac. 1020, 29 L. R. A. 718.

[b] Expert testimony is admissible to determine whether or not two certain pieces of cloth are of the same texture and quality. People v. Lovren, 119 Cal. 88, 51 Pac. 22.

[c] In an action for the price of peaches sold on a contract fixing the price per pound for each of several sizes of fruit "per box packed," where defendant contended that the size and weight of the boxes determined the size and weight of the fruit, an experienced fruit raiser and packer, who saw plaintiff's fruit packed, could testify that peaches could not be graded in that way, as they were packed in "break joints," by placing the upper layer in the space between the fruit in the lower layer; and he could also testify as to the average size of plaintiff's fruit, and the average weight of the several sizes as packed.—Thresher v. Gregory, 42 Pac. 421.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3343-3347, § 2311.

§ 479. Handwriting.

[a] Where plaintiff contended that a certain word on a record was the word "four," and that an attempt had been made to change it to the word "town," by changing the initial and final letters, it was not competent for an expert to state whether or not the fact that the final letter had been changed was strong evidence that the initial letter had also been changed, it being the duty of the court to make the deduction from the facts. Kruse v. Chester, 66 Cal. 353, 5 Pac. 613.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3351-3354, § 2315.

§ 480. Due Care and Proper Conduct.

[a] When the facts from which negligence is sought to be inferred are within the experience of all men of common education, the jury must determine the question of negligence without the aid of experts.—Shafter v. Evans, 53 Cal. 32.

[b] In an action for a death resulting from a runaway, the competency or incompetency of the driver is not a subject for expert testimony.—Rowe v. Such, 134 Cal. 573, 66 Pac. 862.

[c] In an action for the death of a servant by the fall of a derrick, it was the theory of defendant that the fall was occasioned by a latent defect in the pivot, which had been found broken after the accident; but it was the theory of plaintiff that the fall was occasioned because the ties supporting the rails to which the derrick was clamped were decayed. Held, that it was proper to permit civil engineers of many years' experience, familiar with the mechanical principles of derricks, to testify as to the proper balancing of derricks, the effect of the breaking of a pivot on an evenly-balanced derrick, and as to whether the fall of a derrick mast would fracture the pivot.—Dyas v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 Cal. 296, 73 Pac. 972.

[cd] Before a witness can testify on the issue of a physician's neglect and unskillful practice, his competency must be shown. Heintz v. Cooper, 47 Pac. 360.

[d] In an action for injuries to a miner by the fall of a portion of the roof, an expert held properly permitted to testify as to what conditions made it necessary to timber a mine.—Bird v. Utica Gold Min. Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 256.

[e] In an action for injuries by the alleged insufficient lighting of excavations in a street, whether the lights maintained were sufficient held not a proper subject of expert testimony.—Carty v. Boeseke-Dawe Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 267.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3357-3371, § 2316.

§ 481. —— Construction of Machinery and Appliances.

[a] Nonexperts cannot testify as to sufficiency of construction of a machine wheel. Hoult v. Baldwin, 78 Cal. 414, 20 Pac. 864.

[b] Practical machinist familiar with requirements of harvesting machine may testify whether it was so made as to successfully do work it was intended to do.—Greenleaf v. Stockton C. H. & A. Works, 78 Cal. 610, 21 Pac. 369.

[c] Where plaintiff was injured by the breaking down of a harvester manufactured for him by defendant, expert testimony is proper on the question whether the bolt and nut which separated and caused the accident were sufficient.—Snyder v. Holt Mfg. Co., 134 Cal. 324, 66 Pac. 311.

[d] An expert may testify with respect to the comparative strength of a solid timber of a specified size and stringers bolted together to form timber of the same size.—Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 1010.

§ 482. —— Management and Operation of Machinery.

[a] It is not proper to admit the testimony of expert witnesses as to what appliances were safe, and what were unsafe. A master is not bound to furnish the safest appliances. The jury is the proper judge of the safety of the appliances actually used; and the safety of other appliances is immaterial. Hanley v. California Bridge etc. Co., 127 Cal. 232, 59 Pac. 577.

[b] Where the issue in an action for injuries to a miner is whether a hoisting appliance was defective, an objection to plaintiff's question, put to his expert witness, as to whether the appliance was at the time of the accident a safe machine for the work being done, is properly sustained.—Luman v. Golden Ancient Channel Min. Co., 140 Cal. 700, 74 Pac. 307.

§ 483. —— Management and Operation of Street-cars.

[a] The manner of running electric cars, their rate of speed, and the facility with which they can be stopped or handled, is a proper subject for expert evidence, and not a matter of such common knowledge that the jury can judge as intelligently as one skilled in their use.—Howland v. O. C. S. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 513, 42 Pac. 983.

§ 484. Custom or Usage and Construction of Writings.

[a] The rule that courts are to give construction to contracts is frequently departed from, where the contract relates to the scientific or mechanic arts. In such cases, it is common and prudent to admit the opinions of experts to explain the contract.—Reynolds v. Jourdan, 6 Cal. 108.

[b] In an action to recover the value of marble sold and delivered to defendant to be used by him in the erection of a building under a contract providing that the marble should be delivered, "finished and ready for setting," the meaning of these words, as used by marble cutters, may be proved by testimony of competent witnesses.—Myers v. Tibbals, 72 Cal. 278, 13 Pac. 695.

[c] A question asking a witness, in an action based on the contention that defendant was negligent in operating an electric car with but one person in charge, to state from his experience what the general custom was among electric roads, as to the number of men found necessary to manage a car under similar circumstances, does not call for the opinion of witnesses as an expert, but practically for the opinion of others as inferred from their conduct.—Redfield v. Oakland Consol. St. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 220, 43 Pac. 1117.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3371, 3372, § 2325.

§ 485. Nature, Condition and Relation of Objects.

[a] Where an employee was injured by machinery claimed to be defective, and the question of relative strength of wrought and cast iron is material in determining whether or not the machine was defective, a witness qualified as an expert may give his opinions with reference thereto, as provided in Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 9.—McFaul v. Madera Flume etc. Co., 134 Cal. 313, 66 Pac. 308.

[b] Testimony as to the quality of old wire rope sold by sample, that the outer wires were broken into short pieces; that the rope was "rotten, and a little broken, instead of being as the sample"; that much of it was "broken, rusty, and rotten"—relates to facts open to common observation, and not requiring expert knowledge.—Grumwald v. Freese, 34 Pac. 73.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3378-3381, § 2328.

§ 486. Value.

[a] Testimony of persons dealing in real estate concerning the value of certain property as affected by a lawsuit contesting the validity of a will is to be inadmissible to prove the value.—Collins v. Sullivan, 54 Cal. 238.

[b] In proceedings to condemn a right of way over oil fields, certain expert testimony as to valuation held proper.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 146 Cal. 90, 79 Pac. 961.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 128-130; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3382-3386, §§ 2330-2333.

§ 487. Cause and Effect.

[a] In an action by one mining claimant to enjoin another from tunneling, etc., to the injury of the plaintiff's ditch, the opinions of persons of learning and experience in mining, who have examined the premises, are admissible to prove the cause of an alleged cracking and settling of plaintiff's premises.—Clark v. Willett, 35 Cal. 534.

[b] In an action for personal injuries, where plaintiff had testified to the fracture of the tenth rib, two inches from the spine, by the accident, it was proper for defendant to show by a medical expert the necessary force to produce such injury, and that it could not have been caused by the accident. Yaeger v. Southern California Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 190.

[c] That the running of trains over a trestle will produce such a vibration as will loosen the nails with which the timbers in the trestle are put together held a subject of expert testimony.—Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 1010.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 489. Knowledge, Experience and Skill in General.

[a] Mere opportunity for observation will not qualify an expert.—Reed v. Ybarra, 50 Cal. 465.

Digitized by Google

[b] Persons who have acquired experience or peculiar knowledge are experts, though not professional scientists.—Estate of Loomes, 54 Cal. 514, 35 Am. Rep. 83.

[c] A practical miner who has used blasting powder for years, and used a large amount of a certain powder, can be asked his opinion, based upon his experience, as to the safety of that powder, by virtue of the provisions of subdivision 9 of section 1870 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—Sowden v. Idaho Quartz Min. Co., 55 Cal. 443.

[d] Witness having ordinary knowledge as "farmer and logger" of land and its qualities may testify as to cost of clearing land. Barnum v. Bridges, 81 Cal. 607, 82 Pac. 924.

[e] Proof of any amount of familiarity with earth dams will not qualify witness to testify as expert in regard to wooden dams. Wiedekind v. Tuolumne etc. Co., 83 Cal. 200, 23 Pac. 311.

[f] A civil engineer, with eight years of experience in charge of a government snag boat, and of observation and study of river currents, and with knowledge of the locality in question, is qualified to give an opinion as to whether a river can be safely navigated at all times at a point where a steamer collided with a bridge.—Chico Bridge Co. v. Sacramento Transp. Co., 123 Cal. 178, 55 Pac. 780.

[g] One who has been a civil and hydraulic engineer for several years is qualified to testify as an expert in matters touching civil and hydraulic engineering.—Egger v. Rhodes, 37 Pac. 1037.

[h] A general qualified medical practitioner held as competent to testify to the sanity or insanity of a person as skilled alienists.—Dolbeer's Estate, In re (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695; Schander v. Gray (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3407-3412, §§ 2343, 2344.

§ 490. —— Information Derived from Books.

[a] Although medical books themselves cannot be read in evidence, yet a physician who testifies as an expert witness may state not only his opinion but the grounds of his opinion, although in some degree founded on books as a part of his general knowledge, and the reference of such witness to "cases on record" in connection with his opinion is not incompetent, nor in effect permitting the introduction of medical books to the jury. Healy v. Visalia etc. R. R. Co., 101 Cal. 585, 36 Pac. 125.

§ 491. Mechanical Devices.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 9, which provides that a witness may give his opinion "on a question of science, art, or trade, when he is skilled therein," it is error to allow a witness, who for about two years has been a driver and conductor on the railway, to testify whether in his opinion the pin was "safe."—Sappenfield v. Main St. etc. R. Co., 91 Cal. 48, 27 Pac. 590.

[b] A witness held competent as an expert to testify that the principal timbers in a trestle should be joined by bolts.—Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 1010.

§ 492. Physical Facts.

[a] An expert trestle builder is competent to testify as an expert that the timbers decay first where they come in contact with each other.—Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 1010.

[b] Where an expert trestle builder testified that he knew something about the life of red fir timber, he was competent to testify as to the average life of such timber in a trestle.—Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 1010.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3430-3432, § 2355.

§ 493. Cause and Effect.

[a] Where a person is shown to have been engaged in measuring and selling water to miners for four or five years, he is sufficiently an expert to render admissible his opinion of the effect that a dam, crossing a stream, will have in raising the water in the channel above it.—Blood v. Light, 31 Cal. 115.

[b] There is no error in rejecting the testimony of one asked to give his opinion as an expert as to the effect of irrigation on lands in the mountains of Santa Cruz, it appearing that his experience had been confined to the southern part of Santa Clara county, and that he had never been on the lands under consideration except for a day in the winter.—City of Santa Cruz v. Enright, 95 Cal. 105, 30 Pac. 197.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3433-3436, § 2356.

§ 494. Value.

[a] A witness who is not an attorney is incompetent to prove the value of an attorney's services.—Hart v. Vidal, 6 Cal. 56.

[b] One who had been in the sheep business for twenty-six years, and was familiar with sheep husbandry, was competent to testify as to the probable average annual increase in a certain flock of sheep.—More's Estate, In re, 121 Cal. 609, 54 Pac. 97.

[c] Merchants and clerks of merchants in a foreign country who deal in a certain article are competent to testify as to the market value of the article in such foreign country.—Grunwald v. Freese, 34 Pac. 73.

[d] Where a witness testifies that he has been in the dairy business for seven years, and is familiar with the value of cattle for that business, his testimony as to the value of the cattle in suit is admissible, although he has not seen them for a year previous to the execution.—Paden v. Goldbaum, 37 Pac. 759.

[e] Where a lawyer engaged for twenty years as an examiner of titles and as attorney for leading loaning companies in a city testifies that he is acquainted with the value of certain lots therein, he should be permitted to testify as to such value.—Norris v. Crandall, 133 Cal. xix, 65 Pac. 568.

[f] In an action to recover for certain concrete work performed by plaintiff for defendant, a witness held qualified to testify as to the value of the work.—Camp v. Behlow (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 251.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3435-3448, §§ 2356½-2359.

§ 495. Damages.

[a] A stockraiser is a competent witness to estimate damage done to cattle by falling through a wharf.—Polk v. Coffin, 9 Cal. 56.

§ 496. Preliminary Evidence as to Competency.

[a] Witness called upon to give opinion as to value of land must lay proper foundation by showing that he possesses the means to form an intelligent opinion; but it is not essential that his knowledge should be derived from any peculiar skill in a particular pursuit or branch of business or department of science.—Reed v. Drais, 67 Cal. 491, 8 Pac. 20.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3449-3453, §§ 2360-2362.

§ 497. Determination of Question of Competency.

[a] Whether one offered as an expert is qualified to speak as such is a fact preliminary to his testifying to be determined by the court at the trial and it is error to refer it to the jury.—Fairbank v. Hughson, 58 Cal. 314.

[b] The qualification of a witness as an expert is largely within the discretion of the trial judge.—Howland v. Oakland Consol. St. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 513, 42 Pac. 983.

[c] In an action to recover for personal services in nursing and caring for defendant's testator, plaintiff introduced as an expert witness as to the value of the services a woman of experience in the same kind of work, and who had seen the nature of plaintiff's services on the ranch where they were performed. In answer to the question, "From your experience, and what you saw on the ranch, are you able to say what such services are reasonably worth?" she replied. "Well, I am able to tell what I think." Held, that the court erred in excluding the testimony on the ground that witness had admitted her incompetency.—Cowdery v. McChesney, 125 Cal. xix, 58 Pac. 62.

CROSS-EXAMINATION AND RE-EXAMINATION, § 505.

§ 498. In General.

[a] Where witnesses as to the value of land were qualified to give an opinion, the question what was the value of the land as "between a party who wished to buy and one who wished to sell" was not objectionable as to form.—Fowler v. Carne, 132 Cal. xviii, 64 Pac. 581.

§ 499. Questions and Answers Based on Personal Knowledge of Expert.

[a] Upon an issue as to the unsoundness of mind of a testator at the time of making his will, testimony of his attending physician, in answer to an hypothetical question as to his opinion, as an expert, of the patient's mental soundness, based upon a state of facts describing the deceased's physical condition, as testified to by the doctor himself, is properly admitted in evidence; and the fact that the condition of the patient, as described in the question, was personally known to the witness, is immaterial.—Flint, In re, 100 Cal. 391, 34 Pac. 863.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3459-3463, § 2365.

§ 500. Questions and Answers Based on Testimony of Others.

[a] Plaintiff, a miller, had a dam, by which he turned water in the flume which ran his mill. The stream above his dam was filled with slum and other debris, thrown into it by miners; whereupon he built another dam, in a different position, to avoid this. The latter dam defendants cut away, and threatened to continue to cut away if plaintiff should rebuild. Suit was brought for damages and perpetual injunction. Held, that the question to a witness, "What effect did the running of the slum, etc., by defendants and other miners above, have upon plaintiff's race?" was proper, as the rights of defendants could be protected by proper instructions from the court.—Bell v. Shultz, 18 Cal. 449.

[b] Where the opinion of an expert is asked on facts not detailed in the question itself, but appearing in the testimony of another, to which the expert is referred, it must appear that he heard such testimony.—Howland v. Oakland Consol. St. Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 487, 47 Pac. 255.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

39 L. R. A. 310, note. See, also, 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3463-3471, §§ 2366, 2367.

§ 501. Hypothetical Questions and Answers.

[a] Form of hypothetical question propounded to physician herein held objectionable.—Valensin v. Valensin, 73 Cal. 108, 14 Pac. 397.

[b] Question calling for legal opinion of witness, which erroneously supposes that the law is as stated in it, is properly ruled out. Shadburne v. Daly, 76 Cal. 358, 18 Pac. 403.

[c] It seems that where an expert witness has heard a statement of facts testified to by another witness, it is sufficient, in putting to him a hypothetical question, to direct his attention to the testimony heard as the basis upon which his opinion is desired, without repeating the testimony.—Howland v. O. C. S. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 513, 42 Pac. 983.

[d] Expert evidence of attorneys as to the value of the professional services rendered by the plaintiff as attorney for the defendant may be properly admitted in answer to hypothetical questions based upon the admitted allegations of the complaint, and the evidence given for the plaintiff. Whether the evidence given for the plaintiff is true is a question for the jury to determine.—Coonan v. Loewenthal, 129 Cal. 197, 61 Pac. 940.

[e] A hypothetical question is properly refused where it does not conform to the facts proven.—Rowe v. Such, 134 Cal. 573, 66 Pac. 862.

[f] It is not improper to incorporate in the hypothetical question to experts testifying to the value of an attorney's services in a case the expressions used by the attorney in describing the work done by him, "accumulated papers," "number of letters written," "generally familiarized himself with the case," etc., with statements of a more specific nature.—Roche v. Baldwin, 143 Cal. 186, 76 Pac. 956.

[g] It is proper to propound a hypothetical question to an expert, based on any facts of which there is evidence, though the weight of evidence may be strongly against the truth of the facts assumed, and it is for the jury to disregard the opinion if the evidence fail to establish the facts thus assumed.—People v. Bowers, 18 Pac. 660.

[h] Where plaintiff's evidence tended to show that one of his ribs had been fractured by the accident, and that inflammation of the nerves was the result, defendant's theory that fractured ribs could not have been caused by the accident, and that the condition of the nerves came from alcoholism, exposure, or another accident, did not present a case for hypothetical questions.—Yaeger v. Southern California Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 190.

[i] In an action for injuries to a miner, a hypothetical question describing the stope in which he was injured held not objectionable because it did not appear that the stope was opened throughout its entire length, breadth, and height at the time of the accident.—Bird v. Utica Gold Min. Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 256.

Hypothetical questions which may be put: 53 Am. Rep. 307, note; 39 L. R. A. 313, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 242-252; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3471-3486, §§ 2368-2375.

§ 502. —— Facts Unsupported by Evidence.

[a] Where plaintiff introduced two witnesses to prove value of his services in going twice to Europe to negotiate the purchase of an estate, etc., but it was not shown that he undertook these voyages at the request of the defendant, or in what capacity he went, the testimony was admissible as the question was hypothetical, and assumed a state of facts not in proof.—Dopman v. Hoberlin, 5 Cal. 413.

[b] The trial court erred in permitting a hypothetical question to be put to a medical expert, in which it was assumed that when the testator said he had a sister, and if he knew where she lived he would visit her, he referred to a sister whom he knew to have been dead for 30 years, rather than to his living sister, where no mention of the dead sister was made in the evidence on which the question was based.—Carpenter v. Bailey, 94 Cal. 406, 29 Pac. 1101.

[c] Hypothetical questions to experts assuming facts not in evidence are improper.—Roche v. Baldwin, 143 Cal. 186, 76 Pac. 956.

§ 503. Facts Forming Basis of Opinion.

[a] An opinion of the value of corporation stock if issued cannot be given when not based on facts, real or hypothetical.—Eisenmayer v. Leonardt (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 43.

§ 504. Reference to Authorities.

[a] On trial of an action for damages for negligence and unskillfulness of a physician in setting plaintiff's broken arm, it is error to permit plaintiff to read to her medical witnesses, in their examination in chief, extracts from a standard work on surgery, and then to ask them if what was so read corresponds with their own judgment.—Lilley v. Parkinson, 91 Cal. 655, 27 Pac. 1091.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3489, 3490, § 2377.

§ 505. Cross-examination and Re-examination.

[a] The testimony of defendant's medical expert was confined to a contradiction of the theory adopted by plaintiff's medical experts. Plaintiff, upon the cross-examination of defendant's medical expert, propounded a hypothetical question similar to that put by him to his own witnesses. Held inadmissible. Gridley v. Boggs, 62 Cal. 190.

[b] Grounds on basis of opinion or estimate can always be tested on cross-examination.—Razzo v. Varni, 81 Cal. 293, 22 Pac. 848.

[c] Reading of extracts from medical works, and asking an expert medical witness if he agrees with the author, is not permissible on cross-examination, where the extracts do not contradict the evidence of the witness and are evidently intended as evidence for the cross-examining party to sustain his theory of the case. Questions as to extracts from such works, on cross-examination, should be strictly limited to the one purpose of testing the competency of the witness as an expert, or the value of his opinions.—Fisher v. Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 89 Cal. 399, 26 Pac. 894.

[d] A physician testifying to the mental sanity of the testator at the time of the testamentary act may be cross-examined not only as to his qualifications, but also as to his knowledge of the character of the patient's afflictions, and as to all the facts or circumstances within his knowledge and acquaintanceship with the patient, upon which his judgment was exercised and his conclusion reached.—Estate of Mullin, 110 Cal. 252, 42 Pac. 645.

[de] Real estate dealers who testify to the value of land may be cross-examined as to the basis of their estimates.—Jack's Estate, In re, 115 Cal. 203, 46 Pac. 1057.

[e] Where, on an application for the appointment of a guardian for an alleged incompetent, her expert witnesses testified as to her competency, they were properly allowed to testify on cross-examination as to her ability, unassisted, to properly care for herself and her property.—Daniels, In re, 140 Cal. 335, 73 Pac. 1053.

[f] Where an expert witness for the buyer in an action for the rejection of goods sold testifies to their inferior quality, it is proper cross-examination to show that he afterward, on the seller's offering the goods for resale, made written offers therefor in the buyer's behalf.—Peterson Bros. v. Mineral King Fruit Co., 140 Cal. 624, 74 Pac. 162.

E. COMPARISON OF HANDWRITING AND EFFECT OF OPINION EVIDENCE.

WRITINGS TO BE PROVED, § 506.
COMPETENCY OF EXPERT, § 507.
STANDARD OF COMPARISON, § 508.
EFFECT OF OPINION EVIDENCE, § 509.

§ 506. Writings to be Proved.

[a] An expert witness cannot testify as to the genuineness of a disputed writing, upon a comparison of a genuine writing with a press copy of the writing whose genuineness is disputed.—Spottiswood v. Weir, 66 Cal. 525, 6 Pac. 381.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Se 20 Cent. Dig., col. 3501, § 2382.

§ 507. Competency of Expert.

[a] In order to render one a competent witness, as an expert, to the genuineness of a signature, he must have been educated in the business about which he testifies, or he must have acquired actual skill and knowledge upon the subject. It is not enough that he has sometimes compared signatures of other persons when disagreements as to their genuineness had risen in the course of business.—Goldstein v. Black, 50 Cal. 462.

[b] The opinion of a witness as to the genuineness of a signature, derived from comparing it with other signatures, is not admissible when the witness is not an expert.—Spottiswood v. Weir, 80 Cal. 448, 22 Pac. 289.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

63 L. R. A. 937, 963, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 171; 20 Cent. Dig.. cols. 3501-3504, §§ 2383, 2384.

§ 508. Standard of Comparison.

[a] The defendant, having testified that his signature to the instrument in question was a forgery, was asked, on cross-examination, with reference to another document purporting to have been signed by him, and which had been used for comparison, if his signature to that was genuine. Held, that the question should have been allowed.—Neal v. Neal, 58 Cal. 287.

[b] Signature proved to satisfaction of judge to be genuine may be compared with disputed one.—Marshall v. Hancock, 80 Cal. 85, 22 Pac. 61.

[c] Evidence tending to prove the signature to a lost deed by its similarity to one alleged to have been affixed by the same person to another deed is not admissible unless the alleged signature has been proved to be genuine.—Spottiswood v. Weir, 80 Cal. 448, 22 Pac. 289.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

63 L. R. A. 427, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 177; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3504-3513, §§ 2385-2389.

§ 509. Effect of Opinion Evidence.

[a] When an expert is called by one of the parties to an action, his evidence should be received with great caution by the jury, and should never be allowed except upon subjects which require unusual scientific attainments or peculiar skill.—Grigsby v. Clear Lake Water Co., 40 Cal. 396.

[b] Estimates of minute periods of time by ordinary observers are extremely unreliable.—Laughlin v. McGarvey, 50 Cal. 169.

[c] The law receives the testimony of qualified medical experts; and, in arriving at a conclusion, the jury may consider such testimony, and award to it such value as in their judgment it deserves.—Blake's Estate, In re, 136 Cal. 306, 68 Pac. 827.

[d] A jury is not bound to follow the opinion of experts as to the genuineness of handwriting.—Castor v. Bernstein (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 244.

§ 510. In General.

[a] A referee was appointed to take and report the testimony in a cause. A witness called before him was first sworn on his voir dire, but the referee did not take down what the witness said in his voir dire. Held, that in another action in which the witness was a party the opposite party might prove by the referee what the witness said on his voir dire. Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485.

§ 511. Grounds for Admission.

[a] The testimony of a witness, since deceased, in a former suit, is admissible in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies in reference to the same subject matter.—Fredericks v. Judah, 11 Pac. 133.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1088-1091; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3531-3550, §§ 2401-2413.

§ 512. —— Absence of Witness.

[a] A witness outside of the county, but within the state, is not out of the jurisdiction of the court, so as to authorize the reading of his testimony given at a former trial of the cause.—Meyer v. Roth, 51 Cal. 582; Butcher v. Vaca Val. R. Co., 56 Cal. 598.

[b] When witnesses are out of jurisdiction, reporter's transcript of testimony on a former trial is admissible.—Chidester v. Consol. Ditch Co., 59 Cal. 197.

[c] The testimony of a witness at a former trial is admissible when at the time he is out of the jurisdiction of the court.—Benson v. Shotwell, 103 Cal. 163, 37 Pac. 147.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1096-1099; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3335, 3536, § 2406.

§ 513. Identity of Parties.

[a] To entitle testimony of witnesses at a former trial or in another proceeding to be admitted, the subsequent suit must be between the same parties or their privies.—Poorman v. Miller, 44 Cal. 269.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 8, providing that evidence "of the testimony of a deceased witness, ... given in a former action between the same parties, relating to the same matter," is admissible testimony of a deceased witness given in an action brought by the executrix of the estate of which defendants are heirs, against the plaintiff as lessee of the property in question, is admissible in a subsequent action between the plaintiff and the heirs on questions of tenancy and adverse possession, the testimony being exclusively as to whether plaintiff held the property as tenant or as his own.—Fredericks v. Judah, 73 Cal. 604, 15 Pac. 305.

[c] To admit the testimony of witnesses on a former trial, the parties must be the same. Marshall v. Hancock, 80 Cal. 82, 22 Pac. 61.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cyc. 1091-1093; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3545-3550, § 2413.

§ 514. Preliminary Evidence.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 869, subdivision 5, providing that the shorthand reporter shall transcribe into longhand his notes, and certify and file them, and that they shall be certified as a correct statement of the testimony and proceedings in the case to entitle them to be admitted in evidence, a certificate that the document is a "correct transcript of the shorthand notes taken by me herein," without stating that the notes are correct, is insufficient, and the defect cannot be supplied by parol.—People v. Carty, 77 Cal. 213, 19 Pac. 490.

§ 515. Mode of Proof.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 8, providing that the testimony of a witness out of the state, given in a former trial between the parties relating to the same matter, may be given in evidence, there is no error in overruling an objection to the official reporter's transcript of testimony given on a former trial, the only grounds of objection raised being that the testimony was not signed by the witness, that it was not his deposition, and that it was secondary evidence.—Hicks v. Lovell, 64 Cal. 14, 27 Pac. 942.

[b] Former testimony may be proved by official reporter refreshing his memory from his notes.—Watrous v. Cunningham, 71 Cal. 34, 11 Pac. 811.

[c] Longhand notes, as transcribed by a stenographer, of the testimony of a witness at a former trial of the same case, are not admissible.—Reid v. Reid, 73 Cal. 206, 14 Pac. 781; People v. Carty, 77 Cal. 213, 19 Pac. 490.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 273, providing that the report of the official reporter of any court, when written out and certified as a correct transcript of the testimony and proceedings in a case, shall be prima facie correct, does not authorize the introduction of a stenograher's report of the evidence of testator in a divorce suit tried some years before his death, in a subsequent will contest by his widow; the transcript amounting to no more than testator's declarations, which, if admissible at all, might have been proved by the reporter's oral testimony as authorized by Code of Civil Procedure, section 2047.—Benton's Estate, In re, 131 Cal. 472, 63 Pac. 775.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 8, fact that testimony of deceased witness had been taken in shorthand and transcribed into longhand held not to preclude admission of oral evidence of persons testifying from memory alone as to what deceased's testimony was on former trial.—Meyer v. Foster, 147 Cal. 166, 81 Pac. 402.

Weight and effect of evidence as question for jury. See Trial, §§ 61, 83.

§ 516. Weight and Conclusiveness in General.

[a] Estimate of value by witness who has examined wheat must control estimate of one who has not seen it.—Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 499.

[b] Incompetent evidence is entitled to no weight.—Hutchings v. Castle, 48 Cal. 153.

[c] Evidence of a conversation resting in the memory of a single witness is ordinarily the most unsatisfactory of all evidence.—Thompson v. Toland, 48 Cal. 115.

[d] Intention is to be inferred from facts and circumstances, and evidence of a party as to his intention is not conclusive.—Myers v. Spooner, 55 Cal. 260.

[de] Where evidence erroneously admitted against objection tends to prove something, full effect must be given to it on question of sufficiency of evidence to support decision. Wraight v. Roseberry, 81 Cal. 87, 22 Pac. 336.

[df] Inadmissible evidence, admitted without objection, is sufficient proof of fact to which it relates.—Prentice v. Miller, 82 Cal. 572, 573, 23 Pac. 189.

[e] Evidence admitted without objection must be taken as correct.—Schurtz v. Kerkow, 85 Cal. 278, 24 Pac. 609.

[f] Testimony on behalf of plaintiff partially contradicted by defendant but corroborated in substance by other portions of defendant's testimony cannot be disregarded.—Thompson v. Thompson, 88 Cal. 110, 25 Pac. 962.

[fg] Oral testimony in contradiction of the plain terms of written instruments, or of written admissions, should be clear, full and precise; and the weight to be given to such testimony diminishes from the date of the instrument which it purports to contradict or overcome.—Estate of Irvine, 102 Cal. 606, 36 Pac. 1013.

[g] The evidence must be very clear as to how an illegal voter voted, before his vote can be deducted from the total of any candidate. Where a voter declined to answer for whom he voted, his mere statement that if he had voted he supposed he would have voted for the defendant, and that he did not know but he would have voted for the office in controversy, if he had voted at all, does not amount to evidence as to the person voted for, notwithstanding other evidence tending to show that he had voted, and that he was not a legal voter.—Smith v. Thomas, 121 Cal. 533, 54 Pac. 71.

[h] Evidence which is addressed to no issue in the case, if admitted, is without weight or value.—Bank of Woodland v. Heron, 122 Cal. 107, 54 Pac. 537.

[i] The objection that declarations of the plaintiff as to the intended marriage were made to other than intimate acquaintances or friends, goes to the weight and not to the admissibility of the evidence.—Liebrandt v. Sorg, 133 Cal. 571, 65 Pac. 1098.

[j] The positive statement of a witness that an instrument was signed by a given person is not overcome because it incidentally appears that he was not present when it was signed.—Bauer v. State, 144 Cal. 740, 78 Pac. 280.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 753, 754, 798, 818; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3565-3571, §§ 2424-2427.

§ 517. —— Improbability of Evidence.

[a] A witness may be disbelieved for the improbability of his testimony, although he has not been contradicted or impeached.—Blankman v. Vallejo, 15 Cal. 638.

[b] Court may reject most positive testimony though witness be not directly impeached. Inherent improbability of statement may deny to it all claims of belief.—Baker v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 79 Cal. 41, 42, 21 Pac. 357.

§ 518. —— Uncontradicted Evidence.

[a] Weight of evidence is not increased by the fact that it is not rebutted.—Matter of Romaine, 23 Cal. 585.

[b] Evidence is not necessarily conclusive because uncontradicted.—McLennan v. Bank of California, 87 Cal. 574, 25 Pac. 760.

§ 519. —— Resemblance Between Persons as Proving Relationship.

[a] Resemblance between persons is of little weight in proving relationship.—Jessup, In re, 81 Cal. 419, 22 Pac. 742.

§ 520. Inferences from Evidence.

[a] The fact that an alleged grantor of land stated that he had sold out his interest in it, and that other parties assumed to own it without any apparent objection on his part, does not authorize a finding that such grantor executed a deed of the land.—Thompson v. Lynch, 29 Cal. 189.

[b] When the situation of a witness is such that he probably would have known or heard of a fact, from the parties themselves, if it had existed, and he had never heard of it, it affords some slight ground for the inference that the fact did not exist.—McFadden v. Wallace, 38 Cal. 51.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 820; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3596-3601, §§ 2444, 2445.

§ 521. Degree of Proof and Sufficiency in General.

[a] It is error to instruct a jury, in a civil case of imputed fraud, that if they have a doubt of the guilt of the party charged, they must find in his favor. Issues of fact in civil cases are determined by a preponderance of testimony, and this rule applies as well to cases of fraud as to any other.—Ford v. Chambers, 19 Cal. 143.

[b] Competent evidence is sufficient proof in absence of rebutting evidence, provided it tends to prove the whole act.—Pearson v. Pearson, 46 Cal. 634.

[c] When the court instructs the jury that the plaintiff must prove the fault or negligence of the defendant to the satisfaction of the jury by a preponderance of evidence, it is not error to refuse further to instruct them that the plaintiff must make such proof to a moral certainty. The "moral certainty" required by section 1826 of the Code of Civil Procedure is produced when a matter is proved to the satisfaction of a jury by a preponderance of evidence.—Treadwell v. Whittier, 80 Cal. 574, 13 Am. St. Rep. 175, 22 Pac. 266.

[d] Rule is uniform that general character cannot be proved by a single act.—Rea v. Wood, 105 Cal. 314, 38 Pac. 899.

[e] For purposes of evidence, no weight attaches to a sworn denial of a fact based on a statement that the party making the denial "has no information or belief" as to the fact.—Menke v. Lyndon, 124 Cal. 160, 56 Pac. 883.

[f] Under section 1835 of the Code of Civil Procedure, only such evidence as "ordinarily produces moral certainty or conviction in an unprejudiced mind," is "deemed satisfactory," or "will justify a verdict." "Slight evidence" is insufficient; and where there is not even a slight evidence to support the verdict, it must be set aside.—Puckhaber v. Southern Pacific Co., 132 Cal. 363, 64 Pac. 480.

[g] Where plaintiff testified as to the value of goods wrongfully attached by defendant constable, and offered in evidence without objection an invoice taken a short time prior to the attachment, without contradictory evidence as to the value, a verdict for a less amount is supported by the evidence.—Hickey v. Coschina, 133 Cal. 81, 65 Pac. 313.

[h] The testimony of the defendant, in contradiction of that of the plaintiff, is sufficient to support findings for the defendant. Kepfler v. Kepfler, 134 Cal. 205, 66 Pac. 208.

[i] Plaintiff made a written agreement to transfer two thousand dollars, "part of my money in the H. bank," to his wife, "the interest to be drawn every six months for family use," and she agreeing not to draw the principal before his death without his consent. On the same day he drew out the sum of two thousand dollars, and his wife deposited that amount. She had no other money on deposit with the bank. Plaintiff's daughter testified that the wife admitted she had signed the contract, but stated, "That don't amount to anything." Witness also told the wife that plaintiff showed her the contract, and she stated its purport to the wife. Held sufficient to support a finding that the money deposited by the wife was the money referred to in the contract.—Dirks v. California Safe Deposit etc. Co., 136 Cal. 84, 68 Pac. 487.

[j] Where plaintiff in an action to rescind a contract for the purchase of land alleged that it was not worth more than six thousand dollars, but introduced no evidence of its value, and defendant and several witnesses testified it was worth from fourteen thousand dollars to sixteen thousand dollars, and that the shares of stock in a water company sold plaintiff was sufficient to water twenty acres in a year of ordinary rainfall, it cannot be contended that findings that it was worth fifteen thousand dollars, and that the shares of water stock were sufficient to irrigate twenty acres, were not supported by the evidence.—Fowler v. Carne, 132 Cal. xviii, 64 Pac. 581.

[k] The evidence of plaintiff in trespass as to the extent of damages resulting therefrom is sufficient to support a finding of a less sum as the damages sustained.—Durkee v. Moulton, 133 Cal. xix, 65 Pac. 469.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 753, 754; 20 Cent. Dig., cols. 3601-3610, §§ 2446-2448.

§ 522. —— Preponderance of Evidence.

[a] While a plaintiff is required to establish his case by a preponderance of evidence, a preponderance of evidence does not necessarily mean a preponderance of the number of witnesses; and, in such a case, the appellate court cannot say that, on the issues thus presented, the evidence of two or three witnesses testifying to a certain state of facts must overthrow the evidence of a witness testifying to the contrary.—Grant v. McPherson, 104 Cal. 165, 37 Pac. 864.

[ab] In a civil case, it is error to charge the jury that there must be evidence sufficient "to convince their minds" of any fact necessary to be shown by either party, since the weight of evidence, or preponderance of probability is sufficient.—Murphy v. Waterhouse, 113 Cal. 467, 54 Am. St. Rep. 365, 45 Pac. 866.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, a preponderance of evidence does not necessarily depend upon a numerical preponderance of witnesses.—McNeill v. Stitt (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1121.

§ 1. In General.

[a] Where two parties agree to exchange their lands, and, under the contract, take possession of the parcels exchanged, each becomes the vendee and equitable owner of the parcel received by him; the legal title is retained by the seller, but it is held in trust for the buyer to be thereafter conveyed at the stipulated time and on the stipulated conditions.—Gilbert v. Sleeper, 71 Cal. 290, 293, 12 Pac. 172.

[b] Exchange of one currency for another is not a sale.—Sanderson, In re, 74 Cal. 214, 15 Pac. 753.

[c] Under a proposition for the exchange of property, and for a deed to a third party in settlement of accounts against the proposer of the exchange, a delivery of the deed to the latter and his record thereof as agent of the grantee, while acting in his own interest, and without the knowledge or consent of the grantee or his subsequent approval, cannot operate as delivery to the grantee, and upon his repudiation of the transaction and refusal to accept the deed, no change of ownership is effected thereby. Whitney v. American Ins. Co., 127 Cal. 464, 59 Pac. 897.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 829-847; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 203-234, §§ 1-30.

§ 2. Requisites and Validity.

[a] Agreement in writing for mutual conveyance of land in exchange is not void under the statute of frauds.—Brennan v. Ford, 46 Cal. 7.

[b] Equality of right or interest required to render exchange valid.—Bixby v. Bent, 59 Cal. 522.

[c] Delivery of possession is essential to validity of an exchange. If either party dies before entry, the exchange is void.—Bixby v. Bent, 59 Cal. 522.

[d] An attempted exchange of ranches is invalid, when one ranch had no existence in fact, and neither was vendible by the parties to the exchange, neither having any proprietary transferable title, and no possession having been given. Such an exchange is invalid, both by the Spanish and the common law.—Bixby v. Bent, 59 Cal. 522.

[e] No such relation of principal and agent held to have existed between the parties to an exchange of real estate for stock as could have affected the validity of the exchange.—Spinks v. Clark, 147 Cal. 439, 82 Pac. 45.

[f] An agreement for the exchange of property belonging to a married woman executed by her husband without authority is unenforceable by either party, in the absence of a tender of conveyance by her.—Shanks & March v. Michael (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 596.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 829-847; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 205-223, §§ 3-18.

§ 3. Construction of Contract.

[a] When a contract for the mutual exchange of lands contains no provision from which it can be inferred that one conveyance was to precede the other, the law implies that the conveyances are to be made concurrently.—Brennan v. Ford, 46 Cal. 7.

[b] A contract for the conveyance of land construed.—Messer v. Hibernia Savings etc. Soc. (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 835.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 831-833; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 205-206, § 3.

§ 4. Rescission and Actions Therefor.

[a] It does not lie in the mouth of one party to a trade, when the other party, seeking to rescind the contract of exchange, has placed him in statu quo, to say that the trade had to do with a lease of real estate for more than five years, and that the rescission of the contract was required by law to be in writing.—Hart v. Kimball, 72 Cal. 283, 13 Pac. 852.

[b] Though defendant, for the purpose of escaping judgments against him, transferred to his father land which he had previously agreed to convey to plaintiff in exchange for other land, and the transfer to defendant's father was subsequently set aside as in fraud of creditors, plaintiff cannot, by tendering a deed of his land, insist on having the cash value of defendant's land and rescind the contract for refusal to pay the same, unless defendant was unable to satisfy the judgment against him, and therefore unable to perform.—Royal v. Dennison, 109 Cal. 558, 42 Pac. 39.

[c] From the fact that defendant had not paid said judgment before the conclusion of the action, it should not be presumed that he was unable to do so when there was no finding that such was the fact.—Royal v. Dennison, 109 Cal. 559, 42 Pac. 39.

[d] Where plaintiff and defendant agreed to exchange certain land, and defendant, before the conveyances were executed, conveyed his land to another, plaintiff cannot, by tendering a conveyance to defendant, demand the cash value of defendant's land, and rescind the contract for refusal to pay, without specifying the reason for declining to accept a conveyance of the land from defendant's grantee.—Royal v. Dennison, 109 Cal. 558, 42 Pac. 39.

[e] Where plaintiff and defendant agreed to exchange certain land, and, before the conveyances thereof were executed, plaintiff borrowed money from defendant, and orally agreed that the loan was to be secured upon the lots which defendant was to convey, plaintiff could not, on defendant's default, rescind the contract without offering to repay the loan.—Royal v. Dennison, 109 Cal. 558, 42 Pac. 39.

[f] Where conditions to be performed under a contract for the exchange of land are mutual and concurrent, neither party can be put in default except by a bona fide offer to perform on the part of the other; and an offer to perform by one of the parties by tendering a deed coupled with a condition of payment in cash, unauthorized by the contract, and which he had no right to impose, is insufficient to give to him a right of action.—Royal v. Dennison, 109 Cal. 558, 42 Pac. 39.

[g] Under a contract for the exchange of stocks on the demand of one party, his demand and offer to produce the stocks on his part—his ability to do so being shown—is a sufficient tender of performance, where the other party refuses the exchange and denies the contract.—Eames v. Haver, 111 Cal. 401, 43 Pac. 1120.

[h] Plaintiffs and defendants, who each owned lands, exchanged deeds thereof, and on the night prior to the exchange of the deeds a house on defendants' land was destroyed by fire, which fact was unknown to the parties at the time of the exchange. Defendants collected insurance on the house, and in a suit for rescission it was held that plaintiffs were estopped. Held, that plaintiffs could not complain of a decree requiring defendants to pay to them the insurance money before the entry of final decree for defendants.—Beardsley v. Clem, 137 Cal. 328, 70 Pac. 175.

[i] Whether plaintiffs rescinded promptly does not depend alone on the lapse of time, but on all the circumstances.—Beardsley v. Clem, 137 Cal. 328, 70 Pac. 175.

[j] The plaintiff was not guilty of laches where an action was brought to rescind the exchange on the same day on which the plaintiff first ascertained that defendant would not pay the note to the mortgagee. Such action, though afterward dismissed, operated as a demand for rescission, and where the present suit was brought on the day of such dismissal, there was no intervening laches.—Hartwig v. Clark, 138 Cal. 668, 72 Pac. 149.

[k] Plaintiff and defendant agreed to exchange lands. Plaintiff's land was subject to a mortgage, which defendant was to assume. Defendant knew when the deed was executed that the mortgage was barred by limitations; that plaintiff did not know this, and understood defendant would pay it, as defendant represented he would, though in fact not intending to do so. Plaintiff would not have made the exchange, had he known the facts. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to rescission on the ground of fraud.—Hartwig v. Clark, 138 Cal. 668, 72 Pac. 149.

[l] Civil Code, section 1577, provides that mistake of fact is a mistake not caused by the neglect of a legal duty on the party of the person making the mistake, and consisting in (1) an unconscious ignorance or forgetfulness of a fact, past or present, material to the contract; or (2) belief in the present existence of a thing material to the contract which does not exist, or in the past existence of a thing which has not existed. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to relief on the ground of mistake.—Hartwig v. Clark, 138 Cal. 668, 72 Pac. 149.

[m] Plaintiff was equally entitled to relief whether the mistake was one of law or fact. Hartwig v. Clark, 138 Cal. 668, 72 Pac. 149.

[n] Objection that plaintiff was not injured, and therefore not entitled to relief, was untenable.—Hartwig v. Clark, 138 Cal. 668, 72 Pac. 149.

[o] Plaintiff, on discovering fraudulent representations, was entitled to rescind the ratification as well as the original transaction, under Civil Code, section 2314, providing that a ratification may be rescinded when made with an imperfect knowledge of the material facts of the transaction ratified.—Willey v. Clements, 146 Cal. 91, 79 Pac. 850.

[p] Where, in a suit to set aside an exchange of real estate for fraud, the court found that K. acted in the transaction as defendant's agent, though he represented to plaintiff that he was acting in her behalf, plaintiff was not required to return a sum paid K. by defendant, as a condition to her right to rescind the exchange.—Willey v. Clements, 146 Cal. 91, 79 Pac. 850.

[q] Where plaintiff, after making an exchange of properties, signed an instrument expressing her satisfaction with the exchange, knowing of defendant's fraudulent representations concerning a deficiency in the quantity of the land conveyed to her and concerning an encumbrance thereon, but without notice of the falsity of other representations concerning the quality of the land, its productiveness, and water rights appurtenant thereto, which would not be disclosed by a mere examination of the property, she was not estopped by her ratification from subsequently rescinding the exchange therefor.—Willey v. Clements, 146 Cal. 91, 79 Pac. 850.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 836-847; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 208-215, §§ 5-10.

§ 5. —— Limitation of Actions.

[a] When two parties enter into contract for exchange of lands the facts that one of the parties has performed on his part by conveying the land, which he agreed to convey, in exchange for the tract to be conveyed by the other, and that the grantee has entered into possession and sold portions of the land thus conveyed, do not prevent the statute of limitations from running as to the right of the party who has performed, to a conveyance from the other.—Brennan v. Ford, 46 Cal. 7.

§ 6. —— Evidence.

[a] Evidence as to the value of lands exchanged at the time of the exchange is admissible and relevant to an issue of fraud connected with the exchange, and also as a circumstance to be considered in construing the contract.—Beverly v. Blackwood, 102 Cal. 83, 36 Pac. 378.

[b] In a suit to set aside an exchange of property for fraud, evidence held to justify a finding that K., who was active in furthering the exchange, and who deceived plaintiff with reference thereto, represented defendant, and was not plaintiff's agent.—Willey v. Clements, 146 Cal. 91, 79 Pac. 850.

[c] In an action to rescind an exchange of real estate for corporate stock, held, that there was no error in limiting plaintiff, in the introduction of evidence as to the value of the shares, to proof of the market value as fixed by sales on a neighboring market. Spinks v. Clark, 147 Cal. 439, 82 Pac. 45.

[d] In an action to rescind an exchange of plaintiff's real estate for corporate stock, evidence considered, and held sufficient to show that the exchange was not brought about by plaintiff acting on any false representations of defendants.—Spinks v. Clark, 147 Cal. 439, 82 Pac. 45.

[e] In an action to rescind an exchange of plaintiff's real estate for corporate stock, held, that there was no error in sustaining an objection to a question to a witness as to whether he had any arrangements for manipulating the price of the shares of the corporation.—Spinks v. Clark, 147 Cal. 439, 82 Pac. 45.

[f] In an action to rescind an exchange of real estate for corporate stock, evidence as to the amounts expended in exploration for oil on the lands of a corporation prior to its formation was properly excluded.—Spinks v. Clark, 147 Cal. 439, 82 Pac. 45.

§ 7. —— Trial.

[a] In an action to rescind an exchange of land for foundry stock, fraud justifying the rescission was established by findings that plaintiffs were induced to make the exchange solely by reliance upon materially false and fraudulent representations of fact by the defendants as to the solvency, profits, and assets of the corporation owning the foundry, and that the value of the stock could have been approximately ascertained only by a thorough investigation by experts of the value of the assets, property, books, and business of the corporation and that the plaintiffs were ignorant of the falsity of the representations, and acted upon them as true.—Dow v. Swain, 125 Cal. 674, 58 Pac. 271.

[b] Where, in an action to rescind an exchange, the court found that defendant represented his property as worth four thousand dollars, and believed it worth that, while it was worth only two thousand dollars, the exchange should not be rescinded when the representation was made and relied on as an opinion, and not as a statement of fact. Norris v. Crandall, 133 Cal. xix, 65 Pac. 568.

[c] Where plaintiff sought to rescind an exchange of property on the ground of fraud, and the court finds there was no fraud, a failure to find as to all the facts alleged in the complaint is not error.—Norris v. Crandall, 133 Cal. xix, 65 Pac. 568.

§ 1. Nature of Stock Exchange.

[a] San Francisco stock and exchange board is not a partnership.—Swift v. San Francisco etc. Board, 67 Cal. 570, 571, 80 Pac. 94.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 849; 21 Cent. Dig., col. 235, § 1.

§ 2. Proceedings by Suspended or Expelled Members for Reinstatement.

[a] In a proceeding by a debtor to compel the board to restore him to membership from which he had been suspended, it appeared that on his failure to pay an account the creditor requested a committee of investigation; that two days thereafter the committee reported the amount of the indebtedness; that two days afterward such creditor reported the claim unpaid; that such member was then suspended; and that six months thereafter, the claim remaining unpaid, his seat of membership in the board was sold to pay his debts. Held, that such member was properly suspended, and was not entitled to be restored to membership.—Rorke v. San Francisco Stock etc. Board, 99 Cal. 196, 33 Pac. 881.

[b] Suspended member's cause of action for reinstatement accrues at time of suspension and is barred by laches in six years. Meherin v. San Francisco Produce Exch., 117 Cal. 217, 218, 48 Pac. 1074.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 853-858; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 237-245, §§ 5-7.

§ 3. Property in Seat and Transfer or Encumbrance Thereof.

[a] Seat may be mortgaged or pledged. Clute v. Loveland, 68 Cal. 261, 9 Pac. 133.

[b] Power to dispose of seat in exchange includes power to dispose of it absolutely or conditionally.—Clute v. Loveland, 68 Cal. 259, 9 Pac. 133.

[c] Seat in stock exchange is property. Habenicht v. Lissak, 78 Cal. 357, 12 Am. St. Rep. 63, 20 Pac. 874.

[d] Where the validity of a transfer to a representative of the board of trade is involved, the court should admit evidence to explain the custom of the board of trade in demanding indorsed notes, and all matters connected with the purchase of the property, and payment therefor.—Levy v. Scott, 115 Cal. 39, 46 Pac. 892.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 864, 865; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 245-249, §§ 8-10.

§ 4. —— Title of Purchaser.

[a] Purchaser of seat takes interest of seller subject to conditions imposed by rules of exchange.—Clute v. Loveland, 68 Cal. 259, 9 Pac. 133.

§ 5. Mutual Dealings and Liabilities of Members.

[a] The constitution and by-laws of a stock exchange provide that any member failing to meet his engagements shall be suspended; that if he does not settle within six months his seat shall be sold for the payment of creditors; that the board will take no cognizance of contracts that remain unsettled five days after due, "unless continued by mutual consent"; and that where a member fails to comply with his stock contracts his creditors must report said default to the president of the board within forty-eight hours. No claim, unless so reported, shall ever after be recognized or enforced by the board. Held, that the forty-eight hour limitation applies only to contracts for purchase or sale of stocks in the board, and not to open accounts, where stocks are carried for the debtor for months, assessments paid thereon, interest charged, and dividends credited to the account, etc.—Rorke v. San Francisco Stock etc. Board, 99 Cal. 196, 33 Pac. 881.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 865-868; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 249-253, §§ 12, 13.

§ 6. —— Arbitration.

[a] The constitution and by-laws of a stock exchange provide that all differences as to claims between members shall be referred by the president, unless otherwise ordered, to committees for arbitration, which shall report in writing within fifteen days after their appointment, and their report shall stand as the award of the board. Held that, though there was no dispute between the parties to such account, it was properly referred to such committee for "investigation" or "settlement."—Rorke v. San Francisco Stock etc. Board, 99 Cal. 196, 33 Pac. 881.

§ 7. Actions by or Against.

[a] The constitution of a voluntary association, formed to carry on a stock exchange, provided for a trust fund from which, on a member's death, a certain sum was to be paid to such person as he might have designated, or, if no designation was made, to certain specified persons. It was also provided that one applying for the benefit of such trust fund must file a medical certificate that he was fit to participate in the "life insurance fund." Held, that the association was not engaged in the business of life insurance, so as to be suable under a common name, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 388, by a beneficiary of such fund.—Swift v. San Francisco Stock etc. Board, 67 Cal. 567, 8 Pac. 94.

I. NATURE AND ESSENTIALS IN GENERAL.

STATUTORY PROVISIONS, § 1.
JUDGMENT, DECREE OR ORDER, § 2.
EFFECT OF ACTS OR PROCEEDINGS SUBSEQUENT TO JUDGMENT AND BEFORE ISSUANCE OF EXECUTION, § 3.
PERSONS ENTITLED TO EXECUTION, § 4.
PERSONS AGAINST WHOM EXECUTION MAY ISSUE, § 5.

§ 1. Statutory Provisions.

[a] Where the right to an execution on a judgment in ejectment had expired by the lapse of more than five years on April 2, 1866, when the act of that date was passed authorizing the issuance of such execution after five years, the passage of the act did not revive plaintiff's right to have execution issued on such judgment, since the statute could not revive a right which did not exist at the time of its passage.—Mann v. McAtee, 37 Cal. 11.

[b] Acts of 1895 (Stats. 1895, p. 38, c. 33), authorizing execution without notice after five years, held constitutional as to judgments rendered subsequent to its passage. Water Supply Co. v. Sarnow (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 689.

§ 2. Judgment, Decree or Order.

[a] Where the appellate court affirms the judgment below, and remands the case, but the court below erroneously enters a new judgment, such judgment, though erroneous, will be valid, so as to support an execution issued thereon.—Mulford v. Estudillo, 23 Cal. 94.

[b] A sale under judgment against tenants in common is void as to any of the tenants, on whom it does not appear that a summons was served in the original action, and in whose behalf no appearance was made.—Wiseman v. McNulty, 25 Cal. 230.

[c] If, after execution has been levied on sufficient property to satisfy judgment, the court orders that the judgment be not enforced, the order releases the levy, and it will not have the effect of satisfying the judgment.—Mulford v. Estudillo, 32 Cal. 131.

[d] Act of April 2, 1866, authorizing the issuance of executions on all judgments other than for the recovery of money, though more than five years had elapsed since the rendition of the judgment, is not retroactive, and applies only to judgments rendered after the passage of the act.—Mann v. Atee, 37 Cal. 11.

[e] The sheriff in making a sale of property under an execution acts under a naked statutory power dependent for its existence upon the existence of the judgment which he is attempting to execute; and if there is no judgment in support of the writ of execution under which he makes the sale the power to make the sale is wanting, and no title to the property pases, even to an innocent purchaser. Bullard v. McArdle, 98 Cal. 355, 35 Am. St. Rep. 176, 33 Pac. 193.

[f] Where judgment in existence at execution has been vacated or satisfied in any way, directly or indirectly, before any sale has been made, the power to make the sale has also been destroyed.—Bullard v. McArdle, 98 Cal. 355, 35 Am. St. Rep. 176, 33 Pac. 193.

[g] It is immaterial whether a levy on a note which could be taken on execution and sold, was made by an order of court or otherwise.—Hoxie v. Bryant, 131 Cal. 85, 63 Pac. 153.

§ 3. Effect of Acts or Proceedings Subsequent to Judgment and Before Issuance of Execution.

[a] If a note which is given in satisfaction of a judgment is void, because obtained by fraud on the part of defendants in the judgment, plaintiff may enforce his execution on such judgment before returning the note. Mitchell v. Hockett, 25 Cal. 538, 85 Am. Dec. 151.

[b] A motion for new trial does not operate per se as a stay of execution.—People v. Loucks, 28 Cal. 68.

[c] A party who has recovered a judgment for possession of lands may enforce it on execution, notwithstanding he has, since the judgment, made a contract to convey the land to defendant, if there was no agreement respecting that judgment in the contract. Troy v. Clarke, 30 Cal. 419.

[d] The fact that the statement on motion for new trial has not been settled constitutes no ground for quashing the execution. So held in a case where the delay in the settlement was occasioned by plaintiff's attorney. Jones v. Spears, 56 Cal. 163.

[e] A sale of land under execution issued upon satisfied judgment is void, and does not affect the title.—Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183, 12 Pac. 449.

[f] Execution may issue, although satisfaction has been executed and acknowledged by an alleged assignee of judgment.—Ferrugeard v. Superior Court, 5 Pac. 612.

§ 4. Persons Entitled to Execution.

[a] Commissioner in partition awarded fee is "party in whose favor judgment was given" and may have execution to enforce it.—Cortez v. Superior Court, 86 Cal. 278, 21 Am. St. Rep. 37, 24 Pac. 1011.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 937-939; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 316-318, §§ 41-43.

§ 5. Persons Against Whom Execution may Issue.

[a] Where a judgment was recovered against two defendants for damages caused by their own negligent act, and on appeal by one of defendants the judgment as to him was reversed, plaintiff was entitled to execution against the other defendant.—Nichols v. Dunphy, 58 Cal. 605.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Property exempt from execution. See Exemptions; Homestead.
Liability of ferry franchise to execution. See Ferries, § 9.

§ 6. In General.

[a] In all cases when mere lien exists the legal estate must be in some other party than the mortgagee. This legal estate and the consequent right to discharge the lien and save the estate is of value, and can be sold. Knight v. Fair, 9 Cal. 117.

[b] The equitable lien held by a vendor of real estate, after absolute conveyance thereof, is not subject to levy and sale on execution; nor is it the subject of private transfer.—Ross v. Heinzten, 36 Cal. 313.

[c] Sheriff can only seize and sell such title and interest as judgment debtor had in land at the time of the levy, and such as he acquired between the time of the levy and the sale, under an execution issued on a judgment, which is not a lien.—Kenyon v. Quinn, 41 Cal. 325.

[d] Mere evidences of debt are not subject to execution.—Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 234, 235, 1 Am. St. Rep. 48, 13 Pac. 621.

[e] One to whom an offer for the sale of land is made—the offer to be kept open only on certain conditions—has not, in the absence both of a compliance with such conditions and an acceptance of the offer, an interest in the land, which is subject to sale on execution.—Chadbourne v. Stockton Savings etc. Soc., 36 Pac. 127.

§ 7. Boats Carrying Mail.

[a] A ferryboat is not exempt from execution because the ferry is on a mail route and the boat is to be used to convey mail. Lathrop v. Middleton, 23 Cal. 257, 83 Am. Dec. 112.

§ 8. Money of Debtor.

[a] One cannot claim to exempt from execution a bag of gold coin held in his hand, as he might, perhaps, in the case of money on his person.—Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411, 76 Am. Dec. 492.

[b] After distribution of a decedent's estate has been decreed, money in the hands of the executor or administrator belonging to a distributee may be reached on execution or proceedings supplementary thereto by a judgment creditor of the distributee, though the latter is in prison under a sentence for a term of years.—Nerac's Estate, In re, 35 Cal. 392, 95 Am. Dec. 111.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 940, 941; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 329-331, § 57.

§ 9. Crops.

[a] Crop raised by lessor on leased land as employee of lessee, is not subject to creditors of lessor.—Ralph v. Lockwood, 61 Cal. 155.

[b] Crops grown on land by a person in actual, adverse possession cannot be attached as the property of the holder of the legal title to the land.—Smith v. Cunningham, 67 Cal. 262, 7 Pac. 679.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Crops or growths which are subject to execution as personalty: 55 Am. Dec. 161, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 941-943; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 331-335, §§ 59, 60.

§ 10. Seat in Stock Exchange.

[a] Seat in stock exchange is subject to execution.—Habenicht v. Lissak, 78 Cal. 354-358, 12 Am. St. Rep. 63, 20 Pac. 874.

[b] A "seat" in the San Francisco Stock & Exchange Board, which is a voluntary association, without capital stock or shares, and membership of which can only be secured, under its constitution and by-laws, by a vote of the members, is not subject to levy and sale under execution, and a purchaser at such sale acquires no title to such seat.—Lowenberg v. Greenebaum, 99 Cal. 162, 37 Am. St. Rep. 42, 33 Pac. 794, 21 L. R. A. 399.

§ 11. Franchises.

[a] Franchise cannot be seized or sold under execution.—De Witt v. Hays, 2 Cal. 463, 56 Am. Dec. 352.

[b] The interest of a defendant in execution in a ferry is a franchise, not the subject of levy, sale or delivery under execution. Munroe v. Thomas, 5 Cal. 470.

[c] A ferry license, being a franchise, is not the subject of levy and sale under execution.—Thomas v. Armstrong, 7 Cal. 286.

[d] The franchise of a turnpike corporation does not pass to the purchaser of the turnpike road at a sheriff's sale.—Wood v. Truckee Turnpike Co., 24 Cal. 474.

[e] The franchise of an individual to collect tolls cannot be levied on, there being no statutory provision therefor, though Civil Code, section 388, provides that, for the satisfaction of a judgment against a corporation authorized to receive tolls, its franchise, and all its rights and privileges, may be levied on and sold under execution.—Gregory v. Blanchard, 98 Cal. 311, 33 Pac. 199.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Franchises, whether subject to execution: 15 Am. Dec. 595, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 947; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 338, 339, § 64.

§ 12. Judgments.

[a] A judgment cannot be levied on and sold under execution.—(Cal. 1884) McBride v. Fallon, 65 Cal. 301, 4 Pac. 17.

[b] Judgment is not subject to levy and sale under execution.—Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 234, 1 Am. St. Rep. 48, 13 Pac. 621.

[c] Judgment cannot be levied upon, and sold as such, under execution, but may be attached under subdivision 5, section 542, Code of Civil Procedure.—Latham v. Blake, 77 Cal. 654, 655, 18 Pac. 150, 20 Pac. 417.

§ 13. Patent Rights.

[a] The provision of the act of Congress that a patent right may be transferred by assignment is exclusive, so that a creditor of the patentee can have such right subjected to the satisfaction of his judgment only by an application to a court of equity to compel the patentee to make an assignment. The right is not subject to sale on execution. Peterson v. Sheriff of City and County of San Francisco, 115 Cal. 211, 46 Pac. 1060.

[b] A patent right cannot be sold under a common execution, since it is neither "personal property capable of manual delivery," within Code of Civil Procedure, section 542, subdivision 3, providing that such property may be attached by taking it into custody, nor "debts and credits, and other personal property not capable of manual delivery," which can be attached by leaving notice with a third person owing such debts, or having such credits or personal property in his possession.—Peterson v. Sheriff of City and County of San Francisco, 115 Cal. 211, 46 Pac. 1060.

[b] The interest of a joint tenant may be sold on execution.—(Cal. 1858) Waldman v. Broder, 10 Cal. 378.

[c] Trust property is not subject to execution sale for debts of trustee.—Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 578.

[d] A pre-emption claim cannot be sold on execution.—(Cal. 1872) Moore v. Besse, 43 Cal. 511.

[e] If a deed of trust leaves an interest in the trust property in the grantor, such interest may be sold on an execution against him.—Kennedy v. Nunan, 52 Cal. 326.

[f] Equitable title of beneficiary may be sold under execution.—Le Roy v. Dunkerly, 54 Cal. 452, 460.

[g] The term "land" embraces all titles, legal or equitable, perfect or imperfect, including such rights as lie in contract, those executory as well as those executed. Any interest in land, therefore, legal or equitable, is subject to attachment or execution.—Fish v. Fowlie, 58 Cal. 373.

§ 18. Pledged Property.

[a] Pledged property is not subject to execution.—Dalrymple v. Hanson, 1 Cal. 124.

[b] Execution of pledged property must be by garnishment of pledgee which creates lien upon surplus.—Edwards v. Beugnot, 7 Cal. 162; Treadwell v. Davis, 34 Cal. 601.

[c] Interest of pledgor of stock is subject to execution sale.—Farmers' etc. Bank v. Wilson, 58 Cal. 600.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 967, 968; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 391-392, § 103.

§ 19. Property Conveyed in Fraud of Creditors.

[a] Land conveyed in fraud of creditors is subject to execution as if no conveyance had been made.—Bull v. Ford, 66 Cal. 176, 4 Pac. 1175.

§ 20. Property Mortgaged or Conveyed to Secure Payment of Debts.

[a] A, being indebted to B, delivered to him a quantity of lumber as security for payment of the debt, with the understanding that B should proceed and sell the lumber, and pay his debt out of the proceeds. The lumber was afterward levied upon by the defendants under an execution in their favor, against A as his property. Held, that the lumber was not subject to seizure under an execution against A without payment in the first place of his indebtedness to B.—Swanston v. Sublette, 1 Cal. 123.

[b] Interest of mortgagor is liable to attachment and execution.—Halsey v. Martin, 22 Cal. 645.

[bc] Where a valid chattel mortgage exists upon a growing crop prior to a levy of execution, and there is no valid attachment lien prior to the chattel mortgage to which a sale under execution can relate, there can be no valid levy of execution upon the crop, without paying off the chattel mortgage as provided by section 2969 of the Civil Code.—Rudolph v. Saunders, 111 Cal. 233, 43 Pac. 619.

[c] Where a debtor assigns accounts for collection and application to certain debts, he has an interest remaining which is subject to execution.—Lackman v. Kearney, 142 Cal. 112, 75 Pac. 668.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 21. Interests Under Contracts.

[a] A delivered to B oxen and a wagon, which B was to pay for in drawing wood. While B was still in process of paying, the sheriff attached and took the property on execution against A, to which B was not a party. Held that, until B's neglect or refusal to complete his payment, a seizure by the sheriff was illegal, unless the transaction were in delay of creditors, and even then the judgment must be produced.—Bickerstaff v. Doub, 19 Cal. 109, 79 Am. Dec. 204.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 22. Bills or Notes.

[a] Promissory notes are subject of levy on execution.—(Cal. 1867) Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 81.

[b] Code of Civil Procedure, section 17, subdivision 3, includes notes in its definition of personal property. Section 688 provides that property may be attached or taken on execution in like manner as on writ of attachment; and by section 542, subdivision 3, personal property capable of manual delivery must be attached by taking it into custody. Held, in view of these provisions, that a note of which the sheriff may peaceably take actual possession may be levied on and sold under execution.—Hoxie v. Bryant, 131 Cal. 85, 63 Pac. 153.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 971; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 404, 405, § 118.

§ 23. Ownership or Possession of Property.

[a] An execution justifies a sheriff in seizing the debtor's property in his own possession, or in that of an agent or parties holding for his benefit.—Bickerstaff v. Doub, 19 Cal. 109, 79 Am. Dec. 204.

[b] If an officer, holding an execution against A, wishes to levy it on property in the possession of B, the test of his right to do so is whether B's right to the possession is such as would prevent A's retaking it.—Knox v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 617.

[c] Where A made a verbal contract with B to sell him a tract of land and put B in possession, judgment creditors of B acquired a right to the land which may be enforced by sale under execution.—Logan v. Hale, 42 Cal. 645.

§ 24. —— Public Property.

[a] All the public streets of the city of San Francisco running into the water, as laid down on the official map of the city, were, by operation of the act of March 26, 1851, extended and carried to the front line of the city, and as such are subject to the free enjoyment of the public, and exempt from executions against the city.—Wood v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. 190.

[b] City's right to wharfage cannot be sold under execution.—Wood v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. 194.

[c] Execution levy upon county's revenues in the hands of the treasurer is illegal and void.—Gilman v. Contra Costa County, 8 Cal. 52, 68 Am. Dec. 290.

[d] The municipal lands to which the city of San Francisco succeeded were held in trust for the public use of that city, and were not, either under the old government or new, the subject of seizure and sale under execution.—Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 530.

[e] Property held by city in trust for its citizens is not subject to forced sale for debts of city.—Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 578; Oakland v. Oakland W. F. Co., 118 Cal. 195, 196, 50 Pac. 277.

[f] Under act of March 26, 1851, granting to the city of San Francisco the use and occupation of the beach and water lots described therein for the period of ninety-nine years, on condition that the city shall pay into the state treasury twenty-five per cent of all money derived from the sale of such property, within twenty days after receipt of the selling price, such property is liable to sale under execution against the city, and the purchaser takes the whole estate of the city, subject to no trust.—Wheeler v. Miller, 16 Cal. 124.

[g] The city of San Francisco has succeeded to the rights of the pueblo of Yerba Buena, but in trust for the public use of the city, and the lands are not the subject of seizure and sale under executions against the city.—Fulton v. Hanlow, 20 Cal. 450.

[h] The levy upon and sale of a road, by virtue of an execution, gives to the purchaser no right or title to the same, for, being the property of the public, the defendant in the execution has no interest therein which can be conveyed by the officer.—Wood v. Truckee Turnpike Co., 24 Cal. 474.

§ 25. —— Property of Citizen on Execution Against Municipality.

[a] The private property of an inhabitant of a county is not liable to seizure and sale on execution for the satisfaction of a judgment rendered against the county.—Emeric v. Gilman, 10 Cal. 404, 70 Am. Dec. 742.

§ 26. —— Corporate Property Used for Public Purpose.

[a] A turnpike road cannot be taken in execution on a judgment against the company.—(Cal. 1864) Wood v. Truckee Turnpike Co., 24 Cal. 474.

[b] Movables of a street railroad company, even though necessary to operation under the company's franchise, are not exempt from forced sale.—Risdon Iron etc. Works v. Citizens' Traction Co., 122 Cal. 94, 68 Am. St. Rep. 25, 54 Pac. 529.

[c] Since a reclamation district has no right to acquire property except to carry on the work of reclamation and matters incidental thereto, property devoted to such use is not subject to levy to satisfy judgments against the district.—San Francisco Sav. Union v. Reclamation Dist. No. 124, 144 Cal. 639, 79 Pac. 374.

§ 27. Jurisdiction and Authority to Issue.

[a] Where a clerk of the district court improperly refuses to issue execution on a judgment rendered in a court of which he is clerk, on the ground that the judgment has been attached at the suit of another party, a bill in equity cannot be sustained to release the attachment and compel the clerk to issue the execution, as the injured party has his remedy at law by an action on the official bond of the clerk.—Miller v. Sanderson, 10 Cal. 489.

[b] Where the clerk of a court refuses to issue an execution on a small money judgment, plaintiff's remedy is by motion in the proper court for an order authorizing its issuance, or by action against the clerk, and not by application for mandamus.—Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278.

[c] The clerk of the superior court, succeeding to a district court, may, without an order, issue execution on a judgment of the district court.—Dorn v. Howe, 59 Cal. 129.

[d] Court has jurisdiction of subject matter of motion for order to issue execution on judgment, and incidentally to determine whether or not the apparent satisfaction of the judgment is void as claimed by the plaintiff.—McAuliffe v. Coughlin, 105 Cal. 268, 38 Pac. 730.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 985; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 448, 449, § 145.

§ 28. —— Writ of Venditioni Exponas.

[a] The clerk of the court has power to issue a writ of venditioni exponas, either at common law or by virtue of the act of 1850, to regulate proceedings in the district courts. Smith v. Morse, 2 Cal. 524.

§ 29. —— Who may Direct Issuance.

[a] The issuing of an execution on the judgment is not such an act as requires the direct agency of the attorney in the case, but may be ordered by the plaintiff himself.—Jones v. Spears, 56 Cal. 163.

§ 30. Counties to Which Execution may Issue.

[a] In order to sell real estate of a judgment debtor under a justice's judgment, if the property lies in a different county, a transcript of the judgment must be filed in the recorder's office of that county, in order to fix the lien; otherwise, no such proceedings are necessary, but the course for enforcement of the execution is the same as if it had issued from the district court.—Campbell v. Wickware, 19 Cal. 145.

See 17 Cyc. 987-991; 21 Cent. Dig., col. 325, § 49½; cols. 462-470, §§ 151, 152.

§ 31. Officer to Whom Writ may be Directed.

[a] An execution may be directed to the sheriff or to any constable in the county, and each officer is vested with full power to serve the writ, and it is an indifferent matter to whom it is issued.—Ross v. Wellman, 102 Cal. 1, 36 Pac. 402.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 33. Leave of Court.

[a] No notice to the opposite party is required on an application for execution on a judgment more than five years old under the two hundred and fourteenth section of the Practice Act.—Bryan v. Stidger, 17 Cal. 270.

[b] When questions as to the existence and validity of a judgment more than five years old are submitted to a referee, with power to make out a judgment upon his finding in the matter referred to him, and he reports that the judgment is good and valid, and makes out a judgment that execution issue, but states that he has not passed upon the question whether the judgment is unsatisfied, and the court confirms the referee's report and judgment, execution cannot issue under section 214 of the Practice Act, which provides that execution on a judgment more than five years old cannot issue unless the court is satisfied that some portion of the judgment remains unsatisfied.—Solomon v. Maguire, 29 Cal. 227.

[c] The clerk of the superior court which succeeded a district court is authorized, without an order of the court, to issue an execution upon a judgment of the district court.—Dorn v. Howe, 59 Cal. 129.

[d] Upon a motion for an order that execution issue upon a judgment apparently satisfied, upon an affidavit that the judgment had not been satisfied in fact, and that the entry of satisfaction thereof had been fraudulently procured, it is proper and regular practice for the court, of its own motion, to order the defendant to show cause why plaintiff's motion should not be granted, thus giving the defendant an opportunity to be heard in answer to the motion.—McAuliffe v. Coughlin, 105 Cal. 268, 38 Pac. 730.

[de] The action of the trial court in denying a motion under Code of Civil Procedure, section 685, authorizing execution by leave of court on motion, after five years from the date of the judgment, will not be reversed on appeal unless the trial court abused its discretion.—Wheeler v. Eldred, 137 Cal. 37, 69 Pac. 619.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 685, providing that a judgment may be enforced after the lapse of five years from its entry by leave of court upon motion, the issuance of an order for execution is not invalid because made without notice of motion, in the absence of circumstances making the issuance of such order without notice an abuse of discretion, or making it imperative to vacate or reverse the order.—Harrier v. Bassford, 145 Cal. 529, 78 Pac. 1038.

[f] An order for an execution on a money judgment amounts to an order for its enforcement, and is authorized by Code of Civil Procedure, section 685.—Water Supply Co. v. Sarnow (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 689.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1027-1032; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 486-496, §§ 160-162.

§ 34. Time for Issuance.

[a] The clerk of the county court, in which the judgment of a justice of the peace is filed and docketed, has no power to issue execution upon such judgment after the expiration of five years from the rendition of the judgment.—Kerns v. Graves, 26 Cal. 156.

[b] Plaintiff is entitled to execution immediately after judgment, unless stayed by the court.—Carpentier v. Loucks, 28 Cal. 69.

[c] Under code, section 209, providing that a party in whose favor judgment is rendered may, at any time within five years after the entry thereof, issue a writ of execution, a writ of execution issued prior to the entry of the judgment is unauthorized, though issued after the rendition of the judgment.—Gray v. Palmer, 28 Cal. 416.

[d] Every process which may be required to completely enforce a judgment must be taken out within five years after its entry.—Bowers v. Crary, 30 Cal. 621.

[e] The judgment-roll is not required to be made up by the clerk until after the entry of the judgment. Execution may lawfully be issued and enforced as soon as the judgment is entered, and before the filing of the roll.—Sharp v. Lumley, 34 Cal. 611.

[f] Up to April 8, 1861, a party in whose favor a judgment was rendered was entitled to an execution at any time within five years, and after five years had elapsed he was entitled to an execution on obtaining leave of the court. Between April 8, 1861, and April 2, 1866, an execution could issue only within five years after the entry of the judgment. Since April 2, 1866, an execution in all cases other than for the recovery of money may issue after five years, upon leave of the court. Mann v. McAtee, 37 Cal. 11.

[g] Though Practice Act, sections 204, 210, 217 provide that the docketing of a judgment creates and preserves a lien for two years, an execution may issue and real estate be levied on and sold thereunder, though the judgment has not been docketed.—Hastings v. Cunningham, 39 Cal. 137.

[h] An execution may be issued on a judgment which has not been docketed.—Los Angeles County Bank v. Raynor, 61 Cal. 145.

[i] Judgment requiring party against whom it is rendered to do some specific act may be enforced after lapse of five years by leave of court.—Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 204, 15 Am. St. Rep. 44, 22 Pac. 552.

[j] Execution sale under judgment entered after affirmance of judgment rendered upon a premature and ineffectual appeal is valid, and passes title.—Brady v. Burke, 90 Cal. 1, 27 Pac. 52.

[k] The trial court has no authority or power to make an order for the issuance of a writ of execution upon a judgment for the recovery of money after the lapse of five years from the entry of the judgment; and a writ issued after such time is void.—Buell v. Buell, 92 Cal. 393, 28 Pac. 443.

[1] A judgment debtor who received no notice of application for an order for the issuance of execution after five years cannot be presumed to have waived objection thereto by failure to complain of the order.—Dorland v. Smith, 93 Cal. 120, 28 Pac. 812.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 35. —— Before Signing of Judgment by Judge.

[a] An execution issued upon a judgment of the district court rendered in 1850, before the judgment was signed by the district judge, is void.—Wells v. Stout, 9 Cal. 479.

§ 36. —— Computation of Time.

[a] The time during which execution is stayed constitutes a part of the five years within which execution must issue in accordance with section 209 of the Practice Act.—Solomon v. Maguire, 29 Cal. 227.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 681, allowing five years from the entry of a judgment to issue execution thereon, the running of a statute is not suspended pending an injunction staying execution.—Buell v. Buell, 92 Cal. 393, 28 Pac. 443.

§ 37. Form and Requisites.

[a] If an execution correctly refers to a judgment in such manner as to identify it, this is sufficient to justify the sheriff in enforcing it, notwithstanding it contains an error in reciting the day on which the judgment was rendered.—Franklin v. Merida, 50 Cal. 289.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 128, subdivision 8, an execution which does not clearly set out the amount due thereon is voidable, but not void.—Van Cleave v. Bucher, 79 Cal. 600, 21 Pac. 954.

[c] Where an execution states that the judgment was recovered "in the superior court of the county of L.," it is not void for failing to state the county where the judgment-roll was filed, as required by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 682, as it will be presumed that the clerk of the court did his duty, and filed the same in the county where the judgment was recovered, as provided by Code of Civil Procedure, section 670.—Van Cleave v. Bucher, 79 Cal. 600, 21 Pac. 954.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1009; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 514-518, § 174.

§ 38. —— Signature.

[a] An execution signed by a deputy clerk for a clerk of the court, whose term expired several months prior to the issuance of the execution, is void, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 682, declaring that an execution shall be sealed with the seal of the court and subscribed by the clerk; and a purchaser at a sale had under a levy based on such execution acquires no title to the property, so as to enable him to question a conveyance thereof by the judgment debtor as fraudulent.—(1900) O'Donnell v. Merguire, 60 Pac. 981, judgment affirmed (1901), 131 Cal. 527, 63 Pac. 847.

[b] Code of Civil Procedure, section 682, provides that a writ of execution must be subscribed by the clerk of the court. Held, that an execution signed in print with the name of a former clerk of the court, and in writing by a deputy of the present clerk, was void, and sale thereunder conveyed no title. Judgment (1900) 60 Pac. 981, affirmed.—O'Donnell v. Merguire, 131 Cal. 527, 63 Pac. 847.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1024; 21 Cent. Dig., col. 543, § 188.

§ 39. —— Seal.

[a] Whether the seal of the court is or is not essential to the writ is not determined; but the seal alone, without the subscription of the clerk, is sufficient to authenticate the execution.—O'Donnell v. Merguire, 131 Cal. 527, 82 Am. St. Rep. 389, 63 Pac. 847.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Omission of seal from execution: 35 Am. Dec. 153, note.

§ 40. —— Directions as to Property to be Taken.

[a] Court cannot order sheriff to levy upon particular property.—Fraser v. Thrift, 50 Cal. 476.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1020, 1021; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 534-539, §§ 182-184.

§ 41. —— Amount.

[a] Execution is not void because for larger sum than judgment authorized.—Reeve v. Kennedy, 43 Cal. 643.

§ 42. Delivery to and Receipt by Sheriff.

[a] The fact that the execution upon the judgment was retained by the attorney of the plaintiff until after an order was procured from the school trustee, and a requisition from the school superintendent for a payment of the debt due from the school district to the execution defendant, is not material, if before the money was paid the sheriff took the execution and received the money from the treasurer.—Skelly v. Westminster School District, 103 Cal. 652, 37 Pac. 643.

§ 43. Amendment.

[a] An execution will not be set aside because it calls for more money than is called for by the judgment, but will be amended upon due application of the parties, so as to agree with the judgment.—Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 372, 99 Am. Dec. 404.

[b] An execution which is neither issued in the name of the people, nor directed to the sheriff, is amendable, and therefore not void, but only voidable, and a sale under it is valid.—Hibberd v. Smith, 50 Cal. 511.

[c] If the writ commands the sheriff to make a specified sum by levy, distress, and sale out of defendant's property, without showing specifically the amount of the judgment or the amount due upon the judgment, it is not void, but amendable.—Van Cleave v. Bucher, 79 Cal. 600, 21 Pac. 954.

[d] The power to amend a writ of execution is limited to the amendment of the writs of the court, which can only be authenticated, under a law such as ours, by the subscription of the clerk, which subscription is an essential part of the writ, without which there is no execution to be amended.—O'Donnell v. Merguire, 131 Cal. 527, 82 Am. St. Rep. 389, 63 Pac. 847.

—— EFFECT OF EXPIRATION OF JUDGMENT LIEN, § 52.

§ 45. Nature of Lien.

[a] Levy of execution operates as a lien if there is no judgment lien.—Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277.

[b] Levy of execution, while judgment lien exists, does not create a new lien, nor extend judgment lien.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 122, 99 Am. Dec. 256-n.

[c] Levy of execution creates no lien, except for purpose of appraisement and sale. Barret v. Sims, 59 Cal. 615.

[d] Levy cannot extend lien beyond lien of judgment.—Sanders v. Russell, 86 Cal. 121, 21 Am. St. Rep. 26, 24 Pac. 852.

[e] The lien of the levy of execution is not that of the judgment, and it neither creates a judgment lien, nor extends a judgment lien once created.—Beaton v. Reid, 111 Cal. 484, 44 Pac. 167.

See 17 Cyc. 1064-1067; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 645-661, §§ 241-248.

§ 50. —— Unrecorded Mortgage.

[a] Mortgagee of defendant in execution, who has failed to record his mortgage until after the sale, has no lien or intervening rights as against the purchaser. He can redeem under the statute; if he fails to do so a court of equity will not interpose.—Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47, 65 Am. Dec. 475.

§ 51. Duration of Lien.

[a] The time during which an execution is stayed forms no part of the two years during which a judgment remains a lien, but any period of time between the docketing of the judgment and the stay of the proceedings is to be included in the computation.—Barroilhet v. Hathaway, 31 Cal. 395, 89 Am. Dec. 193.

[b] A judgment debtor perfecting an appeal in giving the usual stay bond held entitled to convey the real estate owned by him at the time of the docketing of the judgment.—Austin v. Union Paving etc. Co. (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 731.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1071-1076; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 690-707, §§ 266-275.

§ 52. —— Effect of Expiration of Judgment Lien.

[a] If an execution be issued and levied on real estate during the existence of a judgment lien on such property, and the execution is returned without sale, and after the judgment lien expires another execution is issued and levied, and a sale is made, such a sale takes effect by relation at the time when the second execution was levied.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256.

[b] The levy of an execution on real estate, during the time that the judgment on which the execution issued was a lien on the same, neither extends this lien of the judgment, nor does it create a new lien on the property.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256.

DELIVERY OF PROPERTY ON FORTHCOMING OR DELIVERY BOND, § 62½.
EFFECT OF LEVY, § 63.

§ 53. Levy in General.

[a] The fact that an execution issued to the constable of a township was served by the sheriff does not render the service void, where it might have been issued to either the sheriff or constable.—Ross v. Wellman, 102 Cal. 1, 36 Pac. 402.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1077, 1078; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 711, 712, § 277.

§ 54. —— Time for Levy.

[a] Levy and sale under execution must both be made within the period of two years limited by statute.—Isaac v. Swift, 10 Cal. 71.

[b] Where it appeared by the sheriff's return on an execution that a levy under it was not made until after the expiration of the life of the execution, such levy by a sheriff is without jurisdiction.—Tower v. McDowell, 31 Pac. 843.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1081; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 719-723, §§ 280, 281.

§ 55. Mode and Sufficiency of Levy.

[a] Where judgment is taken jointly against two defendants it makes no difference, so far as they are concerned, whether the sheriff first levied on joint property or not.—Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1082-1112; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 724-823, §§ 282-358.

§ 56. —— Right of Defendant to Designate Property to be Levied on.

[a] Officer may not deny right to designate property to be levied on if claimed.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 301, 11 Pac. 820.

Digitized by Google

[b] Defendant waives right to designate property by neglect or refusal to do so.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 301, 302, 11 Pac. 820.

[c] Defendant's right to designate property to be levied on is personal to himself and may be waived.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 301, 11 Pac. 820.

[d] Defendant cannot defeat levy by neglect or refusal to designate property to be levied.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 301, 11 Pac. 820.

[e] If debtor be absent, officer need not hunt for him nor await his return to designate property.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 301, 11 Pac. 820.

[f] Plaintiff's attorney may direct sheriff as to what property he shall seize and may receive and receipt for proceeds of sale thereof.—Carter v. Green Mountain etc. Co., 83 Cal. 225, 23 Pac. 317.

§ 57. —— On Personal Property.

[a] Where a judgment debtor is walking the street with a bag of coin in his hand, a seizure of the coin on execution by a sheriff is valid.—Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411, 76 Am. Dec. 492.

[b] A levy made by a constable on goods which he does not see or have in his possession is void.—Herron v. Hughes, 25 Cal. 555.

[c] A levy on a judgment of an execution issued by a justice of the peace, by delivering to the judgment debtor a copy of the writ, with notice in writing that the levy was upon all the right, title, and interest in and to the judgment, describing it, and upon all moneys, goods, credits, effects, debts due or owing, or in his possession, or under his control, and requesting him not to pay or transfer the same except to the officer making the levy, is a sufficient levy on the debt itself, and not on the mere judgment, which is not subject to execution under Code of Civil Procedure, section 542, subdivision 5, providing that the debt itself, and not the mere evidence thereof, shall be liable to execution.—Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 232, 1 Am. St. Rep. 48, 13 Pac. 621.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 688, provides that shares of stock in a corporation may be levied on, on execution, in the same manner as on writs of attachment. Section 542, subdivision 4, declares that shares of stock may be attached by leaving a copy of the writ, and a notice stating that defendant's stock, or interest therein, is attached in pursuance thereof, with the principal officer of the corporation. Held that, for the purposes of levy under execution and attachment, the debtor's interest in shares is treated as personal property not capable of manual delivery, and hence it was not necessary to the validity of an execution sale of corporate shares that they should be in the hands of the sheriff in order that they might be personally delivered to the purchaser.—West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v. Wulff, 133 Cal. 315, 85 Am. St. Rep. 171, 65 Pac. 622.

§ 58. —— Exhaustion of Personalty Before Levy on Realty.

[a] The sheriff may, on the request of the defendant in execution, levy on real estate, though there be personal property present sufficient to satisfy the execution.—Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47, 65 Am. Dec. 475.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1090-1092; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 751-757, §§ 308-310.

§ 59. —— On Real Property and Interests Therein.

[a] Under Statutes of 1850, chapter 25, section 172, providing that the filing of a judgment creates a lien on the debtor's real estate; and under section 181 et seq., providing that an execution shall create no lien on personal property except such as actually levied on, and that no personal property shall be sold except in the presence of a purchaser, and that the sale of realty shall be at the county seat of the county in which it is situated—a sale of realty was valid without an actual seizure by the officer.—Smith v. Morse, 2 Cal. 524.

[b] It is not necessary when an execution is levied on real estate that a copy of the same with the levy indorsed thereon should be filed in the recorder's office.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256-n.

[c] Any act on the part of the officer showing the intent to sell the specific land, and to subject it to the satisfaction of the judgment, constitutes a levying of the execution as against defendant in the execution, within the meaning of Practice Act, section 217, which provides that, "until a levy, property shall not be affected by the execution."—Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649, 99 Am. Dec. 441.

[d] When the judgment debtor has, or claims, an interest in only a small, well-defined parcel of a much larger tract of land it is extremely irregular, to say the least, to levy the execution upon his interest in the general tract, instead of the particular parcel he claims.—Logan v. Hale, 42 Cal. 645.

[e] To make proper levy on lands already subject to lien of judgment upon which writ was issued officer need only give statutory notice of sale and is not required to take possession of the land.—Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 193-197, 51 Pac. 195.

§ 60. —— Amount of Property Taken and Excessive Levy.

[a] Where there was great uncertainty at the time of the levy as to the value of the property attached, and it is subsequently ascertained that its value was greatly in excess of the demand sued for, it does not follow that the levy was therefore excessive.—Sexey v. Adkison, 40 Cal. 408, 91 Am. Dec. 698.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1112-1114; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 823-827, §§ 359-363.

§ 61. —— Irregularities and Objections as to Levy.

[a] Under Practice Act of 1850, section 189, giving defendant in execution the right of designating the property to be levied on, defendant cannot raise objections to the regularity of the levy, in the absence of a showing that such right was exercised by him and disregarded by the officer; nor can a stranger to the writ question the regularity of the levy for such cause.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 296, 11 Pac. 820.

[b] A judgment provided that a note and mortgage filed in the case should be delivered to defendant on his payment of the judgment, but he failed to pay the same, and made no attempt to prevent the note becoming barred by the statute of limitations. Held, that he could not object to a levy on and sale of the note and mortgage under the judgment. Hoxie v. Bryant, 131 Cal. 85, 63 Pac. 153.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1114; 21 Cent. Dig., col. 328, § 55; cols. 828-831, §§ 364-369.

§ 62. Custody of Property.

[a] Where a stranger to an execution is in possession of the property, claiming to own it by virtue of a transfer to him from the debtor which would prevent the latter from retaking the possession, the sheriff cannot justify without producing both the execution and the judgment authorizing its issue.—(1861) Bickerstaff v. Doub, 19 Cal. 109, 79 Am. Dec. 204; (1862) Knox v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 617.

§ 62½. Delivery of Property on Forthcoming or Delivery Bond.

[a] An undertaking exacted by a sheriff before releasing property which he has ascertained to be exempt from execution is void for want of consideration.—Servanti v. Lusk, 43 Cal. 238.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1124-1135; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 871-908, §§ 406-433.

§ 63. Effect of Levy.

[a] Levy of execution has no further effect than to fix date or commencement of sheriff's title, as against all persons who are not parties to the writ under the provision of the statutes of this state.—Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649, 99 Am. Dec. 441.

§ 64. Staying Execution in General.

[a] Where a remittitur is sent to the lower court, with the bill of costs annexed as taxed in the supreme court, neither the supreme court nor the judge thereof has a right to stay the execution for costs.—City of Marysville v. Buchanan, 3 Cal. 212.

[b] Court will not, on motion, order perpetual stay of execution on an erroneous judgment if it had jurisdiction of the subject matter, and of the person of defendant.—Chase v. Christianson, 41 Cal. 253.

[c] A justice of the peace has power to recall an execution issued on a void judgment rendered by him, and stay further proceedings, even if the judgment has been docketed in the office of the county clerk and the execution has been issued by the clerk.—Gates v. Lane, 49 Cal. 266.

§ 65. —— Grounds.

[a] Court may grant perpetual stay of execution on judgment discharged in insolvency. Imlay v. Carpentier, 14 Cal. 173.

[b] Where a judgment was reversed by the supreme court, and the case remanded for further proceedings, and the clerk of the court below issued an execution for all costs, including those of the appeal and those accruing before notice of the appeal was filed, the judge of the court below had power to stay the execution in the hands of the sheriff until an application could be made to the court to retax and adjust the costs.—Burrill, Ex parte, 24 Cal. 350.

[c] If a judgment upon which an execution issues, and the execution itself are void upon their face, the court has power on motion to afford relief, and can arrest the process.—Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170.

§ 66. —— Order and Notice.

[a] An order by a district judge, ex parte, and without notice, reciting that one of the defendants had commenced an action to vacate the judgment, and directing a recall and stay of execution until that action be determined, or until further order, held to be unauthorized.—Livermore v. Hodgkins, 54 Cal. 637.

§ 67. —— Effect.

[a] A suspension of proceedings under the judgment will fully protect the losing party. Hutchinson v. Bours, 13 Cal. 50.

[b] The necessary consequence of an order of court directing that a certain judgment be not enforced is that process issued for its enforcement falls with it, and property then held by the marshal for the satisfaction of the execution is released from the execution. Mulford v. Estudillo, 32 Cal. 131.

§ 68. —— Bond or Undertaking.

[a] The question whether the judgment has been executed by the sheriff by a delivery of the possession of the property should not be considered by the judge as a ground of refusal to fix the amount of the undertaking to stay proceeding, but the judge should determine the sufficiency of those matters, when presented upon a direct issue in which the right to an actual stay of proceedings is involved.—Gutierrez v. Hebbard, 104 Cal. 103, 37 Pac. 749.

§ 69. —— Liabilities on Stay Bonds.

[a] Where an execution is issued against the sureties on a stay bond, it may be set aside on a showing that the original judgment has been satisfied.—Meredith v. Santa Clara Min. Assn. of Baltimore, 60 Cal. 617.

[b] Unauthorized bond to stay execution cannot be enforced against sureties for want of jurisdiction.—Powers v. Crane, 67 Cal. 65, 7 Pac. 135.

§ 70. Quashing or Vacating Writ.

[a] Proper remedy to prevent enforcement of execution on void judgment is by motion to set it aside.—Luco v. Brown, 73 Cal. 5, 6, 2 Am. St. Rep. 814, 14 Pac. 368.

[b] Order allowing execution without authority may be vacated on motion, though appealable.—Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 205, 15 Am. St. Rep. 234, 28 Pac. 443.

[c] Where the court has improperly made an order directing execution to issue, it may, on motion, recall the execution, though the order is appealable.—(1891) Buell v. Buell, 92 Cal. 393, 28 Pac. 443.

[d] Court has power of its own motion to declare void an execution which clearly appears to be so on face of records.—Winrod v. Wolters, 141 Cal. 403, 74 Pac. 1037.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Effect of quashing writ upon sale: 15 Am. Dec. 92, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 1152-1163; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 956-973, §§ 466-483.

§ 71. —— Jurisdiction.

[a] Where the court below has, without authority, made an order authorizing the issuance of an execution, the same court may, on motion, vacate and set aside said execution, though the order is appealable.—Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 202, 22 Pac. 552.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1157; 21 Cent. Dig., col. 963, § 472.

§ 72. —— Grounds.

[a] An execution for costs will not be recalled by reason of the fact that the judgment therefor included items which are not properly taxable.—Meeker v. Harris, 23 Cal. 285.

[b] If, after a judgment recovered by an attaching creditor has been satisfied, he is proceeding to sell attached property under execution, the defendant in the execution may move to quash the writ, and need not go into equity for relief.—Domec v. Stearns, 30 Cal. 114.

[c] A defendant in execution cannot have the execution recalled, when valid, on the ground that it was levied on exempt property.—Roth v. Insley, 86 Cal. 134, 24 Pac. 853.

[d] An execution on a default judgment will not be quashed because the complaint was defective, as the remedy therefor is by appeal.—Edwards v. Hellings, 103 Cal. 204, 37 Pac. 218.

[e] On a motion to quash an execution, errors and irregularities in the rendition of the judgment cannot be inquired into.—(Cal. 1895) Town of Hayward v. Pimental, 107 Cal. 386, 40 Pac. 545.

[f] Void amendment of judgment is ground for quashing execution.—Scammon v. Bonslett, 118 Cal. 99, 62 Am. St. Rep. 226-n, 50 Pac. 272.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1152-1156; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 957-963, §§ 467-471.

§ 73. —— Persons Entitled to Relief.

[a] A purchaser from the defendant, who purchased after rendition of the judgment foreclosing the lien, and before the levying of an execution thereunder, has the right to move the court to vacate a void order for the issuance of execution, and to set aside a void sheriff's sale thereunder, though not a party to the action.—Dorland v. Smith, 93 Cal. 120, 28 Pac. 812.

§ 74. —— Time Within Which Application for Relief Must be Made.

[a] Where third parties have purchased at execution sale it is too late to move to set aside execution.—Bryan v. Berry, 8 Cal. 130.

§ 75. —— Notice.

[a] If, upon a petition after issue of execution, a supersedeas is issued, or an order staying execution had, or an order quashing it, such order will be affectual without notice to the sheriff holding the execution, and without joining him as a party in the proceedings for obtaining such orders.—Buffandeau v. Edmondson, 17 Cal. 436, 79 Am. Dec. 139.

[b] A notice of motion to recall the execution, specifying the grounds of the motion to be "for the reason that the said execution was wrongfully and unlawfully and improperly issued," is sufficient to raise the question of the authority of the court to issue the execution.—Buell v. Buell, 92 Cal. 393, 28 Pac. 443.

[c] A motion to recall an execution is an original proceeding, and may be made by attorneys, other than those who appeared in the original action, without substitution. It is therefore no objection that notice of such motion was signed by such other attorneys.—Buell v. Buell, 92 Cal. 393, 28 Pac. 443.

§ 76. —— Effect of Quashing.

[a] Where a sheriff holding an execution levied it on goods of the judgment debtor, and placed them in the hands of a keeper, a purchase by the keeper of such goods, made between the quashing of the execution on which they were held and the issuance of a second execution, is valid, since the lien of the levy was destroyed by the quashing of the execution.—Wellington v. Sedgwick, 12 Cal. 469.

§ 77. Nature and Grounds of Relief.

[a] Equity will not grant relief against an execution, if the party can equally well be relieved, upon motion, in the court that issued the execution or has control of it.—Imlay v. Carpentier, 14 Cal. 173.

[b] A sufficient remedy against an execution, issued on a judgment claimed to have been discharged by a decree in insolvency, may be had by motion, and therefore the defendant is not entitled to an injunction.—Green v. Thomas, 17 Cal. 86.

[c] Whether the application for relief against a voidable execution sale should be presented by motion to the court or by bill in equity depends on the special circumstances of each case.—City and County of San Francisco v. Pixley, 21 Cal. 56.

[d] One who purchases land subject to lien of judgment obtained by fraud against his grantor is not entitled to have a court of equity remove the judgment lien, and enjoin a sale of the land under the judgment, unless he shows affirmatively that he will be injured by an enforcement of the lien by a sale of the land on execution.—Marriner v. Smith, 27 Cal. 649.

[e] Injunction will be granted restraining sale on execution of homestead claimed under the laws of the United States if the judgment on which the execution issues was recovered for a debt contracted before the homestead claim was patented.—Miller v. Little, 47 Cal. 348.

[f] The party who comes into a court of equity to enjoin a sheriff from selling real estate on an execution against the plaintiff's grantor cannot obtain relief if his purchase is tainted with fraud.—San Francisco etc. R. R. Co. v. Bee, 48 Cal. 398.

[g] Where defendants consent to waive all defenses, and confess judgment on the strength of a verbal agreement that plaintiffs will stay execution for a year, they cannot enjoin a sale under the execution which plaintiffs levied before the end of the year, being guilty of laches in standing by and permitting the execution to be levied without moving the court to recall it.—(1890) Moulton v. Knapp, 85 Cal. 385, 24 Pac. 803; (1891) 88 Cal. 446, 26 Pac. 210.

§ 78. —— Irregular Execution.

[a] The improper issuance of a second execution is no ground for equitable interference. Such irregularities must be corrected by the court issuing the writ.—Gregory v. Ford, 14 Cal. 138, 73 Am. Dec. 639.

§ 79. —— Delay in Issuing Execution.

[a] Injunction does not lie to restrain execution sale, because period for enforcing judgment has expired. Remedy is by motion to quash execution.—Mayo v. Bryte, 47 Cal. 626.

§ 80. —— Effect of Execution and Sale Sought to be Restrained.

[a] Equity will entertain a bill to enjoin the sale of lands on execution, for the purpose of preventing the creation of a cloud upon the complainant's title.—(Cal. 1860) Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127; (1890) Roth v. Insley, 86 Cal. 134, 24 Pac. 853.

[b] It is discretionary with a court to grant an injunction to restrain an execution sale because it will cast a cloud on title.—Goldstein v. Kelly, 51 Cal. 301.

[c] A sheriff's deed, made on execution sale under a judgment in an attachment suit, conveyed to plaintiff all the interest which the judgment debtor had at the date of the docketing of the judgment or thereafter. Defendant, who had obtained judgment in an attachment suit wherein the attachment was levied upon the same land, after the attachment but before the judgment in the former suit, caused a special execution to be issued to the ex-sheriff, who had levied his attachment, requiring him to sell the interest which the judgment debtor had in the land at the date of the levy of the attachment. Held, that the sale under the defendant's execution would have cast a cloud upon the plaintiff's title, and was therefore rightly enjoined. Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165.

§ 81. —— Levy on Property Claimed by Third Person.

[a] A. leased furniture to B.; during the lease F. bought the furniture of A., B. remaining in possession and acknowledging F.'s title. Sheriff, having an execution against A., levied on the furniture as the property of A. Held, that the remedy by injunction to F. is proper.—Ford v. Rigby, 10 Cal. 449.

[b] A stranger to an execution, whose goods have been levied on under it, cannot have an injunction on the ground that the judgment was erroneous. It is not to be thus collaterally impeached, and he has a good remedy at law.—Markley v. Rand, 12 Cal. 275.

[c] An injunction against the sheriff will not lie, at the instance of a purchaser of a partner's interest, to restrain a sale on execution of a partner's interest in firm stock, unless the injury be irreparable, which can only appear upon a clear showing of the plaintiff's right and of the defendant's insolvency.—More v. Ord, 15 Cal. 204.

[d] A executed to plaintiff a deed of real estate, which was subsequently levied on by an execution creditor of A. Plaintiff sought to restrain the sheriff's sale, as casting a cloud upon his title, but plaintiff's deed was adjudged to be in effect a mortgage; and it was held that there was no ground to sustain plaintiff's bill, since the sale passed only the interest of A, whatever it might be.—Purdy v. Irwin, 18 Cal. 350.

[e] If owner of large tract of land contracts to sell part of it, and the judgment creditors of the party with whom he contracts attempt to sell the whole tract on execution, the court intimates that the owner may enjoin the sale, except as to the part contracted to be sold.—Logan v. Hale, 42 Cal. 645.

[f] Equity will not interfere to enjoin the sale of land under execution issued on a judgment in which the owner of the land was not a party nor privy, inasmuch as such a judgment is absolutely void so far as the rights of the owner are concerned, and casts no cloud on his title.—Roman Catholic Archbishop of San Francisco v. Shipman, 69 Cal. 586, 11 Pac. 343.

[g] Injunction is the proper remedy where one claiming to be the owner of a tract of land, purchased in good faith for a valuable consideration, in the actual possession thereof, seeks to prevent its sale under execution against his grantor; and a dissolution of a restraining order in such case does not follow from an answer denying the equities of the complaint. Such dissolution is an abuse of discretion.—Porter v. Jennings, 89 Cal. 440, 28 Pac. 681.

[h] Where land is levied on under execution against one other than the holder of the legal title, the latter may have a temporary injunction restraining a sale.—Einstein v. Bank of California, 137 Cal. 47, 69 Pac. 616.

§ 82. —— Protection of Rights of Other Creditors or Lienholders.

[a] One who has purchased mortgaged property at a foreclosure sale, but who has not yet received the sheriff's deed, is not entitled to maintain a bill for an injunction to restrain a sale of the mortgagor's remaining equity of redemption, ordered in a suit brought to enforce a mechanic's lien, to which suit he was not made a party.—Macovich v. Wemple, 16 Cal. 104.

[b] An injunction will not be granted at the suit of a junior attaching creditor, restraining a prior attaching creditor, after judgment obtained, from selling on execution personal property of the defendant upon which he has levied an attachment, unless he has bound himself to such junior creditor for a sufficient consideration not to do so, but to pursue some other course, a departure from which will work irreparable mischief to the plaintiff.—Domec v. Stearns, 30 Cal. 114.

[c] The complaint alleged that defendant A levied attachments on B's land; that B was adjudged an insolvent, and A proved her claims against him; that thereafter, by consent, the insolvency proceedings were dismissed, and B executed to plaintiffs an assignment for the benefit of his creditors of all his property, including said land; that plaintiffs accepted the trust; that said levies were dissolved; that A obtained judgments in said attachment suits, and executions were issued, and the sheriff had levied on the land, and, unless restrained by injunction, would sell it, and prevent plaintiffs executing their trust. Held, that the complaint was not de murrable as not stating a cause of action, as, even if the debtor had an attachable interest by reason of his right to any residue, the complaint alleged a threatened sale not of such interest, but of the land; and, under Civil Code, section 3457, where an assignment for benefit of creditors is made, the creditors must avail themselves of the assets without preference, or not at all.—Wilhoit v. Cunningham, 87 Cal. 453, 25 Pac. 675; Sargent v. Cunningham, 25 Pac. 677.

§ 83. Actions to Restrain Execution.

[a] If a bill in equity is filed to restrain the enforcement of an execution, on the ground that the judgment has been paid, the defendant, if he would avail himself of the defense that the plaintiff had a remedy at law by motion in the court from which the execution issued, must do so by motion to dismiss the bill, or by some other proper means, before answering on the merits. If he answers on the merits, he waives such defense.—Wood v. Currey, 49 Cal. 359.

[b] In an action to restrain the sheriff from selling certain real estate on execution against plaintiff's grantor, the court did not err in denying a nonsuit, where plaintiff rested on the introduction in evidence of the deed to him, and it appeared that the execution creditor made no claim to the property, except such as was derived from such grantor subsequent to the date of such deed.—Fitzgibbon v. Laumeister, 51 Pac. 1078.

§ 84. —— Parties.

[a] The court will not by injunction restrain the sale of land on execution at the instance of a claimant under a tax title which clearly is invalid.—Hall v. Theisen, 61 Cal. 524.

§ 85. —— Pleading.

[a] If a judgment is not void, but merely irregular, because of the defects, and the defects can be reached by motion before judgment or on appeal, then the complaint to enjoin the enforcement of the judgment should aver that plaintiff has paid the claim for the recovery of which the action was brought, or that he has a valid defense to the same.—Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 200.

[b] Complaint to enjoin sale of property under execution and issuance of another execution on judgment is devoid of equity, if it only avers that the judgment and execution are void on their face, and insolvency of one of defendants.—Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170.

[c] A complaint in an action to enjoin an execution sale, which simply alleges that plaintiff had no knowledge of the judgment until more than thirty days after its rendition, is insufficient.—Farrington v. Brown, 65 Cal. 320, 4 Pac. 26.

[d] A complaint alleged that judgment had been entered against plaintiffs in a claim and delivery suit against defendant, commanding them to return to defendant certain trays and sweat boxes, or eighteen hundred and eighty-five dollars, the value thereof, in case return could not be made; that plaintiffs appealed therefrom, and the same was affirmed in the supreme court; that plaintiffs tendered to defendant, and offered to return to him, the trays and sweat boxes, and are now ready and willing to return them, and to comply in every particular with the terms of the judgment, but that defendant refused to accept the same, and caused execution to issue on his judgment; that plaintiffs moved the superior court to recall the execution, but the motion was denied; and that, despite the pendency of an appeal from such ruling, defendant threatens to sell plaintiffs' property, to plaintiffs' irreparable injury, etc. Held to state a cause of action entitling plaintiffs to an injunction. Eppinger v. Scott, 130 Cal. 275, 62 Pac. 460.

[e] A complaint in an action to restrain a judgment creditor from selling land under an execution against a former owner held to show prima facie plaintiff's right to be protected from cloud that would be cast on his title by a sale under the execution.—Austin v. Union Paving etc. Co. (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 731.

§ 86. Rights of Claimant in General.

[a] If claimant of property levied on fails to make his claim known, and thus influences conduct of officer, he is estopped from afterward asserting it, provided facts and circumstances relating to his claim were then known to him.—Bleven v. Freer, 10 Cal. 172.

§ 87. Demand by Claimant and Affidavit of Claim.

[a] Where property is levied on by execution as the property of the execution defendant, but is found in the possession of a third person, such third person need not make a demand on the officer for the same as a condition precedent to an action for its recovery.—Ledley v. Hayes, 1 Cal. 160.

[b] A claim to property about to be levied on, stating that claimant is owner, and had delivered it for purposes of sale, and that it was so held when seized, and not otherwise, complies with Code of Civil Procedure, section 689, as to the manner of "setting out the title."—Vermont Marble Co. v. Brow, 109 Cal. 236, 50 Am. St. Rep. 37-n, 41 Pac. 1031.

[bc] A notice of claim upon a constable who has wrongfully seized wood in possession of the claimant, which states that the claimant is entitled to the possession under a bill of sale, is sufficiently explicit, although the possession under the bill of sale, was given by way of security, and the notice did not state that the plaintiff had taken the wood in pledge.—Dubois v. Spinks, 114 Cal. 289, 46 Pac. 95.

[c] A written claim of property in goods about to be levied on under execution, which states the claimant's "grounds of title," pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure, sections 549, 689, to be by purchase from S. and the judgment debtor, is not defective, as indicating a purchase from said persons jointly. Henderson v. Hart, 122 Cal. 332, 54 Pac. 1110.

§ 89. —— Evidence.

[a] The burden is on the execution creditor to prove that goods levied on under execution were the property of the debtor.—Newell v. Desmond, 74 Cal. 46, 15 Pac. 369.

[b] In an action to recover the proceeds of personal property, evidence held to sustain a finding that the sale was made before the levy and accompanied by delivery and actual change of possession, required by Civil Code, section 3440.—Castle v. Sibley (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1067.

[c] Where certain property levied on had been transferred by the debtor in violation of Civil Code, section 3440, the sheriff was not bound, as against the transferee, to prove the debtor's insolvency in order to entitle him to maintain his levy.—Calkins v. Howard (Cal. App.), 83 Pac. 280.

§ 90. Operation and Effect of Determination.

[a] Legal effect of finding for defendants, on question of plaintiff's right to property, was to entitle the defendants, from whom the property was taken, to its restoration.—Waldman v. Broder, 10 Cal. 378.

§ 92. Statutory Provisions.

[a] Statute is directory so far as it deals with manner in which writ is to be executed. Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 303, 11 Pac. 820.

[b] Failure of officer to comply with directory provisions of statute does not avoid sale.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 303, 11 Pac. 820.

[c] Civil Code, section 3440, making void sales of chattels against the seller's creditors, where there is no continued change of possession, does not apply where a purchase is made at an execution sale by a stranger to the proceedings, in view of Code of Civil Procedure, section 698, providing that an execution sale conveys to the purchaser all the rights which the debtor had.—Matteucci v. Whelan, 123 Cal. 312, 69 Am. St. Rep. 60, 55 Pac. 990.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1145-1390, §§ 600-742.

§ 93. Venditioni Exponas.

[a] Writ of venditioni exponas is a simple order of the court to sell property already levied on under execution. It confers no power to levy.—Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 165.

[b] When sheriff who levies fieri facias on land goes out of office before having sold, the court may, by an order, direct his successor to sell the property levied on, and a venditioni exponas may be issued to such successor, and he may then sell and execute a deed to the purchaser.—Clark v. Sawyer, 48 Cal. 133.

[c] There is a distinction between cases where a venditioni exponas is issued for the sale of personal property and where it is issued for the sale of land. A venditioni issued in the former case must go to the officer who made the seizure.—Clark v. Sawyer, 48 Cal. 133.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 681, requiring execution on a judgment to issue within five years after judgment is entered, applies also to an order of sale.—Dorland v. Hanson, 81 Cal. 202, 15 Am. St. Rep. 44, 22 Pac. 552.

[e] A sale by a sheriff under an execution after the return day of the execution is valid if he has made a levy during the lifetime of the writ, and a sale may likewise be made after the return day of a writ issued under an order of sale, where no levy is required. Southern California Lumber Co. v. Ocean Beach Hotel Co., 94 Cal. 217, 28 Am. St. Rep. 115-n, 29 Pac. 627.

Duty of sheriff to inform purchasers of encumbrances: 43 Am. Dec. 143, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 1236-1238; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1156-1164, §§ 613-619.

§ 94. Conduct of Sale.

[a] Contingent and complicated contracts cannot be levied upon and sold without being in possession of the officer at the sale, to be exhibited to the bystanders and assigned to the purchaser, unless a full and accurate description of the particular interest and chose in action, with all its conditions and covenants, and a full explanation of the facts determining the value of the chose, be given by the levy and announced at the sale.—Crandall v. Blen, 13 Cal. 15.

§ 95. —— Notice of Sale.

[a] Want of due notice of a sheriff's sale is immaterial to affect the validity of the sale or the obligation of the purchaser to pay the amount of his bid.—Harvey v. Fisk, 9 Cal. 93.

[b] In case of a sale en masse under an execution of real estate consisting of several known and distinct parcels a knowledge of the judgment, execution, and advertisement is sufficient to put the judgment debtor on his inquiry, and is in effect equivalent to a knowledge of the sale.—Vigoureux v. Murphy, 54 Cal. 346.

[c] An insufficient description in a notice of sale and in a sheriff's deed of property sold at execution sale is not waived by the failure of the judgment debtor to apply to the court to have the sale set aside.—Cadwalder v. Nash, 73 Cal. 43, 14 Pac. 385.

[cd] Where, before sale of real property on execution, notice thereof must be published "in some newspaper" of the county, if there be one (Code Civ. Proc., sec. 692), and an officer selling without such notice forfeits five hundred dollars to the aggrieved party, besides actual damages (section 693), the sheriff, and not the plaintiff, has the right to select the newspaper in which such notice shall be published.—Northern Counties Inv. Trust v. Cadman, 101 Cal. 200, 35 Pac. 557.

[d] Fact that some of land levied upon stands in name of third parties does not require notice to them other than that given to general public.—Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 197, 48 Pac. 56.

[e] A notice of sale of personal property under execution, posted on February 20th, and a sale thereof made, as advertised, on February 25th, shows a sufficient compliance with the statute, as to five days' notice.—Bellmer v. Blessington, 136 Cal. 3, 68 Pac. 111.

§ 96. —— Sale in Parcels.

[a] Where the land sold under execution consisted of separate but adjoining tracts, but the sheriff and the purchaser were ignorant of the subdivisions, and the defendant failed to inform the sheriff of the fact, or to direct a sale by parcels, the sale of the land in gross was valid.—Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47, 65 Am. Dec. 475.

[b] If a sheriff, by virtue of an execution levies on and advertises for sale several separate tracts of land, he must sell the tracts separately and not en masse.—Browne v. Ferrea, 51 Cal. 552.

[c] Several ditches and water rights appertaining thereto, constituting but a single connected system of water supply may be sold on execution as a single parcel.—Gleason v. Hill, 65 Cal. 17, 2 Pac. 413.

[d] The complaint is subject to demurrer where it does not show that the proceeds of the sale were less than they would have been had the land been sold in parcels.—Hudepohl v. Liberty Hill Consol. Min. etc. Co., 94 Cal. 588, 28 Am. St. Rep. 149, 29 Pac. 1025.

§ 97. —— Right of Judgment Debtor to Designate Manner in Which Property Shall be Sold.

[a] Debtor in default has no vested right to have his property sold in a particular way. Tuolumne Redemption Co. v. Sedgwick, 15 Cal. 515.

§ 98. —— Representative Capacity of Sheriff in Making Sale.

[a] Sheriff sells as agent of judgment debtor.—Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 382.

[b] Sale by sheriff is regarded as sale by judgment debtor.—Thresher v. Atchison, 117 Cal. 75, 59 Am. St. Rep. 159, 48 Pac. 1020.

§ 99. —— Effect of Conspiracy to Deter Bidders.

[a] Conspiracy to deter bidders and prevent fair sale renders sale void.—Pekin M. & M. Co. v. Kennedy, 81 Cal. 362, 22 Pac. 679.

§ 100. Persons Who may Purchase.

[a] Partner or tenant in common may purchase joint property at a sale under execution.—Gunter v. Laffan, 7 Cal. 588.

[b] Third persons, not parties to contract, have no vested right to purchase the property of a common debtor sold at the instance of another creditor.—Tuolumne Redemption Co. v. Sedgwick, 15 Cal. 515.

[c] A partner may purchase with his own funds and on his own account the interest of his copartner in real estate at sheriff's sale, if there be no circumstances of fraud or of trust, apart from the partnership relation, and hold the property so purchased as a stranger could hold it.—Bradbury v. Barnes, 19 Cal. 120.

[d] The fact that a sheriff's sale is open and public is prima facie proof that no advantage is taken by the partner purchasing of his copartner.—Bradbury v. Barnes, 19 Cal. 120.

[e] The attorney of a defendant in proceedings to subject land to debts owes no such duty to the client's creditors as will debar such attorney from making a valid purchase of the land at the execution sale in such proceedings.—Fisher v. McInerney, 137 Cal. 28, 69 Pac. 622, 907.

§ 101. Bids and Payment Thereof.

[a] Where a party purchased real estate at an execution sale, upon the faith of the representations of the judgment creditor that his judgment was the first on the property, when, in fact, there were prior encumbrances on it of more than its value, the purchaser should be relieved, and the judgment creditor should be estopped from claiming an advantage resulting from his own misrepresentations.—Webster v. Haworth, 8 Cal. 21.

When purchaser may obtain release from bid: 70 Am. Dec. 572, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 1255-1257; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1226-1232, §§ 648-653. See, also, 17 Cyc. 1259, 1260.

§ 102. —— Failure to Comply with Bid.

[a] Upon a motion under Practice Act, section 224, to compel payment by a delinquent purchaser at a judicial sale, the sheriff's statement of the amount bid and the resale at a less specified amount sufficiently states that "loss was occasioned" by the failure to pay the amount bid.—Johns v. Trick, 22 Cal. 511.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1240-1261, §§ 659-666.

§ 103. —— Actions on Bids.

[a] A misrepresentation by a judgment creditor, at the sheriff's sale, that his judgment was the first, entitles the purchaser to relief in an action by the sheriff for the price of the land, there being prior encumbrances to more than its value.—Webster v. Haworth, 8 Cal. 21, 68 Am. Dec. 287.

[ab] Where a creditor purchases property of his debtor, at an execution sale for a price in excess of the amount of the judgment, before he has reduced his claim to judgment, and the debtor takes the benefit of the insolvency act before the purchaser obtains judgment, the latter cannot set off such claim against an action by the assignee in insolvency to recover the excess. Judgment, 56 Pac. 1110, reversed.—Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681, 63 Pac. 1084.

[b] Where an officer who sells property under an execution at a price in excess of the judgment, fails to bring an action to recover such excess from the purchaser, and surrenders a check given in payment thereof to the purchaser, and is insolvent, and his bond exhausted, the assignee in insolvency of the debtor may bring an action against the purchaser to recover such excess, by pleading such facts and making the officer a party thereto. Judgment, 56 Pac. 1110, reversed.—Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681, 63 Pac. 1084.

[c] Such action is not barred by limitations, when brought within four years from the date of the giving of the check. Judgment, 56 Pac. 1110, reversed.—Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681, 63 Pac. 1084.

[d] A purchaser of property at an execution sale who does not pay the entire price will not be heard to question his liability for the remainder on the ground that the sale was illegal because the entire price was not required to be paid in cash. Judgment, 56 Pac. 1110, reversed.—Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681, 63 Pac. 1084.

[e] An execution purchaser of property is not released from liability on his bid by reason of a prior execution sale of the property, since the rule of caveat emptor applies to execution sales. Judgment, 56 Pac. 1110, reversed.—Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681, 63 Pac. 1084.

[f] Where a creditor who has not reduced his claim to judgment purchases the property of his debtor at an execution sale at a price in excess of the judgment debt, and the debtor then takes the benefit of the insolvency act, the filing of his claim by the creditor without deducting the excess in his possession will estop him from setting up such claim as a setoff in an action by the assignee to recover such excess. Judgment, 56 Pac. 1110, reversed.—Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681, 63 Pac. 1084.

[g] A purchaser at an execution sale cannot resist payment of the excess of his bid over the judgment, in a suit brought by the assignee in insolvency of his debtor, on the ground that the latter does not show that he is able or willing to procure a constable's deed to the property, since an execution purchaser must pay when the certificate of sale is issued. Judgment, 56 Pac. 1110, reversed. Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681, 63 Pac. 1084.

[h] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 691, requiring an officer selling property under execution to return any surplus to the execution debtor, the purchaser, who gives his check for such surplus to the officer, and afterward procures the check from the officer and destroys it, is subject to suit by the debtor for the amount thereof, though the latter was never informed of the giving of the check to the officer, since the debtor may be treated as the equitable assignee of the rights of the officer. Judgment, 56 Pac. 1110, reversed.—Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681, 63 Pac. 1084.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Remedies against purchaser at execution sales to recover amount of bid: 69 Am. Dec. 365, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 1262-1264; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1256-1261, §§ 665, 666.

§ 104. Terms and Conditions.

[a] Where a constable sells property on execution under the usual statutory notice, it is a cash sale, and not a sale on credit, though the purchaser does not pay the entire price, and hence the latter cannot escape liability on the ground that the sale was illegal because on credit. Judgment, 56 Pac. 1110, reversed.—Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681, 63 Pac. 1084.

§ 105. Entry, Record, and Certificate of Sale.

[a] A sheriff's bill of sale of goods sold on execution need not be in form a certificate of sale, if it contains all the essentials of a certificate.—Lay v. Neville, 25 Cal. 545.

[b] A duplicate of a sheriff's certificate of sale of land was deposited by the sheriff with the recorder of the proper county, indorsed "filed" by the latter officer, recorded as a deed in a book of records of deeds, and regularly indexed as a deed, and afterward placed in a file of recorded deeds, but not with a file of certificates of sales, where it remained in said recorder's office till the time of the trial of the case, some ten years afterward. Held, that notice was imparted to subsequent purchasers by the instrument thus deposited and preserved.—Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293.

[c] The filing of a sheriff's duplicate certificate of sale in the office of the county recorder imparts constructive notice of the estate acquired under it to subsequent purchasers and attaching creditors, and such notice continues after the time for redemption has expired and until the sheriff's deed has been delivered and recorded.—Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293.

[d] The purpose of filing a duplicate of a certificate of purchase made at execution sale is to give notice to third persons of its existence and contents.—Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293.

[e] If a recorder has a place in his office where he keeps sheriff's certificates of sale, and a given certificate is not kept in that place but in another and different place, its filing does not give notice to third persons of its existence or contents. (Per Shafter, J.) Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293.

[a] If an execution call for more money than the face of the judgment, the execution is not for that reason void; it is only voidable, and a sale thereunder may be valid. Hunt v. Loucks, 38 Cal. 372, 99 Am. Dec. 404.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1267-1287; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1297-1359, §§ 687-722.

§ 108. —— Irregularities or Misconduct Affecting Sale.

[a] If sheriff's sale is irregular, remedy is by motion properly made in the court where the judgment was rendered to set aside the sale.—Boles v. Johnston, 23 Cal. 226, 83 Am. Dec. 111.

[b] If a sheriff on an execution sells separate tracts of land in mass the creditor has his remedy by motion to set aside the sale, even if a stranger becomes the purchaser and pays the money for the property.—Browne v. Ferrea, 51 Cal. 552.

[c] A sale in mass, under an execution, of real estate consisting of several known and distinct parcels, at a price greatly below the actual value, is voidable, and will be set aside upon a proper application of the judgment debtor when made in a reasonable time after the sale; but such a sale is not void, and will not be set aside if the application is not made within a reasonable time.—Vigoureux v. Murphy, 54 Cal. 346.

[d] Mere fact that several separate tracts of land belonging to an execution debtor were sold at the execution sale en masse is not sufficient to render the sale void.—Riddell v. Harrell, 71 Cal. 254, 12 Pac. 67.

[e] A judgment debtor may, by parol, waive a sale of the land in parcels, and give authority to sell en masse; and where it does not appear that the sale was not made in solido by express direction of the judgment debtor, or offered in parcels and no bids received, the execution sale will not be set aside because of the sale of the property en masse.—Hudepohl v. Liberty Hill Water etc. Co., 94 Cal. 588, 28 Am. St. Rep. 149, 29 Pac. 1025.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

18 L. R. A. 88, note. See, also, 17 Cyc. 1274-1276; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1313-1326, §§ 697-702.

§ 109. —— —— Want or Insufficiency of Notice.

[a] If sheriff, before sale of real estate, neglects to give proper notice the statute gives an adequate remedy against the officer. There is not sufficient cause to set aside or avoid the sale.—Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47, 65 Am. Dec. 475.

[b] A failure to give the proper notice of a sale of real estate under execution does not invalidate the sale, nor does it afford sufficient cause for setting it aside.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 296, 11 Pac. 820.

[c] The surprise for which a court will set aside proceedings and sale under execution, fair and regular on their face, which have resulted in vesting rights to real property in a purchaser, must be a legal surprise, without fault or negligence of the party who claims to have been surprised; and the party surprised must act promptly, and offer to return any purchase money he may have received.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Creed, 70 Cal. 497, 11 Pac. 772.

§ 110. —— Inadequacy of Price.

[a] Inadequacy of price, though a fact admissible in evidence to establish fraud, is never of itself sufficient to annul a sale under execution.—Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47, 65 Am. Dec. 475.

[b] A sale in mass, under a writ of execution, of realty consisting of several known and distinct parcels, at a price greatly below its actual value, is not void, but voidable, and on seasonable and proper application will be set aside, when there is reasonable ground to believe it to have been less beneficial to the creditor or debtor than it would have been if differently conducted.—City and County of San Francisco v. Prixley, 21 Cal. 56.

[c] Inadequacy of consideration is not of itself ground for setting aside an execution sale.—(1886) Central Pac. R. Co. v. Creed, 70 Cal. 497, 11 Pac. 772.

[d] An execution sale of the judgment debtor's property, at which the judgment creditor was the purchaser, will not be held fraudulent, against one whose property is secondarily liable for the judgment, merely because of inadequacy of price.—Mayberry v. Whittier, 144 Cal. 322, 78 Pac. 16.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1276-1278; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1326-1337, §§ 703-707.

§ 111. —— What Constitutes Inadequacy.

[a] Under execution against the city of San Francisco the sheriff sold in mass a tract a mile in length by half a mile in breadth, which had long previously been laid out into blocks and streets, marked on an official map, and which also had a natural division by means of a creek. The price brought was three hundred and sixty dollars, and the land was alleged to be worth seventy-five thousand dollars. Held that, on application of the judgment debtor, this sale should be set aside. City of San Francisco v. Pixley, 21 Cal. 56.

[b] Where land worth three thousand five hundred dollars is encumbered of record with mortgages for three thousand two hundred dollars, a bid of twenty-five dollars at an execution sale is not disproportionate to the value of the property, after deducting the apparent liens.—Clark v. Chapman, 98 Cal. 110, 32 Pac. 812, 33 Pac. 750.

[c] In a proceeding by a judgment defendant to set aside a sheriff's sale it appeared that six hundred thousand feet of lumber belonging to the execution defendant were sold to claimant for seven hundred dollars, and that the sale was made in lump for a grossly inadequate sum. Held, that the sale was properly set aside.—Georgeson v. Consumers' Lumber Co., 31 Pac. 257.

§ 112. —— Application, Proceedings, Hearing and Determination.

[a] Notice that a motion will be made to set aside an execution is not a stay of proceedings, but an order to that effect must be obtained to prevent the sale, without which, if the sale be to third parties, the motion to set aside cannot be made.—Bryan v. Berry, 8 Cal. 130.

[b] Where property had been sold on execution, and the decree of sale was thereafter held erroneous on appeal, a motion by defendants to have the sale set aside, and to be restored to the possession of their property, as provided in such case by act of May 19, 1853, section 8, is not too late, where the parties moved as soon as they reasonably could, there being no time limited by the statute in which the motion must be made. Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667, 76 Am. Dec. 459.

[c] The fact that the purchaser is absent from the state at the time of the sale, or of the motion to set it aside, does not excuse the service on him of notice to show cause. Where personal service cannot be made it should be made as prescribed in section 520 of the Practice Act.—Eckstein v. Calderwood, 34 Cal. 658.

§ 113. Actions to Set Aside Sale.

[a] Since an execution sale en masse of separate parcels of land is not void, but only voidable, one who seeks to set it aside must show that none of the conditions which would authorize a sale of all the parcels together existed at the time of the sale.—Hudepohl v. Liberty Hill Water etc. Co., 94 Cal. 588, 28 Am. St. Rep. 149, 29 Pac. 1025.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1282-1285; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1359-1376, §§ 723-733.

§ 114. Collateral Attack on Sale.

[a] Regularity of sheriff's sale cannot be impeached by stranger, or in a collateral proceeding.—Kelsey v. Dunlap, 7 Cal. 160.

[b] In a collateral action, a court of equity will not set aside a sheriff's deed on account of irregularities in the levy and sale.—Boles v. Johnston, 23 Cal. 226, 83 Am. Dec. 111.

[c] Title of execution purchaser cannot be collaterally attacked on ground that lots were sold en masse after period of redemption. Gregory v. Bovier, 77 Cal. 123, 19 Pac. 232.

§ 115. Nature and Effect of Transfer in General.

[a] While it is the duty of the sheriff to make return on his execution of his proceedings under the levy, the purchaser is not responsible for his neglect, and need not show that the return was made, as it is sufficient for the purchaser to show judgment, execution, levy, sale, and deed.—Cloud v. El Dorado County, 12 Cal. 128, 73 Am. Dec. 526.

[b] One who deraigns title to property through a sale under an execution must show not only the execution and sale, but also a valid judgment in support of the execution, and the purchaser must see, at his peril, that there is a valid judgment in existence at the time he made his purchase.—Bullard v. McArdle, 98 Cal. 355, 35 Am. St. Rep. 176, 33 Pac. 193.

§ 116. Right to Assume Validity of Officers' Acts.

[a] Purchaser may assume that acts of officers preceding sale have been duly performed.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 302, 11 Pac. 820.

§ 117. Property Passing by Sale and Estate or Interest and Rights Acquired.

[a] A sold a tract of land to B. Only part of the purchase money was paid. B sold part of the land to C, who had notice of A's lien, and gave a mortgage for the purchase money. A recovered judgment against B and sold his interest. Held, that the purchaser at sheriff's sale acquired no title in the debt on the mortgage due from C to B.—Bryan v. Sharp, 4 Cal. 349.

[b] The purchaser at an execution sale acquires the right, title, and interest of the debtor.—Boggs v. Hargrave, 16 Cal. 559, 76 Am. Dec. 561.

[c] Purchaser of judgment on sale under execution and levy takes as assignee only—assuming that a judgment is the subject of levy and sale. The sheriff's sale of a judgment passes no title other than would pass by an assignment by the owner.—Fore v. Manlove, 18 Cal. 436.

[d] The purchaser of real property at a sheriff's sale who receives the sheriff's certificate of purchase has not a title to the property, but a lien on the same.—Baber v. McLellan, 30 Cal. 135.

[e] A purchaser at a sale under an execution acquires an equitable conditional estate, which continues until the time of redemption has expired; and the judgment debtor then has but a barren legal title, liable to be devested at any time by the execution and delivery to the purchaser of a conveyance by the sheriff who made the sale.—Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293.

[f] A note for the payment of money is liable to seizure and sale on execution, and a purchaser at the sale thereof, when the note is delivered to him, takes the same on the same terms as though it had come to his hands as a purchaser in due course of business.—Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 81.

[g] All beneficial estates, whether legal or equitable, being liable to be taken on execution, a purchase, under an execution sale, of the interest of San Francisco in water lots, and the sheriff's deed in pursuance thereof made, held to operate as an assignment of the equitable estate remaining in the city after the legal estate vested in the commissioners of the funded debt.—Le Roy v. Dunkerly, 54 Cal. 452.

[h] Interest of debtor at date of sale passes to purchaser, though acquired after levy. Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 305, 11 Pac. 820.

[i] Purchaser acquires only real interest of defendant.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 302, 11 Pac. 820.

[j] Purchaser under execution gets no title save that of the judgment debtor.—Breeze v. Brooks, 71 Cal. 169, 11 Pac. 885.

[k] Purchaser at execution sale has lien on property during redemption period.—Swain v. Stockton S. & L. Soc., 78 Cal. 604, 12 Am. St. Rep. 118, 21 Pac. 365.

[l] A sale of land under execution on a judgment against persons having no title, though in possession, cannot pass the title.

Pekin Min. etc. Co. v. Kennedy, 81 Cal. 356, 22 Pac. 679.

[m] An execution sale of the possessory right to land, and to the water used as appurtenant thereto, conveys no title to any part of the water flowing thereon which had been abandoned and appropriated and used by an adjoining owner as an appurtenance to his land, to which he had acquired a state certificate of purchase.—Smith v. Green, 109 Cal. 228, 41 Pac. 1022.

§ 118. —— Crops.

[a] A purchaser at an execution sale of an interest in growing crops obtains title in the same as a tenant in common, notwithstanding an agreement in good faith between the cotenant and the execution debtor that the title to the grain should not pass till it was threshed.—Schell v. Simon, 66 Cal. 264, 5 Pac. 238.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 822, giving the lessor of real property any remedies against the assignees of the lessee which he had against the immediate lessee for any cause of action accruing while they are assignees, an execution purchaser of the leasehold is bound by the conditions of the lease for the payment and delivery to the landlord of a proportion of the crops raised by the lessee as rent.—Summerville v. Kelliher, 144 Cal. 155, 77 Pac. 889.

[c] A lessor sued defendant for a conversion of crops grown on a leasehold purchased by defendant under execution against the lessee. The lease provided that crops grown on the premises should be the lessor's until the lessee performed certain conditions. Held that, as the conditions had not been performed, the purchaser acquired no right to the crop. Farnum v. Hefner, 16 Pac. 324.

Growing crops, execution sale of land, when pass to purchaser: 19 Am. Dec. 752, note.

§ 119. —— Rights Under Contract of Purchase.

[a] R. bought an undivided two-thirds of a mining claim, but had paid only a small part of the purchase money, when the whole claim was attached on a debt of the company contracted prior to the conveyance, and sold, H. receiving the sheriff's deed therefor. In an action by R. against H. brought under section 254 of the Practice Act, it was held that H. acquired only the one-third undivided interest, and R. the two-thirds.—Ross v. Heintzen, 36 Cal. 313.

[b] Defendant contracted to convey land on being paid therefor at the times stated in the contract. The purchaser took possession, and his interest was sold to plaintiff under execution, but before plaintiff obtained possession the purchaser surrendered to defendant. Held, that plaintiff was not entitled to any relief against defendant without showing performance or tender of performance of the contract.—Chase v. Cameron, 133 Cal. 231, 65 Pac. 460.

§ 120. —— Partnership Rights and Interests.

[a] Where partnership property is seized under an execution against one member of a firm for his individual debt, a sale under such execution passes the interest of the debtor partner only in the residuum of the partnership property after settlement of the partnership debts.—Robinson v. Tevis, 38 Cal. 611.

§ 121. —— Trust Estates.

[a] Sale on execution against trustee conveys only his personal interest, and does not affect rights of beneficiaries.—De Celis v. Porter, 59 Cal. 464.

[b] D. conveyed his interest in lands to defendants in trust to be leased, and one-half of the profits applied to his support during his life, and at his death the whole to go to his children. After the execution of the trust deed, plaintiff, whose claim arose prior thereto, levied an execution on D.'s interest in the land, and at the sale bid it in, taking a sheriff's deed. Afterward, plaintiff received the balance due on the judgment, and entered a satisfaction in full. Held, that plaintiff had no other standing than that of a purchaser at execution sale, and that he took nothing but D.'s equitable interest, which ceased on D.'s death.—Judson v. Lyford, 23 Pac. 58.

§ 122. —— Subsequently Acquired Title.

[a] There is no relation of contract between the party acquiring a new title and the purchaser at the sheriff's sale as to constitute the former the trustee of the latter, as to such newly acquired title, nor does such title inure to the benefit of the purchaser at the sheriff's sale.—Montgomery v. Whiting, 40 Cal. 294.

[b] Section 33 of the statute concerning conveyances, which provides that a conveyance of land in fee simple absolute shall convey the legal estate afterward acquired by the grantor, has no application to a sheriff's deed made under execution sale.—Kenyon v. Quinn, 41 Cal. 325.

[c] If, after the levy of an execution by the sheriff on public land, and, before the sale, the judgment debtor, being a pre-emptioner, pays for the land levied on, and obtains a certificate of purchase, the purchaser at sheriff's sale succeeds only to the equitable title of the judgment debtor, who, when he obtains the legal title by means of the patent, holds it in trust for the purchaser at the sheriff's sale.—Kenyon v. Quinn, 41 Cal. 325.

[d] After-acquired title of judgment debtor does not pass to purchaser.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 302, 11 Pac. 820.

§ 123. —— Time as of Which Title Vests in Purchaser.

[a] Statute does not design to invest purchaser with title until six months after the sale.—Duprey v. Moran, 4 Cal. 196.

[b] The effect of an execution sale under a judgment is the same as that of a decreed sale to satisfy a mortgage, so that decisions as to the one apply equally to the other; the sheriff's conveyance, which alone can pass the title, taking effect as from the date of the mortgage or of the lien of the judgment. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365, 70 Am. Dec. 655.

[c] If execution is levied on real estate while the judgment lien subsists, and the execution is returned without sale, and after the judgment lien has expired another execution is issued and levied, and a sale is made thereunder, the title acquired takes effect by relation from the time when the second execution was levied.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256.

[d] Title acquired by sheriff's deed relates back to levy of attachment.—Reilly v. Wright, 117 Cal. 80, 49 Pac. 970.

[e] A judgment is not a lien on a leasehold, and, where execution is not levied thereon, the execution purchaser's right takes its inception from the time of sale, or from the giving of notice thereof.—Summerville v. Kelliher, 144 Cal. 155, 77 Pac. 889.

§ 124. —— Rights Passing as Incidents.

[a] Where master of a vessel was one-third owner, and his interest was sold under execution, the purchaser of his interest is not entitled to supersede the master in command of the vessel, such right not passing as an incident of the sale.—Loring v. Illsley, 1 Cal. 24.

[b] Where an owner of cattle entered into a contract by which A agreed to pasture them for a given number of years, and to secure fulfillment executed a mortgage on his land, and the cattle were thereafter sold on execution on a judgment against the owner, the purchaser at the sale did not thereby acquire title to the contract for pasture and mortgage securing it.—Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 390.

[c] A purchaser of land at a sheriff's sale under execution does not, by virtue of his purchase, acquire any interest in the judgment on which the execution or order of sale issued, or the debt on which the judgment was rendered.—Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 390.

[d] Execution purchaser is entitled to be subrogated to superior lien held under prior mortgage.—Swain v. Stockton S. & L. Soc., 78 Cal. 604, 605, 12 Am. St. Rep. 118, 21 Pac. 365.

[e] Under a lease providing that the crop shall be the property of the lessor until it is delivered to him, when he shall immediately redeliver two-thirds of it to the lessee, one who purchases the leasehold interest at execution sale may harvest the crop and fulfill the lessee's agreement.—Farnum v. Hefner, 79 Cal. 575, 12 Am. St. Rep. 174, 21 Pac. 955.

§ 125. Liens or Encumbrances on Property.

[a] The purchaser of property on execution may have a lien on the property prior to that of the one entitled to redeem from the execution purchaser. The fact that he is creditor does not devest his lien. He may be both a creditor and purchaser, and still have a lien prior to that of the redemptioner; but this can only be upon the principle that the legal estate is still in the judgment debtor until the delivery of the sheriff's deed.—Knight v. Fair, 9 Cal. 117.

§ 126. —— Mortgages.

[a] A made a conveyance of real estate to B, leaving part of the purchase money unpaid. B afterward mortgaged the same property to C, with notice of A's claim. A brought an action at law against B, obtained judgment for the balance due, issued execution, and sold B's interest in the property. C afterward foreclosed his mortgage, and advertised the property for sale. The purchaser at the previous sale obtained an injunction to stay the sale, which was afterward dissolved, on the ground that he had bought only B's equity of redemption, as the sale was subject to the rights of C. Held, that this judgment of the court below was correct.—Allen v. Phelps, 4 Cal. 256.

[b] Execution sale takes precedence of an unrecorded mortgage.—Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47.

G. refused to receive the money or make the deed, and in execution of his contract conveyed the land to the wife of F. and to E. F., the wife of one of the plaintiffs, to whom, also, a tender of the money and demand for a deed was made by the intervener. Afterward E. F. conveyed to F. and his wife, and they executed a mortgage to the plaintiffs to secure the consideration for the conveyance. Held, in an action for foreclosure, that the intervener, upon paying into court, to be applied to the payment of the mortgage debt, the amount of the principal and interest due to the defendants for the purchase money paid under the contract of sale, was entitled to a cancellation of the mortgage.—Fish v. Fowlie, 58 Cal. 373.

§ 128. Bona Fide Purchasers.

[a] A title acquired at sheriff's sale by a bona fide purchaser without notice cannot be overthrown by subsequent proof that the judgment was obtained by fraud, or that the record which showed due service of the defendant was in fact false.—Reeve v. Kennedy, 43 Cal. 643.

[b] An innocent purchaser of property sold under execution, who, as assignee of a redemptioner's right to a sheriff's deed, obtains title under the execution sale without notice of any irregularity in the sale, will be protected therefrom, whether proceeded against by an action or by a motion to set the sale aside.—Hudepohl v. § 128½. —— Application of Doctrine of Caveat Emptor.

[a] The doctrine of caveat emptor applies only to sales made upon valid judgments, and is usually invoked with reference to sales upon execution issued against the general property of a judgment debtor. In these latter cases a defect of title is no ground for interference with the sale, or a refusal to pay the price bid. The purchaser takes upon himself all the risks as to the title, and bids with full knowledge that in any event he only acquires such interest as the debtor possessed at the date of the levy, or the lien of the judgment, and that he may possibly acquire nothing.—Boggs v. Fowler, 16 Cal. 559, 76 Am. Dec. 561.

§ 129. —— Notice.

[a] A person who purchases at sheriff's sale stock of a corporation, knowing that the certificates of such stock have been previously hypothecated, is chargeable with notice, and takes such stock subject to the claim of the pledgee.—Weston v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 6 Cal. 425.

[b] January 26, 1855, judgment against C. became a lien on his land. May 7, 1855, R. purchased the land at sheriff's sale made on an execution issued on the judgment, and received a certificate, and a duplicate was filed in office of the recorder. A judgment in favor of H. against C. became a lien on same land March 1, 1855. November 17, 1855, H. purchased at sheriff's sale made on an execution issued on his judgment the same land, and a certificate of sale was made to him, and a duplicate also filed. July 7, 1858, H. received and recorded a sheriff's deed. November 15, 1861, P., the assignee of R.'s certificate, received and recorded a sheriff's deed. H. had no actual notice of the sale to R. H. was in possession under his purchase, and November 6, 1861, P. sued to recover possession. Held, that H. had constructive notice of the prior sale, and that P. was entitled to recover.—Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293.

[c] The fact that a wife joins her husband in a deed of land is not of itself constructive notice to subsequent purchasers at a sheriff's sale of a prior unrecorded deed to the wife. Vassault v. Austin, 36 Cal. 691.

[d] A purchaser at a sheriff's sale is bound to inquire at his peril whether it sufficiently appears on the face of the record that the court had jurisdiction to render the judgment, and whether the execution was valid; but beyond that he is not bound to inquire, even though the judgment is afterward reversed for error.—Reeve v. Kennedy, 43 Cal. 643.

[e] Where a complaint was filed to set aside an execution sale on account of matters extrinsic to the judgment, and the purchaser was not a party to the judgment, and there was no averment that the purchaser had notice of such matters, he will be deemed a purchaser without notice.—Reeve v. Kennedy, 43 Cal. 643.

[f] If the plaintiff in a judgment bids in real estate sold on execution issued under it in the name of another person, but applies the amount due on the judgment in payment of the bid, and is himself the real purchaser, such other person will be deemed to have notice of all matters affecting the validity of the judgment and sale under it, which were within the knowledge of the plaintiff in the judgment.—Barber v. Reynolds, 44 Cal. 519.

[g] Purchaser of stock sold under execution without notice of a previous assignment by the plaintiff takes free from the assignee's lien where there was no transfer on the books of the corporation.—Naglee v. Pacific Wharf Co., 20 Cal. 529; Farmers' Nat. Gold Bank v. Wilson, 58 Cal. 600.

of defects in the judgment debtor's title. Blakeman v. Puget Sound Iron Co., 72 Cal. 321, 13 Pac. 872.

[i] Judgment creditor sought to set aside a sale on execution under a prior judgment, on ground that land, consisting of separate parcels, was sold together. Complaint showed that land had been redeemed by a prior judgment creditor, and by him sold. Held that, as the complaint failed to allege that purchaser had notice of the irregularity, a demurrer thereto was properly sustained. Hudepohl v. Liberty Hill Water etc. Co., 94 Cal. 588, 28 Am. St. Rep. 149, 29 Pac. 1025.

§ 130. —— Defects in Judgment.

[a] Where parties claim under a deed executed by the sheriff upon a sale on execution, they are chargeable with notice of the defects in the judgment upon which the execution issued.—Wells v. Stout, 9 Cal. 479.

[b] Where a purchaser for value at a sheriff's sale, who is not the judgment creditor, had no notice that service had not been made on the defendant, and the record showed that such service was made, his title cannot be defeated by such failure of service. Reeve v. Kennedy, 43 Cal. 643.

§ 131. —— Encumbrances.

[a] Execution purchaser without notice takes subject to prior mechanic's lien without regard to lis pendens.—Head v. Fordyce, 17 Cal. 149, 151.

[b] A grantee in a sheriff's deed sold on execution land on which there was an unrecorded mortgage, in order to bring himself within the act concerning conveyances (section 16) as purchaser in good faith and for a valuable consideration, must show that his conveyance was recorded before the mortgage was.—Thomas v. Vanlieu, 28 Cal. 616.

§ 132. —— Purchasers from Execution Purchasers.

[a] One who buys land, and takes an assignment of the judgment from the execution plaintiff, who holds only by a sheriff's certificate (not deed), is charged with notice of all that has been done and that can be done in the suit, and stands no better than the plaintiff.—Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667, 76 Am. Dec. 459.

§ 133. —— Judgment Creditor as Purchaser.

[a] Registration act only protects purchasers; creditors, as such, are not included within its provisions. But a judgment creditor, purchasing at his own sale, without notice, is a bona fide purchaser within the act.—Hunter v. Watson, 12 Cal. 363, 73 Am. Dec. 543.

[b] Neither the judgment plaintiff nor his assignee are bona fide purchasers without notice of judicial sale, so that they will be protected on reversal of the judgment.—Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667, 76 Am. Dec. 459.

[c] One who takes an assignment of an erroneous judgment, and procures an execution to be issued thereon, and purchases land under the execution, is not entitled to protection as a bona fide purchaser, and is liable for the damages caused by the sale.—Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 616.

[d] A judgment creditor of the husband, who purchases property standing in the husband's name at a sale under execution upon his judgment, although he pays no money therefor, but credits the amount of his bid on his judgment, stands in the same position as a third party making a purchase under the execution and paying a money consideration therefor, and is protected against a latent equity arising from a resulting trust in favor of the wife, of which the judgment creditor had no notice.—Riley v. Martinelli, 97 Cal. 575, 33 Am. St. Rep. 209, 32 Pac. 597.

§ 134. Effect of Defects or Irregularities.

[a] A sale under a void judgment passes no title. If the judgment is merely voidable the sale is good.—Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 562.

[b] The fact that an execution was issued on real property during the pendency of a preliminary injunction restraining the same does not render a sale thereunder invalid, and a deed to the purchaser conveys a valid title, though the same might have been set aside on proper proceedings at the instance of the judgment debtor.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256.

[c] A sale under an execution issued on a judgment which is voidable only, and which has not been reversed or set aside, is valid, and conveys a good title to the purchaser.—Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 428.

[d] The validity of a purchaser's title to property purchased at a sheriff's sale is unaffected by the failure of the officer to make a seizure of the land in the mode or by the steps prescribed by statute. His power to sell comes from the judgment and execution, and is not to be measured by his proceedings under the writ. If he sell the land by a description sufficiently certain, the title of the debtor, as against the parties to the writ, will pass, unless redeemed in time.—Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649, 99 Am. Dec. 441.

[e] The title of a purchaser at a sheriff's sale is not affected by the failure of the officer to show in his return that he levied before selling.—McFall v. Buckeye Grangers' Warehouse Assn., 122 Cal. 468, 68 Am. St. Rep. 47, 55 Pac. 253.

§ 135. Effect of Modification or Reversal.

[a] Where execution on a judgment for the recovery of money is not stayed by the undertaking on appeal, sale may be made on the execution, and the rights of purchasers are not affected by the subsequent reversal of judgment.—Farmer v. Rogers, 10 Cal. 335.

[b] A sale to an execution plaintiff will be rendered invalid by the reversal of the judgment, as respects the costs of the suit.—Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667, 76 Am. Dec. 459.

[c] After reversal of a judgment defendant may, by motion in an action in which the judgment is rendered, obtain an order requiring plaintiff to restore to him land that had been sold to plaintiff under the judgment.—Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667, 76 Am. Dec. 459.

[d] Mining claims were sold to a judgment creditor upon an execution issued on a judgment rendered against the owners for the full amount of such judgment. Afterward the judgment was reduced in amount by the court on an appeal taken therefrom by such owners. Held, that such sale was valid when made, but upon such modification of the judgment was liable to be set aside, on the application therefor by the owners, either by the appellate court or the court below upon the return of the case, or by action by the owners against the purchaser; but, except upon such application or action, the validity of the sale would remain unaffected by the modification of such judgment.—Johnson v. Lamping, 34 Cal. 293.

[e] Where a prior judgment creditor was not entitled to a lien on property sold to the whole amount of his judgment, and the judgment was subsequently modified, a subsequent judgment creditor must tender the amount for which the prior judgment was a lien before the expiration of the period of redemption, in order to preserve his rights in the property sold.—Tilley v. Bonney, 123 Cal. 118, 55 Pac. 798.

[f] The rule under which property bid in by the plaintiff at an execution sale under his judgment is restored to the defendant, if the judgment be afterward reversed, has no application to a case where the judgment is modified without causing loss to the appellant by a sale under the judgment; and the relief of causing restitution to be made of property improperly applied in satisfaction of a judgment should be sought in the court out of which the process issued, and not in the appellate court.—Hewitt v. Dean, 91 Cal. 617, 27 Am. St. Rep. 227, 28 Pac. 93.

[g] Where property was sold under a judgment, the amount of which was subsequently reduced on appeal, such modification does not affect the certificate of sale, nor require the judgment creditor to again sell the property under the judgment as modified.—Tilley v. Bonney, 123 Cal. 118, 57 Pac. 798.

[h] Where, in an action to determine the priority of certain judgments, one of them, which was never appealed from, was modified, a subsequent judgment creditor cannot have such judgment set aside, nor a certificate of sale of property thereunder vacated, on motion; especially where he did not offer to redeem, by payment of the amount for which the judgment was a lien, within the statutory period, and did not move until fifteen months after the modified judgment was entered.—Bonney v. Tilley, 123 Cal. 126, 55 Pac. 801.

[i] Under the direct provisions of Code of Civil Procedure, section 957, the measure of damages in an action to recover for property sold under an execution based on a judgment subsequently reversed is limited to the proceeds of the execution sale, less the expenses thereof.—Dowdell v. Carpy, 137 Cal. 333, 70 Pac. 167.

[j] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 957, providing that on the reversal of a judgment the appellant may have his action against the respondent, enforcing the judgment for the proceeds of the sale, less the expenses thereof, attorney's fees are not recoverable.—Dowdell v. Carpy, 137 Cal. 333, 70 Pac. 167.

[k] Where a judgment, under which personal property has been sold upon execution to the judgment creditor, who applied the price upon the judgment, has been reversed upon appeal, the original owner is entitled to restitution of the property, or its value, and may maintain an action therefor against the administratrix of the deceased purchaser. There can be no defense of bona fide purchase in such action, and no equity can be asserted by the defendant.—Black v. Vermont Marble Co., 137 Cal. 683, 70 Pac. 776.

[l] Defendant recovered judgment against intestate during his lifetime, levied on his property, and purchased part of it at the sale. The judgment was afterward reversed, and on a new trial plaintiff was nonsuited, the latter judgment being affirmed on appeal. Held, that the fact that the administratrix was present at the sale under the judgment and purchased part of the property did not estop her from asserting her right to restitution.—Black v. Vermont Marble Co., 137 Cal. 683, 70 Pac. 776.

[m] The rights of a defendant whose property has been sold on execution, where the judgment has subsequently been reversed, do not depend on Code of Civil Procedure, section 957, authorizing the court to make restitution on reversal so far as consistent with the protection of a purchaser at a sale under the judgment.—Di Nola v. Allison, 143 Cal. 106, 76 Pac. 976, 65 L. R. A. 419.

[n] Where a stranger to an action purchases defendant's property at execution sale under a judgment for plaintiff, his title so acquired will not be affected by a subsequent reversal of the judgment.—Di Nola v. Allison, 143 Cal. 106, 76 Pac. 976, 65 L. R. A. 419.

[o] Where plaintiff, under his judgment, purchases defendant's property at execution sale, his title so acquired will be defeated by a subsequent reversal of the judgment.—Di Nola v. Allison, 143 Cal. 106, 76 Pac. 976, 65 L. R. A. 419.

[p] Defendant, on securing a reversal of a judgment under which his property was sold to plaintiff and pending the appeal was sold by plaintiff to a purchaser, does not need an order of restitution from the court to enable him to assert his right against such purchaser to the property.—Di Nola v. Allison, 143 Cal. 106, 76 Pac. 976, 65 L. R. A. 419.

[q] Plaintiff claimed title to certain land under execution sale and sheriff's deed to his grantors. After such sale the judgment was reversed in the supreme court as far as it awarded counsel fees, but was in all other respects affirmed. Held, that, since no order for the restitution of the property sold was ever made, as provided by Code of Civil Procedure, section 957, plaintiff's title acquired by the execution sale was not affected by such reversal.—Purser v. Cady, 49 Pac. 180.

§ 136. Right to Possession.

[a] The purchaser of a mortgagor's interest in a mining claim at an execution sale has the right of possession, as against the mortgagee, until foreclosure.—Halsey v. Martin, 22 Cal. 645.

[b] A purchaser of real estate under execution is not entitled to possession, as against the judgment debtor or his successor in interest in possession, prior to the expiration of the period of redemption.—Mau, Sadler & Co. v. Kearney, 143 Cal. 506, 77 Pac. 411.

§ 137. —— Actions for Recovery.

[a] The plaintiff having purchased property at a sheriff's sale, he has a right to bring his suit for possession; and, if he discovers a fraud after the institution of his suit, he may so shape his action as to include it for the consideration of the court.—Truebody v. Jacobson, 2 Cal. 82.

[b] In an action by a purchaser at an execution sale to recover the premises from one who, previous to the sale, had conveyed them to the execution debtor by a warranty deed, the defendant is estopped from asserting any title thereto, and cannot avail himself of any defect in the description of the property in the sheriff's deed to the plaintiff.—Dodge v. Walley, 22 Cal. 224, 83 Am. Dec. 61.

[c] An execution defendant cannot defeat an action of ejectment, brought by the purchaser of real estate at an execution sale, for the recovery of such property, by setting up title.—McDonald v. Badger, 23 Cal. 393, 83 Am. Dec. 123.

[d] A sheriff's deed, transferring to a purchaser all the interest which the execution debtor has in land at the date of the levy, will not estop the latter from asserting a subsequently acquired right or interest in the land as against such deed.—Emerson v. Sansome, 41 Cal. 552.

[e] The fact that before the purchaser at a sheriff's sale, or his grantees, has received a deed from the sheriff, a person claiming title through a conveyance from the judgment debtor has entered into possession and made valuable improvements, without objection by the purchaser at the sheriff's sale, or his grantees, is not sufficient to constitute an equitable estoppel against the latter.—Leonard v. Flynn, 89 Cal. 535, 23 Am. St. Rep. 500, 26 Pac. 1097.

§ 138. —— —— Evidence.

[a] Purchaser rests for title upon judgment, execution, levy, sale and deed; and he need show no more to entitle him to whatever rights the defendant in execution had in the property sold.—Cloud v. El Dorado County, 12 Cal. 128, 73 Am. Dec. 526.

[b] A certificate of purchase of real estate at execution sale is incompetent to establish a right to the possession thereof.—McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 238.

[c] On an application for a writ of assistance to place a purchaser of land sold by a sheriff on execution under a judgment for taxes in possession, such judgment having been rendered by a justice of the peace, the applicant must produce in evidence the execution, and the judgment and proceedings on which the execution was issued.—People v. Doe, 31 Cal. 220.

[d] On an application for a writ of assistance to place a purchaser of land sold under execution in possession, the purchaser must produce the execution, the judgment and the record of proceedings on which the execution was issued.—People v. Doe, 31 Cal. 220.

[e] In an action for the possession of property bought at an execution sale, the purchaser, in order to establish in himself such title as the defendant in execution had, is only held to show a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, no matter if it be erroneous on its face, valid process issued to the sheriff thereon, and a sheriff's deed, made upon a sale thereunder; the proceedings not being open to collateral attack.—Mayo v. Foley, 40 Cal. 281.

[f] A party who relies on a sheriff's deed must offer in evidence not only the deed but the judgment and the execution, by virtue of which the property was sold.—Quirk v. Falk, 47 Cal. 453.

[g] In an action of ejectment on a sheriff's deed against the defendant in execution, the plaintiff is only required to show the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, the execution issued thereon, and the sheriff's deed.—Los Angeles County Bank v. Raynor, 61 Cal. 145.

[h] In order to recover possession of property purchased at execution sale, it is necessary to introduce in evidence the judgment as a basis of the execution.—Purser v. Cady (Cal.), 49 Pac. 180.

§ 139. Rents and Profits.

[a] Under Practice Act, section 236, providing that the purchaser at execution sale may receive from the tenant in possession the rents of the property sold, or the value of its use and occupation, a sheriff's sale of lands in possession of the debtor's tenant operates as an assignment of the lease, so far as the vendee's right to rent is concerned.—Reynolds v. Lathrop, 7 Cal. 43.

[b] Where the possessory claim of a settler on public land was sold out on execution, and he afterward entered the same land as a homestead, under act of Congress of May 20, 1862, held that, though the purchaser under the sheriff's deed was not entitled to the possession of the land, he was entitled to the rents and profits for so long as the settler occupied the land intermediate the sheriff's deed and the homestead entry.—Emerson v. Sansome, 41 Cal. 552.

See 17 Cyc. 1317, 1318; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1564-1572, §§ 815-817.

§ 140. —— During Period for Redemption.

[a] The purchaser at sheriff's sale of a "water ditch" is entitled to the rents and profits thereof from the date of the sale till the expiration of the time for redemption, as well from the judgment debtor in possession as from his tenant.—Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514, 73 Am. Dec. 600.

[b] Where a judgment debtor remains in possession of a "water ditch" after sheriff's sale, and collects the rents and profits during the six months following, he is a trustee of the fund for the purchaser at the sale, and if the fund be in danger of loss, a bill in equity to account will lie.—Harris v. Reynolds, 13 Cal. 514, 73 Am. Dec. 600.

[c] Judgment debtor who redeemed his property within twenty-one days after the sheriff's sale, but who had received from his tenants in possession rent between the day of sale and the redemption, is liable to the purchaser at the sale for the amount so received.—Kline v. Chase, 17 Cal. 596.

[d] In an action to recover land on title acquired by sheriff's deed, plaintiff cannot recover for rents and profits accruing during the six months allowed for redemption after the sale.—Henry v. Everts, 30 Cal. 425.

[e] During the period which elapses between the sale of land on execution and the expiration of the time for redemption the statute regards the purchaser as the owner in equity of the land, subject only to the right of redemption, and gives him the rents and profits, or the value of the use and occupation—in short, the entire beneficial interest in the property, except the actual possession.—Page v. Rogers, 31 Cal. 293.

[f] Under Practice Act, section 236, providing that the purchaser at sale on execution shall be entitled to receive from the tenant in possession the rents of the property sold or the value of the use and occupation thereof from the time of the sale until redemption, the occupation of the premises from the time of the sale to the execution of the sheriff's deed renders the occupant prima facie the tenant of the purchaser and liable to him for the rent.—Webster v. Cook, 38 Cal. 423.

[g] A purchaser of real estate under execution is not entitled to the appointment of a receiver to take possession, harvest and sell the crops growing on the land prior to the expiration of the period of redemption.—Mau, Sadler & Co. v. Kearney, 143 Cal. 506, 77 Pac. 411.

§ 141. —— Actions.

[a] A purchaser of land at sheriff's sale can maintain an action for rent against the tenant in possession under the judgment debtor before the expiration of the six months allowed for redemption, and as often as the rent becomes due under the terms of the lease existing when he purchased.—Reynolds v. Lathrop, 7 Cal. 43.

[b] The damages which a plaintiff can recover in an action of ejectment for the use and occupation of the premises are such as arise subsequent to the accruing of his right of possession; and, when his right depends upon a sheriff's deed, he cannot recover, in this form of action, for the use and occupation for the six months intervening the sale and the execution of the deed.—Clark v. Boyreau, 14 Cal. 634.

[c] In an action by a purchaser at sheriff's sale to recover rents and profits during the time allowed for redemption, evidence offered by plaintiff to prove title is irrelevant.—Henry v. Everts, 30 Cal. 425.

[d] Where a purchaser of land under execution brought suit against the tenant in possession for rents accruing during the period allowed for redemption, a complaint alleging that the money agreed to be paid by the tenant to the defendant in the execution as rent for the premises was one hundred and fifty dollars per month, payable monthly, and that payment had been demanded by the purchaser and refused, constitutes a sufficient allegation that the rent is due to the purchaser, who was authorized to recover the same under Practice Act, section 236, entitling the purchaser to rents and profits of lands sold under execution during the period of redemption.—Webster v. Cook, 38 Cal. 423.

§ 142. Rights and Remedies on Avoidance of Sale or Failure of Title.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 708, provides that if the purchaser of property at sheriff's sale fail to recover possession "because the property sold was not subject to execution and sale," the court must, after notice, and on motion of such purchaser, revive the original judgment in his name for the amount paid. A judgment against a party and the sureties on his supersedeas bond was paid partly in cash and partly by execution against the principal debtor, and was satisfied of record. Said debtor's wife then sued and recovered from the purchaser the property sold, as being hers, and not her husband's, at the time of the levy and sale. Held, that the purchaser was entitled to relief under said statute against both principal and sureties.—Hitchcock v. Caruthers, 100 Cal. 100, 34 Pac. 627.

[b] A sale made by the sheriff on an order of the court, and under a void execution, is extremely irregular, and is void "in consequence of irregularity in the proceedings concerning the sale," within the meaning of section 708 of the Code of Civil Procedure, providing for a revival of the judgment in favor of the purchaser or his successor in interest, if he fails to recover possession in consequence of such irregularity.—Merguire v. O'Donnell, 139 Cal. 6, 96 Am. St. Rep. 91, 72 Pac. 337.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 708, provides that, if a purchaser at sheriff's sale "fail to recover possession" in consequence of an irregularity in the sale, the court must revive the original judgment for his benefit. Section 336 limits actions on judgments to five years, and section 343 provides that an action for relief not before provided for must be commenced within four years after the cause of action accrues. Held that, as a "failure to recover possession" was not complete until the determination adversely to the purchaser of the execution debtor's suit to quiet title, proceedings under section 708 within four years from that time were not barred, though more than five years had elapsed since the judgment became final, section 336 being inapplicable.—Merguire v. O'Donnell, 139 Cal. 6, 96 Am. St. Rep. 91, 72 Pac. 337.

§ 143. Liabilities of Purchasers.

[a] In an action of ejectment, the defendants justified under a judgment of a justice's court, an execution, and a sale of the demanded premises thereunder by a constable to them. The constable's deed did not refer to the judgment, nor name the plaintiff in this suit as one of the defendants against whom the execution referred to in the deed was issued; and it showed upon its face that the interest of this plaintiff in the premises was not attempted to be sold and conveyed. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict and judgment.—Donahue v. McNulty, 24 Cal. 411, 85 Am. Dec. 78.

For Authorities From Other States:

§ 144. Purchasers from Execution Purchasers.

[a] An assignee of a judgment and of the sheriff's certificate of a sale thereunder stands in the same position as his assignor, the plaintiff, after the judgment has been reversed, and the sale will be set aside, and the property restored to the defendant, where no loss or injury will be done the assignee.—Reynolds v. Harris, 14 Cal. 667, 76 Am. Dec. 459.

[b] An assignee of a sheriff's certificate of sale of land, who has taken the assignment only as security against liability for debts of the judgment debtor, and agreed to cancel the same and discharge the judgment upon payment of those debts, has only a lien on the land which is satisfied by payment of the debts; and neither he nor his assignee with notice can subsequently acquire any title to the land by obtaining the sheriff's deed.—Baber v. McLellan, 30 Cal. 135.

[c] An assignee of the certificate of sale under execution, when the purchaser was plaintiff in execution, does not acquire any interest in the judgment debt or security therefor, but only the right to compel the issuance of a deed on the expiration of the period of redemption.—Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 390.

[d] One who takes a conveyance, before expiration of the time for redemption, from the purchaser at a sale under execution, and afterward receives a deed from the sheriff, acquires a perfect title.—Leonard v. Flynn, 89 Cal. 535, 23 Am. St. Rep. 500, 26 Pac. 1097.

[e] Property was sold under execution, and a judgment lienor redeemed, and demanded a sheriff's deed. A junior judgment lienor redeemed afterward, but before the deed was demanded, and paid the sheriff an amount sufficient to redeem from the prior judgment. Held that, as the prior lienor acquired the title of the purchaser under the execution sale, he had such an interest beyond the right of redemption as he was entitled to protect by showing that the subsequent judgment, though regular on its face, was void.—Bennett v. Wilson, 122 Cal. 509, 68 Am. St. Rep. 61, 55 Pac. 390.

[f] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1049, providing that an action is deemed to be pending from the time of its commencement until its final determination on appeal, where plaintiff obtained a judgment under which he sold defendant's land, and purchased it himself, on the execution sale, but before the execution of the sheriff's deed defendant appealed from the judgment, though without obtaining a supersedeas, a subsequent purchaser of the property from plaintiff, pending the appeal, was charged with notice that the judgment and plaintiff's title thereunder were disputed by the defendant, and would be defeated by a reversal, and on a reversal his title derived from plaintiff was also defeated.—Di Nola v. Allison, 143 Cal. 106, 76 Pac. 976, 65 L. R. A. 419.

§ 145. Right to Redeem.

[a] The grantee of a judgment debtor, whose land has been sold under execution, is not a "redemptioner" in the sense in which that word is used in section 705 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and, in order to redeem from the execution sale, need not comply with the conditions imposed by that section on "redemptioners." Such grantee is a "successor in interest" of the judgment debtor, as that phrase is used in section 701 of that code, and is entitled to redeem in the same manner as the judgment debtor.—Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552, 54 Am. St. Rep. 369, 45 Pac. 843.

[b] The rule that a judgment debtor may confess judgment before expiration of the time for redemption for the purpose of making the judgment creditor a redemptioner is inapplicable to judgments void for fraud as against a prior redemptioner.—Bennett v. Wilson, 122 Cal. 509, 68 Am. St. Rep. 61, 55 Pac. 390.

[c] Where a judgment creditor sued to have a prior judgment declared subsequent to his, but did not ask to have a certificate of sale under such judgment set aside, and did not tender to such judgment creditor the amount for which the judgment was ultimately held to be a prior lien, he cannot acquire a right to the property sold thereunder by tendering such amount after the redemption period has expired.—Tilley v. Bonney, 123 Cal. 118, 55 Pac. 798.

§ 146. Statutory Provisions.

[a] Law allowing time for redemption upon sale made under a judgment rendered before its passage does not impair obligation of a contract.—Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 428.

[b] Statutory provisions for redemption existing at time of sale form part of contract of sale.—Thresher v. Atchison, 117 Cal. 75, 59 Am. St. Rep. 159, 48 Pac. 1020.

§ 147. —— Retroactive Operation of Redemption Laws.

[a] Statute allowing redemption of lands sold under execution is inoperative as to those cases where the debt upon which judgment and execution was obtained was contracted before the passage of the act.—Seale v. Mitchell, 5 Cal. 401.

[b] A statute decreasing the rate of interest to be paid to redeem land sold on execution is inoperative on a sale made prior to the passage of the act.—Thresher v. Atchison, 117 Cal. 73, 59 Am. St. Rep. 159, 48 Pac. 1020.

[c] Amendment of February 26, 1897 (Stats. 1897, p. 41, c. 44), to Code of Civil Procedure, section 702, extending period of redemption from sales of land on execution held not applicable to judgments existing at time of its passage.—Welsh v. Cross, 146 Cal. 621, 81 Pac. 229.

§ 148. Persons Entitled to Redeem.

[a] Purchaser at execution sale, before conveyance to him, has right to redeem the property sold in the enforcement of a prior lien; after conveyance to him he has the same right as successor in interest to the debtor or mortgagor.—McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365.

[b] A defendant in execution can redeem from an execution sale, notwithstanding he has conveyed to another the property sold under execution.—Yoakum v. Bower, 51 Cal. 539.

[c] The right of a judgment debtor to redeem land sold under the judgment is not affected by the fact that he did not have title to the land, nor that he had conveyed part of it after the judgment was entered.—Southern California Lumber Co. v. McDowell, 105 Cal. 99, 38 Pac. 627.

[d] A purchaser of land at sheriff's sale or commissioner's sale acquires at least a qualified title, sufficient to entitle him to redeem from another sale, but this does not necessarily devest the judgment creditor of his right to redeem. Rehearing, 138 Cal. 390, 71 Pac. 454, denied.—Pollard v. Harlow, 138 Cal. 390, 71 Pac. 648.

§ 149. —— Creditors.

[a] A creditor of the motgagor obtaining a judgment after sale under the decree of foreclosure, but before the execution of the conveyance thereunder, acquires a lien on the estate entitling him to redeem.—McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365, 70 Am. Dec. 655.

[b] Judgment creditor is not a redemptioner, unless his judgment is a valid lien.—Bagley v. Ward, 27 Cal. 371.

§ 150. —— Assignees.

[a] One who, after land is sold under judgment, receives from the judgment debtor a conveyance of all his interest in the land, "for the purpose of having the certificate of redemption of said property from said sale issued in his name," is a "successor in interest," within the Code of Civil Procedure, section 701, allowing redemption by such successor, though after the entry of the judgment, and before the sale, the judgment debtor had conveyed part of the land to another person, and had never had title to the rest of the land.—Southern California Lumber Co. v. McDowell, 105 Cal. 99, 38 Pac. 627.

§ 151. —— Redemption by Person not Entitled to Redeem.

[a] If purchaser at sheriff's sale treats one not entitled to redeem as redemptioner, recovers from him the redemption money, and gives a certificate of redemption, the most that such party so claiming to redeem can acquire by the transaction is the interest of the purchaser as purchaser. He acquires no title to the judgment under which the sale took place.—Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 390.

§ 152. —— Waiver.

[a] Debtor whose land has been sold on execution, and who, before delivery of sheriff's deed, deposits with the sheriff money to redeem the land, to withdraw the deposit after the sheriff has made delivery of the deed, ratifies the delivery, and waives any right the debtor might otherwise have had to enforce his redemption.—Wilkins v. Willson, 51 Cal. 212.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1329; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1620, 1621, § 845.

§ 153. Time of Redemption.

[a] Redemptioner may exercise his right to redeem land sold on execution, if no redemption has been made by the judgment debtor, at any time during the six months after the sale; and if, in sixty days thereafter, there is no redemption from him, the right to redeem from him is gone, even as to the judgment debtor, and he is entitled to a sheriff's deed.—Boyle v. Dalton, 44 Cal. 332.

[b] Upon a sale of lands upon execution, where no credit is agreed for, if the purchaser does not pay the price until (in this case) five months after the sale, and receives a deed at the expiration of six months after the sale, the deed vests in him the legal title; but the courts will recognize the former owner as being equitably entitled to redeem at any time during six months from the time of payment of the price.—Maina v. Elliott, 51 Cal. 8.

ute, held, that the party redeeming (who was an assignee of the judgment debtor) was bound to pay the whole of the plaintiff's judgment, and not merely his bid with interest, and eighteen per cent; and that the lien of the judgment continued till the balance was paid.—Vandyke v. Herman, 3 Cal. 295.

[b] Under Practice Act, section 231, providing that a redemptioner may redeem from a purchaser by paying eighteen per cent thereon in addition to the bid, the eighteen per cent covers all claims in the nature of interest on that amount.—McMillan v. Vischer, 14 Cal. 232.

[c] A judgment debtor may redeem by paying the purchaser the amount of his purchase, with twelve per cent thereon, together with the amount of taxes, etc., paid by the judgment creditor. He need not pay other liens which the purchaser may have on the property.—Sharp v. Miller, 47 Cal. 82.

[d] The rule, that when real estate is sold on execution to the judgment creditor, for a sum less than the whole amount of judgment, the judgment creditor continues to have a lien for the unsatisfied portion of the judgment, and that neither the judgment debtor nor a redemptioner having a subsequent lien could redeem without paying the judgment, has been changed by the Code of Civil Procedure.—Simpson v. Castle, 52 Cal. 644.

[e] Debtor may redeem lands sold under execution without paying prior judgment in favor of firm of which purchaser is member. Campbell v. Oaks, 68 Cal. 225, 9 Pac. 77.

[f] A husband contracted to buy land, and thereafter the wife tendered the amount due, and then sued to compel a conveyance to her. In the meantime an intervener had bought the land under an execution in his favor against the husband, and received a certificate of sale. Held, that the intervener could not complain of a decree requiring the wife to deposit with the clerk the amount of such execution, costs, interest, etc., to be paid to him upon his discharging his certificate, as a condition precedent to a conveyance to her by defendant.—Foulke v. De Witt, 52 Pac. 476.

§ 156. Tender and Payment.

[a] Where a party purchased property at sheriff's sale, and, on an attempt by the owner to redeem from him, he objects that the amount tendered for redemption is not enough, because not including certain taxes he has paid on the property, held, that he must show that the taxes were legally assessed and paid, and were a charge on the property before or at the time of the redemption; and the tax collector's receipts are not sufficient proof.—People ex rel. Seale v. Doane, 17 Cal. 476.

[b] The sheriff, as special agent of the purchaser of land under execution, is authorized to receive on behalf of such purchaser as redemption money whatever is regarded as current money at the time and place, though not strictly a legal tender, unless the judgment under which the sale was made was rendered payable in a particular kind of money.—People v. Mayhew, 26 Cal. 655.

[c] If defendant paid in counterfeit money under an innocent mistake a court of equity will relieve him from the consequences of his mistake, and allow him to perfect the redemption on payment of good money and interest.—Pownall v. Hall, 45 Cal. 187.

[d] While it is immaterial whence the money comes with which a redemption from an execution sale is offered to be made, it must be tendered by a lawful redemptioner.—Bennett v. Wilson, 122 Cal. 509, 68 Am. St. Rep. 61, 55 Pac. 390.

[e] Facts held not to show a sufficient tender by one seeking to redeem from a mortgage foreclosure and redemption by a subsequent mortgagee. (Code Civ. Proc., secs. 701, 703.)—Youd v. German Savings etc. Soc. (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 991.

§ 157. ——Overpayment.

[a] Where a judgment creditor redeems from a prior sale under execution, subsequent suits by attachment and injunction to obtain and secure the amounts alleged to be overpaid in the redemption will not affect the validity of the redemption.—McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365, 70 Am. Dec. 655.

[b] Where a redemptioner, under the statute, pays to the sheriff an excess of money, under protest as to the excess, the payment is not compulsory.—McMillan v. Vischer, 14 Cal. 232.

[c] Where a redemptioner pays the sheriff an excess of money under protest as to the excess, the sheriff is the bailee of the redemptioner as to the excess, who may recover it back on demand, the money not having been paid over to the redemptionee. McMillan v. Vischer, 14 Cal. 232.

§ 158. Proceedings on Redemption.

[a] Certificate of sheriff of purchase of property as that of defendant in execution is not sufficient to entitle the holder to redeem as such successor, at least not until the expiration of the six months.—Haskell v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 54.

[b] If party claim sheriff's deed as having redeemed property, as successor in interest of the judgment debtor, his offer to redeem must have been made in that character.—Haskell v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 54.

See 17 Cyc. 1333; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1644-1649, §§ 865-873.

§ 159. —— Production of Papers.

[a] To entitle a judgment creditor having a lien to redeem he must serve upon the officer a copy of the docket of the judgment. A copy of the judgment is not sufficient.—Haskell v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 54.

[b] The statute gives certain creditors and others the right to redeem the debtor's property from execution sales only upon the production and tender of certain specified proofs of certain requisite facts. The due production of those particular proofs is as much a prerequisite to his right as the existence of the facts to be proved.—Haskell v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 54.

[c] A purchaser at execution sale, as between himself and redemptioner, may waive the production of the papers required by statute as necessary to entitle one to redeem, and such waiver is good as between himself and the parties thereto; and a creditor, not claiming the right to redeem before selling the property under a subsequent execution, cannot object to the waiver nor to the redemption because such papers were not produced.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256.

[d] A person claiming the right to redeem from a sheriff's sale as a judgment creditor must produce for the sheriff a copy of the docket of the judgment, and an attempted redemption is ineffectual without such production, and the sheriff's deed is void.—Wilcoxson v. Miller, 49 Cal. 193.

§ 160. —— Certificate of Redemption.

[a] In order to render effectual a redemption of real estate sold under execution, the issuance by the sheriff of a certificate of redemption is not necessary.—Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552, 54 Am. St. Rep. 369, 45 Pac. 843.

§ 161. Redemption from Prior Redeeming Creditor.

[a] Where plaintiffs, owners of certain judgments and decrees, had both the equitable and statutory right to redeem property sold, and exercised their right under the statute by redeeming from D., who had purchased under his own foreclosure, and then D., as asisgnee of other judgments, redeemed from plaintiffs; held, that plaintiffs, did not lose their equitable right of redemption, from the fact that they also asserted their statutory right, the subsequent redemption by D. leaving their claims unsatisfied.—Tuolumne Redemption Co. v. Sedgwick, 15 Cal. 515.

[b] Since the passage of act of March 28, 1859, a creditor of the execution debtor, redeeming from another creditor who has redeemed from a sale on execution, is not entitled to claim the payment of judgments which have been assigned to him subsequently to the passage of the act, although rendered before its passage.—Tuolumne Redemption Co. v. Sedgwick, 15 Cal. 515.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 704, authorizing the sheriff to receive money paid by a subsequent redemptioner from an execution sale for a prior redemptioner, the sheriff is not such an agent in receiving the money as will bind the prior redemptioner to accept it.—Bennett v. Wilson, 122 Cal. 509, 68 Am. St. Rep. 61, 55 Pac. 390.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1650-1652, §§ 874-877.

§ 162. Actions to Redeem.

[a] Where property has been redeemed from a purchaser under execution sale, such purchaser is not a necessary party to a suit by his redemptioner to enforce the right of redemption against a subsequent redemptioner. Bennett v. Wilson, 122 Cal. 509, 68 Am. St. Rep. 61, 55 Pac. 390.

[b] A complaint to establish a right of redemption over another redemptioner by showing that the judgment under which the latter redeemed is void need not allege that there was a defense to such judgment on the merits.—Bennett v. Wilson, 122 Cal. 509, 68 Am. St. Rep. 61, 55 Pac. 390.

See 17 Cyc. 1335-1337; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1655-1663, §§ 883-889.

§ 163. Operation and Effect.

[a] At a constable's sale, March 22, 1884, one who volunteered his assistance to the justice to write out the certificate of sale inserted his own name as purchaser, and the certificate was signed by the constable and recorded. Afterward the mistake was discovered, and a new certificate was issued to the real purchaser, which recited the sale as taking place July 12th, and which was filed for record July 19th, and the constable executed a deed to the assignee of this certificate. Held, that no title passed to the assignee as against the persons having the right to redeem from the sale, who in the meantime, without notice of the second certificate, had paid the necessary amount, and received a certificate of redemption from the holder of the first certificate.—Pekin Min. etc. Co. v. Kennedy, 81 Cal. 356, 22 Pac. 679.

demption money is insufficient, if accepted as sufficient.—Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 396.

[b] Redemptioner, by paying redemption money, becomes an equitable assignee of the certificate of sale.—Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 396.

[c] One redeeming from sale under execution, when the purchaser was the plaintiff in execution, does not acquire any interest in the judgment debt or security therefor, but only the right to compel the issuance of a deed on the expiration of the period of redemption.—Abadie v. Lobero, 36 Cal. 390.

[d] Redemption from sheriff's sale is transfer of certificate of sale; and if a redemption is made to the satisfaction of the purchaser, and the person redeeming was entitled to redeem, the sheriff's deed to the redemptioner passes the same title that it would have passed to the purchaser if executed to him without redemption, even if the statutory requirements were waived by the purchaser, and he received less than he was entitled to.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256-n.

§ 165. Necessity and Nature of Conveyance, in General.

[a] The title to real estate, sold at sheriff's sale does not pass until the execution and delivery of the sheriff's deed.—Anthony v. Wessel, 9 Cal. 103.

[b] Until consummation of sale of real property upon execution is made by conveyance from sheriff the estate remains in the judgment debtor. Until then the purchaser possesses only a right to an estate which may afterward be perfected by conveyance. Cummings v. Coe, 10 Cal. 529.

[c] Purchaser does not, by his purchase, acquire title to the land. The title passes by the execution and delivery of the sheriff's deed. The purchaser, prior to the execution of the sheriff's deed, holds merely a lien upon the land.—People ex rel. Mulford v. Mayhew, 26 Cal. 655.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1340; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1674-1676, §§ 901, 902.

§ 166. Authority to Make Conveyance.

[a] Authority to sell land, conferred by writ in sheriff's hands, carries with it authority to execute all instruments required by law to complete sale, viz., a certificate, and, in case of no redemption, a conveyance, to the purchaser.—People v. Boring, 8 Cal. 406, 68 Am. Dec. 331.

[b] Where ex-sheriff, who made sale of land under a writ partially executed by him while in office, dies before executing a conveyance, the law having failed to provide for the completion of the execution in such a case, the only remedy left to the purchaser is to apply to the court for the appointment of a commissioner or master to execute the conveyance.—People v. Boring, 8 Cal. 406, 68 Am. Dec. 331.

[c] The officer who sells the land under execution is the proper officer to give the deed, even if his office subsequently expires, and not his successor.—Anthony v. Wessel, 9 Cal. 103.

[d] A deed by one professing to be a deputy of a sheriff whose term had expired is worthless, unless due authority to the deputy from some one in office be clearly shown.—Cloud v. El Dorado County, 12 Cal. 128, 73 Am. Dec. 526.

[e] There is nothing in the act of 1858 which will prevent a deputy sheriff, after the expiration of his principal's term of office, and in the absence of the latter from the state, from executing a deed to the purchaser at a judicial sale made by the sheriff while in office.—Mills v. Tukey, 22 Cal. 373, 83 Am. Dec. 74.

[f] In an action based on a sheriff's deed, the fact that the deed was executed after the sheriff's authority had terminated is a valid defense.—Byers v. Neal, 43 Cal. 210.

[a] A sheriff's deed, upon judicial sale, executed before expiration of statutory period of redemption, is absolutely void and not merely voidable.—Gross v. Fowler, 21 Cal. 392; Bernal v. Gleim, 33 Cal. 668; Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 428; Hall v. Yoell, 45 Cal. 584.

§ 168. —— Restraining Making or Delivery.

[a] When an execution sale is made, and the delivery of a deed to the purchaser is threatened, an injunction may be properly granted.—Goldstein v. Kelly, 51 Cal. 301.

[b] In an action to enjoin a sheriff from executing a deed of real property alleged to belong to plaintiff, and to have been sold as the property of another person under an execution against him, the omission to aver in the complaint the existence of a judgment, under which such execution issued, is a fatal defect.—Schuyler v. Broughton, 65 Cal. 252, 3 Pac. 870.

§ 169. Right to Conveyance.

[a] To an application by an execution purchaser for a deed from the sheriff, it is no answer to say that by other conveyances the purchaser has a perfect title, and therefore does not need the deed.—People v. Irwin, 14 Cal. 428.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 170. —— Persons Entitled.

[a] Sheriff's deed to one who has assigned sheriff's certificate is void as to assignee.—Ward v. Dougherty, 75 Cal. 245, 17 Pac. 1.

[b] Quitclaim by purchaser before sheriff's deed is given is equivalent to assignment of sheriff's certificate.—Ward v. Dougherty, 75 Cal. 245, 17 Pac. 1.

§ 171. —— Payment of Purchase Price.

[a] Purchaser at a sheriff's sale acquires no right whatever against the sheriff for property sold unless, at the time of the sale, he pays down in cash the whole of the purchase money.—People v. Hays, 5 Cal. 66.

§ 172. Form and Contents.

[a] It is duty of sheriff, under an execution, to levy upon and sell the property and all the right, title, and interest of the debtor therein; and where a deed made by him in pursuance of such sale expressly conveys all of the debtor's right, title, and interest, the purchaser's title to the same will not be prejudiced by the fact that in attempting to describe the nature of the interest the officer, through ignorance or mistake, failed to set it forth fully and correctly.—Dodge v. Walley, 22 Cal. 224.

[b] The officer who makes a sale of land by virtue of an execution, and executes to the purchaser a deed therefor, must, in his deed, make recitals of the recovery of the judgment, the names of the judgment creditor or creditors, and of the judgment debtor or debtors, and of the issuing of an execution on the judgment, and of the levy and sale thereunder. The recital of such facts is essential to show the officer's authority and the transmission of the debtor's title in the property to the purchaser.—Donahue v. McNulty, 24 Cal. 411.

[c] Where a judgment was rendered against several persons, and an execution issued upon it against all the judgment debtors, and the constable levied upon and sold the land of one of the judgment debtors, but in making a deed to the purchaser did not insert the name of the one whose land had been sold as a judgment debtor or recite that his land had been sold, held that the deed was not evidence of title in the purchaser as against the owner of the land.—Donahue v. McNulty, 24 Cal. 411.

[d] A constable's deed of land sold under execution is void if it does not recite the judgment upon which the execution issued.—Wiseman v. McNulty, 25 Cal. 230.

[e] A sheriff's deed need not recite the judgment and execution under which he acted. It is sufficient if it appear in the deed that the sale was made under the authority of a judgment and execution; that is, if the deed recites sufficient to show the authority of the sheriff to sell.—Clark v. Sawyer, 48 Cal. 133.

[f] The statute requiring recitals in a sheriff's deed was not intended to make deeds void which do not contain them, but was only intended to make the recitals evidence of the facts recited; and, when such recitals are full, they dispense with the necessity of introducing the judgment and execution in evidence. So far as such a statute requires recitals beyond what are necessary to show the authority of the officer to sell, it is merely directory.—Clark v. Sawyer, 48 Cal. 133.

[g] It may be regarded as settled in this state that misrecital of execution in an officer's deed will not affect the validity of the deed if the officer had authority to sell. Wilson v. Madison, 55 Cal. 5.

§ 175. Construction and Operation.

[a] A sheriff's deed, which described the property sold as all the right, title, and interest of the judgment debtor in certain described property, "being a leasehold unexpired," conveys all the interest of the judgment debtor, although he had a fee for such premises.—Dodge v. Walley, 22 Cal. 224, 83 Am. Dec. 61.

[b] Sheriff's sale of land may be proved by sheriff's recital of the sale in his deed given to the purchaser, even if the return on the back of the execution does not recite a sale. The sheriff's sale may also be proved by his recital made on the back of the execution or in the certificate of purchase.—Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280.

[c] A sheriff's deed, reciting that it was made by virtue of an execution issued on judgment wherein A was plaintiff and B was defendant, is admissible in evidence as a proof of transmission of title.—Montgomery v. Robinson, 49 Cal. 258.

§ 176. —— Conclusiveness of Recitals.

[a] The officer executing a deed for property sold under execution, and those who claim under the deed, are estopped from denying the truth of the matters recited therein; but the same are not evidence as against strangers or those claiming adversely to the deed.—Donahue v. McNulty, 24 Cal. 411.

[b] It is the official duty of a sheriff to make a recital in his deed of the judgment, the names of judgment debtor and creditor, the execution, and the levy and sale thereunder; and such recitals, when made, are entitled to the same weight as evidence as the return on the execution.—Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280.

[c] The recitals in a sheriff's deed of land sold on execution are not admissible to prove his power to sell; but, after production of the judgment and execution, such recitals are entitled to the same effect as instruments of evidence as the official return on execution, and are evidence of his acts under the power.—Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280.

[d] A sheriff's deed executed to a purchaser at a sale of land under execution is not conclusive evidence of his power to sell, but such power must be proved in an action based on a title acquired at the sale by the judgment in execution.—People v. Doe, 31 Cal. 220.

[e] A sheriff's deed is not admissible in evidence as proof of the purchaser's title to property sold under execution, without first introducing the judgment which was the foundation of the sheriff's authority to sell.—Vassault v. Austin, 32 Cal. 597.

[f] A recital in a sheriff's deed, given to the execution purchaser, "that there had been no redemption from the sale," is not conclusive upon a grantee of the judgment debtor, who had made a valid redemption. The grantee may attack such deed in an action of ejectment, without resorting to equity to have it set aside.—Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552, 54 Am. St. Rep. 369, 45 Pac. 843.

§ 177. —— Relation Back.

[a] A sheriff's deed, executed in pursuance of a judgment obtained in an attachment suit, takes effect by relation as of the date at which the attachment was levied, and overreaches any deed made subsequent to such date.—Sharp v. Baird, 43 Cal. 577.

[b] Sheriff's deed, executed in pursuance of an execution sale, under a judgment rendered in an attachment suit, takes effect from the levy of the attachment. The attachment lien, though merged in the judgment, still exists, so as to confer a priority in the lien of the judgment.—Porter v. Pico, 55 Cal. 165.

[c] A sheriff's deed, executed in pursuance of an execution sale under a judgment in an attachment suit, takes effect from the date of the attachment if the levy was such as to create a lien.—Riley v. Nance, 97 Cal. 203, 31 Pac. 1126, 32 Pac. 315.

[d] Sheriff's deed takes effect by relation from date of levy.—Woodward v. Brown, 119 Cal. 306, 63 Am. St. Rep. 108, 51 Pac. 2.

[e] Where land is sold under execution in an attachment suit, the sheriff's deed takes effect as of the date of the levy of the attachment, and a conveyance by the attachment debtor after the attachment was levied, and before judgment, vests no title in his grantee.—Robinson v. Thornton, 31 Pac. 936.

§ 178. Disposition in General.

[a] Payment by sheriff to an execution creditor cannot be defeated by showing that money paid was received from another sale.—Baum v. Grigsby, 21 Cal. 172, 81 Am. Dec. 153.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1351; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1729-1738, §§ 949-955.

§ 179. Statutory Provisions.

[a] The general statute defines the duties of the sheriff in respect to final process. It declares "that the sheriff shall execute the writ (of fieri facias) by levying, etc., and paying to the plaintiff or his attorney so much of the proceeds as will satisfy the judgment, etc., and if there be any excess, he shall return the same to the judgment debtor." These acts are to be construed in pari materia.—Wilson v. Broder, 10 Cal. 486.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 21 Cent. Dig., col. 1738, § 956.

§ 180. Preferred Claims.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1206, provides that a claim for wages accruing against a judgment debtor within sixty days preceding levy of execution shall be a preferred claim, provided notice is given to the judgment creditor and debtor by the claimant before execution sale, and it is undisputed, and, if disputed, is established by an action brought within ten days. Held, that a judgment creditor, by answering in an action to enforce a claim disputed by him, waived notice.—Taylor v. Hill, 115 Cal. 143, 44 Pac. 336.

[b] A complaint in an action to compel a sheriff to apply the proceeds of a sale of property under execution to the payment of claims for wages against the judgment debtor, which fails to allege that notice of the claims in suit was given to the defendants in the suit in which the property was attached and sold under execution, is insufficient, and a demurrer thereto should be sustained.—Taylor v. Hill, 115 Cal. 143, 44 Pac. 336, 46 Pac. 922.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1354-1357; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1744-1765, §§ 960-965.

§ 181. Distribution Among Different Executions or Attachments.

[a] Sheriff is liable to creditor whose execution is first levied, for so much of proceeds of sale as will satisfy judgment.—Johnson v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 196.

[b] When a sheriff receives money on execution sale of property levied on by virtue of attachments it is his duty to apply the money in the order of the attachments. The sheriff has no right to go back of the process and raise the question as to the validity of the attachments.—McComb v. Reed, 28 Cal. 281, 87 Am. Dec. 115.

[c] Proceeds of real estate collected under several executions must be applied first to oldest existing judgment lien.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 136, 99 Am. Dec. 256-n.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1357-1359; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1765-1779, §§ 966-973.

§ 182. Right to Surplus.

[a] Judgment debtor or his assignee may recover overpayment by sheriff to judgment creditor.—Martin v. Quinn, 37 Cal. 55.

[b] Where at a judicial sale property brings more than the amount of the attachment, it is the duty of the sheriff to pay the excess, or see that it is paid, to the defendant. If he fails to do this, he and the sureties upon his official bond are liable in an action for such excess at the suit of the defendant.—Harvey v. Foster, 64 Cal. 296, 30 Pac. 849.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1359, 1360; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1779-1786, §§ 974-980.

§ 183. Officer Who must Make.

[a] The return to an execution by an under-sheriff is void unless done in the name and by the authority of the sheriff.—Joyce v. Joyce, 5 Cal. 449.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1367; 21 Cent. Dig., col. 1816, § 1000.

§ 184. Form and Requisites.

[a] Return is admissible to show a sale, though it shows no levy.—Blood v. Light, 38 Cal. 649, 99 Am. Dec. 441.

[b] Political Code, section 4178, provides that the return of a sheriff upon process is prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated. A sheriff released property of defendant seized on attachment, and upon the issue of execution made a return showing that he demanded payment of the execution of defendant, and was informed by the officers of the latter that they had no property of defendant in their possession. Held, that the return sufficiently showed that defendant's property released on the bond was not delivered to the sheriff pursuant to its provisions.—Hammond v. Starr, 79 Cal. 556, 21 Pac. 971.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1366-1373; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1822-1835, §§ 1006-1014.

§ 185. —— Description of Property.

[a] Term "appurtenances," used in return of levy by a sheriff, is too general, vague, and indefinite to comprehend in its meaning any personal property as the subject of levy; nothing, therefore, is passed by the sale.—Munroe v. Thomas, 5 Cal. 470.

[b] A description, in sheriff's return, of city lots, by numbers, referring to the official city map, is sufficient.—Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 165.

§ 186. Amendment.

[a] A sheriff has no right, after making a return, to amend so as to affect rights which have already vested.—Newhall v. Provost, 6 Cal. 85.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1373-1375; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1835-1844, §§ 1015-1023.

§ 187. Construction.

[a] A sheriff's return on an execution that M., plaintiff's attorney, was the purchaser at one hundred and eighty dollars, and has paid the costs, should be construed to mean that M. purchased as attorney and for the plaintiff.—Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 428.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1375, 1376; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1844-1848, §§ 1024, 1025.

§ 188. Operation and Effect.

[a] Sheriff's return is not traversable, and a court will not permit it to be attacked collaterally, even if the officer is shown to have been guilty of fraud and collusion.—Egery v. Buchanan, 5 Cal. 53.

[b] Remedy for defective return is by appeal or motion, and not by collateral attack. Pico v. Sunol, 6 Cal. 294.

[c] Where a sheriff's return on an execution recited that M., plaintiff's attorney, was the purchaser, at one hundred and eight dollars, and has paid his costs, the sheriff is not thereby estopped from testifying that plaintiff, and not his attorney, was the purchaser, and, if the deed has been lost, that he made the deed to plaintiff, and not to the attorney.—Moore v. Martin, 38 Cal. 428.

[d] Return of sheriff may be contradicted. Lee Chuck v. Quan Wo Chong Co., 81 Cal. 229, 15 Am. St. Rep. 50-n, 22 Pac. 594.

[e] The return of a constable showing that the execution purchaser of property paid the full price bid does not estop the corporation's assignee in insolvency from denying such fact in an action to recover the amount of the bid from the purchaser, since the purchaser was not a party to the proceedings in which the property was sold. Judgment, 56 Pac. 1110, reversed.—Meherin v. Saunders, 131 Cal. 681, 63 Pac. 1084.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1377-1382; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1852-1881, §§ 1030-1048.

§ 189. —— Effect of Return or Defects Therein on Title of Purchaser.

[a] Title of purchaser does not depend upon sheriff's return.—Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277.

[b] The writ of venditioni exponas is a simple order of the court to sell property already levied on under execution. It confers no power to levy, and a recital in the return that the sheriff had levied and sold by virtue of the writ is an unimportant error when it appears that the levy had been previously made under execution.—Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 165.

[c] The title of the purchaser of real estate at execution sale does not depend upon and is not affected by the sheriff's return upon the writ of execution. The title rests upon the judgment, execution, sale, and deed, and is not impaired by any defect in the return of the officer, or by his failure to make any return.—Clark v. Lockwood, 21 Cal. 220.

[d] The title of a purchaser at an execution sale does not depend on the return on the execution.—Wilson v. Madison, 55 Cal. 5.

[e] On a sale of land under an execution the title of the purchaser does not depend on the sheriff's return to the writ. The title relates back to and takes priority from the date of the judgment lien, and not from the date of any real or pretended statutory levy. Hibberd v. Smith, 67 Cal. 547, 4 Pac. 473, 8 Pac. 46.

[f] If shares of stock have been seized and held under attachment, to satisfy judgment, title of purchaser of stock is not affected by failure of officer to show that he levied before selling.—McFall v. Buckeye Grangers' W. Assn., 122 Cal. 468, 68 Am. St. Rep. 47, 55 Pac. 253.

§ 190. —— Effect of Delay in Making.

[a] Time in which sheriff makes return to an execution does not affect the validity of the execution or of a sale under it.—Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277.

§ 191. —— Effect of Failure to Make.

[a] The title of a purchaser of real estate at sheriff's sale does not depend upon the return of the officer to the writ. The purchaser has no control over the conduct of the officer in this respect.—Cloud v. El Dorado County, 12 Cal. 128, 73 Am. Dec. 526.

[b] The making of a return is not essential to the purchaser's title.—(1862) Clark v. Lockwood, 21 Cal. 220.

§ 192. Record.

[a] Upon levy of execution on real estate, copy of execution need not be filed in recorder's office.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 122, 99 Am. Dec. 256.

§ 193. Setoff of Executions.

[a] Joint execution cannot be set off against several one; to warrant setoff, parties to both executions must be identical.—Calderwood v. Peyser, 42 Cal. 111.

[b] An execution should have been recalled and amended pending a motion to set off the judgment where the affidavits of the parties showed, without contradiction, the existence of an unsatisfied judgment in favor of the execution debtor against the execution creditor.—Nash v. Kreling, 136 Cal. 627, 69 Pac. 418.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 440, providing that cross-demands between persons shall be deemed compensated, so far as they equal each other, an execution creditor against whom the debtor holds an unsatisfied judgment cannot require payment of the balance due as a condition of allowing the setoff.—Nash v. Kreling, 136 Cal. 627, 69 Pac. 418.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1393; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1914, 1915, § 1068.

§ 194. Authority of Officer as to Medium of Payment.

[a] United States treasury notes may be received by a sheriff in redemption of land which he has sold on execution, where neither the law nor the judgment of the court directs him to receive a particular kind of money only.—People v. Mayhew, 26 Cal. 655.

§ 195. Levy and Sale in General.

[a] Although it is a general proposition that a levy under an execution upon sufficient personal property to satisfy it amounts to a satisfaction of the judgment, yet such is not the case as to the debtor, if he consents to an application of the proceeds of sale to junior executions.—Barber v. Reynolds, 44 Cal. 519.

§ 196. Evidence of Payment or Satisfaction.

[a] Sheriff, under his general powers, cannot take anything but legal currency in satisfaction of an execution, and when he takes a note, indorses it on the execution and returns it satisfied, the return is not conclusive, and perhaps not prima facie evidence of satisfaction, unless it shows some authority for receiving the note.—Mitchell v. Hackett, 14 Cal. 661.

[b] The plaintiff in an execution may accept of promissory notes by a special agreement as an absolute payment of the same, but the agreement must be proved by testimony other than the sheriff's certificate.—Mitchell v. Hackett, 25 Cal. 538.

§ 197. Vacating or Setting Aside Entry of Satisfaction.

[a] A return of satisfaction by a sale of property, made by a sheriff on a void execution, the judgment creditor becoming the purchaser, may be vacated as void.—Smith v. Reed, 52 Cal. 345.

§ 198. In General.

[a] In proceedings supplementary to the execution, the denial of the debt, or the id-verse claim to the property by the garnishee, contemplated by the Practice Act, is a claim or denial in good faith, and not one of mere pretense.—Parker v. Page, 38 Cal. 522.

[b] Debts secured by mortgage may be enforced under provisions relating to supplementary proceedings.—McGurren v. Garrity, 68 Cal. 568, 9 Pac. 839.

[c] Order in aid of execution is an order and not a judgment.—Wells v. Torrance, 119 Cal. 441, 51 Pac. 626.

§ 199. Nature and Purpose of Remedy.

[a] Proceedings supplementary to execution, by which a judgment debtor is required to appear before a court or referee to answer concerning his property, are but a substitute for a creditor's bill at common law, and are purely judicial.—McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298; Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1402; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1941-1943, § 1091.

§ 200. Persons Against Whom Proceedings may be Maintained.

[a] To proceedings supplementary to execution (Prac. Act, secs. 238-245), the debtor of the judgment debtor, who may ordered to pay to the sheriff, need not be made a party.—Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1411; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1948-1950, § 1095.

§ 201. Jurisdiction and Authority of Court or Judge.

[a] In proceedings supplementary to execution the court has no jurisdiction to make orders relating to persons who are not parties to the proceeding, nor has it power to make an order that one who has, by consent of plaintiff and defendant, borrowed money deposited with the sheriff by defendant to release an attachment, and given his note to a third party therefor, payable when plaintiff recovers judgment, shall pay the money to the plaintiff, when the person who holds the note is not a party to the proceeding, and the note is still in his hands, and not under the control of the court.—Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581.

[b] A judgment was recovered and proceedings supplementary to execution were instituted against debtor's wife, alleging that she held lands which belonged to him. On the same day she conveyed to another. The court adjudged that the land belonged to her husband, ordered execution to issue in the original case, and appointed a receiver to take possession and subject the land to the satisfaction of the debt. Held, that these proceedings were beyond the court's jurisdiction, and will be restrained by prohibition.—McDowell v. Bell, 86 Cal. 615, 25 Pac. 128.

[c] Where defendant was summoned in proceedings supplementary to execution against a corporation to appear before a referee and answer concerning money in his hands belonging to the corporation, and afterward the court confirmed the referee's report, and rendered judgment that the money be paid by defendant to plaintiff, though defendant was not a party to the original action against the corporation, the fact that copies of the order requiring him to appear before the referee, and of the affidavit on which it was based, were served on him, and in obedience thereto he appeared and was examined, sufficiently shows that the court had jurisdiction of defendant's person in the supplementary proceedings.—Bronzan v. Drobaz, 93 Cal. 647, 29 Pac. 254.

[d] The only power of the court in proceedings supplementary to execution, in respect to an action by the judgment creditor, is to make an order authorizing the judgment creditor to institute an action in the proper court to recover indebtedness due to the judgment debtor, and to forbid a transfer pending the action; and such an order is not an adjudication of the rights of the parties.—High v. Bank of Commerce, 103 Cal. 525, 37 Pac. 508.

[e] Under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to proceedings supplementary to the execution, the court has no jurisdiction to order the grantee of the judgment debtor, who claims title to the property conveyed, to surrender it or to subject it to the satisfaction of the judgment. Lewis v. Chamberlain, 108 Cal. 525, 41 Pac. 413.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1406, 1437; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1951-1958, §§ 1097, 1098.

§ 202. Property or Rights Which may be Reached.

[a] Under our Practice Act (copied from the New York act), upon proceedings supplementary to execution, a debtor, examined before a referee appointed by the court, as to "property" supposed to be concealed, may be ordered by the referee to apply a judgment to pay his judgment creditor as the court shall direct.—Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187.

[b] Liability to judgment debtor sounding in tort may be reached by proceedings supplemental to execution.—Staples v. May, 87 Cal. 191, 192, 25 Pac. 346, reversed (1890), 23 Pac. 710.

[c] Defendant's testimony as to how his property had been disposed of was unsatisfactory, but no property applicable to the satisfaction of plaintiffs' judgment was shown to be in his hands when the citation was served upon him. Held that plaintiffs were not entitled to an order that defendant turn over property.—Lyons v. Marcher, 119 Cal. 382, 51 Pac. 559.

§ 203. Proceedings for Examination of Debtor.

[a] In supplementary proceedings under section 714 of the Code of Civil Procedure, after an execution has been returned unsatisfied, judgment creditor is entitled to an order directing judgment debtor to appear and answer concerning his property, without making any affidavit therefor.—Collins v. Angell, 72 Cal. 513, 14 Pac. 135.

[b] A judgment creditor, after execution returned unsatisfied, in supplementary proceedings against the debtor, stated in his affidavit that he had assigned his judgment. Held that, even if the proceedings were based upon the affidavit, the order requiring the debtor to appear and answer concerning his property should not be reversed, on the ground that the creditor was not the real party in interest, since the supplementary proceedings could not be regarded as a new action.—Collins v. Angell, 72 Cal. 513, 14 Pac. 135.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cyc. 1419-1429; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 1969-1985, §§ 1106-1118.

§ 204. Pleading and Evidence in Proceedings in Aid of Execution.

[a] On general demurrer in supplemental proceedings under Code of Civil Procedure, section 720, which authorizes a judge by order to permit the judgment creditor to institute supplemental proceedings on a judgment against a debtor of the judgment debtor, an allegation in the complaint that the order allowing the proceedings was "duly made" is sufficient, even if the specific facts set out are defective.—High v. Bank of Commerce, 95 Cal. 386, 29 Am. St. Rep. 121, 30 Pac. 556.

[b] The complaint in supplemental proceedings under Code of Civil Procedure, section 720, which authorizes a judge by order to permit the judgment creditor to institute supplemental proceedings on a judgment against a debtor of the judgment debtor, sufficiently shows that judgment was rendered in the principal case, where it alleges that plaintiff "recovered a judgment, . . . which judgment was duly entered," etc.—High v. Bank of Commerce, 95 Cal. 386, 29 Am. St. Rep. 121, 30 Pac. 556.

[c] In supplementary proceedings, evidence that some time prior to the execution there probably was a small balance in a bank, on open account, in favor of one of the execution debtors, will not warrant the supreme court in holding that the bank was indebted to defendant in execution.—High v. Bank of Commerce, 103 Cal. 525, 37 Pac. 508.

§ 205. —— Trial.

[a] Court is not bound to make findings in proceedings in aid of execution.—Lyons v. Marcher, 119 Cal. 383, 51 Pac. 559.

§ 206. Reference and Proceedings on Examination.

[a] Where, in proceedings supplemental to execution, it is evident from the examination of a third person that he is acting in bad faith in denying his indebtedness to the judgment debtor, the referee before whom the examination is held may treat such denial as fraudulent, and order him to pay the amount to the judgment creditor.—Parker v. Page, 38 Cal. 522.

[b] Where proceedings supplemental to execution are instituted before a referee, it will be presumed that the referee found the facts necessary to support the judgment, in the absence of explicit findings on material points.—Parker v. Page, 38 Cal. 522.

§ 206½. —— Who may Act as Referee.

[a] The fact that the referee in the proceedings supplementary to execution was the clerk of the attaching creditor is not any considerable evidence of fraud, when the limited duties of the referee are considered.—Adams v. Hackett, 7 Cal. 187.

§ 207. —— Conduct of Examination.

[a] In proceedings supplementary to execution each party is entitled to call and examine witnesses.—McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298.

§ 208. Order for Payment or Delivery of Property.

[a] Proceedings supplementary to execution are intended to take the place of a creditor's bill, and in such proceedings it is proper to order the execution debtor to assign to a receiver a patent right to an invention.—Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520, 40 Am. Rep. 120.

[b] In supplementary proceedings, the judgment debtor is not entitled, under section 386 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to apply for leave to interplead the judgment creditor with other persons, to compel them to litigate their respective claims to the property ordered to be assigned.—Collins v. Angell, 72 Cal. 513, 14 Pac. 135.

[c] Where, in supplementary proceedings against a judgment debtor, he is ordered to assign all his "right, title, and interest" in certain letters patent to his creditor, it is immaterial that he claims to have no property in the patents.—Collins v. Angell, 72 Cal. 513, 14 Pac. 135.

[d] On supplementary proceedings debtor may be ordered to assign seat in stock exchange to receiver authorized to sell it to satisfy judgment.—Habenicht v. Lissak, 78 Cal. 357, 12 Am. St. Rep. 63, 20 Pac. 874.

§ 209. —— Order Against Third Persons.

[a] The court cannot, by virtue of the specific contract act, order a party in whose hands there is money belonging to a judgment debtor to pay over such money in a specific kind of currency, in proceedings supplementary to execution instituted under Practice Act, sections 141-143.—Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581.

[b] The court has no authority, under Practice Act, sections 141-143, to make an order for the application of property of a judgment debtor in the hands of a third party to the satisfaction of a judgment, without first ascertaining, by the examination of such third party, whether he has any such property in his possession.—Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581.

[c] Court cannot direct that property transferred by debtor be surrendered to receiver and subjected to judgment.—McDowell v. Bell, 86 Cal. 616, 25 Pac. 128.

§ 210. Operation and Effect of Orders in Proceedings in Aid of Execution.

[a] If a judgment debtor is examined concerning his property before a court or referee, on proceedings supplementary to execution, the order made by the tribunal before which the examination takes place, concerning the subject matter, is binding, and estops the parties from again litigating the same matter in another form of action.—McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298.

§ 211. Receivers.

[a] Purchaser at judicial sale of mining claim may, where judgment debtor remains in possession working claims, and is insolvent, have a receiver appointed to take charge of proceeds during period allowed by statute for redemption.—Hill v. Taylor, 22 Cal. 191.

[b] In proceedings supplementary to execution the court has power, when it has all the parties before it, to appoint a receiver, and order a note in the hands of a third person, a party to the proceeding, and payable to the judgment debtor, or to such third person as trustee of the judgment debtor, to be delivered up to the receiver, to be collected by suit or otherwise under its direction, and the proceeds applied to the payment of the debt. Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581.

[c] It is proper in supplementary proceedings against an owner of seats in a stock exchange to appoint a receiver with power to sell the seats.—Habenicht v. Lissak, 78 Cal. 351, 12 Am. St. Rep. 63, 20 Pac. 874, 5 L. R. A. 713.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 212. Costs.

[a] Where costs of the supplementary proceedings were allowed against the garnishee in the referee's report, but were not allowed by the court in its order of confirmation, they cannot be recovered in an action upon the judgment rendered in the supplementary proceedings, requiring the garnishee to pay to the judgment creditor the amount of his indebtedness to the judgment debtor.—Bronzan v. Drobaz, 93 Cal. 647, 29 Pac. 254.

§ 213. Disobedience of Order or Subpoena as Contempt.

[a] Attendance on any court as a witness, juror, or party only exempts the party so attending from arrest in a civil action, but not from obeying an order to appear in proceedings supplementary to execution.—Page v. Randall, 6 Cal. 32.

[b] A commitment for refusing to deliver property pursuant to an order in supplementary proceedings will not be quashed merely because that property was exempt from such order, since that made the order at most erroneous, and not void.—McCullough, Ex parte, 35 Cal. 97.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1473-1481; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 2070-2089, §§ 1195-1204.

§ 214. Waiver of Defects and Irregularities in Proceedings.

[a] After service of affidavit and order on debtor, and after he has appeared before referee, and gone through examination without objection, any irregularity is waived.—Collins v. Angell, 72 Cal. 513, 14 Pac. 135.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 2089-2092, §§ 1205, 1206.

XI. EXECUTION AGAINST THE PERSON.

ACTIONS IN WHICH EXECUTION IS AUTHORIZED, § 215.
—— NECESSITY THAT JUDGMENT SHOW LIABILITY TO ARREST, § 216.
CUSTODY OF PRISONER, § 217.
EFFECT OF DISCHARGE, § 217½.

§ 215. Actions in Which Execution is Authorized.

[a] A party cannot be imprisoned under a judgment in a civil action for assault and battery, since Constitution, article 1, forbids imprisonment for debt except in case of fraud.—Prader, Ex parte, 6 Cal. 239.

[b] In an action for the price of goods sold an issue of fraud may be framed and tried, and the defendant, upon proper proof, may be adjudged guilty, and the court may order an execution against the person of the defendant so adjudged guilty of the fraud.—Stewart v. Levy, 36 Cal. 159.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1492-1500; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 2104, §§ 1214-1223.

§ 216. —— Necessity that Judgment Show Liability to Arrest.

[a] The writ of arrest is only an intermediate remedy or process, to secure the presence of the party until final judgment, and the facts on which it is based must be affirmatively found and the fraud stated in the judgment, in order to authorize an arrest on final process.—Matoon v. Eder, 6 Cal. 57.

[b] To authorize arrest of defendant upon execution issued upon judgment recovered in an action upon contract the fraud for which the arrest is sought must be alleged in the complaint, and be passed upon by the jury, and be stated in the judgment.—Davis v. Robinson, 10 Cal. 411.

§ 217. Custody of Prisoner.

[a] If a judgment is rendered against a defendant in a civil action, convicting him of fraud, and he is imprisoned on an execution issued thereon, the failure of the plaintiff to make a weekly advance to the jailer of money sufficient for the support of the prisoner does not, per se, operate a discharge of the defendant. If the prisoner is adequately supported by the jailer, and the latter is willing to trust the creditor for reimbursement, the purpose of the statute is satisfied. Lamson, Ex parte, 50 Cal. 306.

For Authorities from Other States:

§ 217½. Effect of Discharge.

[a] Where defendant in a divorce suit is imprisoned for refusing to pay alimony, and is afterward discharged on taking oath that he has no property (Code Civ. Proc., sec. 1148), a subsequent imprisonment till he should pay the alimony accruing before as well as after such discharge is invalid under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1151, providing that a person, "after being so discharged, is forever exempted from arrest or imprisonment for the same debt."—Batchelder, Ex parte, 96 Cal. 233, 31 Pac. 45.

XII. WRONGFUL EXECUTION.

NATURE AND GROUNDS OF LIABILITY, § 218.
PERSONS LIABLE, § 219.
ACTIONS, § 220.
—— TIME TO SUE AND LIMITATIONS, § 221.
—— PLEADING, § 222.
—— EVIDENCE, § 223.
—— DAMAGES, § 224.
—— JUDGMENT, § 225.

§ 218. Nature and Grounds of Liability.

[a] Where real estate is sold on execution, and the judgment is afterward reversed, the former owner may maintain an action of damages against the judgment creditor, who purchased such land.—Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 616.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 17 Cyc. 1570, 1571; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 2321-2326, §§ 1382-1386.

§ 219. Persons Liable.

[a] Officer is liable to action for enforcing execution against one not a defendant.—Perkins v. Thornburgh, 10 Cal. 189.

[b] Justice, constable and plaintiff are all liable for levy of a void execution against a defendant not served.—Inos v. Winspear, 18 Cal. 397.

[c] In an action by the parties whose property has been wrongfully taken under legal process, all who join or participate in the trespass are jointly liable as joint trespassers. Lewis v. Johns, 34 Cal. 629.

[d] Plaintiffs who indemnify sheriff are jointly liable with him for seizure of property not belonging to defendant.—Lewis v. Johns, 34 Cal. 629.

[e] Where wood held in the possession of a pledgee is wrongfully seized on execution against the pledgor, without the service of any garnishment upon the pledgee, the constable serving the writ becomes a trespasser, and cannot be held in privity with the pledgor; and in an action of trover by the pledgee he is entitled to recover the full value of the property as damages for its conversion.—Dubois v. Spinks, 114 Cal. 289, 46 Pac. 95.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 17 Cyc. 1572-1574; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 2327-2334, §§ 1389-1393.

§ 220. Actions.

[a] A person whose land is sold on an erroneous judgment, afterward reversed, is not estopped from maintaining an action for damages by having made a motion to set aside the sale, which motion had been denied.—Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 616.

[b] In the absence of any showing of fraud, a creditor who has caused a levy to be made under a valid judgment entered on default, and, on the opening and setting aside of such judgment has returned the property to defendant, is not liable for the seizure and detention, so that he acted without fraud.—White v. Adams, 52 Cal. 435.

[c] Sheriff cannot question an agreement for the sale of personalty unless it were made to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, and then he must produce both judgment and execution.—Bickerstaff v. Doub, 109 Cal. 109, 79 Am. Dec. 204.

[d] Execution based on void judgment will not protect levying officer having notice of such fact.—Brush v. Smith, 141 Cal. 469, 75 Pac. 55.

[e] Execution containing amendable defects not brought to notice of officer will be accorded same effect with reference to acts done in its execution as if it had been amended.—Brush v. Smith, 141 Cal. 470, 75 Pac. 55.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 221. —— Time to Sue and Limitations.

[a] The running of the statute of limitations against an action for the wrongful issuing of an execution on a satisfied judgment is not suspended by injunction proceedings restraining the enforcement of the execution. Wood v. Currey, 57 Cal. 208.

[b] The statute of limitations, in an action for the wrongful issuing of an execution on a satisfied judgment, begins to run from the levy; and subsequently accruing damages do not constitute separate causes of action, and do not postpone the operation of the statute. Wood v. Currey, 57 Cal. 208.

[c] The procuring of a levy of an execution on a satisfied judgment is a tort, and an action thereon is barred in two years.—Wood v. Currey, 57 Cal. 208.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1577; 21 Cent. Dig., col. 2339, § 1398.

§ 222. —— Pleading.

[a] In an action for damages caused by the sale of the plaintiffs' real estate under an execution issued on an erroneous judgment, afterward reversed, it is not necessary in the complaint to make a direct averment of the existence of the property if that fact appears by necessary inference drawn from the facts stated.—Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 616.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1576; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 2340, 2341, § 1400.

§ 223. —— Evidence.

[a] A suit in trespass was brought against one furnishing an execution to an officer and against the officer who levied it on the mercantile stock in trade of this plaintiff, malice was charged, and vindictive damages sought. Held, that evidence of the retail value of the goods was inadmissible. The market cost of replacing the goods was the proper basis for damages.—Nightingale v. Scannell, 18 Cal. 315.

[b] Loss sustained by mercantile firm—from the seizure of their property—in the diminution of their business and its consequent profits subsequent to the release of the property from the seizure, is not an element of damage susceptible of computation with any reasonable degree of accuracy, and evidence concerning it is properly excluded from the jury.—Selden v. Cashman, 20 Cal. 56, 81 Am. Dec. 93.

[c] In an action by a wife against a constable and his sureties to recover the value of personal property taken from plaintiff's possession, under execution against her husband, where the answer contains only a general denial and no plea of justification, a mere admission by the plaintiff that the property was seized under an execution issued out of justice's court in a specified action against her husband, does not show any indebtedness of the husband nor any judgment against him, nor the issuance of execution upon such judgment, and does not, in the absence of any other showing, entitle the constable to question the validity of a transfer from the husband to the plaintiff.—Darville v. Mayhall, 128 Cal. 617, 61 Pac. 276.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1576; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 2341-2342, §§ 1401, 1402.

§ 224. —— Damages.

[a] Suit was brought by one of two partners to recover his interest in property taken wrongfully on an execution against the firm. The other partner, refusing to join plaintiff, was joined as a defendant. Held, that a recaption of the goods, whether before or after suit brought, by defendant partner, was in legal effect a recaption on joint account of himself and plaintiff, and to this extent would reduce the damages.—Nightingale v. Scannell, 18 Cal. 315.

[b] Execution having issued on a void judgment, the creditor, not knowing of its invalidity and acting under advice of counsel, caused a seizure of the property to be made under it in the ordinary manner. Held that, in the absence of malice, exemplary damages could not be recovered for such wrongful seizure.—Selden v. Cashman, 20 Cal. 56, 81 Am. Dec. 93.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cyc. 1577-1579; 21 Cent. Dig., cols. 2342-2347, §§ 1403, 1404.

§ 225. —— Judgment.

[a] In an action to recover the possession of personal property, with damages for its detention, the judgment may be for more than the value as alleged in the complaint, if it be within the ad damnum of the writ. The value of the property is only one predicate of the recovery.—Coghill v. Boring, 15 Cal. 213.
